The medicine most commonly taken is false hellebore, the use of which was learnt by some ancient shaman. At dusk a hunter should eat a small twig of it, raw; it drews from his stomach everything injurious, particularly women's hair, which are abhorred by animals, and ensures him success on the morrow. If he takes too much of it, he becomes ill and must swallow the accidens, mountain goat grease or marrow. He should also carry twigs of the plant with him, ready either to swallow or throw in the direction of any dreaded supernatural being whom he may encounter. Eagle down and dried salmon roe are sometimes similarly used.

The powers of a person who has obtained supernatural ability, whether or not he is a shaman, can be destroyed by similar means. For example, a lad trained so that he understands the speech of ravens, will lose his ability if he eats food cooked or prepared by a menstruating woman, by one who has lost her husband within the last year, or if he passes through the hole in the floor used by an adolescent girl. The last Bella Coola with this skill was deadened to the meaning of the birds' croaking by lying near his sister one night for warmth, since her mere proximity was enough to nullify his power. This aspect of medicine merges with taboos. So, too, the power of an object can be destroyed by washing; an instance of this is 755 of water in which had been boiled eight splinters from a coffin. She would have obtained two from each side, and two from each end, in each case inserting the point of a crooked knife to pry loose a fragment of the wood, and then pulling it off in the same direction as the sun travels. It would have been immaterial from which aspect the first had been taken, but T would have been careful to move around the coffin from east to south to west to north, corresponding to the course of the sun.

It is believed that no one has now the ability to use this cure.

Sorcerer

756 Among the curative medicines of which knowledge has [424] been handed down in various families for generations are secret means of killing. Every sorcerer must have such a possession, but he is not so bounded within he begins to exercise his powers for anti-social purposes. For example, if it be known that a [575] certain individual is able to cause death, the members of the Raven society are eager to admit him to their group, so that his ability will be at their disposal to punish anyone who breaks their regulations. Likewise, if a chief decides that a certain [422] man should die, the power of his thoughts may suffice to cause the death, but the desired end will be effected more certainly by requesting aid from the owner of a means of killing. Such [754] an individual is frequently a shaman who is only too glad of an opportunity to exhibit his powers. The following methods of execution are said to have been employed socially, that is, with the connivance or at the request of chiefs or the members of the Raven society:

(a) The executioner scratches for four successive nights on the door of the victim's house. If the latter suspects what is to take place, he may endeavour to escape by removing evidence which renders the scratching powerless. It is said that no one has been able to remain sleepless for more than three nights which gives the killer his opportunity.

Inhalt Gewerbl. E-5 (1952-1964)1948
NEA Bellmonte NEA

by their owners for safety. Judas, an old Bulla Cooin believed to be a sorcerer, has been seen to scrape up the moist earth where a man has urinated; in former times anyone doing such a suspicious act would have been killed. The article obtained is hidden and kept for future use, and if the practitioner wishes to inflict pain or death, he places it in contact with some potent medicine. Human bones are frequently employed for this purpose, although the most powerful is said to be grease obtained by boiling flesh cut from the inner side of the thigh of a recently buried corpse. To obtain either of these, graves must be robbed, another reason for having sorcerers.

Secrecy is essential, as a sorcerer is usually assisted by his children, and in this way he has a better chance of obtaining articles belonging to different people without arousing suspicion. The necessary knowledge can accordingly be transmitted from generation to generation, sometimes without the slightest inkling of it becoming known. Even if a man is found out, he may be able to hide his discovery to others.

Sometimes two from different tribes work in partnership to lessen the danger of practicing their sins near the village of a victim. For example, a Bulla Cooin sorcerer may send an article to an accomplice in Bulla Bulla for placing in contact with strong medicine; this causes the victim to languish and die while the person responsible continues his usual routine of life around the village, suspected by no one. The commencement of such a partnership is a matter of great difficulty, since anyone who admits his crimes places himself in the power of his confidant. Sometimes, however, rumours that a certain individual is practicing malevolent magic reach a foreign sorcerer who needs an accomplice. If he considers that the information is authentic, he may admit his own powers and suggest that they work together. Such an arrangement is profitable to both parties, and a partnership so formed may continue for generations.

Sorcerers display considerable ingenuity in arranging that their skill shall bring them pecuniary benefits as well as the gratification of killing their enemies. To achieve this end, a member of the family claims to be a shaman and his relatives loudly acclaim him. It is not difficult for a man with skill in conjuring to perform some simple domestic act, probably one carried out by an ancient shaman, which he announces has been shown to him by a supernatural being who has given him power to cure the sick. Then the sorcerer selects a suitable victim and causes him to become ill by placing something taken from him in contact with his malicious. If the malefactor is forewarned, the victim will consult the "shaman" who will effect a cure and be paid for it, ignorant of the fact that his recovery has been due to the removal of the article by the practitioner's accomplice. This deception is especially difficult to expose if the sorcerer has a box containing genuine belief from human bodies, since the sickness increases or diminishes accordingly as the depth to which the article is sunk. This is one of the ways in which some shamans have built up great reputations as curers.

The psychology of sorcery is similar to that of other kinds of magic. It is not possible for the malefactor to tell his victim that he has stolen a nail paring, for example, and that he will die because it has been placed in a decoction of human grease. But if the attending shaman is an accomplice, he can inform the sufferer that his malady has been caused by a sorcerer and this belief profoundly affects him. He feels that he will die unless a remedy be found, and if the shaman assures him that he has rendered the evil influence impotent, his chances of recovery are increased accordingly. So, likewise, the members of families who possess revenge against the activities of sorcerers often work in conjunction with one. It is therefore not surprising that the Bella Coola should firmly believe in their machinations and affirm that they have killed many thousands of people in the course of generations. The belief in magic would itself be sufficient to explain this, but it is strengthened by the social and economic aspects of a sorcerer's vocation. The sorcerer in which the power inherent in magic everyone sympathized with the heroine on account of her many bereavements. The only survivor was a woman who, like herself, had lost all her kinsmen. The food provided was hardly fit for dogs, but the heroine survived that every relative of the sorceress should receive a portion dipped in poison instead. They all started to eat at the same time, and all fell dead simultaneously without a word.

[illegible]
[illegible]

Instantly cold confusion broke out and the queen exclaimed that they were being served poison. Unperturbed, the woman explained everything, how she had first become suspicious, how she had followed the four brothers, and all that had resulted. A party set out at once under her guidance and found that everything she had said was true. In this way perished all the relatives of the sorceress except one man who happened to be absent at the time. One of his descendants is now living in Bulu Cuda and is regarded with a certain amount of suspicion, although there is no evidence that he or any of his relatives have practised sorcery for generations.

A BOILED CHIEF CONFESSES

Since the introduction of medicine, there death in the lower Bulu Cuda valley is absent. Sharpshooters do by sorcery, he was a regular practitioner, able both to heal the sick or to cause death. When using his power beneficially, he drank a cattle concoction a well-crystal, but when he was requested to kill, he used one that appeared to be identical but contained human teeth and nail tongs. In some unknown manner these were lost, which prevented him from obeying a man who requested his the death of his village. One April day he mentioned his difficulty casually to a certain Tribe who surprised him by replying:

"I can supply you with teeth and you will have greater power than ever."

The two men sham on the time and Tribe, having admitted that he was a sorcerer, suggested that they form a partnership. He must have felt confident that Sharpshooters did would agree, as indeed he did gladly. Tribe explained that the sorcerer's knowledge had been handed down in his family for generations, but that he had only recently begun to use it to avenge a slight on a friend of mine.

That morning Tribe guided Sharpshooters up the mountain on the north side of the narrow head of Pipeh Bunkah Gun, just west of the Bukkumanang River. Sharpshooters frequently ranged over this area, but no one had ever seen a sorcerer's lair there. Tribe led the way to a small rock shelter beneath which was concealed a chest about eight feet long. He hacked a few times with his left foot, and called out four times:

"Wake up!"

U.MI:Gerstlik B-9 (1969-1974)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481

"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good carpenter. 777 322

If a woman nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole basket is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of this is responsible for wearing down the teeth. 825 [826]

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the only men who dare to handle them are shamans. [761] [752]

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be present should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's head, murmur, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[a] 852 827 and their subterfuges, it sometimes happens that an uninitiated person sees or hears something which he should not know. The simplest way to deal with this situation is to kill the observer. It is said that as late as 1900 a young man, impelled by curiosity, wandered up a valley into which he had been warned not to penetrate, and met a Cannibal whom he believed had vanished into the upper realms. Almost dumbfounded, he accepted the latter's invitation to sit down, and was slain by him. More often, and especially if the observer is the child of a katsina, he is initiated into the ranks of the society. If this happens at any time of year except the actual ceremonial season, he cannot perform immediately, but he is taken to the secret meeting place of the village chiefs, and there the mysteries of the organization are explained to him. The uninitiated are told that the observer has had a shaman's experience. With the aid of the elder katsina he then performs a dance and conjuring feat of the type already described (I, p. 56n), and is secluded until the next autumn, meanwhile wearing the distinctive collar of a shaman. In the songs used on this occasion no mention is made of a wash-basin, as of course the kid only performs ceremonially. When winter comes he is formally initiated into the society.

[a] This is not the only custom pertinent to the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 356.

Ethnologwith R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bulletin NEA

It is somewhat difficult to understand and explain the sentiments which lead a young man to obey rigidly the decrees of the senior katsina in deceiving his former friends. If it becomes known that a youth has seen something which should have been concealed, the senior katsina of his village meet in their ceremonial spot and decide that he must be put through the shaman's rite. Some relative of the youth is always ready to provide the necessary katsina paraphernalia, otherwise he would have to be killed. Two or three members are then sent to catch the young man. On some pretext they lure him into the woods and then carry him away, struggling in fear, to the kiva of Kokko, the place which he had been told to avoid since he would die if he penetrated to it. There he finds all the seniors of his village, armed with grave expressions to

[The Cannibal Dance]

789
* 795 way since no female can witness a Cannibal's first meal.
* 796 Three hakaciut are dispatched to ask for food, as if they were begging on behalf of X. Oolachan grease, dried salmon, dried meat, and other luxuries are always given to them, and the uninitiated women are excited at witnessing this collection of food. Sometimes a request is made during the day, and the messengers are entitled to call upon any individual by name to provide grease or some other delicacy.
[262]
[262]

• [792] The actual feeding is done by a shaman who is also a hakaciut. He first dips his hands in the grease, warms them at the fire and rubs them over X's face as the struggling Cannibal is held by six or eight hakaciut. Members of the society keep calling out hoip to soothe X, who is supposed to be like a wild animal, and to have lost all desire for ordinary food. Like a marmot he snaps at the shaman's fingers, while the hakaciut cry out and the uninitiated watch with fear and amusement. After rubbing the Cannibal's cheeks four times, the shaman shouts out that he is almost ready to eat. The heralds echo his words, and go through the village to inform all of what has taken place. The shaman now puts a few morsels of food in a spoon and tries to feed X, who struggles and tries to bite pieces out of the usual staff. Undaunted, he puts small pieces of food actually into X's mouth, handfuls of the snapping jaws, and at last persuades him to swallow a little.

"He has eaten," the shaman calls out joyfully, and the heralds repeat the good tidings.

An effort is now made to force him to drink, but X only bites the vessel, and the fingers of the shaman, and succeeds in drenching himself with the liquid. But at last he swallows a few mouthfuls.

"He has drunk," calls the shaman, and as before the heralds repeat his words.

The shaman now tells the uninitiated that X will be all right, but that it will be safer for them to depart, as they have willingly. Heralds keep everyone in the village informed of the events.

[The Bleeding Dance]

X begins to move his fingers in a feeble way and to sing a shaman's song of which Snitsmalo a is the only intelligible word. Of course the singers have previously taught him as much as is necessary of this type of composition, but the assumption is that he has just learned it from Snitsmalo a who has restored him to life. At this juncture two shamans often approach X and appear to project some power into him whereby he is able to rise and slowly circle the fire, supported by them. He shakes his hands and sings in a weak voice, then stands behind the fire, still supported by the two shamans. This concludes the night's ceremony and the marshals tell the uninitiated to leave. The initiates now follow, except carpenters, singers, and any other influential members of the society who desire to wait to discuss the performance.

As in the Stomach-Cutting dance, four days more of ceremonial follow the severing of X's head, with ritual corresponding to that of an ordinary feasting performance. Ceremonies cease on the night after the decapitation. The initiates gather in good time to learn a song, the theme of which is X's power, the supernatural being Sinaitlamalala Mamaxa, who has his head pulled off during dances in the land sleeve. Mention is always made of Snitsmalo a as well. No further description is required of the ceremonial on the eighth of nuxmalidaq and galem.

On nuhemem the first spectacle is a representation of what takes place in the land sleeve. A mask has been prepared similar to the one worn by X, so that it can be pulled entirely from his body. This decapitation is performed by masked figures while the heralds and marshals explain that this is what is done shell. The upper mask is hidden and the performer, who wears one identical with that which has been pulled from him, stands up to show the uninitiated that his head has been restored to him. Since the performers are supposed to be supernatural beings, it is possible for the beheaded one to be restored much rapidly than was possible when X, a mortal, suffered the same fate. After this decapitation there follows a what are to be the correct answers? The mandals decide on them, but their judgment really depends on the four women-lessons who are able to tell whether any of the replies they suggest have already been given. When Saiyaale performed, the answers chosen were:

[Mr. Mystery Dance]

Atwadan, "The Coming of Foul Weather." This word is said to be in the language of the supernatural men. The implication is that this phenomenon of nature is a manifestation of the will of the supreme deity.

Nagwaale Swanishkin, "The Eagle Down Swanishkin." This has the significance of "The Peace Giving Swanishkin" since eagle down is a symbol of peace.

Kitkwanimaw, "The Towering Chasm." This is the mysterious crevasse which opens before a foolish man when he tries to gain success. In cases where a white man would attribute misfortune to lack of ability or to sheer bad luck, the Bella Coola say that this supernatural chasm has opened before him. It is especially applied to failure in the giving of potlatches.

Scarcely less important than the choice of answers is the second consideration, who is to give them. The uninitiated have been taught that X cannot live unless his riddles are answered, and also that whatever succeeds in solving them can do so only through supernatural assistance. As in the case of a person who finds a repository, so must the one who solves the problem be made a Sacrier. This is an opportunity for an influential man with a son of suitable age and character to have him initiated into the society, and an eager person can always be found. He is told the proper answers, and instructed to whisper them to his son the following evening. It is impressed upon the father that this must be done only at the last minute, and that every precaution must be taken to prevent the young man from telling his friends that he has been prompted.

Other matters are arranged at the same time. A shaman must be in readiness at sunrise to bind the future member of the society to secrecy, and every detail is worked out with care.

same previously described. To the Sahu Cosin philosopher, apparently no explanation is needed of the manner in which Sahu was allowed to use his experience as the basis of a dancer dance. The assumption is that he was a dancer at the time of his experience, although this is not clearly stated. The last to use the same dance about 1915, such Sahu having had the prerogative of giving the Thunder dance.

575* 796* 534 424 [777] [551]

THE GHOST DANCE[1]

Among the numerous patterns of dancer dances is Ghosts. The term, ichandar, applied to a dance whose power is derived from a ghost, is also applied to dancer with one-a pattern, but the two fun-makers must not be confused. Is a fairly common prerogative and there are Ghost dances in every village, their right depending in every case on some experience of an encounter with a ghost. The following is an account of the manner in which Ogaw of Tsamai performed in ritual; it may be regarded as typical of all, and the dancer can be referred to as X.

575* 796* [775] [750] [424]

At any time during the ceremonial season X consults with the mandals to decide upon a suitable time for his performance. On the evening preceding, normally the gate of some other dancer, the mandals state that his call is imminent; X makes his final arrangements and asks the assistance of a number of his fellows.

When the relevant rites of the following evening are been completed and the ceremonial have returned to their own homes, they are startled to hear whistling from the front near at hand. It is not the inconsiderably prolonged noted that accompanies the coming of a call, but random whistling with the mouth, everyone knows that this is the language of ghosts. A departure from them is by no means unknown, ad always dreaded, so at once there is excitement and everyone covers in the bedrooms. Presently hostile go through to village

575* 796* 787 [795]

[1] We necessarily is replied with the dance of the men-men using bodies of other others men.

[171]

(a) Recorded as song VIII D 10, National Museum of Canada; sources, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and successors, assisted by Tal'a Charlie and descendant dances. 599*

(b) In many of Pamlet's ancestors had hallucinated that he considered such a line to be an inheritable tendency and sensified accordingly. This song was composed for a memorial potlatch held after the drowning of three of his sons. [761] [827] [195]

(c) Line means, literally, the successive rising of the sun from day to day; in fact therefore, the significance of. The span of life is shortening.

(d) This and explains the usual overflow chorus.

(e) Raven. This is one of his sonly and chief's names.

(f) The reference is to an incident centred about Raven in the beginning of time. He wooed, and gave life to a son who was his chief joy and delight. Raven wondered what the creature might be and sent down one of his sons (the supernatural birds to seize him. Raven, ignorant of the reason for his son's loss and with no idea that he was being carefully guarded, was absolutely disconsolate. The myth is recorded in vol. I, p. 81. [775]

Shaman Songs

In contrast to the carefully prepared and logically worded mourning songs, many of those used by shamans are extremely incoherent. This is natural in view of the belief, already described, that the words and tune are given to a sick person at the time that he is cured. Those who recover from an illness are convinced that they must have received a supernatural visitation, and at once begin to ponder on the song brought to them at that time. A person of imaginative temperament easily persuades himself that the words which begin to form in his mind were actually brought by an agent, and, having thus deluded himself, it is easy for him to convince others. The coherence of the text thus depends upon the ability of the patient, a factor which explains the extreme lack of skill in many compositions. The examples here given are, perhaps, unusually complete. 599* 756 [759]

Song Used by Nuxlamalaxtsi, a Kwagiutl Shaman

A Wawalaxtsamanuxs	alaxtsitsamalaxs
In the beginning(a)	the life-giving power(b) was made,
yas ilal xiyalaxs	alaxalalaxsalaxs
that is what we have given	within them(c).

(translation continued (d))

*533
756

9 [illegible] They(g) sang	[illegible] over my wash-basin(h),	[illegible] they all watched over

[illegible]
my shaman's power(i).

[illegible]

0 [illegible] Power upon	[illegible] the place of shaman's power(j),	[illegible] there I am

[illegible]
[illegible]

(a) This man received his name and his ability to cure the sick from [illegible] (about 1890). He was very ill, apparently on the point of death, at the time of his visitation.

(b) Recorded as song VII (I) 45a, National Museum of Canada; singer, [illegible].

(c) The first part is worded as if supernatural beings were speaking.

(d) The reference is to the healing ability granted to shamans who have themselves been cured when seriously ill.

[753] (e) That is: Human beings. It is believed that a person can be cured only if [illegible] or some other supernatural being implant within the patient's body some of the healing power.

[774] (f) The two shamans of this song have different names, as usual herein.

(g) Referring to supernatural beings, this part of the song is worded as if [illegible] were speaking, and describing the case he was made a shaman.

(h) Reference to the wash-basin shows that [illegible] had the ability to cure the sick.

(i) The shaman is worded as if supernatural beings had washed and bounded over the power which they ultimately gave down.

(j) The reference is to [illegible], which, as the home of supernatural beings, is consequently the place from which comes a shaman's power. When [illegible] was on the point of death, it seemed to him that the sky opened above him so that he was able to gaze upon those resident there. He watched the supernatural men numbering about his own line, and gazed with joy on the departure of [illegible] to rescue him.

[351]

Song Used by [illegible], a Bella Coola Woman(a)

[195]

0 [illegible] It moved up and down.	[illegible] Sangillegible	[illegible] when they(d) sang	[illegible] of [illegible].

[illegible]

0 [illegible] They(f) placed right down.	[illegible] within the wash-basin(g)	[illegible] where I was(h).

[illegible]
he(i) pulled me forth.

[illegible]

[illegible] I gained upon	[illegible] when gave me power as a shaman(*)	[illegible] when is wind up	533* 756

[illegible]
in the centre of a place of purified power(*).

(a) This was the woman's factor designation; her shaman's name has been forgotten. [551]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 16, National Museum of Canada; sources, Bradley Johnson, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and translator, assisted by Pat'a Charlie and Sumkalum Peter.
(c) Then to: The sky moved up and down. Grandiloquent phrases of this kind are frequent in songs used by shamans. [195]
(d) Salute to the supernatural beings.
(e) [illegible] is said to be the word for salmon in the language of the supernatural beings; it is used by mortals in the rites following the taking of the first spring salmon. The shaman has received some of her power from a fish. [198] [224]
(f) Salute to the supernatural beings.
(g) Reference to the wash-basin shows that the shaman had power to heal the sick.
(h) The meaning is obscure. Apparently the shaman had been carried away by Pitsqalilm-a and treated by immersion in a basin in which eagle down was deposited.
(i) This refers to the supernatural being, [illegible], who appears to his mortals killed by the receipt of too much power from Pitsqalilm-a. It is clear that this has killed the shaman. [776]
(j) The woman is said to have received power from several sources, salmon, ghosts, and Pitsqalilm-a herself. It is impossible to state which of her supernatural patrons is referred to in this subdivision.
(k) The woman must have been taken to one of the spots where cures could be effected by the power of a supernatural being purified there. [155]

[551]
[776]

Song Used by [illegible], a [illegible] Mortal(*)

[illegible] Look at the morning supernatural beings above(), see one is my equal().	[illegible]	[illegible] when used(*)

[remainder removed]

[illegible] The most wonderful voices or sights to mortals are when I am bringing your mortal(*).	[illegible]	[illegible] when used

[remainder removed]

[illegible] The most wonderful are your wash-basin(*).	[illegible]	[illegible] when used

[remainder removed]

583
754
551
776

(a) "The One Who Dances Near the Fire." This is one of Tlnxpalitw-a's designations and, therefore, one of the names she gives to those she owns.

(b) Recorded on song VII D 20a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) As is often the case, the chorus is worded as if Tlnxpalitw-a were speaking.

(d) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions.

(e) Referring to Nanaic-mulkanic, each self-praise is a common device in songs used by shamans.

(f) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions. Reference to the mouth is in connection with the way a shaman accompanies his song by furious clashing together of his teeth. Tlnxpalitw-a herself does this.

(g) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions. Reference to the wash-basin shows that the shaman had power to heal the sick.

Song Used by Xnamamalain, a Kimsquit Woman(a)

A Xqaqamal-ulkanik	mulkalmulkanamal	mayalplkhamamak
NIQA have given me	the power of a shaman,	give me mental strength mayamaxlal

the good supernatural beings.

[musicaux omitted]

B Nagaiplmulkalu	alyaalmayo-ay[*] mulal	alamamayamu-ulkamulak
They opened	Sang[*];	they saw me

mayalkjulaw-ulkamulak(c) as they passed down.

[musicaux omitted]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded on song VII D 21a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It was used when the women first danced as a shaman.

(b) This refers to supernatural beings in general. The song is worded as if the shaman herself were speaking.

(c) When a second was being made of this song, the singer forgot this subdivision and substituted for it the final one of the first part.

(d) It is said that there was no mention of a wash-basin in the third part and that, accordingly, the shaman had no power to heal the sick.

551

Song Used by Nanamamalaxal(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Yaa alamamalaxa	alamalmalaxa	yaa-ilamamalk	alamalmalja
Hail! Mortals,	Xi(i) mamalk(c);	I give life,	I am a learned man.

[musicaux omitted]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

B illegible They measure when(f) | [illegible] will be visible | skuxiutdemydai my window, [illegible] my ability as a shaman(g).

593*
756

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten; it is said that in it there was reference to a wash-basin, showing that the shaman was able to treat the sick.

(a) "The One of Whom All Sick People Think," a name received from Tlitcp-lilitcw-a. [551]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 32b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) Referring to Tlitcplilitcw-a; this part of the song is worded as if she were speaking.

(d) That is: I do as I have done before.

(e) When this song was being recorded on the phonograph, the singer erred and replaced this subdivision with the first of the first part.

(f) That is: They decide upon the time when.

(g) The reference is to the dramatic performance which marks his status as shaman; this part of the song is worded as if the shaman himself were speaking.

Song Used by Tsimulpleiq(a), a Bella-Coola Woman(b) [551]

A [illegible] It is ready | [illegible] my wash-basin(c), | diptcmcmtsp I will use it [illegible] when you(d) come for treatment.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C. The rest of this song has been forgotten.

(a) "The Sleep-Giver," a name received from Tlitcplilitcw-a. [551]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 27b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie. In 1922 he was about seventy years of age and the song was used by his step-mother.

(c) This reference shows that the shaman had power to treat the sick.

(d) Referring to human beings in general.

Fragment of a Song Used by Nusatmumkwem, a Bella Coola Man(a)

[illegible] Held me in his cupped hands | yas dikuiutsdai the learned one(b), | skumxtcmkwinitsdai when he bore me [illegible] to the place of treatment.

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

*533
756

(a) Recorded as song VII D 42b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The supernatural one held me in his carefully cupped hands. The theme is worded as if the shaman were speaking and describing the way he was carried away to some far-off spot for treatment.

Fragment of a Song Used by Ăkuciyaxum, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Ăxuxlĕomahuldek: Laughed	ciyumaxyx-ay^{w}ulc Sway^{w}(b)	dexuqnicinulin when they(c)wanted	dĕkuciulai my rite as shaman(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Kaitutulas
See how wretched I am(e).

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 42a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

(b) That is: The sky laughed. Shamans often use grandiloquent expressions such as this.

(c) Refers to supernatural beings in general.

(d) It is not known how this woman received her power except that it was from a salmon.

(e) The singer entered fully into the spirit of this song, and ended his singing by calling out these words and chattering his teeth as shamans are wont to do.

Fragment of a Song Used by Kusiyat, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Sunxĕkila The sun(b),	Sunxĕkila the sun,	dimănlulai is our father	xuxi (c)!

The rest of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[821]
[776]
[788]

(b) This is the sun's name as chief.

(c) The meaning of this word is unknown. When the song was sung, the people used to follow the shaman to the river and throw water over themselves four times, accompanied by the crying out of this word.

(d) It seems highly probable that incoherent songs such as this were commonly used by shamans. Kusiyat herself is supposed to have derived her power from Thlcaplilăx-a, but no explanation could be learnt for the rite of washing.

The most fragmentary of all shaman songs are those used by snăxom.. Although the last survivor of this type of visionary died many years ago, all the older Bella Coola state

2:16:Dewalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

emphatically that the songs which they used were little more than series of meaningless phrases, often in languages unknown to the hearers. It was possible to collect the two following examples of this type: 533* 756

Siyus siyusi(a).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

It is believed that this song was composed by Raven, but no one has any knowledge of when, or for what purpose, it was made. A sxúyem used it in Bella Coola many years ago, and the words and tune have since been remembered. Siyu is said to be the word for raven in a language spoken on the west side of Vancouver Island, so it is assumed that the visionary must have come from that region.

The second example consists of a single word:

Aiyalisa(a).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

Aiyalisa is in a language unintelligible to any of the Bella Coola. This word and tune are supposed to be even more ancient than the first example.

Kusiut Songs

Kusiut rites are the only ones now carried out by the Bella Coola with even approximate completeness, and many of the songs used at them are still remembered by all. A number of dances took place during the period of investigation and the texts of all the songs used were collected, as well as the music of the majority. This explains the full versions of the examples in this section as compared to the preceding ones. Moreover, it is probable that kusiut songs, composed with care by the singers, have always been more logical than those employed by shamans in which the fiction of supernatural instruction has been preserved. In former times, kusiut songs were always 533* 575* 796* [126] [756]

Ala: young village.
Alacuil, "Die of the Tied-up Penis": Name given to a lad whose sex was fastened in infancy.
[426] ahamaxulis: Refusal to heed to or consider a family prerogative such as the employment of marriage dancers.
[374] ahaqulcuam: Ritual served when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an commencement of his coming potlatch.
Ahaxiyaqum: House of a female shaman.
Ahem, "The Opening of the Sky":
1—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ilum in the beginning of time.
3—Name of a female chief.
Ahlachalcin: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
Ahlamachinis: One of the first men to settle at Ahlatal in the beginning of time.
[575] ahlamaxum: Award having the ability to enter the back-room and treat initiating neophytes there. The function probably antedates the employment of bat rhythm.
Ahlaxlat: Hidden, supernatural beings who restrain supernatural Cannibals.
[508] ahlaxum: Personal hearing of stories.
Ahmamum: Wife of Tsalalik, the supernatural hunter.
Ahmachilum: Supernatural cannibalical esquire.
Ahnaqlichlis: Husband of Ahlachalcin, he is known only in Kimsquit.
[575] ahnaxlaxis: Earlier dance of mystery.
[574] ahnaxmamum: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning community.
ahnaxmamuqu: Call used by hostile when announcing to a mourning community.
[425] ahnaxulis: The "Dragging Across" of a room, crest, or other intangible property from wife to husband either at marriage or later or a repurchasing of the wife.
[574] ahnum: To drag a heavy burden.
[842] ahnuhu ac: Cranberries mixed with chicken grease.
[821] ahnuxlac: Visit to his repository by a dead relative.
Ahnuxlhual, "Facing Bella Wope": Second moon after the winter solstice.
Ahqamamq, "The Arrivalous Time": Hushed assemblage of the Ashaxlat after departure of a Cannibal.
[597] ahqulchalis: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter.
Ahqulchalis: 1—Supernatural being who revives mortals.
2—Name received by a shaman from this being.
Ahs: Food.
[425] ahsamum, "Food Supplier": The term applied to the giving of the use of land at marriage.
Ahsalcal, "Stockaded": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[756] ahsinis: Shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in chevron strands.
[882] ahsnuik: Guarded, term applied to a girl secluded at adolescence.
[825] Ahsqulyac: Supernatural name of chickens, applied to those brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
Ahsqul'qlat, "A Gleam Downwards": Name given to an Ahsalcal man in the beginning of time.

#102 Bakwaiwa, "Left Foot": Once repository sacred from part of a supernatural creature.
Bakwaiwa: Kinnapik horses living in the last century.
[323] Bakwaiwa: Dandelion-shell.
Bakwaiwa, "Not Finished": Said concerning a hunter who has between initiation and his first complete dance.
[202] Bakwaiwa: Shell cup of grass and dandelion shells worn by adolescent girls during initiation.
[881] Bakwaiwa: Crack, especially from ship, to a hunter dance.
Bakwaiwa: 1—Supernatural hunter.
2—Assemblage of the people for consumption of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and gambling competitions in connection with the Women's dance.
3—Kinnapik wave for the first night of a hunter dance.
Bakwaiwa, "A Scrapping": Said of cases where a wife's relatives have given more presents to the husband's than their have received in return.
[574] Bakwaiwa: Place of consummation of a Women's dance's power.
[601] Bakwaiwa: Old people, especially persons due to a public wave for indirect address.
Bakwaiwa: Rightful location, especially the subdued position of a chief to a house.
[415] Bakwaiwa: Dishes served with ceremonial crest.
Bakwaiwa: 1—Mouse.
2—Daughter of the first settlers at Stella.
[323] Bakwaiwa: Spring salmon.
Bakwaiwa: Spring salmon house.
Bakwaiwa: Professional name of a hunter needed.
Bakwaiwa: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of the Bella Coola River.
Bakwaiwa: 1—The allotment of work to laborer in the manufacture of masks and other requirements.
2—Dance, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a hunter dance.
Bakwaiwakwakwakwa, "The Rainbow Maker": Name given to the daughter of the first settlers at Stella.
[575] Bakwaiwala: Thin which serves as pattern, picture, or model for a hunter crest.
Bakwaiwal: Second night of a potlatch.
[226] Bakwaiwalal: Artificial, man-like structure built into a river for use in hunter fishing.
Bakwaiwala, "Where People Go": A salmon pool owned by Kwaw at Kinnapik.
Bakwaiwala: Cove near Dean Channel.
Bakwaiwalaqa, "The Dancer Whose Only Noise-Making Instrument Is His Body": One of Tlesquillaw's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Bakwaiwalaqa: Supernatural woman who guards repository.
Bakwaiwalaqa: 1—"The Open Mouthed" (in the sense of open to such forth sickness). One of Tlesquillaw's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
[756] 2—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.
[329] Bakwaiwalaqa: Bath running water.
Bakwaiwalaqa: 1—Rocks of ordinary individuals, this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the secret society.
2—Something supernatural seen when awake.

[illegible]: Village near mouth of the Dean River.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible] with "Lakeside": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Name obtained by an Eagle-side man in the beginning of time.
[illegible] "Spreading Its and Its": One of Sisaqalla's canoes and bears a designating given in dancing.
[illegible]: Rarer name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: 1—Rarer name of a Bella Coola woman.
2—"Left Hand": Once equivalent seated from party of a supernatural ancestor.

[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]: Term applied to the giving of a copper, indicating that 100 per cent interest is expected in return.
[illegible]: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[illegible]: Rarer profanity, or Kwagiutl only, of throwing canoe on the fire.

[illegible]

[illegible], "The Moving House": One of the names of the supreme gull dwelling.
[illegible]: 1—Owner of a copper-[illegible].
2—Invented for distinguishing [illegible].
[illegible]: Supernatural being who take inductor of their daughter on the Mountain [illegible].
[illegible]: 1—Name assumed for himself by one of the four workers at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Bella chief.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl.
[illegible], "The Dirty One": Name taken by a chief for himself in honor of the [illegible] made about his habits.
[illegible]: Rarer name of a Kwagiutl man.

[illegible]

[illegible]: Morning star.
[illegible]: Commonest.
[illegible]: Type of sea-going canoe.
[illegible]: Harbinger dish.

[illegible]

[illegible], "The Common Rose": Name used by humans in Eagle.
[illegible], "Concave Rock": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Canoes lashed together.
[illegible]: Locality on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head, including the area beneath the surface of the water.

[illegible]

[illegible]: 1—Second eldest sibling.
2—Second part of song.

[illegible]

[illegible]: 1—"Dirt Who Have Become Supernatural": Title conferred by ghosts.
2—Women living in the room.
[illegible]: Inhabitants of the village of [illegible].

[illegible]

[illegible]: Person with good memory commissioned to remember family genealogies.
[illegible], "At the Head": Village southwest of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
[illegible]: Totem-pole, literally, "Outside Post."
[illegible]: Shaman with power derived from ghosts.
[illegible]: Commonest building at dawn.
[illegible]: Rarer name of a Bella Coola woman.
[illegible]: Rarer name of a Bella Coola man.

2: McDowell B-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEN Bellacoola NEN

#182
[824] ánt'ulp: Tree, probably birch.
Kalaxúlu: One of the first men to settle at Ówyat in the beginning of time.
Kalúlus: One of the first men to settle at Ówalt in the beginning of time.
Kalhun: Bella Bella woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Kalnal: Kitamaat man.
[222] Kálpum: Kaxlat name of a Bella Coola man.
[262] kálsum: The gathering of here root for food.
Kályumtlum: Stone conferred on their owner by the first settlers at Ówa in the beginning of time.
Ka'lów-a: Kitamaat man mentioned in an ancient story.
[585] kalsúlhmtin: Public ceremony, previous to marriage, of the bride's ancestral myths in order to cause children to be born.
[842] kalpum: Ritual on the day before a marriage, including the review of myths by the bride's relatives, the choosing of ceremonies, and the singing of songs of all kinds.
[976] Kamaúx: 1—Mysterious supernatural woman.
2—"Phew," or "Thank You," a word implying laughter.
Kamélmay[m]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ówalmus in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuqúla' in the beginning of time.
3—Name of the first sky that fell in the beginning of time.
Kamalúlt: Lazy supernatural beings who accompanied Nuqúlyum.
Kamalyum: Man mentioned in an origin myth of Ówalmus.
Kamúlulu: Kaxlat name of a Kitamaat man.
Kamúmay[m]: House brought to earth by first settlers at Nuqúla' in the beginning of time.
[824] kanal: Kelp.
[227] kanala: Cod hook.
kanas: Termination.
[824] kanata: 1—Shell fungus.
2—Kaxlat dance in which a shell fungus is used.
Kanélhu: One of the first women to settle at Ówa in the beginning of time.
kan-imat: Ceremonial crow.
Kanusin: Herald of a Tal'a chief in the beginning of time.
kanka: Trap.
Kanuslalum: 1—Daughter of the first settlers at Xalúla in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of Ójamat, one of the first settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[264] kanlítsa: Assemblage of the people for a meal of any kind.
Kanqulúlmun: One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
Kanulhnjíte-a: Supernatural berry-picker resident in the land of ghosts.
[825] kápai: 1—Hump-back salmon.
2—Convex transverse beam near front and rear of house.
3—Mountain on the Dean River.
Kapsin: Kaxlat name of a Kitamaat man.
Kasna: Man mentioned in an ancient story of Raven.
[752] kasiut: The seeking for shaman's power by a lad.
[825] kasnúx: Golden eagle.
katun: Top, toy.
[524]

APPENDIX D

Gaxsa: Tail.
Gaxshl: Sun.
Gix: Black bowlders.
Gaxa-i: Earlier name of a Kitsumpsh man.
Gaxshlaa: Ancestral name of the wife of Sualq who was changed to Gaxsa in the beginning of time.
Gwalil: Raven.
Gwanahlar: Gitlaks chief living in the beginning of time.
Hayalq: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day.
Hawalaa-i: Earlier name of a Kitsumpsh woman.[1]
Ielar: Bark basket for holding liquids.
Iskwalaqlar: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
Iskwalaqsaa: Investment property, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
Iskaxsa: Bark room in which sweat initiates and others are concealed.
Isklaa: Woman during menstruation.
Isklaa, "What Was Seen Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
Isnaqsaa: Wooden wedge such as are used for lifting box stones.
Iskwalaqlar ala hawalqsa: Existence rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
Ixl-aa ne ixl-ial, "The Guiser": One who has been initiated as a member of the Ixalal society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a Ixalaa or a Mystery dance.
Ixlala, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Kalaqa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kalaqa: The dancer waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
Kija, ancestor, Kijaaa: Grandmother.
Kikalaxwa-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'laxlal: Name given to their canoes by the first settlers at Ilaxa in the beginning of time.
Kilalaxwaxa, "The Wise One": One of Raven's canoes as chief.
Kimilkaa: One of the first women to settle at Hagalaa in the beginning of time.
Kina'a-i: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kinaxa: 1—Crab.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Kinalaa: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
Kilk: Red elderberry.
Kilk: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark.
Kis: Unidentified plant.
Kistaa: To roast dried salmon.
Kisiwanalar: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kisiqwal: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Ixwalk.
Ki'ssa: Place on south side of Nutch Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

---

[1] This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalaa-i.

#182 Kitamaxmax: The dance that keeps a foolish man from success as a chief; the concept is anti-anthropomorphistic.
Kitsilas: Free ceremonial discharge.
Kitlaxa: Lekeny village.
Kitsu: Supernatural creature dwelling in the woods.
[954] Kitsilanuxt: Shamans who received power from ghosts.
Kwalmamkaxax: Bella Coola hunter.
#[1172] Kwaytlan, "Canyon": Bella Bella designation for the Dean River, whence the sophisticated Kwaqwt has been derived.
Kwaxlat: Dean River.
Kwakwat: Kwaqwt man mentioned in an ancient story.
[845] Lam: 1—Whale.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsi'ts woman; this is said to be an exclusively feminine designation.
Lat'xmax: 1—Name acquired by a Bella Bella man in the beginning of time.
2—Influential Kwaqwt chief, who died about 1900.
[824] Ma'ma': Muskrat.
[824] Mi: Wait ye (?).
Nanu'i: Dancing.
Nanulut: Perception of being unwell.
Nauu: Dried salmon.
Nauuulut: Synonym for skulla: one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of resolved representations of the deceased. The word is derived from nauu.
[825] Nalalkim: Porpoise.
[845] Nalalkum: Supernatural being who believes in an erotic woman.
Na'la: Twin whose birth is attributed to salmon.
[824] Na'lamax: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Nalalum: Unidentified bird (swallow?).
Nalum: Supernatural female shaman who guided P'ioxtin.
Nal'ayulay: Easter name of a Bella Coola Comchat.
Nalta'lum, "Earthy Oun": Ghosts.
Nalulay: Land, region, earth.
[539] Nalulu: First part of song.
Nanal': Tsulum mountain about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.
[825] Nanamaxmalkin, "The One Who Makes Us Fat": Supernatural name of coho salmon.
[765] Napatum: Goods distributed to validate songs used at a mourning ceremony when no representation of the deceased has been employed.
[578] Napaxum: Insult offered to foreigners at potlatches concerning their manners or food.
[60] Nauakaxu or Nauakaxum: Synonym for Nalualaxum, invariably present.
[42] Nauxumalaxum: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Nalpi, nanalu, Nalpai: Grandfather.
[601] Nalualaxum: Easter ceremonial at which foreigners are present.
Nalu: The construction of salmon-weirs.

---

[1] This was the pronunciation of the word by the individual with an idiosyncratic r sound.

APPENDIX B

[illegible]

Gaiwanu: Kwakiutl term for presents given to a house bridegroom by the father of the house bride.

Gaishdaiwaiqlas: Supernatural being whose monarch is sun in the land above.

Gamey: Qualicum.

Gamlamkilaxu, "What Brings Our Food": Synonym for the supernatural being Winnipeg.

Gamsaxu: Designation for a series of difficult and unusually barbed dances.

Gamsxsu: Said to be identical with ulaxkanda, the visible object obtained by a shaman from his supernatural benefactor.

Gaxtu: gitsul, kulkulat, nesalin, tsimsem, nesalin, gitsul, kulkulat.

1—Society comprising those entitled to perform dramatic dances during the winter ceremonial season.

2—Member of the society.

3—"The Lowest One": Designation commonly applied to a supernatural being, especially a cannibal one, or to a person having power to cure the sick.

Gaxtsa: Kwakiutl female shaman living in the last century.

Gedim: Natural son, especially a child, this is the reputive form of the word.

Gedzum: Clothes.

Gesil'ala'yakay: Woman dwelling on Fort Rupert in the beginning of time.

Gewaqla: South Islet.

Gwakwaka'wu: Supernatural name of Cormorant.

Gwa'nawu: Wrapper.

Gwalwamalal: Wrapper name acquired by the first ancestor at Nimpkish.

Gwalwas: Unidentified bird of which the note is an omen of death.

Gwalaxi: Bella Coola name of a Bella Coola man.

Gwalalmas: Bella Coola name of a Bella Coola man.

Gwalaxwamat: Bella Coola name of a male Green Bay Cannibal.

Gwal'a'ii: Smooth pyramidal "pebbles," such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Gwalu: Evergreen bough.

Gwalwal: Famous Bella Coola warrior.

Gwapwa: One of the sculpins.

Gwawa: Bella Coola name of a Kimsquit man.

Gwa'wa'ka, "The Big One": Lawful male supernatural being.

Gwaxwalin: Man who came to earth near Dzawadi in the beginning of time.

Gwa'xwa: Kimsquit woman.

Gwikin: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Gwilwa: One of the first men to settle at Tsibassa Point in the beginning of time.

Gwinam: Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Gwilwakula, "One Who Has Without Right": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Gwala: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Naqlala chief, the word is a synonym for Wiwaxa chiefs.

Gwilkin Hankempa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

Gwawilkilan-ala: Lullaby.

gwal-gala: Archaic expression used in a string figure.

Gwalu: 1—Pen or trap in the ocean for salmon.

2—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its head.

APPENDIX B

Adhiman: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kinnaqui River in the beginning of time.

Adhanti: Unidentified name on the water cream mentioned in a Dwa story of the beginning of time.

Adhiniwadhan: Name acquired by one of the first settlers on Shalid in the beginning of time.

Adhiniwhiro: Gheenet's son in the beginning of time.

Aiko: Small parasitic crime.

Ahiwa: Direction of a spirit.

Ainoman: 1—"The Upper Sun."
2—"Sun," in the language of Dun.

Ainoman[illegible]: Intensive outlook carried out by moonshine.

Ashwa: Bulu Bulu Cannibal living in the beginning of time.

Ashwaniwa, "The Sentence of Eagle Down": Name created by Gheenet for his son in the beginning of time.

Atay: To hate.

Aushiddhin: Bulu Bulu supernatural being who brings food.

Ayoniwan: Power of physical disposition.

Ayuhu: Bulu-mouse.

Ab: To swim; ab, the word for pedatch, fish, is supposedly derived from this.

Ab, Pedatch.

Abdadd: The landing down of a Cannibal with man.

Ahmadin: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice.

Ahmadi di Dyuhiwa, "The Pedatch of the moonlamp": Second moon after winter solstice.

Ahmadin, "Year of Ad": One of the first men to settle on Shalid in the beginning of time.

Ahwaqiyu: Shaman's ritual cream, such as the curing of one who is unmentionably unclean.

Ahwaldidin: Minimum moon-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.

Ainoman: Partnership of a pure man with a chief about begins a pedatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and then work himself on the path towards greatness.

Aminuhiyu: The turning over of a mountain.

Ai'yu: Professional name of a female horse-puller.

Ajamidin: Stick decorated with upper heights used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers on Dwyat in the beginning of time.

Ajiu: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning.

Ahwadinan: Cannibal footer name used by the first settlers on Ashin in the beginning of time.

Akiyawin: Earlier name of a Bulu Cindu male furnisher.

Akiliu: Assassin.

Ashwin: 1—Earlier name of a Tumed man.
2—Shamanistic power.

Ashdhiwan: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a scary or other feeling of disquietude.

Ashjawa: Earlier name of a Kinnaqui man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.

Ashdhadhdhin, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Pinaqdhiwa, and hence a designation given to shamans.

192*

[415]

[763]

[825]

[195]

[756]

[764]

[772]

Pacate-ewa, "The Wrestler": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago. [192*] ewawaxa: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [378] Pace: 1—Barren district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adverse.
Pacqaiku: Tyl'a-kwil human.
Pacqawala: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tyl'a in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alaskiut in the beginning of time. [772]
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun.
Pacqawanaxa: Daughter of the first settlers at Alaskiut in the beginning of time.
Pacoqa: 1—(Probable) "The Place of Sorcerous", Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
ewat'qwa: Expository, archaic term.
ewawaxa or ewawa: The assumption of a name upon earth. [431] ewawalaqaka, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage. [586] ewawa-gwa: Wooden dish used for washing an infant.
ewawilawaxa: Alertness from sets of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [415] [785] ewlaxlaw: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [756] Ewlaxlaw: Name of a celebrated shaman.
Ewlaxa: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Ewlel, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
ewlaxqawa: Alteration of a dance from yaxat to kaxlat. [825] ewlaxlaxa: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck.
ewlaxlaxawaxa, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [516] ewlaxlawaxa: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431] Ewlaxa, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Ewlaqala: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Naqlaqlai in the beginning of time.
ewlawala: Parents of twins. [845]
ewlaqawa: Wolf. [825]
Ewlaxlawala: Mythical house in the sky.
Ewlaqawala: One of the names of the supreme god's house.
ewtalawa: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Tsaqalica to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with ewlaxlaw. [756] ewlaqawa: A creation of new kaxlat names, each as is necessitated by a dance, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] ewlaxaxlaw: Kaxlaxa rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
ewlaxawaxa: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431]
2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
ewlaqoa, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who points upon the head-apex used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Ewlaqwalt, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.
Ewlaxlaxa: Kaxlat name of a Tsimsal man.

eat for the raven to eat. This was done four times, and if a raven ate it, the patient recovered, according to Captain Schooner's belief. As the call of the raven sounds somewhat like a person affected with phlegm in the throat, this may be a case of sympathetic magic, at any rate it is one of witchcraft. 755 815 [illegible]

To make the river erode at a certain place in order to break a log jam, a beaver's foot was buried in each of several spots in the place. 757 815

A continuous rain would cease, and the sun would come out, it was said, if the people set fire to a wood-rat's house.

When it rained too much the Bellacoola Indians poked down an ant hill and said, "Give us warm weather." They believed this would bring results, but now that Joshua is a Christian he says he does not believe it and says it is useless play talk.

Bad boys or girls, but not adults, would take a dead mouse, warm it over a fire, and rub the warmed mouse on the hands of a baby. This made the baby steal when it grew up. The so-called stealing habits of the mouse were supposed to be transferred to the child. 754 816 815

The still warm body of a freshly killed wood-rat was used in the same way to make a baby, boy or girl, "crazy," and grow up to be a constant thief. The notorious habits of the wood-rat, as well as those of the mouse, were evidently well recognized by the Bellacoola.

To make people crazy, the red squirrel had to be properly used by a shaman and then it possessed strong power. One woman who had been made crazy in this way died in 1887. She did not like the shaman and he did not like her. He stole her apron. She was sorry. He took it into the forest and performed witchcraft because he wanted to spoil her life by making her crazy. He caught a red squirrel alive, possibly in a little basket. He had a box called a "bad box," in which he kept his things of evil power. He put some of the fringe of her apron around the red squirrel and let it run far away. The woman then became crazy and sometimes fell down, but part of the time she seemed well. My Indian informant, Joshua, had seen her. This example of sympathetic 754 756 815

759 magic probably originated from observing the many very sensitive and apparently purposeless movements of the red squirrel.

759 When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow up to be a quarrelsome person, a yellow jacket's nest was burned and the ashes were rubbed on the face, hands, and arms of the child. When the child grew up, it was believed, he or she would fight with everyone. The yellow jacket's natural defense of its nest is interpreted as quarrelsome, even by white people.

759 The toad was a powerful medicine for the bad box used in witchcraft.

To make a man or woman die of weakness, one of the hairs of the person's head was put in the body cavity of a disembowelled toad.

To make a person's face swell and separate until death came, the little pieces of unbleached red cotton back used to clean the person's face were put in the body cavity of a disembowelled toad. The idea underlying this was probably the reproduction of the warts of the toad on the face of the person.

To make a person die, a piece of the young shoot of a thimble berry, lost by that person while eating, was put in the mouth of a toad. Death was supposed to take place in half an hour.

759 One very old man, Judas by name, boasts of having killed seven people by means of his bad box used in witchcraft, especially of having caused the death of Mr. John Clayton, who was the first white man to remain long in this area, having kept the Hudson's Bay store at Bella Coola, and later a store of his own, but who died far away from Bella Coola in 1909.

Mrs. Samuel King who died in 1921 was said to have been poisoned by Willie Mack. Her father, Captain Schooner, was said to have stated that Willie would die in July on the anniversary of her death. Willie Mack died in the summer of 1915. Captain Schooner died a few days later. He was said to understand malevolent witchcraft thoroughly. It was said that people often cut off the collars of Willie Mack's shirts. Willie Mack's father was too great a chief so that people were ashamed, and consequently killed Willie by means of witchcraft with something in a bad box.

[illegible] 575

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

what cause this Sunspeak is for. Mythology and ritual are so closely connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Sun, the sun-god (compare sing. sun). The days of the sun are his symbolism. What people to be is called Tsal'ut. In praying the Bilqula both hunters and chieftains obtained the following formulae: chiefs say, Tsal'ut, look on us where we are sitting, Tsal'ut,' and Tsal'ut, exclaimed loudly, 'Take care of us, Tsal'ut.' Sun is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and dances interfere with his actions and thoughts of man. There are gives of Mamamala'niq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Mamamala'niq, Tsal'ut, Skalqal'ugus, and Itl'itla'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been expanded between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Mamamala'niq, and found there a beautiful pavilion occupied by which all the birds lived. Mamamala'niq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his arts. The raven was so content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the sunp'ula (so-daughter of, sp'ma the day is dawning). The sunp'ula was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pond from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pond, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the sunp'ula. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Mamamala'niq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Skalqal'ugusk and Itl'itla'lak tried likewise to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Tsal'ut carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Mamamala'niq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that man should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by man.

The Bilqula believe that Mamamala'niq and his brothers still continue to give new ideas to man. They say that any new design of painting or carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Mamamala'niq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

The soul is believed to dwell in the nape. It is similar in shape to a bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies away its owner must die. Shamans are able to see and to recover souls.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)892
NEB Bellacoola NEB

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swooms it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and enclose it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy.

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Raq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Raq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself.

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awik'enox wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Ma'kem) who will initiate him. No Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way.'

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ch'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called anuk. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms.

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die.

I add here a few current beliefs:—

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry.

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die.

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky.

WARS.

When a war party was organised the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their have to put the firewood. This opening is called K'ooe'ooeen, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Mamenkil'ela spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following ka'ioat song refers to these abilities: — 776 821

[531]

(" My child pointed the the sky when it broke
Go to Tlaxoilt one of the sky, my child!
Children my heart, my child!
My dress in the mouth of the sky, my child! ")

Our world is called A'nkel'in, or Qonk'ln, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Ahsp'ilocoanie'. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Sneeh'qoinh'tsoinx," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [131] [153]

In the ocean lives a being called Sisaoa, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the ka'ioat ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kwik'ula'mes). It is called Aiaat'aoan. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787]

?:Boas E-5 (1886-ca.1899)900 NEA Bellacoola NEA

776 There is a special deity who initiates the shamans. His name is LEM-IS'E, or SEM'COMX (Plate XI, Fig. 9). He lives in the woods. He carries a wooden wand wound with red cedar-bark, which he swings in his hands, producing a singing noise. Around his neck he wears a large ring made of strips of bear-skin and red cedar-bark. He sometimes plays in ponds which are believed to be in certain mountains. When he jumps into the water, it boils. When a woman meets him, she begins to menstruate; when a man meets him, his nose begins to bleed. When initiating a person, he touches the chest of the latter with his wand, and paints his face with the design of the rainbow. Then he swings his wand, the noise of which causes the person who hears it to faint. He creates sexual desire in men and animals. A shaman who was initiated by this being told me that he very often sees LEMIS'E, who tells him who will die and who will fall sick. Sometimes he sees that the body of a person is black. Others he sees dancing on their heads. These are signs that they will die at an early date. I obtained from this man the description of the visit to the country of the ghosts, quoted before (p. 38). He told me that when reaching the country of the dead, he saw the ghosts of his deceased relatives sitting in the house. When they saw him, they began to weep, and said, "Don't come here. We don't want to see you so soon." While they were speaking to him, the chief's sister entered the house, and called all the people to come to the dancing-house of the ghosts. One of the ghosts painted his face black and white, and tied long strips of white and red cedar-bark in his hair. The people were called four times. Then they started to go to the dancing-house. The entrance to the door was over a narrow plank. When he had just stepped on the plank, he suddenly met LEMIS'E, with his large neck-ring made of red cedar-bark and strips of black bear-skin, who took hold of him, turned him round, and told him to return to his own country, because, if he should once enter the dancing-house, he would not be able to return. Then he revived; and from that time on, LEMIS'E was his supernatural helper.

A. Jacobsen describes this spirit as follows:[1] —

776 756 "The most prominent among the spirits of the shamans is Kle-khsi-o'il [LEMIS'E]. He lives in the woods, where the youth who intends to be initiated sets ut'ked him. When the spirit meets him, the youth faints. When he recovers, he begins to sing a song, the tune and words of which have been given to him by the spirit. Now he has become a shaman, who uses this song in all his incantations; but he does not retain it throughout life, because he meets his guardian spirit almost every year, and then he receives new songs. The Indians believe that Kle-khsi-o'il has human shape, but he is clothed in cedar-bark, and wears a great many rings of cedar-bark.

[1] Volkerdenkmäler der Nordwest-Ausstellung der Anthropologen, Edinburgh und Dublin, 1894, p. 100.

7:Boas E-5 (1895-ca. 1897)900 NES Bellacoola NES

Some of these he gives to the shaman. . . . A third spirit is the Skaia [Sxal'tsmx], which is believed to live in rivers, and to have the shape of a salmon. When a shaman who is inspired by this spirit makes an incantation in a house, singing and dancing, as all the shamans do, whoever approaches the house and hears the song turns back. They believe that whoever passes the house during the incantation will be punished with death by the spirit Skaia." 776 756

I believe this spirit is identical with LEMSIS, who, as stated before, has the second name SNALTSMX. According to Jacobsen, some shamans are initiated by the ghosts. He says that the ghosts are believed to have bald heads and blue faces. I am under the impression, however, that the people initiated by them are not shamans, but ki'sint dancers (see Chap. VI). [718] [575]

Another being who initiates shamans is described in the following tradition: — 539 756 776

Once upon a time there was a man and a woman, who had four sons. The three older ones died. Then the father and mother, and the youngest brother were very unhappy, and the old people cried for grief until they died. The young man was now left all alone. He left his village, intending to go away and never to return. He pulled his blanket over his head and walked on. Sometimes he would stop to pray. He lived on the meat of mountain-goats which he shot. He built a small hut high up on the mountains, and dried the meat. He was crying and praying all the time. He prayed to the Sun to give him a gift which would restore his happiness. One day early in the morning he ascended the mountain. He addressed the rising Sun, saying, "Look at me, how unhappy I am." After he had gone a short distance he came to a ravine. The bed of the ravine was filled with pretty pebbles. There he met a beautiful man, who was no other than the Sun, who had descended from the sky. He had crossed the water of the creek that runs through the ravine to disappear. When the young man saw the stranger from a distance, he thought, "He seems to be looking for me." He went nearer; and when they met, the Sun said, "I am the one to whom you are praying all the time, and I come to help you. Now be happy. When you open your mouth and speak to me, I know your thoughts at once. I help those who address themselves to me. Take this." With these words he handed the young man a switch curved in the shape of a man. The Sun was carrying it under his arm, the point of the switch directed downward. "Fold your arms and hold this switch to your chest, and then return to the village. When you approach any one, hide the switch under your arm. You will find a person who wears a nose-ornament of beautiful green color. Then you must try to hit the ornament with this switch, and throw it to your right side."

T:Boas E.5 (2686-ca.1890)900 NES Bellacoola NES

539 He walked on, and after a while he noticed a man sitting at a distance.
756 Then he hid the switch under his arm. When he came near, he saw that 776 the man were a large green moss-ring. He hit it with his switch, and threw it to the right-hand side. Then the man said, "You have attained me as your supernatural helper. Your name shall be S'a'tcems [from 'a'tcems,' 'dead']. Many people have seen me, but nobody has done what you did. If you had not struck my moss-ornament, you would have died on seeing me. You shall have the power to heal the sick by the touch of your hands. Whenever a person dies and is put into a box, after the box has been placed in the burial-ground, go there. You will find me sitting on the coffin. If then you knock the moss-ring from out of my mouth, I shall leave, and the dead will revive. He will break the box, and will arise."

Then the young man felt very glad. He returned to the village, and by following the instructions of the spirit he resuscitated the dead. He was given many blankets, and the men whom he had resuscitated gave him their daughters in marriage.

756 Other shamans are initiated by c.'ent'qéts.ana. The same man who 776 gave me the record of his supposed visit to the country of the ghosts (see p. 58) told me that at another time he saw c.'ent'qéts.ana flying in the air outside of his house. She wore a ring of red cedar-bark around her neck. She was turning round all the time. Songs were coming from all parts of her body. Although she did not open her mouth, it sounded as though a great many people were singing. She gave him a song, or, as the narrator expressed it, "she threw a song into his body." At that time he was sick, suffering from a wound in his leg inflicted by an axe. He said four days after meeting the spirit he was able to walk, and since that time she has assisted him in curing diseases.

The sí'ám, is another helper of the shaman, and the means of curing diseases (see p. 58). It appears that it obtains its supernatural power from the fact that it lives in the water in which the supreme deity washes her face. Where a person sees a sí'ám, he should throw sand on it, by which means he will be able to catch it. Its skin is so hard that it cannot be pierced with a spear or knife. The person who catches it should not try to cut it with his knife, but should scratch his hand backward, and then he will find the leaf of a lady, which is the only thing that can cut its skin. He should not touch the sí'ám, with his hands, but hold it with hemlock twigs. He should wrap it in white cedar-bark and tie it up in his blanket. If it is not thus tied up, it will disappear. It must not be taken into the house, but should be placed in a small box and hidden under stones, or buried in a hole under the root of a tree. It is a most potent means of curing diseases. Sick people will buy small pieces of the s'ám, for which they pay high prices. The piece is thrown into water, in which it is kept for four days. Then the water is used for washing the body. If a healthy person uses this water, he will live to an old age. Sick persons chew the white cedar-bark in which it is wrapped up, in order to regain health. They must not swallow the cedar-bark, but only the saliva that gathers in their mouths. A person who has chewed the cedar-bark becomes invulnerable. The eye of the s'ûsu, is described as about a foot in diameter, and as transparent as rock crystal. 756 776 [755]
[755]

7/Boas B-5 (BBA-ca. 1892)000 NBS Bellacoola NBA

Tsû'lsu,'ŭ is the spirit who protects the mountain-goat hunter. He himself is invisible; but great hunters sometimes see his hat, his moccasins, or his mountain staff moving about. The following tradition describes some of his characteristics:— 776 539

The Raven and the Lynx lived in one house, each occupying one side. Early in the morning the Raven went out to catch salmon with the harpoon. He was very successful, and carried the fish home. Tsû'lsu,'ŭ watched the Raven, who, when he arrived at the house, roasted his salmon. The children of the Lynx were sitting near by, and looking at the Raven while he was roasting the fish. They wished to participate in the meal, but he did not give them anything. Then the children were very sad. Now the Lynx made up his mind to make arrows and to go hunting mountain-goat. He went out and cut some wood for his arrows; then he told his wife to make a quiver, which he called Ts'i'lapalu. She did so, and wove a quiver of cedar-bark. The Lynx was quite impatient for the sun to rise, so eager was he to start hunting. Early in the morning he arose and ascended the mountain. When he reached the limit of the trees, he sat down on a flat rock and looked for goats. Then he saw the staff of a man who was coming down the mountain. He did not see the person himself. He thought, "Who is that? Who may be hunting here?" The stick approached him; and when it came near, he saw Tsû'lsu,'ŭ, who wore a large hat. His hat was named Q'pin (that means a "heaven mountain-cap"). Tsû'lsu,'ŭ reached the Lynx, and sat down opposite him. Neither spoke a word. After a while Tsû'lsu,'ŭ arose, took the arrows of the Lynx, and said, "How beautiful these arrows are!" He took up one after another until he had looked at all the four arrows of the Lynx. Then he asked, "Who made these arrows?" The Lynx did not reply. Tsû'lsu,'ŭ asked again, "Who made these arrows?" Then Lynx replied, "Tsû'lsu,'ŭ made my arrows." Then Tsû'lsu,'ŭ was very much pleased, and said, "Is he the one who made your arrows?"—"Certainly!" replied Lynx. Then Tsû'lsu,'ŭ took his arrows and threw one after another down the mountain, and said to the Lynx, "Now go down the mountain and look at your arrows. If you spoke the truth, every

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ELAXŌ'LA dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark. Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the S'Ā'LPSTA (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that of HaxbakuālanuXsi'wae of the Kwakiutl. Some ELAXŌ'LA do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The ELAXŌ'LA has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 200.
MASK OF THE S'Ā'LPSTA.
Bellacoola.
Cat. No. 18808, U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The Ō'LEX (the laugher) and the dā'tia (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'LEX "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The dā'tia carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ō'LEX and the dā'tia, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

If a person transgresses the laws of the kū'siut, for instance, when the ELAXŌ'LA gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the substitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575
688
754
756
575
532
796

the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender, he will fall sick. Blood is believed to collect in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the kū'siut are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklace of red cedar bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others, the thunder bird and his servant, ALxulā'tEnum (who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and carries a staff with red and blue spiral lines), appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Xē'mtsioa and his brothers and his sisters; Masmasalā'nix and his fellows, the raven and the nusxē'mta, and many others.[1]

Fig. 201.
HEADDRESS OF ÔLALA'.
Haida.
Cat. No. [illegible], U. S. N. M. Collected by J. G. Swan.

000

THE TSIMSHIAN, NISQA', HAIDA, AND TLINGIT.

The tribes of this group learned the ceremonial avowedly from the Hē'iltsuq. Although I have not witnessed any part of their ceremonials, the descriptions which I received bring out with sufficient clearness its similarities to the winter ceremonial of the Kwakiutl. The ceremonials seem to be almost identical among all these tribes. It is most complete amor g the southwestern Tsimshian tribes, particularly the G-itxē'LA, but has been adopted by all the tribes of the coast. It is said that it reached the Haida not more than a hundred years ago.

I will tell here what I learned from the Nisqa'. They have six societies, which rank in the following order: The sEmhalai't, mēiLa', lōLE'm, ôlala', nanōstā't, hōnana'L, the last being the highest. The sEmhalai't is really not confined to the winter ceremonial, but is obtained when a person acquires the first guardian spirit of his clan and performs the ceremony belonging to this event. The tradition of the origin of these ceremonies localizes the events at Bellabella, and it

[1] See "Indianische Sagen von der Nord-Pacifischen Küste Amerikas," page 241, by F. Boas.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

wrapped up in a specific object it follows that the luck is transmissible; in fact, one of the chief advantages to the man who owns some valuable object is the wealth which he derives from selling a small portion of it. 777 787 * [432]

The Bella Coola term for supernatural good luck is siye, meaning, "What is Good." This can come from any being though it is most frequently obtained either from a mātsqus or a sisiutl. The former resembles a toad of enormous size, with a blazing fire-like glow in its throat; the latter is a double-headed salmon or snake that can travel on land. The person who succeeds in killing one of these creatures can use the carcass as a lure to wealth, if he knows the proper means. The portion must be wrapped in an article that has been in close contact with the slayer, such as a piece of his soiled clothing. This must be kept carefully hidden for one year in a cranny to which no rain can penetrate, and after that it can be used as bait. There is equal potency in a stick or other object which has come in contact with the beast. Great danger is attached to the sight of a mātsqus or a sisiutl, since death usually follows any incorrect attempt to gain wealth from either. The person who sees one of these creatures feels no ill effects until he draws near a fire, when his stomach bursts. All the Bella Coola agree that if a man has been close to one he can be saved by the use of certain medicines, but the following stories show that there is no clear-cut opinion as to which are the best. In fact, most families have knowledge of a specific cure which they regard as the most efficacious. [776] [776] [761] [757]

The opportunity to obtain supernatural good luck does not come solely to unfortunate individuals; indeed the Bella Coola state that it is fortuitous. It appears, however, that usually the person who is thus favoured is one who has practised ceremonial chastity, or is, through some other means, in a state of cleanliness pleasing to the supernatural. At any rate the danger of seeing such creatures is less to a man who is in a pure condition than to any other. Further, in most cases they are apt to appear to a person whose ancestors have seen one. [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilica (of the species known as lälkänelp or *walilikwätsälätsälätsäl

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER XI

MEDICINE, MAGIC, TABOO[1]

Introductory — Causative Medicines — Preventive and Curative Medicines — Sorcerers — Taboos — Ritual Acts — Miscellaneous Beliefs

Introductory

THE beliefs described in the last chapter are essentially religious since they display an attitude of respect and often of propitiation to supernatural powers having greater strength than human beings. This is self-evident in the earlier sections and, though less noticeable, is present also in ideas concerning shamans since these men have themselves acquired ability placing them on a plane slightly removed from that of their fellows. Theoretically, it seems as if a clear division might be drawn between the concepts just recorded, and others of a magical nature in which, although the element of contact with the supernatural is present, yet the end desired is obtained by the mere performance of an action. To the Bella Coola there is a slight overlap between the two types. For example, the acquisition of an object from which supernatural good fortune may be secured is religious, but its use is virtually magical since once obtained, neither supplication nor further favours are necessary. Nevertheless, it is possible to separate most magical beliefs from most religious ones, though it must be emphasized that the cleavage is less distinct to the native than it appears to the white man.

If it is difficult to find a clear dividing-line between religion and magic, it is impossible to draw one between the latter and

[1] The late Harlan I. Smith has dealt with certain aspects of the subjects treated in this chapter in two articles: "Sympathetic Magic and Witchcraft among the Bella-coola" (American Anthropologist, vol. 27, no. 1, Jan.-March, 1925, pp. 116-121) and "Materia Medica of the Bella Coola and Neighbouring Tribes of British Columbia" (National Museum of Canada, Annual Report for 1927, Bulletin 56, pp. 47-68).

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 the science of medicine. The Bella Coola are familiar with 789 many acts which cause definite results. To place a new-born girl in contact with the representation of a beautiful woman [856] so that she may grow up to be like her, seems false science,
[752] magic, to the white man; whereas the application of splints and gum to a fractured limb is a medical treatment, crude perhaps, but definitely scientific. The two are identical to the Bella Coola. They do not ask why or how a result follows, they merely know that it does. Such lore has been handed down from time immemorial; it is steeped in the sanctity of antiquity and hallowed by the knowledge that their ancestors have done the same for generations. All such acts may be described as "medicines," for so they appear to those who practise them. To separate them into magical and scientific categories would misrepresent the native point of view; the only division that can be made is between those that cause, and those that prevent or cure. Even in this there is some overlap. A medicine that cures a child from crying likewise causes him to be placid and amiable; so, too, medicines of a preventive nature comprise elements of both types. The principle governing most of these is sympathetic magic, a concept which, if put in words to the Bella Coola, would be regarded as logical and scientific. The second important class of medi-
[755] cines consists of objects, either herbal or derived from the human body, which are believed to have such abundant power that they are effective against ailments of supernatural origin, or against supernatural beings themselves. Some of these have already been mentioned in connection with the attitude of the Bella Coola towards these beings of the earth, sky, and water.

754 Most curative medicines are used by the practitioner on himself; most causative, on someone else. The latter are either 755 social or anti-social, depending upon whether the result is 789 benevolent or malevolent. Shamans frequently use magical means in curing the sick and are highly regarded by the community, but medicines of the same kind may be used to kill

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

has gone contrary to something about which there has been universal agreement for generations. 771 754

To understand Bella Coola medicines it is, therefore, necessary to regard them as concepts deep rooted in tribal history, and made potent by the suggestibility of those who practise them. This can be most clearly illustrated with regard to those effecting death, but is equally true with regard to all medicines, whether curative or causative. 828 [784] [755]

There remain for consideration the sociological aspects of medicines. Knowledge of most remedies has been handed down for generations as the property of ancestral families. Some are acquainted with one or two "cures," some with many, and some with none at all. The name of the discoverer of a particular medicine is usually lost in antiquity, though it is often attributed to someone described in the family's myth. Like other possessions based on mythology, a remedy of this type can be practised by any member of the group to which it belongs. If it is observed that a certain individual is using one of these successfully, others will ask him to apply it for them. Payment is always expected, but the sum varies enormously, depending upon the efficacy of the remedy, the difficulty of operation, the generosity of the person benefited, and so many diverse factors that no general conclusions can be made. A patient may observe the details of the treatment, but unless he is entitled to it, he would never dream of using it himself. This is due not only to honesty, but to the conviction that only a person with the inherited right to a certain cure can perform it successfully. Rarely, such knowledge is sold or given away outright, but, like other possessions of an ancestral family, this usually leads to friction and jealousy on the part of those overlooked. Some of the simple herbal remedies are common knowledge and are used by all, since remembrance of their ownership, if it ever existed, has been lost. At the present time it is difficult to learn details of proprietorship of some medicines, but these are indicated whenever possible. 424 755 757 [614] [465] [614] [425]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex
789 If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

843 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)
789 (1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk
757 Heat pods of Sedum Spathulifolium (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 To Cause Energy
789 Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and pat it with the other, saying:
825 "Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 To Cause Long Life
Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:
825 "May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.
886 The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so ensnared are killed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

gles, bites him between the eyes or at the back of the neck so that a little blood flows. 865 861

"If you don't keep quiet," he says to the screaming child, "I shall bite you all over your head."

This medicine acts in two ways: (1) The offender is so frightened that he is likely to reform; (2) Contact with a man of good disposition imparts the same to him. A tuft of mountain goat wool is inserted into the wound to make it heal properly.

To Cure Disobedience and Laziness 461

Parents whose child exhibits these bad qualities also ask help of a man of good character. If he accepts the task, he provides himself with a bone needle and waits until he hears the child refuse to perform some simple task. Then, with a rush, he throws the offender on his stomach and supposits the needle until the blood flows freely. He then releases the frightened child who usually slinks away to bed for the rest of the day. When the bleeding has ceased, the quiet person cuts chips from the canoe of an energetic man and rubs them on the wound, saying: 865 861

"Please, may you be like the canoe, always active and doing whatever is expected of you."

An old Kimsquit man recalled vividly the application of this medicine to him when he refused to fetch water for his mother. He was about eleven years of age at the time and asserted that it had greatly improved his behaviour.

MEDICINES FOR ORDINARY DISEASES

For Sprains and Bruises 752

Pound stalks of false hellebore, mix with hemlock gum, and bind on the injured spot as a poultice.

For Swollen Neck

Cut off small pieces of a thoroughly smoked bear's heart, pound in water, and drink the mixture. 757

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

757 For Head-ache

Tie around the forehead a piece of dyed cedar-bark, unsyed cedar-bark, or other similar material. No herbal remedy is known.

For Eye Trouble

Moisten the finger with saliva and rub the eyes with it.

For Baldness (two means)

(1) Boil cottonwood buds in water, causing the gum to exude. Skim this from the surface, mix with fresh olachen grease or oil obtained from sockeye salmon, and rub on the scalp.

(2) Rub on the scalp oil from olachen, dog-fish, or any kind of salmon. The best is grease from the liver (?) of a dog-fish, obtained by hanging the organ before a fire and collecting the drops which exude.

For Skin Irritation

Rub dog-fish liver oil on the rash or itching part.

755 828 For Excessive Dreaming and Nightmares (two means)

(1) Burn dried salmon beneath the bed of the person afflicted.

(2) Lie in a canoe which has been chiselled out to the right thickness but has not been widened and hardened by smoke. A mat is laid across for this purpose and the smoke directed beneath, thoroughly fumigating anyone lying within. An informant was so treated as a young man when he was greatly troubled by nightmares in which he used to see a huge head which so terrified him that he would leave his bed to rush around the house shrieking and tearing his hair. This medicine cured his trouble.

757 For Canker

Pound up a snail and rub on the sore spot within the mouth.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

For Cold 757

Snuff dried urine such as is found around the rims of unemptied chamber pots. Kāmai·ts taught the ancestors of the Bella Coola that this was good for colds. [773]

For Sore Throat

Boil cottonwood buds in dog-fish oil and drink about a teaspoonful of the decoction at intervals until cured. Dog-fish oil, being a necessary ingredient in many medicines, is always kept on hand for emergencies.

For Coughing

Boil roots of false hellebore in water and drink the decoction freely. It is so poisonous that the patient usually falls to the ground, spitting blood. Coughing is one of the many ailments cured by this plant.

Another remedy is used for a person whose cough causes him to spit frequently. A friend collects some of the fresh expectoration, mixes it with salmon roe, and places it where ravens are accustomed to feed. This is done four times and the patient is cured if the birds devour the mixture. 755

For Whooping-Cough

Boil cottonwood buds in water with the fat of any animal and drink frequently. 757

For Sores and Boils

Warm dried urine and rub on the part affected. Like the remedy for colds, it was Kāmai·ts who taught this to the ancestors of the Bella Coola. Gum or tobacco is sometimes added to the urine, and applied like a poultice. [773]

For Boils (two means)

(1) Heat human excrement thoroughly and apply to the boil, tying it in position with cloth. At intervals, add more, without removing the bottom layer and leave in position for

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 about one week. This causes the skin to turn white and draws out the matter.

752 [177] (2) The usual remedy for boils and similar sores is cutting. There are no professional surgeons so that a patient merely requests a friend in whom he has confidence to perform the operation which is now carried out with a metal knife instead of an obsidian blade. A man frequently performs on himself and it is not uncommon to see a Bella Coola sitting nonchalantly with the blood streaming down his leg into a receptacle filled with water. Even when a boil is on the buttocks, it may be cut by sitting down on a knife, but in this case a friend is always present to state when the position is correct.

752 759 For Ulcers and Abscesses

A few individuals, at present two at Bella Coola and one at Kimsquit, have the necessary skill to locate and operate on ulcers of the stomach. They have no inherited prerogative, their ability is due solely to practice and good sense. If a person suffers from internal pains and believes them to be caused by an ulcer, he requests one of these men to help him. The practitioner kneads and handles the patient to locate the growth, and suggests operating if he thinks it necessary. He measures off on the blade of a knife the depth required for the incision and asks consent to make such a cut. If the sufferer considers it too deep, he may indicate a shorter distance on the knife, or he may desire a still deeper one. As soon as patient and surgeon have agreed upon the depth of the wound, the latter inserts the knife to the proper distance, twists it around, and draws it out. If he has diagnosed correctly, pus comes pouring out; the wound is drained by the insertion of an eagle quill, and in many cases the patient recovers. Several instances are remembered of too deep cutting, resulting in penetration of the intestines and death. A surgeon is always suitably rewarded for his work.

It is believed that such operations were performed before the introduction of metal knives. Whether or not this be true,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

it is certain that ones of this type took place about 1870. No information could be obtained about other surgical practices. The Bella Coola are unacquainted with either trephining or cupping, and it is most unlikely that they performed more than cutting and the setting of broken limbs. Though incisions are primarily for boils and abscesses, one may be made in case of any obstinate pain, in the belief that some foreign matter has entered the body and must be extracted. 752 [759]

For Stomach-Ache (two means) 757

(1) Peel the outer surface of red elderberry roots and chew a section until all the juice has been squeezed forth and swallowed; then spit out the tasteless bark and take a second piece. This must be continued for some time. It is dangerous to allow the liquid to remain within the stomach, so warm water must be taken as an emetic.

(2) Take five roots of the plant ma'xwal·i, each about one-tenth of an inch in diameter and one inch in length, grind them to powder and pour on water. Warm the mixture to body heat and drink in large quantities. This acts as an emetic and the patient feels hungry after vomiting. If cooked for a longer time, the roots provide a valuable food. [262]

This medicine is not sufficiently potent for serious attacks.

For Stomach-Ache, and also for Other Internal Pains (two means)

(1) Strip the bark from a kāk'telp (birch?) branch a few inches in diameter and about three feet in length, and boil for an hour in a small amount of water. Care must be taken not to boil the decoction too long or it will become poisonous. Drink about four cupfuls of the mixture. It causes the stomach to heave violently, followed by vomiting. Then drink warm water, which also acts as an emetic. Take a further potion of the medicine, then more water, and continue with alternate doses until the vomit is clear. This medicine is so powerful that a patient usually recovers by the following day.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 (2) Place on the surface of the skin nearest the pain hemlock gum and a human bone taken from that part of the skeleton adjacent to the seat of the discomfort.

[424] This medicine is the property of several ancestral families and can be used only by members of them.

For Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism

Scrape in the earth a hole about six inches deep and six feet in length. In the bottom deposit a large number of hot stones and cover them with a thin layer of river sand mixed with fine gravel. On these place as many herbal medicines as possible; such as nettles, devil's club bark, western dock, cottonwood leaves, green moss-like growths from water-covered stones, bark from spruce saplings, and the debris from cones eaten by squirrels. The actual ingredients vary according to season; in winter, for example, only one or two may be available. Mats are thrown over the plants for the patient to lie upon, covered by additional ones. A helper is always present to sprinkle him with water when the heat becomes too great and to rub away the sweat which pours off with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark. Instances are remembered of patients going to sleep in this type of sweat-house and being severely burnt.

For a person who is very ill, the hole is dug within the house, near the central fire, otherwise it is located at any convenient spot in the woods. This remedy is known to, and can be used by, everyone.

For Stomach Trouble and Water in the Blood

Dig a hole about three feet deep and with the same diameter. Throw hot stones in the bottom and place a rack of crossed and tied sticks across the excavation below the level of the ground. On this place medicinal herbs as described in the last remedy. The patient squats over the hole, enclosed in a tent-like shelter of mats or cedar-bark. Water is thrown on the stones and the enclosure prevents the resultant steam from escaping.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This type of smoke-house, which can be used by anyone, is usually built in the forest. The Bella Coola have great confidence in the use of one as a means of curing all types of internal ailments, especially from the bad effects of water which is believed to have entered the blood. In former years many patients were blinded by the steam affecting their eyes, so that a recent improvement has been the construction of a door-like opening through which the head projects. Many stories are told of people being cured in this way after a white doctor had abandoned hope. 757

No Bella Coola had heard of a smoke-house large enough to contain more than a single individual, and a question whether they were ever used as meeting-places was regarded as highly humorous and absurd. [343]

For Ailments of the Heart

The patient must eat some of his own excrement mixed with certain herbs, of which it was impossible to learn the species. This remedy can be used only by the members of certain ancestral families. [424]

For the Blood

The following medicine is the property of certain families; consequently, anyone else who wishes to use it must obtain the services of an owner to apply it, and must recompense him for so doing. [424]

The man who is to apply the remedy locates a pond where water-lilies are growing and then searches for four spruce saplings growing in line, approximately east to west. He cuts four branches from the east side of each tree and lays these beside the pond with a small space between each bunch. Then he pulls up some lily roots, lays them in the three gaps between the boughs, and wraps the whole into a bundle with a cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark which he winds around, clock-wise. On returning home, the practitioner must not carry his burden through the door but

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-4924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 throw it in through the smoke-vent. He cuts the roots into thin slices which are boiled in water for four days. The patient drinks several cupfuls of the decoction which never fail to benefit him.

[776] [773] The basis of this medicine is the belief, already described, that when a nsiuti swims through a pond it frequently sheds some of its scales which become water-lilies. They are, therefore, potent in themselves and are of greatest benefit to one who has practised ceremonial chastity. The patient must observe several taboos for forty days after treatment: He must hold no sexual intercourse; must eat neither salmon nor meat that has not been smoked; must eat nothing cooked either by a menstruating woman or by one who has lost her husband within a year; and must not approach a girl during the year following puberty. The breaking of one of these taboos causes [761] his death, and the man who has administered the medicine watches the conduct of his patient with great care.

755 For Debility (two means)

(1) Drink strong, stale urine, mixed with red rock-paint ground fine.

Knowledge of this medicine has been handed down for [424] generations in certain familes. It is said to be most unpleasant to take.

(2) The following medicine, said to be the most potent known to the Bella Coola, is used for a person who has long been feeble, especially if he has been spitting blood. It is the [424] property of several ancestral families, and must be administered by an elderly male member of one of them.

The owner of the remedy obtains a dry, clean skull, places within it a little water which he brings to a boil with hot pebbles and adds a small quantity of mountain goat marrow. The patient is given a dry stick, about three feet in length, from which the pith has been extracted to make a tube. With this he sucks four times, swallowing a little of the decoction, while the practitioner says to the skull:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Please remedy the invalid." 755

This is virtually a prayer, addressed to the deceased owner of the skull, and accordingly verges on appeal to the dead. None the less, there is no concept of active supplication to any individual ghost, but rather of acquiring aid by the use of a supernatural object.

For one year after this treatment, sexual intercourse is forbidden to both practitioner and patient. The latter, though not the former, dies if either fails to observe this taboo. The use of an old man to apply the medicine is to lessen danger from this source. The owner of this remedy is always liberally rewarded and some old men carefully preserve a skull under a rock-ledge in order to be ready if called upon. [785] [761]

For Smallpox

Pick up a toad, and tear off its head with the teeth, swallowing some of the blood. 757

This is an ancient remedy for some other ailment which was tried as a last resort during the smallpox epidemic. One man who succeeded in practising it on four successive days was cured of the dread disease.

For Consumption

Boil leaves and stems of a certain fleshy plant (not identified) in water and drink the decoction. The potency of the medicine increases accordingly to the number of plants used.

This medicine was a Nootka Indian's hereditary cure for a cough which was found to be effective for consumption as well. The malady was so prevalent on the coast in the last century that it seemed as if the inhabitants were doomed; this remedy was allegedly discovered at that time and knowledge of it spread rapidly from tribe to tribe, saving the lives of hundreds. The Bella Coola recognize that this was a private medicine, but have ceased to regard it as such and have no hesitation in applying it whenever required. [177] [164]

Schultzwalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

755 For Insanity

177 The Bella Coola have no medicine for this disease, although they are familiar with one used by the Kwakiutl, which was applied not long ago to a Rivers Inlet youth by two old women, one from Newitte and the other from Djoldänux. They exhumed a recently buried corpse, took a small piece of skin from the left side of the base of the neck, left this for twenty-four hours in a small stream, and then allowed it to steep for another twenty-four hours in a cup filled with water. This liquid was drunk by the patient who immediately recovered his sanity. He was next given water in which had been boiled needles from the yellow cedar; this strengthened him and prevented a relapse. The patient, now cured, observed continence for a year; failure to obey this injunction would have caused his death.

[785] [761]

The Bella Coola assume that this remedy is the property of Kwakiutl ancestral families who alone are entitled to use it. The practitioners are always suitably recompensed and do not undertake the treatment except at the request of one of the patient's relatives. Kwakjutl experts have been brought to Bella Coola several times within recent years to cure cases of insanity, but great secrecy is maintained concerning the methods employed. They are considered to be effective, in proof of which the attention of the writer was directed to two sane men who were said to have been raving lunatics before undergoing a Kwakiutl treatment. It is probable that the individuals had been subject to periodic fits of insanity and that a temporary improvement was regarded as a definite cure.

757 For Venereal Disease (four means)

(1) Boil scrapings of false hellebore roots in water for a long time and drink the decoction. If it is too strong, add more water.

(2) Pound sha'tcalx, a kind of fungus, in water and drink the brew.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1918
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(3) Pound bark and wood of the black hawthorn in water and drink the brew. 757

(4) The following medicine must be prepared by the patient himself. It is not generally known, but the woman from whom the information was obtained claimed that it had been used with success by her brother.

Obtain a human bone, or a piece of a coffin, and burn it secretly in the forest at some distance from the village. Mix the ashes with dog-fish oil. After preparing the medicine the patient must remain alone in the woods for four days. He can then return home and rub the mixture on his genital organs to reduce the swelling. The sufferer must remain continent for one year or the disease will return with increased malignancy.

It was impossible to learn which types of venereal disease are believed to be curable by these medicines. Nor could definite information be obtained concerning the length of time that the Bella Coola have suffered from these maladies. Most of the old people affirmed that they were unknown before the coming of the white man, although one elderly woman was emphatic in stating that they had experienced them for many generations. 164

For Difficult Delivery (three means) 757

(1) The usual remedy, which has been described already, is to apply hot ashes to the woman's feet as soon as the pangs of delivery are felt. 845

(2) If delivery has been delayed beyond the usual time, it can be accelerated by giving the woman a morsel of the testicle of a beaver mixed with water. This causes the infant to be born at once.

(3) In case of extremely protracted delivery, a husband can help his wife by urinating upon her head.

For Breast Trouble 757

The cure for a pain in a woman's breast is to make a deep incision so that the blood flows freely.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

each house in succession, borrowing filled chamber vessels. 575* Five or six men are waiting for X with these, and as he enters 796* his house, they pour urine over him. Thus restored to partial sanity, he cries out in a different tone of voice, and at once visits every house. The kukusiut are still with him, but need not guard him as closely since he is now less liable to frenzy. The uninitiated are greatly relieved at this removal of peril from among them. Later in the day kukusiut go to the different houses, asking for choice salmon-grease with which the Cannibal will later be fed. The giving of the first food to X, the later sending aloft of his call, and the restrictions which he observes for the rest of the winter do not differ from those described for other Cannibals.

Snuuq's patron is a snuuq of the Mountain which became [776] petrified in the beginning of time. At his repository there is a [778] spring beneath a large boulder. Uninitiated persons passing the spot are often terrified by hearing the growling of a Cannibal from beneath the stone. It is in this place that persons [757] suffering from virulent skin disease are washed by X, as described in a previous chapter.

Few particulars could be learnt of the rite as carried out by Qolliaohmx, though it is said to resemble the one just described [424] in every respect. The prerogative was obtained in a vision of [787] one of the Cannibal's early ancestors, who located the reposi- [778] tory of the name beneath a large, flat stone, directly in the old trail up the valley. When anyone treads on it, reverberation is heard. The writer was a spectator when the present 575* Qolliaohmx gave his dance in January, 1924, but the rite was 796* performed in such a perfunctory manner that little could be 178 learnt from it. The Cannibal wore two bands of dyed cedar-bark on his left forearm, under one of which was a container of red paint. Uttering his cry of xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and looking around with a wild air, he frequently buried his face in his arm, between the bands. The red paint made a realistic representation of blood, especially as it dropped with red smudges on the floor. On this occasion, the dancer appeared

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Scratch Dance]

his call, and when this has been settled, he informs those kukusiut whom he plans to honour by scratching. Since each will have to be recompensed for allowing X to display his prerogative, their number depends on X's wealth. Early in the morning of the day chosen, which is always immediately after the nebusam of some other kusiut, the call comes, and X gives a low hoot. At once he starts wildly rushing around and scratching, so that the uninitiated are only too willing to flee from his terrifying presence. Throughout the day X is escorted by a number of kukusiut to every house, where he rages around the fire, throwing his arms to and fro in an infuriated manner, sometimes scratching one of his fellows, but more often merely acting as if he desired to do so. The uninitiated hide within the bedrooms, greatly impressed by what they see if they dare to look forth. 575* 796* [424]

Towards evening the kukusiut are summoned to X's house, where a dramatic representation, into which the members fully enter, is made of binding him as if he were a wild animal or a lunatic. A rope is stretched around the fire, held by the kukusiut, with X inside. He pretends to be trying to escape, while the rope-holders bend down and move around to hold him within their bonds. Meanwhile a shaman, or some senior kusiut, leads a frenzied beating of sticks which is four times repeated, to cure the madness. A kusiut then grasps the Scratcher's face and moves his mouth four times, to make sure that his jaws can move properly; the meaning of this is unknown. X now takes one of the beating-sticks and sits down among the singers as if about to teach them both tune and words of a song describing his knowledge of the land above, derived from his call. For a few moments he beats sanely, and appears to speak in a rational manner, but soon he goes off in a wild frenzy of senseless pounding. Hoip, hoip, cry the kukusiut to soothe him. After this has been several times repeated, the singers announce that they have learnt X's song, though of course, they have composed one themselves in readiness for the occasion. They now sing it; the audience listens, [757] ● [533] of these data refer to insects, and may be of interest to entomologists, although my spelling of Indian words is very problematical, because some of the sounds I can neither hear nor make, and I am unable to record adequately many of those that I can hear. The data here given are preliminary to a complete working over of my notes, but are believed to be nearly complete.

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

Insects apparently were not so well observed by the Bellacoola as were useful mammals and plants, the stinger of the bumble-bee, for instance, being supposed to be in its mouth. Few insects had names, that is, mainly those which were used or which troubled the Indians. Insects were not used for food, and honey was unknown until after the coming of the white man. The head of the gad-fly was used as a pattern in painting designs, the nest of the yellow-jacket in sympathetic magic or witchcraft, and "fly spit" was said to be good for sores. They had a story about the bumble-bee.

Among the Ulkatcho also observation of insects was weaker than that of mammals and plants, and they apparently had names for only a few insects, those which troubled them. Ant lyon pits and its method of taking prey were known. Insects were of no use to the Ulkatcho whatever. An instance was observed of an Indian amusing himself with a buzzing fly held in his mouth. They employed smudges, fish oil, gum of the cottonwood, and blossoms of cow parsnip with oil to protect themselves from mosquitoes, black flies and no-see-ums, and smoke to protect foods from flies.

The Ant lyon, among the Ulkatcho, is called Kinnelkats. It is said to be numerous at Ulkatcho, but that it was useless and that there was no story about it. My informant voluntarily showed me the pits made by the larvae of this insect and, catching ants for the purpose, demonstrated its well-known method of taking its prey.

The grasshopper (Orthoptera), that makes a noise by rubbing its wings together when it flies, was called Telcus, among the Ulkatcho.

"Fly spit," that is the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, also known as a frog hopper (Cercopidae), is said

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B 825 757 by some old Bellacoola men to be good for sores, but my informant did not believe it.

C 825 Among the Ulkatcho it is numerous, but was not used, not even as a medicine.

B 825 A bumble-bee, identified as Bombus appositus Cresson, by Dr. H. J. Franklin, among the Bellacoola, was called Tikquanats or the large Skotl, Skotl being the name of three kinds of insects, a bumble-bee, a yellow jacket, and a hornet. It was not taken nor used, and was said to do no harm to people. My informant did not know whether it had a house or not. Neither did he know that it made honey until told so by white men. They say the bee took one of the prickers of the swamp gooseberry for a stinger, but my informant said he did not believe this. He thought it had a sting in its mouth, not in its tail, until I showed him. The Bellacoola have a story that a being considered by a little girl to be a man, but by an elder sister to be a bumble-bee, was once seen coming from the noonday sun. The little girl became blind, B [773] but her eyes appeared to be all right. Many thought she was made blind by too much sunlight when she looked at the man who was a bumble-bee.

C 825 226 Among the Ulkatcho, this bumble-bee was called Whultocho, Whulto being the name of a yellow jacket, and cho meaning large. Whus or Whis means pricker. The bumble-bee was not used as fish bait.

B 825 An insect, probably the hornet, is called Slow lowstl, by the Bellacoola, who say it has a little white on the tail and makes a small nest in a tree in July.

The yellow jacket among the Bellacoola was called Quolalaits (Clolaclaylaits) (Clolaclaylaits skotl) while all three kinds of insects, the bumble-bee, the yellow jacket and the hornet, were called Skotl. The yellow jacket was known to make a nest. The nest was used in sympathetic magic or witchcraft as follows: When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow up to B be a quarrelsome person, the nest of the yellow-jacket was burned [754] and the ashes rubbed on the child. When the child grew up he or she would fight with everyone.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

MATERIA MEDICA OF THE BELLA COOLA AND NEIGHBOURING TRIBES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

By Harlan I. Smith

INTRODUCTION

This paper describes the materia medica of four tribes of British Columbia, the Bella Coola of Bella Coola valley, the Gitksan of Skeena river, the Carrier who live in the territory behind both of these tribes, and the Sikani of the headwaters of Peace river. Among the Bella Coola the medicines are largely family possessions known to a few individuals only, so that two families may have different remedies for the same specific complaint; but this is not the case among the other tribes. Everywhere magical practices enter largely into the treatment of disease, but are not touched upon in this report. It was impossible for the Indians to diagnose many of their maladies, so that the identifications given here are in many cases problematical.

Most of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1920-22, by Joshua Moody, apparently a full-blood Bella Coola Indian, born about 1868. As he did not speak English he gave the data in Chinook jargon, which has been interpreted and arranged in logical order. Joshua is an Indian scientist with great knowledge of the local plants and animals. He remembers when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in Bella Coola valley, and when the inhabitants saw only one other white man every year or two. Consequently he can recall the old Bella Coola material culture before it was much affected by European ideas.

Some of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1922-23 by the late Captain Schooner, also, apparently, a full-blood, born about 1848, who used the Chinook jargon. Alec Davis, Alexander Clelaman, Louie Hall, and other Bella Coola Indians likewise gave information and corroboration.

Most of the information relating to the Southern Carrier Indians of Ulkatcho was secured during 1920-1922 from Charlie West, alias Pretty Charlie or Handsome Charlie, a native of that place, born about 1871. Charlie used the peculiar form of broken or pidgeon English commonly employed for communication between the whites and the Carrier and Chilcotin Indians of this region.

The information about the Sikani and the Northern Carriers of Hagwelget is from stray field notes kindly supplied by Mr. D. Jenness.

The information relating to the Gitksan was secured in 1925-26 from the late John Fowler and Abraham Fowler of Kitwanga, Luke Fowler and Bob Robinson of Hazelton, with additions and corroboration from a few others, all old Gitksan Indians, apparently full-blood. The information was secured mainly in English, although Abraham Fowler used also the Chinook jargon.

The method the writer employed was to submit specimens of the plants to his informants and question them concerning all their uses. Of the information thus obtained only the medicinal portion has been presented here. The plants were later identified by Mr. M. O. Malte, of the National Museum, Ottawa.

B 121 757 [101] [131] B [429] B 115 [191] C 115 C [198] S [127] T 115 T [191] B C T S 124 126

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE 15

B
C

POLYPODIACEAE, FERN FAMILY

137
757

Polypodium vulgare L., POLYPODY, PARASITIC SWORD FERN

Bella Coola: Roots—sometimes mixed with leaves of the red cedar (Thuja plicata Donn) or with other medicinal roots which the informant had forgotten—boiled, and the warm decoction taken internally for pains in the stomach, but not for vomiting or diarrhoea. Neither an emetic nor a purgative.

Roots chewed for swollen sore throat.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Asplenium cyclosorum Rupr., LADY FERN

Bella Coola: Little roots cleaned off, from five to ten centres, mixed at times with roots or branches of the currant (Ribes laxiflorum Pursh. var.), boiled strongly, but for a short time only, and the decoction used as a wash for sore eyes.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

B [752]
[262]

Aspidium spinulosum Sw., SHIELD FERN

Bella Coola: Root eaten raw to neutralise poisoning from eating several kinds of shell-fish in the early part of the summer.

C
137
757

Fern, species uncertain

Northern Carrier: Root boiled and the decoction taken internally for worms.

Gitksan: The large, round, green root-stock, but not the rootlets, mashed with bark of balsam fir (Abies grandis Lindl.) and devil's club (Fatsia horrida Sm. B. and H.), a little gum of scrub pine (Pinus contorta Dougl.) or tideland spruce (Picea sitchensis Carr), and root of skunk cabbage (Lysichiton kamtschatcense Schott), warmed a little, and applied to a boil or ulcer, which it brought to a head. Also used for rheumatism, and as a plaster on the chest for hemorrhage of the lungs.

C

LYCOPODIACEAE, CLUB MOSS FAMILY

137
757

Lycopodium clavatum L., COMMON CLUB MOSS

Southern Carrier: Inserted in the nose to cause bleeding and cure headache.

TAXACEAE, YEW FAMILY

B 137
757

Taxus brevifolia Nutt., YEW

Bella Coola: Branches with leaves boiled, and the decoction taken internally for the lungs. Neither a purgative nor an emetic.

S: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

CONIFERAE, PINE FAMILY

Juniperus communis L., JUNIPER

B
C 137
757

Bella Coola: Roots, leaves, branches, and bark boiled, and the decoction taken internally as often as desired for many ailments, including a cough from the lungs, and pain in the stomach. Neither a purgative nor an emetic.

Southern Carrier: Branches boiled, and the vapour inhaled for headache and pain in the chest.

Northern Carrier: Tips boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative, also for a cough.

Juniperus sp.

B
J
137
757

Gitksan: Entire plant, including roots and berries, boiled for a day, and the decoction, when cool, taken internally for many ailments, including hemorrhage and kidney trouble. A purgative and diuretic.

Thuja plicata Donn, RED CEDAR

Bella Coola: Very soft bark used to bind up wounds, and to cover poultices of false bugbane (Trautvetteria grandis Nutt.) and of tall buttercup (Ranunculus acris L.).

Leaves, sometimes with the gum-coated cones, boiled, and the hot decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach. Neither an emetic nor a purgative.

Leaves powdered by pounding, mixed with a little cold water and taken internally for pain in the stomach, also externally for coughs and internal pains, as heart trouble, rheumatism, swollen neck, and pain in the stomach. See also Polypody, page 48.

Gitksan: Not used.

Chamaecyparis nootkatensis (Lamb) Spach, YELLOW CYPRESS, YELLOW CEDAR

B
137
757

Bella Coola: A little soft bark used to cover poultices of false bugbane (Trautvetteria grandis Nutt.) and of tall buttercup (Ranunculus acris L.).

Pinus contorta Dougl., SCRUB PINE, JACK PINE

B
[752]

Bella Coola: Gum applied to cuts.

Gum chewed and applied to broken skin.

B
[164]

Gum at the ends of branches, collected in November, December, and January, boiled and the decoction taken internally for "consumption."

Gum—like that of tideland spruce (page 51) and western hemlock (page 51)—mixed with the baked stems and leaves, or the dried and pulverized bulb, of false hellebore (page 53), and applied as a poultice (sometimes spread on red cedar bark) to the chest for heart trouble, and to the arms for rheumatism. Burned the skin within two or three days, but was sometimes left on as long as two weeks.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14
Chilcotin NE8

Ca
T
5
137
757

Southern Carrier: New shoots boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach. Resembled the decoction made from the bark of the aspen (page 54), or from the new shoots and bark of the tideland spruce (page 51), but the last-mentioned considered most efficacious.

Northern Carrier: Needle tips mixed with large needle tips of the "British Columbia pine" (Pinus sp.?), the inside bark of the wild gooseberry (Ribes sp.?), bark of the red-osier dogwood (Cornus stolonifera Michx.), the inside pulp of raspberry canes (Rubus sp.), stems of the "bearberry" (?black twin-berry, Lonicera involucrata Banks?), and the inner bark of the wild rose (Rosa sp.), placed in a vessel holding four gallons of water, boiled down to a thick decoction, strained, and bottled. About two tablespoonfuls taken, at sunrise and sunset, for constitutional weakness or paralysis, or if the body were covered with sores.

Gum obtained by heating a green piece of pine (sp.?) painted on the eye to remove white scum and to cure snow-blindness.

T

Sikani: Pitch chewed and the saliva swallowed for a cough.

[912]
[362]

Gitksan: Inner bark (scraped from the trunk with a bone scraper after the outer bark had been removed) eaten both for food and as a blood purifier. Purged the body in from half an hour to an hour.

T
[164]

Shavings of the yellow resinous timber found after removal of the bark boiled, the decoction placed in oil, and taken internally as a purgative and diuretic for many serious ailments, including gonorrhoea. Said to produce beneficial results in "consumption."

Young needles plucked in June and eaten as a purgative and diuretic.

For use with a fern, see page 48.

B
Ca

Abies grandis Lindl., White Fir, Balsam Fir

137
757
[164]

Bella Coola: Bark of root or of stem boiled, and the decoction taken internally every day for tuberculosis and stomach trouble. Said to have cured many cases of tuberculosis.

Gum from bark blisters found on young trees warmed, mixed with mountain goat tallow, and taken internally for sore throat; also drawn on a hair across sore eyes.

Young, green leaves baked, mixed with fruit of skunk cabbage (Lysichiton kamtschatcense Schott.) gathered in October, or the buds gathered in April, split, dried on top of the house, roasted, mixed with a small quantity of slightly roasted roots of the cow parsnip (Heracleum lanatum Michx.), one or two cupfuls of the gummy buds of the black cottonwood (Populus trichocarpa T. and G.), and four or five cupfuls of fresh eulachon oil, allowed to stand one day, then boiled and kept in a box for a hair perfume. Kitimat Indians said to be more expert in its preparation.

B
[302]
[171]

Cn
[757]

Southern Carrier: Tree used for medicine, but details not obtained.
Chilcotin: Not used.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

Abies sp.

Northern Carrier: Bark boiled in water and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Gum used as an ointment on wounds, and especially on burns.

Sikani: Gum applied to wounds.

Gitksan: Juicy inner bark, scraped from the trunk of the tree, after removal of the outer bark, taken internally for constipation.

Gum from the bark blisters taken internally as a purgative and diuretic for "consumption," gonorrhoea, and many other serious ailments. Applied externally to cuts and sores, especially the sores of gonorrhoea.

The young cones, obtainable in August, sliced across, mashed, and used for the same purposes as the gum from the bark blisters.

See also fern, page 48.

C T S 137 757 S [152] T [164]

Pseudotsuga taxifolia Britt., Douglas Fir

Bella Coola: Gum boiled and taken internally, while warm, as a diuretic for gonorrhoea.

Gum, spread on red cedar bark, applied to cuts. (One informant said that although gum of scrub pine (see page 49), hemlock (see page 51), and tideland spruce (see page 51) were good, Douglas fir gum made cuts worse.)

Gum mixed with dogfish (shark) oil or, if that were not available, eulachon oil, taken, two spoonfuls at a time, with warm water, as an emetic and purgative for colds, rheumatism, gonorrhoea, constipation, intestinal pains, and diarrhoea.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

B C T 137 757 B [164] [152] B [237]

Tsuga heterophylla (Raf.) Sarg., Western Hemlock, and Tsuga Mertensiana Carr, Mountain Hemlock

Bella Coola: Leaves chewed and applied to burns.
See also scrub pine (page 49).

Gum warmed and applied to cuts. Not boiled for a diuretic for gonorrhoea.

Burning twigs applied to the skin for various internal ailments.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

B [152]

Picea sitchensis Carr., Tideland Spruce

Bella Coola: Tips of small, but not of large, spruces mixed with blue currant (Ribes bracteosum Dougl.), young juneberry (Amelanchier florida Lindl.), and crushed branches (leaves and stems) of garden snowberry (Symphoricarpus racemosa Michx.), boiled and taken internally for gonorrhoea.

Sap from the peeled trunk taken in doses of from half a cup to a cupful as a laxative from May to August.

B 137 757

B 137
757

Ripe cones boiled, and the decoction taken internally for a pain. Neither an emetic nor a laxative. A bed consisting of a sack of ripe cones, placed on top of hot stones, used by rheumatics. Cones also burned to fumigate rheumatics.

A piece of the bark 5 feet long by 2 feet wide used as a mat in a hot bath for rheumatism. Many stones were heated, a little sand strewn over them, the bark spread above with the inside uppermost, and the patient, naked, lay on the bark, covering himself with one or more blankets. A similar bed, but with the bark covered with a few leaves of devil's club (Fatsia horrida Sm. B. and H.), used for chronic backache.

B
[752]

Gum applied to small cuts, broken skin, and suppurating sores.

Branches used to whip a burned arm or leg until the blood came.

Gum boiled and taken internally while hot as a diuretic for gonorrhoea.

See also scrub pine (page 49).

For use with fern. See page 48.

C
T 137
757

The buds or new shoots, with the gum sometimes found around the outside when they are about half an inch long, boiled in water, and the decoction taken internally for tuberculosis.

Southern Carrier: New shoots and bark of small branches boiled for about two hours, and the decoction taken internally, one or two cupfuls at a time, for pain in the stomach, but not for vomiting, diarrhoea, or constipation. Said to effect a cure in one day, and preferred to the decoction made of scrub pine (page 49) or aspen (page 54).

Gum from new shoots and small branches, scraped out with a little stick, placed in the eyes for snow-blindness.

S
[757]

Sikani: Inside bark scraped and chewed for a cough.

Needles chewed, and the saliva applied to external sores.

Gum, obtained by splitting the tops, applied with a stick to white spots on the eye.

The "flower" boiled and the decoction taken internally for pain in the chest.

T
[237]
[164]

Gitksan: Gum extracted from the wood by boiling in water, added to eulachon oil, salmon oil, bear grease, ground-hog fat, lard, etc., and taken internally before meals for consumption.

Twigs bearing both leaves and bark boiled with entire roots of soapolallie (Shepherdia canadensis Nutt.); one cupful of the strong decoction taken internally three times a day for rheumatism.

ARACEAE, ARUM FAMILY

B
T

Lysichiton kamtschatcense Schott., Skunk Cabbage, Yellow Arum

137
757

Bella Coola: Roots used with oil as a hair tonic.

Roots boiled, and the sweet decoction taken internally for stomach trouble.

B [302]

See also white fir (page 50).

Gitksan: Root well mashed with water and applied externally for blood poison and boils. Said to bring boils to a head. For use with a fern (see page 48).

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

Smoke from the burning roots inhaled for bad dreams, influenza, and rheumatism (a remedy avoided by medicine men, lest it destroy their magical power). Roots themselves considered poisonous. T 137 757 [828]

Leaves used to sit or lie on when taking a sweat bath for rheumatism; also spread over the afflicted parts. [756]

Calla palustris L., WATER ARUM

Gitksan: Roots well boiled and the decoction taken internally for cleaning the eyes of the blind, for hemorrhage, for short breath, and influenza. B & T 137 757

LILIACEAE, LILY FAMILY

Clintonia uniflora Kunth., QUEENS CUP

Bella Coola: Boiled and used to wash the body. One leaf toasted and applied as a poultice to eyes or wounds.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Smilacina racemosa L., FALSE SOLOMON'S SEAL

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Roots boiled and decoction taken internally as a very strong medicine for rheumatism, sore back, and kidney trouble. A purgative. Bark and leaves useless. Roots mashed and bound on cuts. T [752]

Veratrum viride Ait., FALSE HELLEBORE

Bella Coola: Small bulbs or scrapings of large bulbs, boiled, and one cupful or less of the decoction, according to the strength of the patient, taken internally for chronic cough, gonorrhoea, constipation, pain in the stomach, and many illnesses. Two or three cupfuls acted as an emetic. Said to be poisonous if eaten raw. B & T 137 757

Small pieces of the raw root swallowed with a little cold water as an emetic for pains in the stomach. More water taken if all the pieces not vomited. Overdose considered fatal.

See also scrub pine (page 48).

Southern Carrier: Entire roots dried in the sun, and powdered by rubbing on a stone. About a dessertspoonful of the powder taken in hot water as an emetic for sickness. Too strong a decoction considered fatal.[1]

SALICACEAE, WILLOW FAMILY

Salix lasiandra Benth., WILLOW

Bella Coola: Six sticks about a foot long charred, and pulverized on a stone. A teaspoonful of the powder taken in a cupful of cold water for diarrhoea. Said to effect a cure in two or three hours. B & T 137 757

A piece of the inner bark folded once and the folded edge inserted into a knife cut; other edges then separated and flattened down, and the wound covered with eagle down. Thought to make the pus come out. Same process used to heal incisions in the abdomen made by those who tried to cure pain in the stomach. B [237] B [752]

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used. B [771]

[1] The late Dr. C. F. Newcombe informed the writer that this plant seems to be used by every tribe in whose territory it grows.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

T
S
B
C

137 Salix Scouleriana Hook., WILLOW
757 Bella Coola: Folded inner bark used like that of Salix lasiandra Benth. for cuts; but charcoal from the stick not used for diarrhoea.
B [752] Southern Carrier: Not used.
Gitksan: Not used.

Salix sp., WILLOW
Sikani: Young willow chewed and the saliva applied to external sores.
White powdery tops chewed for a cough.

Populus tremuloides Michx., ASPEN, TREMBLING POPLAR
Bella Coola: A quantity of bark from the roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally from seven to ten times a day for gonorrhoea with hemorrhage from the urethra. A very bitter decoction, said to be a good remedy that stopped the hemorrhage.
Southern Carrier: Bark used instead of tideland spruce bark (page 51) to make a decoction for pain in the stomach. Considered inferior to the spruce bark.
Sikani: Bark pulverized by pounding, moistened with water, and applied as a paste to wounds.
Bark scraped, scrapings steeped in hot water, and the decoction taken internally for worms. Caused a stool immediately.
Gitksan: Bark of roots chewed or mashed and put on cuts.
Bark alone boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative. Not an emetic.

B
C Populus trichocarpa T. and G., BLACK COTTONWOOD
137 Bella Coola: Leaves, ten to fifteen years old, from the lower layers 757 lying rotting on the ground, boiled, and the decoction used as a bath, the patient sitting in it up to his neck for about two hours to cure pain in the body, not rheumatism. A hot stone added from time to time,
B and the bath repeated the next day.
[302] The buds with their resin boiled and the decoction used as a hair wash. See also white fir (page 50).
Half a cupful of buds, picked some time between December and March, mixed with two roots of cow parsnip (Heracleum lanatum Michx.), a half cupful of buds of mountain alder (Alnus tenuifolia Nutt.), and a little water, mashed, and applied warm, but uncooked, as a poultice for pains in the lungs or hips like rheumatism. Said to effect a cure in two days, but harmful if left on longer.
See also western dock (page 56).
Southern Carrier: Buds with their resin boiled for one or two hours, and the decoction taken internally for coughs and lung affections.
C [302] Resin from the buds applied to the face as a cosmetic, or, with the [825] addition of oil, to repel mosquitoes, black flies, and gadflies.
Roots and bark not used; buds not boiled to make a hair wash.
C Northern Carrier: Green roots chewed to a pulp and applied to [752] wounds to stop bleeding.
Inside bark boiled and the decoction used as an eye-wash.
T Gitksan: Gummy buds boiled and the resin mixed with bear [302] grease for a hair perfume.
I Roots, leaves, and seeds not used.
[757]

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

MYRICACAE

Myrica Gale L., SWEET GALE

Bella Coola: Branches, secured at any time of the year, pounded with their bark, boiled, and the decoction taken internally for gonorrhoea. A diuretic. The decoction, which was kept in a box made of red cedar wood with a little cover to keep out the dust, soured in two or three days and became useless.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

B C 137 757 B [415]

BETULACEAE, BIRCH FAMILY

Alnus sitchensis (Reg.) Sarg., GREEN ALDER

Bella Coola: Cones used as a remedy for some unspecified complaint.

Alnus tenuifolia Nutt., MOUNTAIN ALDER

Bella Coola: Cones used as a remedy for some unspecified complaint.

See also black cottonwood (page 54).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Pistillate catkins crushed, and the mass eaten raw as a laxative.

Pistillate catkins and shavings eaten raw, or else boiled in water and the decoction taken internally three times a day, as a diuretic for gonorrhoea. Said to effect a cure in one week.[1]

B C T 137 757

Alnus rubra Bong., RED ALDER

Bella Coola: Bark boiled, and a cupful of the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Southern Carrier: Sap applied to cuts. Not used for a medicinal decoction.

Northern Carrier: Inside bark ground, steeped in water, and injected with a syringe made from the crop of a bird, for biliousness.

Gitksan: Bark and roots boiled for about six hours and the decoction drunk in the morning for a cough.

Bark from the stem, but not from the roots, scraped, mixed with water, and the infusion taken internally, as an emetic and purgative, for headache and many other maladies.

C [752] C [825]

URTICACEAE, NETTLE FAMILY

Urtica Lyallii Wats., WESTERN NETTLE

Bella Coola: Used for a form of paralysis where the patient had been unable to walk for a long time. Limbs stung daily, causing sores and gradual revival of sensation. In one case said to have effected a cure in ten days.

See also western dock (page 56).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally for many illnesses, including hemorrhage and bladder troubles.

Stinging not used.

T [752]

[1] A Gitksan informant stated that the Tsimshian of the coast made a decoction of this tree which acted as an emetic, purgative, and diuretic, and was used for poisoning caused by eating ess-uwkim.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

ARISTOLOCIHACEAE, BIRTHWORT FAMILY

B
C 137
75

Asarum caudatum Lindl., Wild Ginger

Bella Coola: Boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting.

Boiled, and applied externally for headache, intestinal pains, and pain in the knees.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

POLYGONACEAE, BUCKWHEAT FAMILY

Rumex occidentalis Wats., Western Dock

Bella Coola: Roots roasted for a short time in a hole in the earth among the ashes of a fire, covered with earth, mashed, and applied in quantity as a poultice for boils. Both leaves and roots used, according to another informant, and the poultice applied to wounds as well as boils.

Leaves used for a sweat bath for pains similar to rheumatism all over the body. Stones were heated, a little cold sand spread over them, and leaves spread on the sand; or else the leaves were spread on hot ashes. The patient sat or lay naked directly on the leaves, and was covered with blankets. Western Nettles (Urtica Lyallii Wats.), small branches of black cottonwood (Populus trichocarpa T. and G.) with the leaves on them, or the small kelp found on rocks were sometimes used when leaves of the western dock could not be obtained.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

LORANTHACEAE, MISTLETOE FAMILY

Arceuthobium americanum Nutt., Small Mistletoe

Bella Coola: Boiled, and decoction taken as a potent medicine for hemorrhage of the lungs.

C
[164]

Southern Carrier: Boiled, and decoction taken freely for hemorrhage from the mouth, tuberculosis of the lungs, and emaciation.

NYMPHACEAE, WATER-LILY FAMILY

B 137
75
[155]

Nymphaea polysepala (Engelm.) Greene, Yellow Pond-Lily

Bella Coola, old custom: Used in a magical way for pain in all parts of the body. A root in many cases as large as a man's leg was cut free from the bed of a pool with a hemlock pole sharpened like a shovel. A hollow was made in it, water placed in the receptacle, and hot stones added. The stones were changed four times, after which the patient drank one or two cupfuls of the water. He repeated the dose each day for four days. To be effective the root had to be thrown back into the water, not on the ground.

B
[164]

Present custom: Root boiled twelve hours, and decoction taken internally for pain in any part of the body, such as "consumption", rheumatism, heart disease, and gonorrhoea. Considered good for the blood. Not used as a diuretic, or for diarrhoea, constipation, or vomiting.

T
75
[842]

Gitksan: Infusion of scrapings of toasted root (or according to another informant, heart of root, boiled) taken internally for hemorrhage of the lungs and as a contraceptive.

5; Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

RANUNCULACEAE, BUTTERCUP FAMILY

B C T 137 757

Anemone globosa Nutt. (A. multifida Poir.), WIND-FLOWER

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Plant, except roots, boiled and decoction taken internally for any sickness. Aroma of crushed leaves inhaled for cold in the head or lungs; for this purpose leaves sometimes placed in water and heated.

Gitksan: Handfuls eaten in sweat bath for rheumatism. A decoction of the plant sometimes used for the same purpose.

B T 137 757

Trautvetteria grandis Nutt., FALSE BUGBANE

Bella Coola: Roots pounded in a little water, and the resulting mass, covered with a little soft bark of the red or yellow cedar, applied as a poultice to boils and left on for half a day or a day. Said to promote suppuration and opening of the boil, but to cause such intense burning that it could not be applied to children. Considered less strong than the tall buttercup (page 57), but, like it, preferred to the cow parsnip (page 61), which was used in the same way.

Thalictrum occidentale Gray, MEADOW RUE

Gitksan: A small piece of the root chewed, and some of the juice swallowed, for headache, eye trouble, and sore legs. Loosened phlegm and possibly accelerated the circulation of the blood.

Ranunculus arcis L., TALL BUTTERCUP

Bella Coola: Roots used as a poultice for boils in the same way as those of the false bugbane (page 57), but considered stronger and better.

CRUCIFERAE, MUSTARD FAMILY

T [752]

Sisymbrium incisum Eng., A HEDGE MUSTARD

Gitksan: Mashed and applied to bad cuts.

CRASSULACEAE, ORPINE FAMILY

B [853]

Sedum spathulifolium Hook., STONECROP

Bella Coola: Leaves of the plant before it blossomed eaten to start the flow of milk. Said to take effect in one day. Leaves warmed and applied externally for the same purpose.

SAXIFRAGACEAE, SAXIFRAGE FAMILY

B 137 757

Ribes bracteosum Dougl., BLUE CURRANT

Bella Coola: See tideland spruce, page 51.

Ribes laxiflorum Pursh. var., CURRANT

Bella Coola: Roots boiled in a very small box with hot stones and the weak decoction used each day for washing the eyes when filled with matter.

See also lady fern (page 48).

C [757]

Southern Carrier: Not used.

S: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

BCT 137 757

Ribes lacustre Poir., SWAMP GOOSEBERRY

Bella Coola: Roots boiled and the decoction taken internally many times a day to cure constipation.

Leaves chewed and cud tied on sores caused by the prickers of the plant; if leaves unobtainable the bark substituted after singeing off the prickers.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Bark boiled and used as a remedy for some unspecified malady.

BC 137 757

Ribes divaricatum Dougl., COMMON GOOSEBERRY

Bella Coola: Bark or roots, sometimes mixed with those of the wild crab apple (Pyrus diversifolia Bong.), boiled, and the decoction used as an eye-wash three times a day for soreness and approaching blindness.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Ribes sp., GOOSEBERRY

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 49.

Saxifraga Bongardi Prest., SAXIFRAGE

Bella Coola: Roots and leaves gathered in the autumn, placed in a very small box with a very little water, and boiled. Decoction taken cold, or preferably hot, in quantity to cure strangulation of the bladder. Said to effect a cure in one day.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

ROSACEAE, ROSE FAMILY

BCT 137 757

Prunus emarginata Dougl., WILD CHERRY

Bella Coola: Roots and inside bark boiled with much water and the decoction taken in quantity daily for heart trouble.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Rubus spectabilis Pursh., SALMON BERRY

Bella Coola: Bark of roots boiled and taken internally for certain stomach troubles, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Rubus sp., RASPBERRY

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 49.

Fragaria bracteata Heller., STRAWBERRY

Bella Coola: Not used, but said to be used by Haida of Queen Charlotte islands to cure vomiting.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE5
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

B
T
S 137
757

Rosa sp., WILD ROSE

Bella Coola: Roots and branches boiled, and the decoction taken internally, even ten cupfuls a day if desired, as a purgative for pain in the stomach.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 49.

Sikani: Roots crushed, steeped in water, and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Gitksan: Not used.

B
C

Physocarpus opulifolius (L.), Maxim., NINE-BARK

137
757

Bella Coola: Inner bark boiled for two hours, and two to four cupfuls of the decoction at blood heat taken internally as an emetic for persons dizzy with pain. Four or five cupfuls of lukewarm water then taken as a cleansing emetic and repeated about five times.

B
[164]

Inner bark boiled a long time (when it ceased to have emetic properties), one cupful of the hot decoction taken internally, and thereafter applied externally as a wash twice a day for gonorrhoea and scrofulous glands in the neck. Said to be a laxative that caused the glands to break, discharge fully, and heal. A cupful taken internally daily in advanced cases.

Southern Carrier: Bark (gathered near the coast) boiled for two hours, and two cupfuls of the decoction taken as an emetic, or one cupful as a purgative. Said to act in half an hour, and to be an excellent remedy, but fatal in too large a dose.

Aruncus sylvester Kost., GOAT'S BEARD

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and one or two cupfuls of the decoction (or as much as desired) taken internally for pain in the stomach and gonorrhoea. A diuretic, but neither a laxative nor an emetic.

Roots boiled in grease of mountain goat (Oreamnos montanus Ord.) for a day and the decoction taken internally for smallpox.

T
[757]

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Geum macrophyllum Willd., LARGE-LEAVED YELLOW AVENS

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea, or vomiting. Leaves, usually chewed but sometimes bruised, applied to boils.

Southern Carrier: Leaves boiled and the decoction taken internally for any sickness.

Leaves boiled and applied to bruises.

B
T

Pyrus sitchensis (Roem.) Piper., MOUNTAIN ASH

137
757

Bella Coola: Bark of the roots, and sometimes the inner bark of the stem, collected at any time of the year, boiled for an hour, and the hot decoction, weak or strong, preferably the latter, taken internally for the stomach or rheumatism. Said to effect a cure in from one to seven days. Not taken for diarrhoea, or vomiting; and for rheumatism sometimes poured into a large box and used as a bath. Used also as an eye-wash.

Southern Carrier: Bark chewed for colds.

Gitksan: Fresh fruit crushed and eaten raw as a strong purgative.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

P 137
757

Pyrus diversifolia Bong., CRAB APPLE

Bella Coola: See common gooseberry (page 56).

Gitksen: Juice, scraped from peeled trunk, used as an eye medicine.

Trunk and branches, or scrapings from inside of bark, boiled until thick, and the decoction taken internally over a period of from four to six months for "consumption" and rheumatism. Said to be a fattening medicine, both laxative and diuretic.

Amelanchier florida Lindl., JUNEBERRY, SASKATOON

Bella Coola: See tideland spruce (page 51).

EMPETRACEAE, CROWBERRY FAMILY

Empetrum nigrum L., CROWBERRY

Bella Coola: Green leaves, with or without berries, boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

P
137
757

VIOLACEAE, VIOLET FAMILY

Viola adunca Sm. var. glabra Brain., VIOLET

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Entire plant boiled and one or many cupfuls of the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting.

Gitksen: Not used.

ELAEAGNACEAE, OLEASTER FAMILY

Shepherdia canadensis Nutt., SOAPBERRIES

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: Root boiled in water and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

[T]

Gitksen: Roots, stem, and branches boiled, and the decoction used as a wash for gonorrhoea.

Bark, branches, and leaves without roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally for chronic cough.

See also tideland spruce (page 51).

ONAGRACEAE, EVENING PRIMROSE FAMILY

Epilobium angustifolium L., FIRE WEED

Bella Coola: Root roasted in ashes, mashed between hands or stones, and applied to boils.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksen: Not used.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE5
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Seneni NE14

UMBELLIFERAE, PARSLEY FAMILY

Osmorrhiza sp., Sweet Cicely

Bella Coola: Ten to fifteen little pieces of root, as large as the end joint of the thumb, ground by rubbing on a stone; two cupfuls placed in water warmed to blood heat, and two cupfuls of the decoction (according to the strength of the patient) taken internally as an emetic. Decoction acted (sometimes as a purgative instead of an emetic) within five or ten minutes, but lost its power if heated too much. Warm water taken afterwards until the patient vomited four or five times and the stomach was entirely cleared. Used also for pneumonia.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Heracleum lanatum Michx., Cow Parsnip

Bella Coola: Roots crushed, baked (or boiled in a box with hot stones), and applied as a poultice for boils. If too hot a poultice injured the skin.

Root, uncrushed root inserted in an opened boil and left from half a day to a day. Pus said to come away with the root.

See also white fir (page 56), balsam fir (page 56), black cottonwood (page 54), and false hellebore (page 57).

Southern Carrier: Blossoms steeped in eulachon or other oil and the mixture rubbed on the body to keep off flies and mosquitoes.

Northern Carrier: Roots applied to swellings and bruises.

Sekani: Roots crushed and applied to swellings of neuralgia or rheumatism.

Gitksan: Roots crushed and applied to boils, rheumatic and other swellings.

Angelica genuflexa Nutt.

Bella Coola: Roots boiled and decoction taken internally as a purgative. Not an emetic. Sometimes used raw, but never roasted.

Gitksan: Roots well boiled with twigs of squashberry (Viburnum pauciflorum Rafi.) from which the bark had not been removed, and decoction taken internally for headache and weak eyes.

Ligusticum apiifolium L., Lovage

Bella Coola: Leaves spread over a hot stone or stones and used as a medicinal bed for the sick.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Cicuta Douglasii (DC.) C. and R., Water Hemlock, Poison Parsnip

Bella Coola: Roots used as a purgative.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

ARALIACEAE, GINSENG FAMILY

Aralia nudicaulis L., Sarsaparilla

Bella Coola: Roots boiled in a box with hot stones, and decoction taken internally as often as desired for pain in the stomach, or merely as a beverage. Nowadays sweetened with a little sugar. Stem, or its bark, not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

B 139
757

Fatsia horrida Sm. (B. and H.), Devil's Club

Bella Coola: Bark of roots chewed, and juice swallowed with a little water as a powerful purgative.

Bark of roots and stems boiled, and three or four cupfuls of the decoction taken internally as a purgative; or one cupful, three times a day for a week or two, to cure rheumatism.

C
[844]

Southern Carrier: Bark boiled, and one or two cupfuls of the decoction taken internally before and after childbirth as a purgative.

Northern Carrier: Inside layer of the inner bark rolled into pills and swallowed for cramps in the stomach and bowels, especially after a purgative. Acted also as a purgative, especially if much hot water taken with it.

T
[755]

Gitksan: A decoction used as a purgative in the treatment of gonorrhoea. Believed to assist the knitting of broken bones if taken continually.

Boiled, together with entire plant of squashberry (Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.), and the decoction taken internally as a diuretic and purgative, for strangury or any sickness. Used continuously for rupture.

For use with a fern (See page 48).

CORNACEAE, DOGWOOD FAMILY

Cornus canadensis L., Bunchberry, Dogwood, Dwarf Cornel, Partridgeberry

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Whole plant, without berries, boiled, and the strong decoction used as an eye-wash.

Northern Carrier: Used as a medicine for some unspecified malady.

Gitksan: Not used.

Cornus stolonifera Michx., Red-Osier Dogwood, Red Willow

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: See scrub pine, page 48.

Gitksan: Not used.

ERICACEAE, HEATH FAMILY

B
C 139
757

Pyrola secunda L., Wintergreen

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Roots, gathered at any time of the year, boiled, and the strong decoction used as an eye-wash.

Pyrola bracteata Hook., Wintergreen

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Leaves boiled, and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

B
139
757

Pyrola uniflora Michx., Wintergreen

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Leaves and roots, gathered at any time of the year, boiled for about two hours, and the warm decoction used as an eye-wash.

Gitksan: Not used.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

Ledum groenlandicum Oeder, LABRADOR TEA
Bella Coola: Leaves boiled, and the decoction used as a simple beverage, or for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting. Neither an emetic nor a purgative.
Southern Carrier: Not used formerly, now as a beverage only.
Gitksan: Leaves boiled, and the decoction used as a diuretic, or merely as a beverage.

B C T 137 757 [272] T [272]

Gaultheria shallon Pursh, SALAL
Bella Coola: Leaves toasted, pulverized by rubbing, and applied to cuts.
Southern Carrier: Not used.

B C 137 757

LABIATAE, MINT FAMILY

Prunella vulgaris L., HEAL-ALL
Bella Coola: Roots, leaves, and blossoms washed, boiled, and a cupful of the weak decoction taken internally for the heart. Not used for diarrhoea or vomiting.
Southern Carrier: Not used.
Gitksan: Not used.

B C T 137 757

Mentha canadensis L., MINT
Bella Coola: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally, as often as desired, for pain in the stomach. Not used for vomiting, constipation, or diarrhoea.
Southern Carrier: Entire plant boiled, and a cupful of the decoction taken internally for the stomach, colds, lung affections, and various ailments.
Gitksan: Not used.

SCROPHULARIACEAE, FIGWORT FAMILY

Castilleja miniata Dougl., PAINT-BRUSH
Bella Coola: Not used.
Southern Carrier: Not used.
Gitksan: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally for bleeding, stiff lungs, sore eyes, and lame back, possibly caused by kidney trouble. A purgative and diuretic.
Seeds boiled and the decoction taken internally for coughs.

CAPRIFOLIACEAE, HONEYSUCKLE FAMILY

Lonicera involucrata Banks., BLACK TWIN-BERRY
Bella Coola: Leaves chewed and cud applied for itch.
Leaves chewed and applied to boils, after they were cut open, to draw out the poison.
Leaves crushed and applied to burns and sores of gonorrhoea.
Bark toasted, pulverized, and applied to sores of gonorrhoea.
Bark boiled and decoction taken internally for cough.
Southern Carrier: Bark boiled for five hours, and the decoction used daily as an eye-wash. Roots, leaves, and berries not used.
Northern Carrier: See scrub pine (page 49).
Gitksan: Fresh juice of berries used in sore eyes. Inner bark (when berries not available) soaked in water, and the milky solution used in the eyes.

B [152]
B [164]

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

B
C
T 137
957
B
[164]

Symphoricarpus racemosa Michx., GARDEN SNOWBERRY

Bella Coola: Branches, large and small, with the bark left on, boiled, and the decoction taken internally daily as the best cure for gonorrhoea. A diuretic. Roots, blossoms, and berries not used for medicine, unless, as one informant stated, the berries were used with the branches.

See also tideland spruce (page 51).

Southern Carrier: Juice of ripe berries used in sore eyes.

Gitksan: Not used.

B
C
T 137
957

Sambucus racemosa L., RED-FRUITED ELDER

Bella Coola: Bark of the roots placed in water, a few hot stones added until water reached blood heat, and decoction used as a powerful emetic and purgative for pain in the stomach.

Bark of the roots peeled with the teeth, chewed, preferably with a little cool water, and juice swallowed as an emetic and purgative. Said to act within half an hour.

Southern Carrier: Roots boiled, and two cupfuls of the warm decoction taken internally twice a day as a purgative.

Northern Carrier: Roots brewed, the first water discarded and the second taken internally as a purgative.

Sikani: Bark boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Gitksan: Bark of roots scraped off, water added to the bark, and the infusion taken internally as an emetic and purgative.

B
C
T 137
957

Viburnum pauciflorum Raf., SQUASHBERRY

Bella Coola: Bark chewed, and the juice swallowed for whooping cough and cold on the lungs.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: Inside bark crushed, steeped in cold water until the water turned green, and one cupful of the infusion taken internally as a purgative and for dysentery.

Gitksan: Bark and twigs boiled, and one cupful of the decoction taken internally in the morning for coughs and "consumption". Said to be always taken in conjunction with devil's club (page 62). See also Angelica genuflexa Nutt., page 61.

VALERIANACEAE, VALERIAN FAMILY

B
T 137
376
T
C [302]
[237]

Valeriana septentrionalis Rydb., VALERIAN

Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Roots, mixed with grease, used for perfume.

Northern Carrier: Valerian? blossoms crushed, and the oil, often mixed with fat from a black bear hide, applied as a hair tonic. Believed to make the hair smooth and shiny, to help its growth, and to give it a fragrance.

Gitksan: Entire plant steeped in bear grease and the grease applied to hair and face as a perfume.

C
[300]

Valeriana sitchensis Bong., VALERIAN

Southern Carrier: Leaves mixed with grease used as a perfume for the hair.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

COMPOSITAE, COMPOSITE FAMILY

Achillea Millefolium L., YARROW

Bella Coola: Leaves chewed and applied to burns.

Southern Carrier: Entire plant, except the roots, boiled, and the decoction taken internally at frequent intervals for colds.

Leaves chewed and applied to sprains and swellings.

Gitksan: The young plant, except the roots, gathered between June 1 and July 15, boiled, and the decoction gargled for sore throat. Roots, marked by the dead stalks, dug out at other seasons and used instead.

Artemisia discolor Dougl., SAGEBRUSH, GREEN WORMWOOD

Bella Coola: Used for medicine.

Southern Carrier: Chewed and applied to sprains and swellings.

Northern Carrier: Sagebrush (sp. ?) steeped in water and the hot decoction taken internally for headache.

Antennaria Howellii Greene, EVERLASTING

Bella Coola: Leaves boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pains in the body, but not for pains in the limbs. Not used for colds.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Taraxacum officinale Weber., COMMON DANDELION introduced

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting. Remedy said to have been learned from white men.

Gitksan: Not used.

Lactuca spicata (Lam.) Hitchc., TALL LETTUCE

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, and many cups of the decoction taken internally for heart trouble, hemorrhage, pains in the body (but not in the limbs), for vomiting, or for diarrhoea. Neither an emetic nor a purgative. Milky juice not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Prenanthes alata (Hook.) Gray, RATTLESNAKE ROOT

Bella Coola: Roots boiled, two or three cupfuls of the decoction taken internally daily for colds. For a baby only a small spoonful given three or four times a day.

Bella Coola: Chewed, and applied to burns or to any painful part of the body.

Boiled, and two or three cupfuls of the decoction taken internally daily.

Mnium affine Bland, MOSS

Southern Carrier: Entire plant, except the "roots", boiled, and two or three cupfuls of the decoction used to bathe a swollen face.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B C 137 757 Fomes Laricis (Jacq.), more generally known as Polyporus officinalis Fries, A SHELF FUNGUS

Bella Coola: This (?) fungus ground, steeped in water, and the decoction taken internally for gonorrhoea.

Southern Carrier: If found on the Douglas fir tree, dried, powdered, a handful steeped in boiling water and the hot decoction taken internally as an emetic and purgative. Said to act within an hour. Not used if found on any other tree.

B C [171] (According to Dr. John Dearness, this is a medical polypore, perhaps the only fungus used by pharmacists. Park, Davis, and Company make a fluid extract and a triturate which is prescribed for the relief of night sweats in tuberculosis. The fungus is a cathartic in large doses. Its medicinal virtues have long been known in the old world.)

B 137 757 Bovista pila B. and C., PUFF BALL

Bella Coola: Spores dusted on wounds, sores of gonorrhoea, and suppurating sores other than boils.

LICHEN

Bella Coola: A certain long, white lichen, if found on the red alder tree, warmed, and applied to a broken boil or suppurating sore.

Sticta sp., LICHEN

Bella Coola: Entire plant, if from red-osier dogwood (Cornus stolonifera Michx.) or crab apple (Pryus diversifolia Bong.), but not from willow (Salix sp.), boiled, and five cupfuls of the hot decoction taken internally daily for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea, constipation, or vomiting. Neither a purgative nor an astringent.

C [757] Entire plant boiled and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Entire plant pulverized and applied to skin.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

KELP

B 757 Bella Coola: A small kelp found on the rocks sometimes used for a sweat bath. See western dock, page 56.

WOOD SAP

Bella Coola: The sap that oozes from any kind of wood when burning considered a good remedy for sores.

MOUNTAIN GOAT

B 136 757 Oreamnos Montanus, Ord., MOUNTAIN GOAT

Bella Coola: Mountain goat fat boiled with droppings of geese that had fed on roots, and the mixture given to babies once or twice a day for colds.

Goat meat with droppings of the bushy-tailed woodrat, commonly called packrat (Neotoma cinerea), taken internally with water as a remedy for nursing babies when they had colds.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

B
C 136
757

SKUNK

Spilogale, Spotted Skunk, or Mephitis, Striped Skunk

Bella Coola: Oil not used as a remedy.

Southern Carrier: Oil warmed, and a cupful taken as a purgative for worms.

HARE

Lepus americanus columbiensis Rhoads, The British Columbia Varying Hare

Northern Carrier: Hare opened, ruminating stomach containing something like the white of an egg removed, and the liquid applied to a foot blistered by frost-bite. Considered a sure cure.

C
[752]

RED SQUIRREL

Sciurus hudsonicus Erxleben

Bella Coola: Opened along the under side and applied as a remedy to badly broken chancres in the groin.

B
137
757

GIANT SLUG

Bella Coola: Slug made to crawl into a baby's mouth to cure loss of skin on the inside of its mouth.

Slug opened, and bound tightly over large cut.

B
[752]

SEA CUCUMBER

Bella Coola: Decoction of the water in which the sea cucumber was boiled, taken internally as a specific against heartburn. Not a purgative.

SPITTLE INSECT

Cercopidae, Spittle Insect, Frog Hopper

Bella Coola: "Fly spit," i.e., the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, applied to sores.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

B
C 136
757

WOODWORMS

Gitksan: Pulverized and applied to cuts.

T
136
757
[752]

COPPER

Bella Coola: Fine particles scraped from clean copper (but not from a weathered green surface) placed in sore eyes.

Gitksan: Copper ground, poured into a vessel of cold water, first water poured off, and second water taken internally as a harmless contraceptive.

B
T 757
T [842]

CHARCOAL

Northern Carrier: Charcoal daubed under the eyes to prevent snow-blindness.

C
751

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE9
Tsimshian NE15

B
C 757

FIRE

Bella Coola: Burning twigs of very dry hemlock used to sear the skin for all kinds of internal ailments.

Northern Carrier: Hot coals used as a blister for a bad pain in the leg before applying an ointment.

T
757

CAUTERY

Gitksan: Fungus taken from a birch (or sometimes a hemlock), set alight, and used to sear a rheumatic person.

C 757

STEAM

Northern Carrier: Red hot stones placed in a dish of cold water, the head covered with a cloth and the throat steamed for a bad cough.

C
[752]

ICE-COLD WATER

Northern Carrier: A hole made in the ice and the feet soaked in the ice-cold water when they were frozen.

B 757

SEA WATER

Bella Coola: Sea water used as an emetic.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They resolved to make an attempt to burn it and to break open the door. 648
On the following day they came up to the village, but the guard on the 726 towers used their guns to such good effect that the enemy had to retreat with severe losses. They made still another attempt, but with no better success. They had lost many men, while only two old men of the Talio'mH, TumHā'akyas and A'lk'ias by name, and one woman had been hurt. The latter had been killed. When the Kwakiutl turned back a messenger was at once sent up to the lake to call the young men, who then went to Nuqa'lkH to ask for help. The Kwakiutl passed close to Nusk'ēlu'sta's father's canoe, but they were so terrified by the losses they had sustained that they passed by without so much as noticing it. Two of their number were so ashamed of their defeat that they would rather remain in the enemy's country than return with their friends, and they stayed ashore. Meanwhile the Talio'mH and the Bilqula were pursuing the fugitives. They had reached the outlet of Bentinck Arm without overtaking them. Then their chiefs resolved to return, as they believed that their enemies had a long start upon them. Later on they learnt that the Kwakiutl were at that moment only a few miles from them, about to continue their homeward journey, after having encamped at the outlet of the channel. Afterwards the Talio'mH found the two men who had remained ashore. They called them and promised to send them back to their friends, saying that the war had ended, and that they had no grudge against them. The men were, however, too much afraid, and finally starved to death.

Later on the Talio'mH and Bilqula organised an expedition against the Kwakiutl to take revenge for the unprovoked attack. A chief named Koanī'la, whose father was a Talio'mH, while his mother was a Kwakiutl, was their leader. They intended to attack the Lō'kwiltok' and the Kwē'k'sōt'ēnoq. When they approached the village of the latter they sent a canoe ahead to search for the village, and to report the number of houses. For two days they were unable to find the village, which lies in a labyrinth of islands; but finally they found it, and saw that it consisted of sixteen houses. On the next morning they attacked it. The tribe was wholly taken by surprise and almost all of them were killed. Koanī'la's mother lived at this place, and when she heard the Bilqula coming she asked at once for her son, and was taken care of by him. Only five men and four women escaped. The Bilqula allowed these to run away, as they had killed as many as they desired. Anuknī'tsem, a chief of the Sanqtlx'mh, was the only man of the Bilqula who was wounded. He died on the way home. They returned, but in the country of the Nā'koartok' they were overtaken by four Kwakiutl canoes which pursued them. The Bilqula were victorious, but Koanī'la induced them to desist. During the fight two of the women, whom they had taken as slaves, and one boy jumped overboard, and were rescued by the Kwakiutl.

Medicine.

Boils are treated by cauterisation with dry bark or with gunpowder. 752
Sometimes a series of parallel cuts is made over swellings or boils. Fractured bones are set, and fastened between splints of cedar-bark.

Enemata of shark oil or olachen oil are given by means of a kelp tube, 757 with a mouthpiece made of the wing-bone of an eagle. Snake poison is [237] collected and used as a poison. Women wear tight anklets to prevent 650

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 about one week. This causes the skin to turn white and draws out the matter.

752 [177] (2) The usual remedy for boils and similar sores is cutting. There are no professional surgeons so that a patient merely requests a friend in whom he has confidence to perform the operation which is now carried out with a metal knife instead of an obsidian blade. A man frequently performs on himself and it is not uncommon to see a Bella Coola sitting nonchalantly with the blood streaming down his leg into a receptacle filled with water. Even when a boil is on the buttocks, it may be cut by sitting down on a knife, but in this case a friend is always present to state when the position is correct.

752 759 For Ulcers and Abscesses

A few individuals, at present two at Bella Coola and one at Kimsquit, have the necessary skill to locate and operate on ulcers of the stomach. They have no inherited prerogative, their ability is due solely to practice and good sense. If a person suffers from internal pains and believes them to be caused by an ulcer, he requests one of these men to help him. The practitioner kneads and handles the patient to locate the growth, and suggests operating if he thinks it necessary. He measures off on the blade of a knife the depth required for the incision and asks consent to make such a cut. If the sufferer considers it too deep, he may indicate a shorter distance on the knife, or he may desire a still deeper one. As soon as patient and surgeon have agreed upon the depth of the wound, the latter inserts the knife to the proper distance, twists it around, and draws it out. If he has diagnosed correctly, pus comes pouring out; the wound is drained by the insertion of an eagle quill, and in many cases the patient recovers. Several instances are remembered of too deep cutting, resulting in penetration of the intestines and death. A surgeon is always suitably rewarded for his work.

It is believed that such operations were performed before the introduction of metal knives. Whether or not this be true,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

it is certain that ones of this type took place about 1870. No information could be obtained about other surgical practices. The Bella Coola are unacquainted with either trephining or cupping, and it is most unlikely that they performed more than cutting and the setting of broken limbs. Though incisions are primarily for boils and abscesses, one may be made in case of any obstinate pain, in the belief that some foreign matter has entered the body and must be extracted. 752 [759]

For Stomach-Ache (two means) 757

(1) Peel the outer surface of red elderberry roots and chew a section until all the juice has been squeezed forth and swallowed; then spit out the tasteless bark and take a second piece. This must be continued for some time. It is dangerous to allow the liquid to remain within the stomach, so warm water must be taken as an emetic.

(2) Take five roots of the plant ma'xwal·i, each about one-tenth of an inch in diameter and one inch in length, grind them to powder and pour on water. Warm the mixture to body heat and drink in large quantities. This acts as an emetic and the patient feels hungry after vomiting. If cooked for a longer time, the roots provide a valuable food. [262]

This medicine is not sufficiently potent for serious attacks.

For Stomach-Ache, and also for Other Internal Pains (two means)

(1) Strip the bark from a käk'telp (birch?) branch a few inches in diameter and about three feet in length, and boil for an hour in a small amount of water. Care must be taken not to boil the decoction too long or it will become poisonous. Drink about four cupfuls of the mixture. It causes the stomach to heave violently, followed by vomiting. Then drink warm water, which also acts as an emetic. Take a further potion of the medicine, then more water, and continue with alternate doses until the vomit is clear. This medicine is so powerful that a patient usually recovers by the following day.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VIII

DEATH

Death Rites—Memorial Rites—Fate of the Dead

Death Rites

DEATH is marked by even more complicated and prolonged rites than marriage. Like so many primitive peoples, the Bella Coola not only carry out elaborate rituals soon after the actual decease, but hold lengthy commemorative and mourning ceremonials in later years. As these require the co-operation of a large number of people, the death of an individual affects a wider circle than his own relatives, and the celebrations have, therefore, an important social as well as religious significance. 76 796 [182]

OMENS OF DEATH

It is not surprising that the Bella Coola, believing in the omnipresence of the supernatural, should consider various peculiar occurrences to be omens of death. One of the simplest of these is to hear the falling of a tree when there is neither wind nor other reason to account for it. Such a fall is audible only to the person whom it warns of approaching death, either to himself or to one of his relatives. A number of men may be in the forest together, when one of them hears the crash of a tree and notices that his companions are unaware of it; he realizes that this is an omen and protects himself by calling out: 763

"Let this evil react against whoever has been plotting evil against me."

The basis of this custom is the belief that someone has been practising black magic against the hearer, who, by this answer, is able to cause the sorcery to recoil upon the malefactor. Even more dangerous than to hear a falling tree, is to have one crash [754] [824] over, he is aware that by certain means he may have good expectations of beseeching, cajoling, deceiving, or rendering powerless any supernatural beings whom he may meet. This attitude is typical; the Bella Coola by no means move in constant dread of the mysterious denizens of the forests, nor do they eagerly hope for their appearance; they have their likes and dislikes, their moments of weakness and of strength, their times of greatness and of pettiness, all to be considered with care and forethought. 781 776 *

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One of the beings for whom the older people have a profound respect is Ṫłitcäplilän·a, a supernatural woman whose home is in Nusmät·a, but who frequently visits this earth. She can be recognized by her snout-like mouth and long, pendant breasts, but even when beyond the range of vision her proximity can be detected by her singing. Ṫłitcäplilän·a often takes pity on a person who is dangerously ill and visits him, not only curing the malady but bringing the sufferer a name and song. In many cases he is thus made a shaman with power to cure. At other times Ṫłitcäplilän·a bestows her favours on a person in good health, so that wise Bella Coola are always hoping to meet her. Such an experience is not without its dangers, for she is so powerful that nearness to her may be enough to cause death. The exploits of those who have come in contact with Ṫłitcäplilän·a belong to shamanism and will be reserved for vol. I, chap. IX. 776 * 787 [756]

Ṫłitcäplilän·a, though her great power inspires fear, usually behaves in a kindly manner to mortals, who accordingly welcome her. But it is quite otherwise with Sxaiaxwax, whose coming almost invariably brings death.[11] He is a black-faced being of repulsive appearance and sensual nature, whose chief function is to seduce women. For this purpose he often skulks near a village at night, and assumes the voice and appearance of a girl's lover to lure her into the forest. Fearlessly she goes with him, but if she allows his approaches, a hemorrhage results and she soon dies. There is said to be no limit to the number 776 * 761

[11] Cf. Boas, p. 42.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of his disguises. For example, he once appeared at New Westminster in the form of a handsome white man; a Bella Coola girl yielded to his pleadings, but as soon as he had left her, she began to bleed and died.[12] He is so evil that shamans can rarely cure anyone visited by him. Sxaiaxwax usually carries a stick which he need only to point at a woman to cause her death.

Nor are men exempt from Sxaiaxwax's visitations. Sometimes he sneaks up behind a man and seizes his arms, so that he cannot see who has gripped him. He is soon released but no matter how quickly he turns around can never see his captor. Presently he begins to bleed from mouth and nose and death follows. Sxaiaxwax may become visible under such conditions. One old man stated that his son had once been playing outside the village at Kimsquit when he rushed into the house weeping and saying that he had been seized by a black-faced man. In a few minutes his nose began to bleed so that his father knew it was Sxaiaxwax who had visited him. Nothing was of any avail and the lad died. His approach is usually heralded by a series of grunting, explosive puffs, like those of a big bear rising sulkily. If, warned by the sound, the hearer turn sharply, he can escape danger. An informant described how, when camped on Labouchere Channel, he had once gone to the river for water with two companions, a man and a woman. They all heard these gasping puffs and turned, but he alone had jumped from the path quickly enough. The other two began to pant like Sxaiaxwax himself; blood gushed from their mouths and genital organs and they soon died.

Like other supernatural beings, Sxaiaxwax has his limitations. Though he comes to this earth he can travel only on fixed paths, invisible to mortals. If either a man or a woman is unfortunate enough to fall asleep on one of these tracks, it is [12] A curious blending of aboriginal and white man's beliefs was recorded in connection with this incident. It is said that as the girl's seducer left her, carrying his hat in his hand, she saw two horns rising from his forehead and realized that her lover had been Sxaiaxwax.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

easy for Sxaiaxwax to gain control over them, and the sleeper wakes to find that he has been bleeding profusely and death is inevitable. This occurred to a man whose experiences are described in vol. I, chap. IX.

Although Sxaiaxwax is usually a curse to mortals, he can also do good. Occasionally he makes a man a shaman, and in many cases he helps a woman in childbirth. Such beneficent acts are not sufficient to counterbalance his evil deeds, and he remains one of the most dreaded of Bella Coola supernatural beings, a monster whose machinations make camping in a strange place a dangerous undertaking, and who is as likely to strike down rich or poor, young or old.

Less feared than Sxaiaxwax, because he appears less frequently, is Allät·iaitl. The Bella Coola speak of this being with trepidation, but little definite information could be obtained concerning him. He has human form and sometimes comes at dusk to cause death by carrying away a man's spirit.[11] The home of this creature appears to be beneath the earth rather than in Nusmät·a.

A third dreaded being who, like the two preceding, usually lives on this earth and only visits in Nusmät·a, is Sä·lma, "The Death Dealer." He, too, appears in human form and can be distinguished by the nose-ring which he always wears. Sudden death in the forest is always attributed to "The Death Dealer." If a man is engulfed by a slide, or killed by a falling tree, it is because this malevolent being has entered the slide or tree. Some Bella Coola say that he is responsible for animals who kill hunters. He rarely carries out his designs with the aid of sickness, nor is death by drowning often attributed to him, but for all other fatal disasters he must take the blame. While a corpse is resting in a coffin awaiting burial, Sä·lma invariably sits on the cover, though none can see him. Instances are known in which even this monster has acted in a kindly manner.

The supernatural beings thus far described are usually

[11]See vol. I, pp. 94-7.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776*

the rescue of Łxwumxwumlaix they saw him being carried downstream to a salmon-weir about three hundred yards below. The trap was raised at once, but it was too late; the rash fisherman was dead. No one could give a name to the supernatural being who had caused his death; it was merely one of those dwelling under the river. [539] [761]

Whales, too, are sometimes observed in the rivers, but though they appear to resemble those of the ocean they are really their supernatural prototypes. [825]

These human-like dwellers beneath the water can, as in this case, cause death, but they are usually regarded as uncanny rather than dangerous. [761] But there is one undersea being whom the Bella Coola regard with unmixed awe; he is Łomoqwa (see Plate 10), lord of the supernatural ones beneath the ocean, as Ałquntām is lord of those dwelling above. He lives in an enormous house under the sea wherein the fish, the sea-mammals, and the sea-plants have their home. The Bella Coola believe that these beings can take human form at will,[18] and assume that their behaviour in Łomoqwa's dwelling corresponds to that of human beings in the house of an earthly chief. In the beginning of time, when men were more powerful than in recent years, this house sometimes rose to the surface of the water and adventurous Bella Coola entered it on various occasions, leaving to their descendants tales of the wonders it contained. These accounts have become family myths and are described with others of similar type in Chap. VI, vol. I. Records of this kind vary greatly in detail; in fact, few agree more than in broad outline. Sometimes it is stated that denizens of the sea appear in Łomoqwa's house in the flesh; other myths describe paintings of sea creatures around the walls and the manner in which these are brought to life by Łomoqwa. Irrespective of the exact details, it is clear that he is chief of the undersea beings who serve him and hunt for him, the blackfish being especially proficient in this respect. Łomoqwa resents any slight to his protégés and punishes any mortal who is unkind to them.

773 776* [424] [184]

[18] Bella Coola concepts concerning the transformability of men and animals will be described in the next section of this chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*776 Although Ḷomoqwa has often been seen by mortals, no one has ever been able to describe his countenance. He always wears a huge hat, beneath which his blackened face, covered with eagle down, is barely visible, since he constantly keeps turning it away from the observer. Occasionally he comes to the surface and has been known even to walk on it. Like other supernatural beings, he is able to ascend to Nusmāt·a, though it is not his home. The dread with which the Bella Coola regard Ḷomoqwa is due to his ability to suck canoes down to his home at the bottom of the ocean as if in a whirlpool. He is usually hungry, and nothing pleases him more than human flesh. None the less, he does not destroy life without cause. It angers him to hear his name spoken, so no Bella Coola utters [502] it when on the ocean, for fear that he may be engulfed. When- [761] ever a person is drowned at sea it is believed that the cannibalistic Ḷomoqwa has drawn him down for a meal.

539 To insert the many stories describing Ḷomoqwa at this point *776 would unduly break the continuity of this account, so the following simple example must suffice.

Not many years ago four Bella Bella fishermen were trying to anchor near China Hat. Owing to the action of the supernatural beings dwelling below, the bottom of the ocean rose and lowered abruptly so that their anchor would not hold as the rope was in many cases too short. They were much annoyed by this and, as they strove to fasten their craft, they were exasperated at a lard-fish which kept swimming closely around the canoe. At last one of the fishermen reached out, seized it with his hands, and tore it to pieces, throwing these back on the water. Presently their anchor held and the four went to sleep. But Ḷomoqwa had seen the insult shown to the lard-fish and, as they slept, he sucked down their canoe until, on awakening, they found themselves in the huge house of the lord of the undersea world. There was no water in it, but they recognized where they must be from the fact that the walls were decorated with paintings of marine beings and with ancient tools from canoes lost at sea. An old woman who lives in Ḷomoqwa's house called the four to her fire in the corner and asked them whether they had any false hellebore with them. If they had, they would escape, but otherwise nothing could save them from Ḷomoqwa, who at that very moment was calling his friends for a feast of human flesh. Presently Ḷomoqwa entered, followed in succession by a number of undersea chiefs,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

773 subject. He does not often appear to mankind, though every
* 776 Bella Coola knows of his existence.

[579] Another supernatural craft is that of Wiwuina.* It, too, brings salmon and berries from their home in the extreme west. Knowledge of this canoe is limited to certain families who own stories connected with it, and it likewise serves as patron for kusiut dancers. Although both Noákgnom and Wiwuina can [761] easily destroy human beings, they usually pay no attention to them, and have even been known to bestow supernatural power. Wiwuina will be described in greater detail in connection with kusiut dances.

The third canoe is termed Winâs di Sâ-ldjo-ts, "The War-Party of the Tide," or Winâs di Ṡale, "The War-Party of the Ocean." Its home is among small islands in the ocean. It is a large canoe, manned by invisible submarine beings, who are able to drive it at tremendous speed wherever they wish. The members of the crew are not in themselves dangerous, but the craft is greatly feared because it always transports Ṡale-xf'. This supernatural creature is about the size of a seal, brown in colour, and of jelly-like substance; it lies in the boat immediately aft of the place from which water is bailed and constantly rolls to and fro, like an animated mass of repulsive jelly. Poison is constantly spreading from Ṡale-xf', and anyone placed in the canoe soon becomes weak, begins to shake like Ṡale-xf', and presently dies. This canoe is a source of danger to those with whom it may come in contact, and an even greater peril indirectly. The poison emanating from 773 Ṡale-xf' kills clams and mussels in the vicinity and renders
* 776 them unfit for food. In some cases they die at once, with 825 open shells, and anyone finding them knows what has hap-
761 pened and does not eat them, but in other cases they live for a considerable period though saturated with the venom. If [756] anyone eats these shellfish, he becomes flabby and jelly-like, and soon dies, unless a powerful shaman can conquer the
* 776 poison. Sometimes when a party is encamped on the shore 789

*Cf. Boas, p. 38.

775 walk backwards, or on their heads. Mortals sometimes see [761] ghosts, but the apparition seals their lips so that they cannot [750] recount their experiences. Death invariably follows. Shamans and other mortals endowed with great powers have been able to penetrate to the realm below, and the knowledge of conditions there has been derived from their accounts. Food is scarce in that land and ghosts are often driven up to earth to 264 search for it. Even a small morsel is enough to satisfy their 775 hunger, so that mortals throw fragments on the fire for the benefit of their dead relatives. If a person drop a crumb it is because a ghost has hooked it away from his hand; no wise Bella Coola ever picks up such a morsel, knowing that to do so would offend the hungry spectre. Deceased beings are 775 generally relatives, although instances are known in which they have shown kindness, particularly to their relatives. Like so [575] many supernatural beings, they figure most prominently as patrons of kaxlat dancers (see vol. II, chap. i). Further information concerning them is contained in the description of life after death.

776 Not even a complete list of beings would exhaust the 177 beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural, since any unexpected visitation is attributed by them to this source.
For example, when Mackenzie appeared, the first white man with whom the Bella Coola had come in contact, they thought that he must be from another world. Some thought him a dead man returned to life, and others considered him a supernatural visitor from above who had fallen down to earth, as did their first ancestors. The latter view prevailed, and it was ultimately decided that he must be ḡwexus, a supernatural being resident aloft of whom little was known. This name was applied to him, and it has since been given to all white men.[14]

[14] Although it was in 1793 that Mackenzie passed down the Bella Coola valley, a number of stories of that event were still remembered in 1922. When news happened the Bella Coola was his ability to make fire quickly. One man, now living, stated that he had heard from his mother that her father had spoken with him. Traditions of this type are valuable as reflecting the interests of a people, but their historical accuracy may well be doubted. One Kimsquit man, for example,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

A 776 [778] and gaping holes in the earth. In such regions no fire can be lit. The last known area of this kind is up the river behind Green Bay, about four miles from the sea. So far as could be learnt, Ikhnd' have never assisted Bella Coola in any way nor played any part in the social life of the community. They are feared on account of their supernatural power, but appear so seldom that they are practically disregarded.

More common than the last, and accordingly more important, is the kaukas. It is an enormous bird with bony wings and long, flexible beak. As it flies, the wings rattle violently, and its note, an oft repeated "Hax, hax, hax," can be heard for miles. These birds are said to have been numerous in former years, and are well known to all Bella Coola. Masked figures representing them are often used at kwiat dances. The kaukas is feared for its practice of inserting its long beak into the rectum of anyone sleeping carelessly in the forest and drawing forth his entrails. This can be prevented by standing upright a staff, such as all hunters carry, before going to sleep.

[535] [975] ● 961 A 776 [779] [536]

A popular story states that once, not many years ago, a number of men camped on the edge of a canyon near their home, without taking this precaution. One of them was awakened by a slight movement of one of his companions and, looking up, he saw the long neck and beak of a kaukas projecting over the rim of the canyon and sucking his partner's entrails. The convulsive shiver of the stricken man had awakened him. With his bow he shot an arrow into the bird's neck, causing it to disappear over the brink. Presently the long beak reappeared and he discharged another arrow with the same result. Again and again this happened until the attack ceased at dawn. The hunter assumed that a single bird had been repeatedly attacking, but when he looked over the edge of the cliff, he saw below a number of carcasses, each with an arrow in its throat. The canyon must have been a roosting place for the birds. His companions seemed still asleep, but when he investigated he found that all were dead; only the slightly enlarged orifice showed how they had been killed.

A 776 [779] No kaukas has been seen within recent years, but one informant and her husband heard them on the south side of the Bella Coola River about two miles from the sea. They would have been frightened at any time but nightfall increased their fears. 776 *

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Their dogs heard the sound and howled in dread. The woman 789 threw on their fire several soiled blankets, her only pair of shoes, and some dry salmon, which all supernatural beings [825] abhor. Then she and her husband fled home, waving lanterns to and fro and firing musket shots in all directions. The birds did not follow them, but they considered themselves fortunate to reach Bella Coola unmolested.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural 776 * animals just described are fairly exact; they know their appearance, what to expect, and what to do if one is encountered.
In addition to these, they assume the existence of monsters of indefinite form which they term swaq. Any supernatural creature, a Atkinl' for example, is spoken of as a swaq in general, not specific, classification. Consequently, what one [184] Bella Coola may describe as a swaq is given a distinctive name by someone else with wider knowledge. As far as could be learnt, there is no designation other than swaq for creatures which move from the ocean in April to clear the way for salmon [825] and spend the summer in the lakes of the interior, or beneath the ice of glaciers. They can assume various forms, sometimes even human, though they usually appear as giant, hairless, bear-like creatures with short legs and brown skin. Their eyes are large, round, and glass-like. In whatever form these cre- 761 atures may appear, they are almost certain to bring disaster to 776 * the beholder. One of the haunts of swaq is beneath the glacier on Mount Ōpwa-i, behind the small mountain which rises [778] behind Kimsqu-ti, on the south side of the Bella Coola River about half a mile from the sea. It is said that only a few years ago a white man, having heard of these creatures, went to that place with a number of Bella Coola. All the latter were able to hear the roaring of the beasts, louder than the whistle of a steamer, but the white man seemed deaf to it, though the power of the swaq had affected him, for he died on the way back to the village.

Other swaq are said to live near Kimsquit. The father of [778]

1:34cIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

a woman now in middle age is said to have guided a white man to the spot. Through a telescope he saw an enormous animal, and passed the instrument to a Kimsquit Indian in the party. He, too, saw it, but the effect was so powerful that he soon died. Theoretically, a man may receive supernatural aid from one of these monsters, but practically they are regarded as entirely evil and to be avoided.

The creature to which the term snaxy is most often applied is one that lives in lakes; it has a huge mouth and can suck with incredible force. More specifically, this animal is termed a sḥâmtsk. One is said to have lived not long ago at Winter Bay, about six miles from Bella Coola, and a small one is said to be living even now in Ootsa Lake. The Bella Coola tell a number of stories concerning the sḥâmtsk; the following is a typical account, and others will be given with folk-tales in a later chapter.

Within the life-time of an informant, two youths, a chief's son and a poor man's son, went to swim in one of the small lakes near Ootsa Lake. The chief's son who was ready first, swam out, wearing a fancy belt, leaving his companion on the shore. When the latter was on the point of diving in he heard a dreadful sucking noise, combined with an ominous crackling. He called to the swimmer asking him if he, too, heard it.

"Yes," came the answer, "But it is nothing," and the youth continued his swim.

As the noise grew louder the boy on the bank cried out: "Come back, come back, there is something bad there that we do not understand."

His friend in the water again answered: "Oh! There is nothing wrong."

The noise increased; sticks and stones were sucked from the bank and flew out towards the centre of the lake. The suction eventually grew so great that the youth on land was forced to clutch a tree-trunk with his arms, while his legs fluttered out towards the lake like pennants in a strong wind. The strain on his arms was so terrific that he was almost forced to relinquish his grip before the suction subsided. When he looked at the lake the swimmer had vanished.

The survivor returned to the village and reported what had happened. No one believed his story; instead, he was made a prisoner, accused of having killed the chief's son. For a week the people questioned him daily without being able to shake his story; then they resolved to

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 seized and carried to the shore. He had thought that it would
* 996 be easy to free himself, but he found it impossible and was carried under the sea. He bit frantically at the enfolding arms, until he succeeded in freeing his own, with which he pushed up the beak of the octopus, thus killing it. He rose to the surface and returned home none the worse.

[825] The Bella Coola do not profess to know all the animals of the world; and if they see a strange one, they assume it to be one known to their ancestors though unfamiliar to them. 539 Since any unknown animal is considered to have supernatural
● 961 power, due care must be exercised when one is seen. The fol-
* 996 lowing incident illustrates this point.

825 The mother's brother of an informant worked for some thirty years for a white man in Victoria. His employer once sent him to see a turtle which was confined in a pool in a basement preparatory to being killed for a banquet. As soon as he saw it, he said:

"My parents in Bella Coola told me of such a creature."

A few days before Christmas the turtle was cut up and displayed on four platters in the window of the store; the Bella Coola saw it, and thus learned that it had been killed. The same night a sore appeared on his wrist, and by the next day it was large and running. He said to his employer:

"In a few days I will be dead. Do not grieve for me. The sight of such supernatural creatures is too powerful for Indians; I survived one experience, but twice has been too much for me and I will die."

His employer wisely sent him to a white doctor who cured him, although the scar remained. Years later the man returned to Bella Coola where he displayed the mark as proof of his story. A few weeks later he died, and the Bella Coola are firmly convinced that his death was due to his having seen the turtle many years before.

* 996 Although the forests of British Columbia abound with 989 supernatural animals of enormous power, the attitude of the [981] Bella Coola hunter who penetrates into lonely places is not one of constant fear. It is true that he may meet danger at any turn, but danger is part and parcel of human life, and he is by no means defenceless. He dreads the powers possessed by creatures of another plane, but they for their part dread certain human objects. Clothing which has been worn for so long that it has become steeped with the emanations of its

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The most spectacular of Raven's exploits was the theft of the sun in order to provide light for the world (I, p. 298). In this case, a valuable object was acquired for mankind, but often Raven interfered with the kindly aims of Ālquntām, a point illustrated in the following account of the origin of death:[28]

539 776* 761 [821]

In the beginning of time, before people had really become human, Raven made a boy from his own body, gave him life, and called him O·mietlmai. His creation was Raven's chief joy. The youth was beautiful; his feet and hands were especially small and light-coloured, and Raven gloried in what he had been able to do without the assistance of his friend Yulātimut, the Carpenter. All went well until O·mietlmai was about fifteen years of age when Ālquntām wanted to find out about this being which Raven had created. Accordingly, he sent to earth one of his Snulsdktāls to carry off O·mietlmai. At that time there were four Snulsdktāls in Nusmāt·a, huge, eagle-like, supernatural birds under the especial care of Ālquntām himself. Down swooped one of these creatures and carried the youth aloft to Nusmāt·a, where he was treated as a guest by Ālquntām.

Raven, ignorant of the reason for his loss, was heart-broken. He pulled out his hair and for four days sat and pondered. Then he decided to wage war on the Snulsdktāls, not knowing that the latter had been acting by command of Ālquntām. Raven went to Yulātimut and asked him to make a huge whale. The carpenter was surprised and enquired about the purpose, whereupon Raven told him of the loss of O·mietlmai, and how he hoped that the Snulsdktāls would be lured into swooping down to fight the dummy and would be vanquished. Yulātimut agreed to help him and worked for four days on a gigantic cedar, chiselling it out like a canoe, but in the shape of an enormous whale. Then for four days he gathered gum and covered the wooden monster with a layer about an inch thick; finally he painted the outer surface to resemble a whale. It was a very fine piece of work. That night Raven asked Yulātimut to launch it. The stomach had been weighted so that it could either sink or float and there was room for a man inside to steer it. The whale acted according to specification, diving and rising easily, moving to right or left according to the wishes of the helmsman. Raven was delighted.

Early next morning Yulātimut again launched the craft at Raven's request, and it wallowed around near the shore like a real whale. Ālquntām

[28]Related by Jim Pollard.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
* 776
761

saw it, and despatched one of his Snulsilktäls to fetch it. He chose Nunusmaouk, "He Who Carries One," the Snulsilktäls able to lift one of anything. Down swooped Nunusmaouk, and seized the dummy in his talons, but, as he flapped his wings in an effort to rise, they became stuck in the gum so that he could neither lift his quarry nor escape. When the whale dived he was drowned. Many people on the shore watched the struggle. Then Älquntäm despatched another Snulsilktäls, Nunulnusek, "He Who Carries Two," who is able to carry two of anything. Nunulnusek likewise gripped the whale with his claws and succeeded in raising it slightly before his wings stuck in the gum and he, too, fell back and was drowned. Then Älquntäm sent down Nunuäsmusek, "He Who Carries Three," the Snulsilktäls able to lift three of anything. Nunuäsmusek gripped the whale as his predecessors had done, and lifted it about ten feet in the air before his wings became stuck like those of the others, and he, too, fell back and was drowned. Älquntäm, much worried, called to him Nunumu·sek, "He Who Carries Four," the Snulsilktäls able to carry four of anything, and despatched him after telling him how his three brothers had been overcome in their efforts to carry the monster away. Nunumu·sek swooped down with a powerful rush, gripped the whale firmly at the back of its neck, and carried it far aloft into the sky. Gradually the gum interfered with his wing-beats; they became more rapid and strained, until slowly he began to fall, still struggling. All the while his wings were being more and more hampered, till finally he, too, was powerless, and with a resounding splash fell with the whale into the water where he, likewise, was drowned. When no more Snulsilktäls appeared, the helmsman inside guided his strange craft back to the beach, where he exhibited his prey to the spectators. The story does not record how he was able to disengage them from the gum and take them into his whale. All the people were amazed at the dead Snulsilktäls, for their huge bony wings resembled nothing ever seen before.

Raven was not satisfied with his success, because, though he had slain the Snulsilktäls, he had not recovered O·mistlmai. He went to his house still weeping at the loss of his child. Älquntäm and O·mistlmai had seen Raven's sorrow, and the former sent the boy back. When O·mistlmai entered the house he said to Raven:

"Don't cry. Here I am. I saw your grief and have returned."

Raven looked at the speaker and replied: "No. You are not my son. He had beautiful flowing locks."

O·mistlmai had indeed appeared without any hair on his head, but he explained his loss by saying:

"Truly I am your son, O·mistlmai. I have been up in Nusmät·a where there was such a gale that my hair was blown away."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 776* 761●

Raven, blinded by his grief, did not believe him, and responded angrily:

"No, youare not my son. Why do you lie to me? Get out of this house."

Disgusted at this reception, O·mistlmai obeyed. Just as he was passing through the doorway, Raven noticed the tattoo marks on his legs, and realized that, in spite of the change in his appearance, the visitor was really his son. He called on him to return, but O·mistlmai paid no attention to his father's entreaties and sped far away. Raven's grief was beyond expression, but he could do nothing to repair the damage he had done. If it had not been for Raven's mistake, all mortals would return to life four days after death. [304]

771 761 776*

The above myth is widely known among the Bella Coola, and is supposed to be historically accurate. At the same time, few people allow it to influence their thoughts with regard to death or its causes. It is a fact, but one that belongs to the realm of ancient history rather than to everyday experience. When a Bella Coola dies, his relatives, though they know that his death is due to the folly of Raven, tacitly overlook this, and do not feel bitterly towards Raven. Bella Coola beliefs and theology are not systematized, hence it is quite possible for a person to realize a certain fact, such as the cause of death, and yet disregard it entirely. Considering that absolute contradictions can be believed simultaneously, it is not difficult to picture the mental attitude of people who believe, and at the same time disregard their belief.

539 825

One of Raven's spectacular, and at the same time, beneficial exploits was the bringing of sockeye salmon to the Bella Coola River.[87]

In the beginning of time, no sockeye salmon inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to supply them. First he tried making wooden fish and throwing them into the water, but though he could animate them, they always died after jumping a few times. The reason for his failure, though he did not know it, was because he had omitted the small bone [774]

[87]This is an example of conflicting beliefs. In addition to assuming that salmon were sent down by Alquntam to furnish food for mankind, and that Raven supplied them in the beginning of time, the Bella Coola also believe that they are brought each year both by Nedkynem and Winwina. [771]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

years ago a chief, when hunting, sat down to rest. While he 774 sat a slide plunged down the mountain-side and swept away the ground where he would have been if he had not stopped. The Bella Coola know that such a fortunate escape is no accident, as foolish white men believe, but is the result of an active spirit. Sometimes it can convey only symbolic hints of what is to happen. An old Kimsquit man told how his lower eyelids once became sore and his stomach began to heave. This [827] occurs with sobbing, so he knew that ill-fortune was before [787] him and was not surprised at the death of his son. A thoughtful person pays great attention to indications such as these, knowing that his spirit is always striving to pierce the future and obtain information for him, however indefinite. The importance of the supernatural to the Bella Coola can be judged from the fact that they attribute every action and thought to an element of this nature.

Mentality, silk, though caused by the spirit, is somewhat 774
vaguely regarded as a separate entity. It comprises two parts, 828
one constantly urging to good deeds, particularly to activity in ritual matters, the other to evil. No one knows the appearance, if any, of human mentality. Some of the thoughtful older men hazard the opinion that every tree has mentality, whereas others say that it has a spirit. In former times especially, as one was falling, the cutters could occasionally see a dark object somewhat resembling an otter flash away and disappear. Not until then was the tree actually dead. Even the old people do not profess to know anything definite about mentality, which is important only as an attribute of the spirit. In indefinite 774 association with it, too, is breath, sininits, provided by Alquntäm [761] for everyone at birth. The word signifies more than [827] the material act of breathing, it denotes the actual physical state of being alive, a condition "lent" by Alquntäm to mortals. The connection of these two elements with the spirit is unequivocal, though their exact relationship is indefinite.

If the spirit moves far from its proper position at the back [753] of the neck, the owner falls ill; if it leaves him, his condition [755]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

774 becomes critical. Only a shaman (I, p. 539) can return one, and 755 if he fails death always results. In some cases a spirit leaves [753] its owner without apparent reason; he becomes insane, tries to eat dirt, and his relatives realize at once what is the matter.
[756] They summon a shaman who takes off his cape, hangs it like a pouch on his stick, and points it in all directions as he sings his shaman's song. Finally he locates what is missing, and traps it in his cloak, which he places around the sick man. This restores the element and the sufferer recovers immediately. Another method is for the shaman to press the back of the patient's neck, and by blowing and spitting cause the wandering spirit to return. Either cure must be performed by a shaman because of the supernatural power required.

774 Spirits can be extracted in various ways. Shamans can draw one forth by sucking at the back of the neck between their cupped hands; in former times, some were so powerful that they could extract them by their mere presence. During 774 kusiut dances (II, chap. 1), the uninitiated are told that if they 575 enter the house where a ceremony is taking place, or even pass
[535] on the sidewalk outside the door, their spirits will be drawn from them by the power within and attracted to the dancer or to the sacred platform on which he is concealed. Many [178] stories are told of this, which were firmly believed by the uninitiated until the last few years. Members of the society claim that their great power acts as a magnet to the spirits of all but their associates, except children in arms; the latter can be taken by their mothers into the house, because their supernatural elements have not developed sufficient strength to 774 leave their bodies. A person may also lose his spirit through a sudden shock. If two people meet unexpectedly in the forest and one of them shouts loudly at the other, even if only in fun, the spasmodic contraction of the muscles is enough to expel it.
[761] The person to whom this happens falls down as if dead, and [756] though he soon recovers, his spirit has left him, and if it is not brought back by a shaman he dies a lingering death.

775 At death, the spirit permanently leaves the body. In some cases it tarries near the corpse for four days, or it may start at once on its travels. Distance means nothing to it, nor does time; once disembodied it goes back on the path of its late owner's ancestors from generation to generation, until it reaches the spot where his first forefather came to this earth. Here it assumes the bird or animal form used on that occasion and goes up to Nusmät·a. It is uncertain whether or not the spirit can take on, simultaneously, the different shapes used by various ancestors of the deceased. Its existence in the land above is similar to that on earth, but in an advanced degree. A good carpenter, for example, is a better carpenter after death; a chief is a greater chief; and one of the explanations for death is that Älquntäm has called a man to continue his work in another sphere. Nusmät·a is so huge that it is never crowded, though the spirits are immortal. They can see what is taking place on earth and sometimes return in bird or animal form to visit and comfort their grieving relatives. Powerful chiefs delight to display this, by means of a masked figure, as the central feature of a potlatch. Apart from this ceremonial usage, disembodied spirits play no part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They take no interest in human beings and accordingly are neither supplicated nor feared. 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE LIFE

Closely associated with the spirit is the sxuxmänoäs lkt', life.[38] As in the previous case, Älquntäm provides every human being and every animal with this at birth. It is an ethereal substance, having the form of the body which it animates; without it there can be neither strength nor growth; without life the body is an inert mass of flesh. As a person becomes older, so does this element grow, always taking the exact shape and form of the body. Alone, it can neither move nor think, its motive power being the spirit. It is the life that suffers 761 [774]

[38]Interpretations have been employed whenever possible to lessen the use of confusing native terms. Life is not an accurate translation of this Bella Coola word, but it is hoped that the reader will grasp its real significance from the description in this section. [114]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is the life that suffers
761 whenever the skin is broken. Any wound may prove dan-[752] gerous, but particularly one that cuts either of the invisible lines along which vitality flows from the little finger to the [827] little toe. An injury to one of these channels spreads rapidly and is in many cases fatal.

761 It is generally considered that a person dies if his life leaves his body. In contradiction to this, though the discrepancy 774 seems of slight importance to the Bella Coola, is the belief that it ascends at the winter solstice to the gathering of the supernatural beings in Nusmät·a to greet Älquntäm. It is common knowledge that some part of the human body does this, but there is diversity of opinion regarding which it may be. Some say it is the spirit, but the consensus of opinion is that it is the life. If it is successful and receives presents in the land above, its owner will prosper on earth; if it is unfortunate, he will be the same; if it falls in the crush as the guests hurry forth to escape the heat of Älquntäm's entry, he will die. By dreams 761 a man learns the fortune of his supernatural representative, 787 and from them he can judge what is in store for him during the coming year and receive intimations concerning birth and death, secret society matters and, in fact, every phase of human activity, since all are decided at the meeting of Älquntäm and his associates. Dreams are considered to be especially important at this season of the year (I, p. 608) and information obtained from them may, perhaps, be the origin of the present firm conviction that some portion of the body actually ascends.
[182] Bella Coola beliefs have so broken down in recent years that lack of unanimity concerning the specific part is not surprising, nor does it alter the importance of this conviction. No attempt is made to explain how an individual can remain alive during the annual absence of his life.

761 Although the life is so ethereal, it really consists of four intangible elements which unite to form the immaterial whole.
One of these parts, including the voice, is located in the throat, another in the trunk, a third in the legs, and a fourth in the feet; the body is thus divided into four quarters. The connection of these with one another and with the spirit, the mental director of the life, is a matter of advanced Bella Coola theology on which opinions differ. Only men of philosophical temperament even hazard an opinion on such matters, which are beyond the realm of daily routine. 761

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When a man dies, his life leaves his body and the useless flesh begins to decay. At the same time the life is freed to travel as an intangible wraith, having the form and appearance of its dead owner. It visits all the places where he had been in the habit of going during life, irrespective of their distance from the scene of death. Sometimes it journeys to the locality where, in a dream, the mother of the deceased received her first intimation of pregnancy (I, p. 615). It wants to see former friends and sometimes makes its presence known to them by whistling. A person who hears this sound is saddened by the realization that one of his associates has passed away in some distant place. At other times, a man merely senses its presence and feels frightened without hearing or seeing anything to account for it. Very rarely, a dead person's life speaks to a dearly loved friend to inform him of his loss. During the existence of the body, spirit and life are closely associated, and the former sometimes accompanies the latter on its round of farewell visits before ascending to Nusmät·a. 761 775 [774]

After four days the life descends to the land below where it lives forever as a ghost. Some believe that it is the shadow which assumes this form, but the seeming contradiction is relatively unimportant since the life is essentially shadow-like. Ghosts have already been described in connection with supernatural bodies, and further information will be found in vol. I, chap. VIII.

At death, when the life as a whole becomes a ghost, its constituent parts likewise undergo transformation. The one situated in the feet remains with the corpse and disintegrates; that located in the legs enters a wolf and nothing more is known of its fate; no one knows what happens to the one situated in the body. The part in the throat, including the voice, enters [827] [825] [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

761 an owl, possibly one of those which normally roost on the tree
775 behind Nusmät-a. This element of a dead person occasionally 825 communicates with a living relative, as evidenced by the following story.

[539]
[827]

A number of years ago a party of men and women camped for the night beside one of the rivers flowing into South Bentinck Arm. After supper, as they were resting by their fire, an owl kept hooting from a neighbouring tree. One of the men turned to a friend who had been making obscene remarks and, half in jest, warned him to be careful in case one of his relatives was listening. The foolish fellow looked at the owl and asked:

"Are you a relative of mine?"

There was no answer, but when he had repeated the question four times, the owl spoke:

"I am so-and-so," he said, naming the deceased grandfather of his questioner.

Consequent upon the belief that the voice of a dead person enters an owl, the bird is treated with considerable respect. It is improper to make fun of one, or to ask who it was when alive. Should a person do so, the owl answers with the interrogator's own name and he soon dies.

761 On the whole, the life does not affect the daily existence of the Bella Coola as profoundly as does the spirit. When they stop to ponder on the reason for some event, they readily admit the importance of the life with its constituent elements, but they are not always considering its activities and seeking to strengthen it. It is essentially a religious attribute, of greater moment to a man of imaginative and suggestible temperament than to one who carries on the daily routine without asking why and wherefore.

THE TALLY POST

773 In the beginning of time, when Ăkquntäm sent the first 777 people down to earth, he erected in Nusmät-a posts emblazoned with the bird or animal crest taken by each to serve as a memorial, or reminder, to him of the number of individuals existing

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

701 difficult to estimate the former influence of such warriors. The belief of all in their ability must have given them some prestige, although the requirements of practical qualifications in fighting must often have prevented them from functioning as military leaders. In other words, a man may be, socially, a warrior, even though he lacks ability as a fighting man.

701 The functions of warriors are not limited to fighting with 693 enemies of other tribes. Each has the power to kill and must exercise it when requested. If a mistake is made in a cere-
[688] monial kusiut dance, the offender must be killed, and one way [575] in which this is accomplished is by the senior members of the society requesting a professional warrior to act as executioner.
[428] One of these men, who lived at Ăsăn·ăn·i, always used a stone [411] club which had been handed down from generation to generation, becoming the property of each new incumbent of the [754] name and prerogative. In other cases, the killing is said to have been done with the aid of magic. The power of the Ăsăn·ăn·i warrior had been confirmed with so much goods that he was the most powerful professional killer known to the Bella Coola. He acted on instructions from the senior members of the kusiut society or when called upon by anyone. If,
[684] for example, a man found that his wife had been faithless and wished to kill her lover, it was only necessary to tell the professional warrior, who was bound to act in accordance with his prerogative. He received no pay, since he was merely [682] exercising his right. The relatives of the murdered person never took revenge on the slayer, realizing that he was powerless in the matter, though they frequently requested him to slay the person who had asked him to kill the first victim. He could never refuse to do so, even if the victim were his own brother, or if he knew that the person he was to kill was guiltless. The underlying principle was that this man's power had [761] been increased to such a pitch by the distribution of presents that if he failed to exercise it on demand, it would react upon himself and cause his own death. This Ăsăn·ăn·i warrior began in time to have an aversion for his vocation, since he

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house 784 through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The 881 Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest [761] reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period[4] she cannot eat [262] fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true [783] that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no [222] more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before [513] everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to [867] remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing 881 and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound [292] with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is [301] worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat [439]

1 [ie - one year after puberty - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CAUSES OF DEATH

761 The Bella Coola know that sickness, accident, wilful murder, old age, and a host of other factors may at any time terminate a man's life, but they consider that any one of these direct causes is possible only in conjunction with an indirect reason of a religious or supernatural nature; in the last analysis they attribute death to supernatural, not to natural causes. [773] As described in a previous chapter, an ancient myth attributes the origin of death to the stupidity of Raven, but this belief, even if its historical accuracy is accepted, belongs to the realm of philosophy and ancient history rather than to everyday life. 761 When a canoe is capsized on the ocean and its occupants are drowned,—the Bella Coola do not consider a drowning a mere 776 accident—it is because Q̓omoqwa was hungry and desired human flesh. This indirect reason is quite as important as the direct one. So, too, the death of a man beneath a falling tree or a land-slide is no accident; Sä·lma caused the tree to crash to earth or the slide to roll downwards. Most individuals believe that this supernatural being is responsible when an animal kills a hunter. He delights in death and always sits on [756] a coffin before it is taken to the grave, although none but shamans can see him. Any supernatural being can cause death, but it must not be imagined that the Bella Coola go through life in a state of constant fear; death may vanquish them in the forests, but the probabilities are against it. Nor does 753 sickness appear to them as a natural phenomenon. Its cause is either the intrusion of some foreign object into the body, or the weakness of one of the patient's supernatural elements. The only remedy in the latter case is an appeal to the super- [755] natural, sometimes through the medium of a shaman, whereas a foreign object in the body can often be extracted by a skilled [754] practitioner. A disease of this type is often brought on by the machinations of a sorcerer, and if death results it is attributed 761 to the potency of his charms, not to a natural ailment. Even [775] ghosts are able to cause death. In war, one man may be able [726]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to kill an enemy, but his success is accredited to his supernatural possessions which have given him skill as a warrior rather than to his own ability. 761 726

It is felt that no ordinary explanation is sufficient to account for the death of a great chief. No matter what may have been the actual cause, it is always said that the supernatural Carpenters, who in the beginning of time created mankind, came down and "seized" or "called back" the deceased, thinking him too good for this world. It is believed that these beings are keen hunters, and that Ālquntām allows them to pursue influential people. This sentiment is always expressed in mourning songs for a dead chief, but although accepted as a matter of fact, it is little more than a formalized belief which serves to comfort the mourners. The infraction of a taboo is another reason frequently given for a chief's death. It is said that there was a loud crash and the earth shook before the death of Potlas; he became ill immediately, and his stomach began to swell. The stricken chief said that Sonx̄ itself had fallen upon him, but the common belief was that he had erred in some ritual act. At any rate, he died within a few hours. 761 622 [773] [555]

RITES FOLLOWING DEATH

News of a critical illness spreads rapidly through the village and the house in which the sufferer is lying becomes a rendezvous for friends asking about his condition. Failure to do so would be considered ungracious, with the result that there is such a constant coming and going that rest is denied the sick person. Shamans are called upon to practise their powers in a noisy manner, and female relatives weep and wail. The din is indescribable. 763 [756]

When the patient shows no further indication of life, the shamans cease, but the women redouble their cries. Relatives, friends, and sympathizers all crowd into the house and begin to weep, often adding verbal lamentations. The progress of the news from house to house can be traced by the wailings. Mean- 764

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 friends of the deceased, pick up the coffin and carry it through [766] the hole. In former times it was frequently difficult to obtain [784] pall-bearers for a slave or friendless person on account of the [761] taboos to which a person performing this service was subject. If a dead person should be taken through a doorway, others using it would soon follow the corpse to the next world. For the same reason, a body must never be moved across the central line of a house; the passage is, therefore, made from the side where it happens to be lying. As soon as the corpse has been taken through, the removed planks are quickly replaced. Mourners and guests stream out through the doorway and follow the coffin, some of them carrying the bundles containing part of the goods of the deceased. Meanwhile the pall-bearers follow the woman with the torch to the cemetery, taking care to carry their burden so that it faces the direction
[761] in which they are going; if a dead person is allowed to look backwards, he will beckon some relative to accompany him and the one so summoned will soon die.

There is a cemetery near every village, usually fifty to a hundred yards behind the row of houses in a place from which the heavy timber has been cleared. On arrival, the pall-bearers set down their burden close to the spot where the guide has placed her flaming bark on the ground. The personal possessions of the deceased are likewise deposited near the fire, which is kept alight by female relatives throwing on it small quantities of the dead person's clothing and utensils. The near kinsmen of the deceased choose the exact site of the grave, which must never be dug before the bringing of the corpse.
[423] There is no ownership of plots within the cemetery, so that the hole can be made wherever desired. A favourite location is close to the grave of a mother, father, or other near relative, but this is optional; bones are sometimes uncovered when digging, and in that case earth is thrown in once more and a new site selected. There are no professional grave-diggers, [767] nor are arrangements made in advance for men to perform this duty, but friends, especially strong young men, are willing to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Indeed, a grave is never 765 disturbed except, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a [789] portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the [761] opener, so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

768 Burning or deposition near the grave is not restricted to the actual utensils and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be laid dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready [264] by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person seems indescribably indecent. In recent years, the crop, if a man dies after tilling and sowing a field, is allowed to ripen, and then rot unharvested. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is [761] apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of [784] death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that has been in contact with a corpse.

764 The rituals described above may be considered as religious in nature; almost equally important are the social require-431 ments of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This 556 indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members of the ancestral family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite [614] manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the woman who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way. Failure to do so brands the relatives as misers with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1968
NEb Bellacoola NEb

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kimsquit is called Sqlaw'ii, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [125] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [621] [302] [134] [587] [735]

775 accustomed to do when alive; but the workmanship is shadowy and unsubstantial, sometimes even transparent. Ghosts do not act like human beings, but usually walk backwards, sometimes even on their hands, and spend much of their time playing a game resembling football with large, globular objects made of some light substance. They communicate with one another both by whistling and in a language which resembles the strangest or speech made by a tongueless person. Some 775 individuals believe that there is a supreme chief in the land of 776 ghosts, Mitlenaitl, sent down like Pluto to preside over the shades. His figures in certain stories describing descents to the lower world; but many Bella Coola know nothing of his existence below, although it furnishes a plausible explanation for his coming by night to molest human beings. Like Sasquatch he causes blood to rush forth from the mouth and genitalia of anyone whom he seizes; death follows, and a new victim has been acquired for his kingdom. The more common belief is 775 that the villages of ghosts have chiefs like those of human beings. It is thought, indefinitely, that after a long period of time the ghosts die, and some of them may then return to this world as infants. A child born with dimples in its ears, which are regarded as indications of previous boring for rings, is welcomed as the reincarnation of some unknown ancestor.

At death, the ghost does not immediately appear in the land below, but remains for four days within the back room of a house corresponding in style to an ordinary Bella Coola dwelling. It is believed that one of these large houses is beneath every village* and that the dead pass straight down through the earth into it. Meanwhile the goods, burnt at the grave during the funeral, as well as those deposited beside it, have fallen through the ground and notified the ghosts that a newcomer has arrived. The wealth assembles from all directions and fight over the articles, some of which are obtained by the one who owned them during life. On the fourth

*There may be one large house, extending beneath the entire like Pluto's shown, it was impossible to obtain definite information on this point.

b.96:Seventh E-5 (1912-1914)142
NEB Bellevue NEB

wise to speak to living relatives, but his whistling language is unintelligible and frightens the hearer. Ghosts dislike urine, and the only means known to keep them away from a house is to sprinkle this liquid outside the door, a common Bella Coola custom. There is no actual danger in hearing a ghost, and little even in seeing one, provided the observer does not relate his experience, but should he try to do so, something happens to his mouth as if an invisible hand had been clamped over it to prevent his words issuing forth. He can neither eat nor drink and soon dies.* It is possible that other beings are responsible for this same affliction, but no sufferer has ever been able to explain the cause of his silence, so one knows. The most dangerous ghost is that of a person who, buried without a wear-ring, is unable to disintegrate into his elements. The sight of such an apparition causes almost immediate death through contraction and closing of the mouth.

An emphatic habit of ghosts is the throwing of stones at the living. This is done partly from a love of mischief, and partly to remind their relatives of their needs. An old Kwakiutl man described how, when encamped on King Island, he had almost been struck by a stone which seemed to fall from a tree. He realized that it must have been thrown by a ghost, and his opinion was confirmed when he found he could not speak. He instantly built a fire and cast on it both food and clothing as offerings to the dead, which had the effect of loosening his mouth. Pondering on the reason, he remembered that one of his relatives had died not far away, and that he had failed to give him any crumbs for a long time. In this case, as in many others, the stone was visible, though the thrower remained invisible.

Even near approach to ghosts is sometimes dangerous. The same man related how, when hunting, he heard what he thought was the noise of a water canal, and passed by heedlessly. In a few minutes he thought he heard the rattling of geese, but the sound, instead of continuing to come from a pool a few hun-

*The disease attributed to the actions of ghosts may be tetanus.

1:Mc:Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

wrapped up in a specific object it follows that the luck is transmissible; in fact, one of the chief advantages to the man who owns some valuable object is the wealth which he derives from selling a small portion of it. 777 787 [432]

The Bella Coola term for supernatural good luck is ejo, meaning, "What is Good." This can come from any being though it is most frequently obtained either from a mitqoo or a sutsuf. The former resembles a toad of enormous size, with a blazing fire-like glow in its throat; the latter is a double-headed salmon or snake that can travel on land. The person who succeeds in killing one of these creatures can use the carcass as a lure to wealth, if he knows the proper means. The portion must be wrapped in an article that has been in close contact with the slayer, such as a piece of his soiled clothing. This must be kept carefully hidden for one year in a country to which no rain can penetrate, and after that it can be used as bait. There is equal potency in a stick or other object which has come in contact with the beast. Great danger is attached to the sight of a mitqoo or a sutsuf, since death usually follows any incorrect attempt to gain wealth from either. The person who sees one of these creatures feels no ill effects until he draws near a fire, when his stomach burns. All the Bella Coola agree that if a man has been close to one he can be saved by the use of certain medicines, but the following stories show that there is no clear-cut opinion as to which are the best. In fact, most families have knowledge of a specific cure which they regard as the most efficacious. [776] [776] [761] [757]

The opportunity to obtain supernatural good luck does not come solely to unfortunate individuals; indeed the Bella Coola state that it is fortuitous. It appears, however, that usually the person who is thus favoured is one who has practised ceremonial chastity, or is, through some other means, in a state of cheerfulness pleasing to the supernatural. At any rate the danger of seeing such creatures is less to a man who is in a pure condition than to any other. Further, in most cases they are apt to appear to a person whose ancestors have seen one. [185]

Schl:Dorsey:B.-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

777 224 elapsed, he fetched his musket from its hiding-place and again began to use it. Thenceforth he never missed his aim; every shot brought down an animal.

Before the days of muskets good fortune could likewise be obtained by the discovery of the nest of a mitqac. Each contains small particles of the skin of all animals, including human beings, plucked from them in their sleep by humming birds and moths. The finder must touch the nest with his stick, such as is always carried by hunters, then break it and throw it away, saying as he does so:

"May I see you at . . . tomorrow." This means next year.

He names his favourite hunting-ground. The finder must not say anything to anyone about his discovery, and for one [765] year he must observe continence. If he then goes to the locality mentioned, he will there find his stick, the one which he broke when he touched the nest, though it will be invisible to anyone else. Adhering to it and will be four hairs of the mitqac. These he must hide for a year, wrapped in some of his own clothing, taking care that it is an article which he has long worn and which is accordingly saturated with his essence. [735] During this period, too, he must observe continence. Two years after finding the nest, he will be able to hunt with phenomenal success. The knowledge of this proper procedure has [424] been handed down in an ancestral family for many generations.

On the occasion when the two men had seen the nest they 777 continued their journey, each chiding the other for his failure * 787 to take advantage of the opportunity put in his path. Before long they saw a footprint where no man had been and knew [772] that it must be that of Tsaskiti, the supernatural hunter of mountain goats. In spite of remonstrances, the comrade scooped up a little dirt from the track into his handkerchief. In this he did wrong, especially as he had failed to take advantage of the opportunity presented to him by the nest of the mountain goat. That night as the two were encamped a slide came thundering down beside them, and they barely escaped with their lives. Not long afterwards the erring man died, [76]

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

insane, a calamity unquestionably due to his recklessness in handling the earth where a supernatural one had trod. 777 787*

This point illustrates the danger of near approach to a mātsqus, a theme well exemplified in the stories in the next chapter. Such perils must be counteracted in diverse ways according to the traditions of different ancestral families. One common method is to seek a lonely spot in the woods and there hollow out a shelter beneath an overhanging rock or fallen tree-trunk where the person who has been exposed to danger must remain for four days, eating nothing and at intervals scrubbing his body with branches of devil's club, spruce, and other rough plants. These protect him from the evil effects of the monster. [761] 783 [824]

Similar in function to the mātsqus, and equally dangerous to the unwary, is the sisiutl. The latter is supposed to have been created on this earth, at Bella Bella, in the beginning of time by Yālmīmut. It was at first the canoe made by this carpenter, and then turned loose by him to range the mountains and floods, as it has ever since, equally at home on land and in water, and in various forms. The following is a typical description of the manner in which a sisiutl appeared in the past. 777 787* [773] [776] 539

Long ago a man was hunting in the mountains when he saw a salmon, which changed in an instant to a fish-like monstrosity with two heads but no tail. He hunged at it with his stick, and in so doing started a slide which carried the salmon down the mountain. As this was taking place, the latter said: 777 787*

"Go down the mountain, salmon; I will get you at the bottom."

When he reached the foot of the new slide he saw the fish lying clear on the ocean. He cut it up and slung it on a cedar-bark rope. Now this salmon was a sisiutl, the first that had ever been seen, and the hunter obtained supernatural good luck from his experience. He also took the name of Sisiutl, a designation which has been handed down until recently.

After this adventure many people hunted for the sisiutl, and with fair success in early days, but now it cannot be found, 777 787*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lälkänelp or walilikwätsälätsälats, "The most potent of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting eastward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a catamenial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a mätsqas or a tsiatl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the qekäu-i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wilwaxwat, who was also called O'mätl, was snaring mountain goats on Mount Tsapinätl when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized, from descriptions given him by the old people, as the note of a qekäu-i.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

His Body." A shaman with this name does not use a rattle when curing.

Anuxelnumut, "Quivering To and Fro." This refers to the movements of a shaman when he dances for curative purposes.

Qpänpänliktnumlaix, "The Revolver." This is derived from qpänliktnum, to revolve sunwise, and as this is done for curative purposes, the name really signifies, "The One Who Restores to Strength."

It is believed that Ťlitcäplilän-a often uses her own discretion about visiting the sick, but that sometimes a number of the supernatural beings confer as to whether an ailing person should be helped, and if so request her to visit him. Sometimes the patient is so sick that an enormous amount of power must be inserted to help him, and he dies from its receipt. In such cases he is revived by Anunitsektnum, a male being whose sole function is to restore those whom Ťlitcäplilän-a has slain. This return to life has frequently occurred when relatives have been mourning the death of the patient, who is presently able to recount all that he has seen. Sometimes Ťlitcäplilän-a, instead of herself bestowing power upon a sick person, carries him[9] away to a locality in which a supernatural being was petrified in the beginning of time.

Although it is Ťlitcäplilän-a who most frequently cures a sick person, there are many instances of other supernatural beings having done so. Little seems to be known of these, except that they have been recorded as appearing to give a patient their name and to cure him of his malady. So far as could be ascertained, they are thought of only in connection with apparitions to the sick and, since in function they exactly resemble Ťlitcäplilän-a, and as it is she who is most commonly spoken of, it is possible, or even probable, that these are actually the same being under other names. The following beings are of this type.

[9] The Bella Coola do not theorize as to the part of the person thus transported; if questioned, they conclude that it must be the spirit.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

them renders it more likely that they will grant his requests. Therefore, a shaman is usually called upon to perform the following rites: 756* 782

(1) Washing the mouth of a person who has died without voiding from his body the first salmon or olachen of the season (I, p. 436). [764]

(2) Asking assistance for the complicated rites of the potlatch (I, p. 192). [556]

(3) Request for assistance before starting on a journey, by puffing eagle down into the air (I, p. 106). [484]

(4) Request for aid by means of placing food on the water and blowing eagle down into the air at Mesatche Nose and Kwatna (I, p. 109).

In fact a supplication to any supernatural being can be made with greater prospect of success by a shaman than by any other person.

The Power of Shamans

As has been said, a shaman actually has power within himself, and this is so strong that it may be a source of danger to others. If a man should pass behind one so endowed when the latter is eating, his spirit would be drawn from his body into the shaman's mouth, which would close with a click, crushing the spirit and killing the man. This is quite involuntary on the part of the shaman. It happened more than once among the early inhabitants, and since that time people have been very careful not to pass behind an eating shaman; this taboo was still in force until about 1885. A shaman, too, is said to be able to recall a spirit which has left its body, and thus caused illness. It is believed by some that shamans can see the position of a person's tally post, and so judge the length of his life. These examples show the varying beliefs of different Bella Coola concerning the powers of shamans. 756* [761] [264] [178] [755]

But the force within the shaman is really more dangerous to its possessor than to others. As certain "unclean" objects are able to subdue supernatural beings, so do these same ob- 756* 783 841

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*756 783 841 jects have power over shamans. A shaman must never sleep beside his wife during her menses, must never eat food prepared by a menstruating woman, by one who has recently washed a new-born infant, by a girl during the period of seclusion following puberty, or by a widow or widower during the year that follows the death of his partner. If a shaman's nose bleeds when he is dancing it is because a menstruating woman is present in the house; he at once asks the offender to withdraw, after which the bleeding stops. Moreover, he must [755] never cure a woman during her periods. A wise shaman prac- [785] tises ceremonial chastity frequently. In view of the lack of cleanliness ascribed to menstrual blood, it is perhaps surprising that a woman can become a shaman while still of child-bearing age. This is rare, and only occurs when a woman is the last survivor of a family. The Bella Coola themselves consider it to be peculiar, only explicable on the ground that anything is possible to the supernatural beings, even the disregarding of feminine "uncleanness." Usually, female shamans are past the age of child-bearing; if not, they observe absolute chastity.

*756 761 Even inadvertent breaking of one of these rules causes death. This is not regarded as a punishment inflicted by Tlitsplilin-a; it is merely the inevitable consequence of the supernatural power within the shaman having come in contact with what is not clean. As a shaman is considered to be immune against all ordinary ailments, his death is always attributed to the breaking of a taboo. Frequently the death of a shaman is accompanied by some convulsion of nature. One female shaman, for example, told the people of her village to keep their children within doors, since a supernatural being was coming for her. Soon it became dark; there were four loud claps of thunder, at the fourth of which she fell dead.

539 The following was related as an instance of the danger to *756 a shaman of coming in contact with an unclean woman.

[789] The son of the first man to come to earth at Nalkuz was, like his [841] father, named Dudzeeq". One April he and his wife went upstream to [787] Tsqumlu, a place in the country of the Carriers where milk-weed is plentiful, of which they planned to collect a supply. In the course of their journey Dudzsong" saw a man who, when he drew near, turned into a piece of hanging moss. A little later he again saw a figure, but on approaching it became a tree. Dudzsong" and his wife walked on and presently the former once more beheld a man; this time the apparition changed to a fir tree. It was évident to Dudzsong" that a supernatural being had manifested itself to him, and he told his wife that they must return. On reaching home he related his experience and gave a shaman's dance. 539 756* 787

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

From this experience he had received the power of curing. He could see disease when it was invisible to all others, and could summon it to himself, where it was harmless, thus restoring the patient to health. He made for himself a rattle, shaped like a bird; this had the ability of dancing of its own accord, and would catch people's hair in its opening and closing beak. The sick were brought to Dudzsong" from all over the valley. One day he travelled by canoe down to Snxl where he found many of the villagers seriously ill. His arrival was quite fortuitous, for he was unaware of the epidemic that was raging. The inhabitants sought his help, so he landed and cured them. He entered the house of a woman who claimed to be ill, and took the sickness upon himself, but no sooner had he left than he fell down stricken. He demanded to be taken home in his canoe, but he only lived two days after his return. The woman had been in pain from her menses; it was this that he had taken upon himself and caused his death. 539 756* [761] [783] [841]

In consequence of the danger attached to the vocation, many people try to avoid becoming shamans, though if Thiwápilin-a should appear to a man when ill, he cannot escape the power. The usual method of prevention is for a man to hold intercourse with his wife from blow, so that her flesh, impure through its liability to menses, can form a barrier to the coming of supernatural power. One who wishes to escape always sleeps on the left of his wife, whereas if he is seeking shaman's power he sleeps on the right. Another method of avoidance is to use the hole in the floor which serves as exit and entrance to the house of a girl secluded following adolescence. 756* [787] [833] [513]

Since the power of a shaman is obtained by a personal experience, and lacks both form and substance, it cannot be transmitted and disappears at the owner's death. As has been

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 could not distinguish any actual words. This ceased, to be 755 followed by the hissing sound of escaping steam; the water became so unbearably hot that, crippled though he was, he 539 managed to crawl out. His courage soon revived, so, wrapping
* 787 his head in his blanket, he returned to the spring. The water was still unpleasantly hot on his body and legs, but the covering protected his head. The same phenomenon occurred on the two following days. Four days later he was well enough to walk and was brought home. During his treatment he saw supernatural beings, and is still hoping for a further revelation that will make him a shaman. He believes that this would have been granted to him if his friends had allowed him to remain in the spring overnight.

755 During the four days of his immersion he ate nothing, and his only nourishment was a little mountain goat grease which he did not swallow but kept in the right side of his mouth. After each bath he scrubbed himself with hemlock boughs. As in all
[785] such cases, for one year he observed continence and refrained
[761] from eating unsmoked salmon. Failure to observe these taboos would have caused his death.[14]

755 According to another account the creature that visits a patient lying in the Hot Springs is a bähnk'. As already de-776 scribed, it is a hairless animal, about as large as a small moose, with legs so short that its belly almost scrapes the ground, no tail, and a large head with glass-like eyes. The whole appearance suggests an enormous walking snake. This animal approaches the sick person, as he lies on a flat stone[15] in the spring, and takes a bite from wherever the sickness is situated. No wound can afterwards be seen, but the ailment is carried away with the biting. If the patient should lack courage and endeavour to escape he would soon die.

776 Others of these animals of the same or similar variety have been observed about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.

[14] See vol. I, p. 609 for further results of this treatment.
[15] There are two of these, one used by men and one by women.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

served ceremonial chastity and was, therefore, in a good position to receive premonitions of this kind. The next day, as they were paddling down the river, they came upon some treacherous ice. Forewarned, they hastily abandoned their canoe, one side of which was soon broken in the way Ṫsälits had described; if they had continued their journey they would certainly have been drowned. 787*

The dreams thus far recorded have all been capable of simple explanation; in fact, their meaning is obvious, either visually or audibly. In addition, there are a number of types considered to be symbolic by the Bella Coola. There are no professional interpreters, but it is believed that in ancient times shamans learnt the significance of certain images and this knowledge has since been transmitted from generation to generation. [791] [756]

One type indicates a coming birth. If a woman dreams that she travels to some distant spot, under the ocean or into the mountains, and there takes something in her hand, it signifies that she will soon bear a male child; on the other hand, if she picks up some small object when gathering berries, a daughter will be born. A Kimsquit informant stated that before his birth, his mother dreamt that she had gone far under the mouth of the Dean River to the vicinity of Ḷomoqwa's house, where she had taken up a child. From this she knew she was pregnant and he was born in due course. If the scene of the dream is in the mountains, it means that the child will be a good hunter; if under water, that he will be a successful fisherman, as it proved in this case. There is a vague belief that death takes place either near the spot where the mother received indication of conception, or that the life and spirit of the deceased visit the place before setting out on their journey back from generation to generation. The old man from whom this information was obtained expects to meet death by drowning, though he is himself uncertain whether his premonition is due to his mother's dream or to the fact that there has been a tendency for this to occur in his family. 787* 843 787* [761] [775]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 787 843 If a woman dreams that she has caught two salmon, two small birds, or is holding two infants, the birth of twins is foretold. This type of explanation is obvious; in fact, these examples lie on the border-line between direct and symbolic interpretations.

* 787 843 775 Another indication of approaching pregnancy is for a woman to dream of a dead relative; this means that the latter will soon be re-born. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned that some fifty years earlier his mother dreamt that her dead mother came to her, saying that she was lonesome and wished to return. Soon afterwards she conceived, and the daughter born was considered to be the reincarnation of her own grand- [553] mother whose names she was promptly given. At the present time, this informant addresses his sister as sister, though he states that as a child he was taught to call her grandmother. As already mentioned, if a new-born infant is a reincarnation, the fact can often be recognized by holes or dimples in the ears, relics of previous borings for rings. Unless such a birth has been foretold in a dream, it is impossible to learn whom the child re-embodies.

* 787 A dream of frequent occurrence in Bella Coola is the return of the sleeper to the scenes and activities of his childhood. [761] This always signifies a long life. Strangely enough, to dream of being nailed in one's coffin and carried to the grave is translated conversely, and likewise indicates a long life. It is re- [731] membered that there were many dreams of fire before the outbreak of the smallpox epidemic, so it has since been assumed that such presage an outbreak of this disease.

* 787 224 The only dreams of which the interpretations are wholly symbolic are those experienced by hunters. The Bella Coola explain this by saying that hunters always observe ceremonial [785] chastity and their spirits are, therefore, in a receptive condition to supernatural impressions. When a man has set his traps, he is able to tell from his dreams whether or not any animals have been caught:

To dream that a canoe has been upset in the river and that

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 539 tune, remembering what the latter had told him the previous evening.
* 756 He feared to follow his friend's track, and, as night came on, closed the
* 787 tent and went to sleep, with the dog beside him. When it was quite dark he was wakened by the sound of footsteps and the tapping of a stick, and concluded that his partner was returning. The tent-flap was untied, as if by a person entering, but Alyimlaix could see nothing, so he kicked the dog to waken it and the animal began to bark furiously. At length he heard the steps withdraw and grow fainter as they climbed the mountain. Then Alyimlaix realized that his friend was dead, and that it was his life, [775] flashing round to visit his companions, which had come to him. Terrified, he lay awake all night with a blazing fire, and fled the next morning.

Alyimlaix chanced to meet several canoes soon after he had quitted his camp, and when he had told his story, their occupants turned back to hunt for Nuuazwmalst. About eighteen men searched all that day unsuccessfully, but a few days later another party found the corpse of the missing hunter. Presumably he had fired at the goat, though whether he struck it or not was not known, and the animal had charged. A wound in Nuuazwmalst's groin showed where one of the horns had pierced him, and the two had rolled together to death over a precipice, the bodies becoming slightly separated in the fall.

Even if Nuuazwmalst had struck the goat it would not have availed him, since he was doomed to death. Not only had he taken great risks in hunting within one year of his previous experience, but his wife had been careless during his absence. He had long practised continence, and [785] thereby was in a clean condition such as is approved by animals, and other supernatural beings, but this very condition rendered him peculiarly [761] susceptible to any breaking of taboos by his wife. She had so far forgotten herself as to indulge in swinging when he was on the mountain, so that his death was inevitable. Nuuazwmalst's relatives were very angry and prophesied that she would soon die. They were right, though whether her death was caused by a sorcerer, or by the accumulative power of their thoughts, is a matter no one can determine.

THE Tlāqmā-ks

In the beginning of time, when Alquntin sent down Kāldāx to this earth, he used his own initiative and travelled to the east for abalone-shell and to the west for copper. On returning to his settlement, he determined to try to have to it a supernatural being, of whose existence he was aware from his previous life in the land above. Accordingly, he fashioned some of the copper into jingling bangles, which he fastened to the ropes of his infant's cradle. Before the introduction of white man's [177] cradles, the Bella Coola were accustomed to tie a child in a cloth and [854] men had vanished. It is possible that in this particular case there was a belief that Alquntăm granted the wish when convinced that all had the same desire, but this element is often entirely lacking.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Belief in the power of thought is a concept which the investigator constantly meets in Bella Coola at the present day. For example, in 1921 a government official working in the valley, purchased a representation of a merganser which had been used in a ceremonial.[1] Although this should have been destroyed after use, no difficulty would have been raised if the transaction had remained a secret. Unfortunately, the buyer allowed the object to be seen by several Bella Coola and by some Carriers. This caused indignation throughout the community and news of it reached the Bella Bella, who concluded that the vendor would suffer disaster for allowing a secret object to be seen by the despised Indians of the interior. Within a year, his wife died. The Bella Bella believed that his sin had brought its own punishment, but the Bella Coola, who knew the details of the sale and did not consider the exposure of the article to have been the fault of the seller, attributed it to the power of the thoughts of the Bella Bella. They all expected that he would be punished; therefore he was punished; the expectation was sufficient to effect its own fulfilment. This incident was too fresh in the minds of several men to allow them to sell ceremonial objects to the writer.

The most common form taken by this conviction is with regard to death; if it is believed that a man will die, he is almost certain to do so. In June, 1921, a woman died in Bella Coola and her father claimed that she had been murdered by a certain man either with material poison or by magical means. He took no direct steps in revenge but stated emphatically that the man whom he suspected would die within a year. The threatened man knew of this, and more than once said that he

[1] The article, now in the National Museum of Canada, consists of a cloth and wood representation of a merganser duck such as was used by Raskin in the beginning of Gass.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754 would probably fall a victim. He became ill in May, 1923,
761 and, though treated by a white doctor, grew steadily worse
789 until he died in the latter part of June, three weeks after the 828 year had elapsed. All the Bella Coola firmly believe that this [622] was due to the power of thought. The father of the woman was a powerful chief whose thoughts were accordingly potent, and some consider that his concentrated desires and expectations were enough to kill the accused, while others believe that his expressed statements convinced others of the result, and that it was their combined thought that caused the death. It usually requires the thoughts of more than one individual to lead to this effect. The doctor who attended this man stated that his patient had shown symptoms of melancholy and resignation during his last sickness; it seems clear that the expectation of death must have lessened his chance of recovery.

771 A prominent theme in Bella Coola folk-lore is the belief
754 that a person cannot long survive who has made himself un-
828 popular. It is sometimes stated that a magical means was [538] employed to remove him, and this was no doubt often the case; a person who learns that a "medicine" had been employed to kill him is in no fit mental condition to counteract the power of suggestion, particularly if he knows that others are aware of what has been done. His death is regarded as proof of the efficacy of the means employed and the belief of others grows stronger. As already stated, this conviction still survives. When this ethnological investigation was being conducted, a
[648] point under discussion was whether or not the Kimsquit people should be allowed to live in Bella Coola. One chief took the lead in objecting and everyone expected that, having thus roused the ire of would-be immigrants, he would die. He did so soon afterwards, and it is universally believed that it was caused by the concentration of the hostile thoughts of the Kimsquit. Similarly, the potency of taboos is increased by the fact that since [784] time immemorial the thoughts of everyone have been opposed to any infraction. Consequently, an offender is liable to punishment both for breaking an injunction and because he

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Preventive and Curative Medicines

MEDICINES OF INFANCY AND CHILDHOOD

789 To Counteract Dangers Incurred During Pregnancy (two means)

774 (1) As already described (I, p. 96), there is always danger of 843 a person losing his spirit through a sudden start, causing invol-825 untary contraction of the muscles, but pregnant women are especially liable to peril of this kind. Moreover, the unexpected appearance of a toad, rat, or mouse, though insufficient to harm an expectant mother, may suffice to startle the unborn child, or even to destroy his spirit. A woman carefully remembers all experiences of this kind and treats the injury while her infant is crying immediately after birth. If a toad has caused it, she catches one, decorates it with dyed cedar-bark, and places it on the child's stomach, then guides it so that it jumps up the chest to the neck. This is repeated four times. She then sets it down, unharmed on the ground, saying:

"You are the cause of the trouble, please go."

The same rite is carried out for all small mammals, reptiles, and even with birds which have startled a mother by their peculiar behaviour. In some families it is customary to post-[846] pone the application of this medicine until four days after birth. There is considerable difference of opinion concerning the specific injury; some allege that the spirit of the creature enters the body and, if not counteracted, causes the child to be born sick and feeble.

843 (2) During his wife's pregnancy, a husband must preserve 825 a small portion of the skin of every animal killed. Four days 789 after birth, as the infant lies in its cradle, a small fire is built [846] beneath and the pieces thrown thereon so that the child is steeped in the smoke. If this is neglected, the boy or girl will [961] die during infancy, though the means by which the slain ani-
[774] mals accomplish this is not fully understood. Possibly, as in the last instance, their spirits have entered the body. Some hunters preserve an eye from every carcass instead of a piece of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 843 825

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 789 [761]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die. 755 [761]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [784] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

861 827 865 [761]

If the father dies, she beats her son or daughter, adding: "Cry now. See what you did."

Henceforth the child restrains himself, but usually drastic steps are taken to reform an infant before his weeping causes any such misfortune. The parents of a petulant child request aid from a man of even temperament to cure him. The person undertaking the task prepares a large basket, watches until he notices the youngster crying and displaying bad temper, then seizes the offender, thrusts him into the basket and hangs it in the doorway, free to move with every stir of the child shut within.

"Cry as much as you like now," he says. "If you become hoarse like a heron you will turn into one of those birds."

This threat is based on an ancient story describing how a child to whom this was done changed into a heron and flapped away in bird form. Sometimes the man says that the same will happen to the child, or simply that he will be able to fly like a heron. All day he is left suspended, no one heeding his sobbing and howling, but in the evening he is taken down, petted, and told not to be naughty again. This medicine always cures a petulant child who can thenceforth be held to ridicule by being reminded that he is "A Basket Boy." The same remedy is often employed for a quarrelsome brother and sister who are shut up together.

865 861

To Cure Disobedience and Rudeness

If a child is persistently rude and disobedient to his parents, they request the assistance of a man of even temperament to cure him. The person selected must be one who is never angry, and who attends to his own business in a placid, quiet manner. The mother and father discuss who is best fitted by character to help their erring child and then ask his aid, promising a suitable recompense. If the man accepts the task, he waits till he notices the child crying peevishly. Running to him, he holds the youngster firmly and, in spite of this strug-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 throw it in through the smoke-vent. He cuts the roots into thin slices which are boiled in water for four days. The patient drinks several cupfuls of the decoction which never fail to benefit him.

[776] [773] The basis of this medicine is the belief, already described, that when a nsiatl swims through a pond it frequently sheds some of its scales which become water-lilies. They are, therefore, potent in themselves and are of greatest benefit to one who has practised ceremonial chastity. The patient must observe several taboos for forty days after treatment: He must hold no sexual intercourse; must eat neither salmon nor meat that has not been smoked; must eat nothing cooked either by a menstruating woman or by one who has lost her husband within a year; and must not approach a girl during the year following puberty. The breaking of one of these taboos causes [761] his death, and the man who has administered the medicine watches the conduct of his patient with great care.

755 For Debility (two means)

(1) Drink strong, stale urine, mixed with red rock-paint ground fine.

[424] Knowledge of this medicine has been handed down for generations in certain familes. It is said to be most unpleasant to take.

(2) The following medicine, said to be the most potent known to the Bella Coola, is used for a person who has long been feeble, especially if he has been spitting blood. It is the [424] property of several ancestral families, and must be administered by an elderly male member of one of them.

The owner of the remedy obtains a dry, clean skull, places within it a little water which he brings to a boil with hot pebbles and adds a small quantity of mountain goat marrow. The patient is given a dry stick, about three feet in length, from which the pith has been extracted to make a tube. With this he sucks four times, swallowing a little of the decoction, while the practitioner says to the skull:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

"Please remedy the invalid." 755

This is virtually a prayer, addressed to the deceased owner of the skull, and accordingly verges on appeal to the dead. None the less, there is no concept of active supplication to any individual ghost, but rather of acquiring aid by the use of a supernatural object.

For one year after this treatment, sexual intercourse is forbidden to both practitioner and patient. The latter, though not the former, dies if either fails to observe this taboo. The use of an old man to apply the medicine is to lessen danger from this source. The owner of this remedy is always liberally rewarded and some old men carefully preserve a skull under a rock-ledge in order to be ready if called upon. [785] [761]

For Smallpox

Pick up a toad, and tear off its head with the teeth, swallowing some of the blood. 757

This is an ancient remedy for some other ailment which was tried as a last resort during the smallpox epidemic. One man who succeeded in practising it on four successive days was cured of the dread disease.

For Consumption

Boil leaves and stems of a certain fleshy plant (not identified) in water and drink the decoction. The potency of the medicine increases accordingly to the number of plants used.

This medicine was a Nootka Indian's hereditary cure for a cough which was found to be effective for consumption as well. The malady was so prevalent on the coast in the last century that it seemed as if the inhabitants were doomed; this remedy was allegedly discovered at that time and knowledge of it spread rapidly from tribe to tribe, saving the lives of hundreds. The Bella Coola recognize that this was a private medicine, but have ceased to regard it as such and have no hesitation in applying it whenever required. [177] [164]

755 For Insanity

177 The Bella Coola have no medicine for this disease, although they are familiar with one used by the Kwakiutl, which was applied not long ago to a Rivers Inlet youth by two old women, one from Newitty and the other from Dzelkanus. They exhumed a recently buried corpse, took a small piece of skin from the left side of the base of the neck, left this for twenty-four hours in a small stream, and then allowed it to stamp for another twenty-four hours in a cup filled with water. This liquid was drunk by the patient who immediately recovered his sanity. He was first given water in which had been boiled candles from the yellow cedar; this strengthened him and prevented a relapse. The patient, now cured, observed continence for a year; failure to obey this injunction would have caused his death.

[185] [761] The Bella Coola assume that this remedy is the property of Kwakiutl ancestral families who alone are entitled to use it. The practitioners are always suitably recompensed and do not undertake the treatment except at the request of one of the patient's relatives. Kwakiutl experts have been brought to Bella Coola several times within recent years to cure cases of insanity, but great secrecy is maintained concerning the methods employed. They are considered to be effective, in proof of which the aversion of the writer was directed to two aged men who were said to have been raving lunatics before undergoing a Kwakiutl treatment. It is probable that the individuals had been subject to periodic fits of insanity and that a temporary improvement was regarded as a definite cure.

757 For Venereal Disease (four cures)

(1) Boil scrapings of false hellebore roots in water for a long time and drink the decoction. If it is too strong, add more water.

(2) Pound cha'tsuls, a kind of fungus, in water and drink the brew.

[illegible]

"Someone is calling your name." [illegible]

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: [illegible]

"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle like the [illegible] rule straight across the palm is indicative that he is a good carpenter. [illegible]

If a woman nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole hamlet is thrown very immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of this is responsible for wearing down the teeth. [illegible] [illegible]

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the only men who dare to handle them are shamans. [illegible] [illegible]

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be present should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's head, spit on it, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] is not the only custom practised in the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. [illegible], p. [illegible]

[illegible] 572*
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible] 572*
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible] 572*
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that the Conchal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed and songs are sung describing what he saw shift, and the dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated alone are, particularly, moved at his return, and participate with actual feelings the time when they are may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his resurrection to life. They know the victim, under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the aid given him by his power is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the Indians are eager to make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which Indians are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a Jaxtal to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the performance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is equally well known that his specific power has been brought to this earth and is located in one particular spot. Its ancestor must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his Jaxtal came, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural parentage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safekeeping in a repository, mukkiqaiu (also called mant'ghal), by the supernatural woman Jaxt'Ilmakuin. Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a Jaxtal initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every Jaxtal prerogative has its repository and in each of them is Jaxt'Ilmakuin; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred Jaxtal prerogatives. The

[illegible] Wrath E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[illegible] of the last century it has become customary to explain the disappearance of a mask as due to a sudden call to the beaver.

Another means by which the hakaciut protect themselves from doubting non-members is by the use of spies. The marshals ([illegible] p. 18) of the society select some intelligent youth and, with the consent of his father, or other guardian, to make him a spy. If this is granted, the youth is lured into the woods and carried forcibly to the sacred meeting-place, where he finds the entire hakaciut of his village seated, an awe-inspiring band. They explain to him the dances used, show him the whistles and other apparatus, and instruct him that it is his duty to inform them if he hears any uninitiated person casting doubts on the power of the society. Proud of his trust, and fearful of what would happen should he fail to carry out his duties, the spy begins his work. Ignorant of his knowledge, the uninitiated have no hesitation in talking with him and if he hears one of them expressing doubts as to the powers of the society, or telling that he has seen the sacred meeting-place or some of the regalia, he at once notifies one of the marshals. The over-confident person is then initiated. Thus the hakaciut are constantly recruiting their strength from the most intelligent uninitiated, thereby adding to the influence of their society and lessening the dangers from non-members.

Sometimes a man is forced to undertake the task on account of a great knowledge of hakaciut matters. The following incident, related by a spy, is worth recording as a concrete example of this point:

Between 1870 and 1880, a Rivers Inlet Cannibal performed the Cannibal dance in Bella Coola, presumably being entitled to do so by a Bella Coola name and prerogative. During his period of seclusion he died from a sudden hemorrhage, and the uninitiated were told that he had been carried away to the mysterious regions of the sky, the customary explanation in such circumstances. Some afterwards came Bella Coola returned from Victoria, and an old woman told them the news, ignorant of the fact that an uninitiated lad of fifteen had entered the house and was listening eagerly. A random movement betrayed his presence to the initiated hakaciut and the boy fled, terrified at the turn of events.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*595 Ax̄'ikwulaix. They may be termed marshals of the society. Each must have an ancestral prerogative for this, duly validated by presents to the ḥaḥaciut, in addition to a ḥaciut prerogative of some kind. In each village there are four or five of these men. Whenever food is being served at a ḥaciut dance, the marshals receive theirs first and then one or other of them addresses the audience in slow and impressive style, beating on the floor with a stick to add emphasis to his words. He admonishes his fellows to safeguard the ancient rites of the society, to be bold, to be secretive, and he pays honour to the member who has given the dance. It is they who take the leading part if a youth is dragged away to the meeting-place for initiation, and it is they who arrange matters when a spy reports that a non-member is over-inquisitive. If any member of the society should break one of its laws at a time when no uninitiated are present, the marshal is expected to seize a burning stick from the fire and strike the offender with it. If death should result, revenge is unthinkable, since the criminal had broken the law. The same fate is unhesitatingly meted out to any ḥaciut who should dare to betray any of the mysteries to the uninitiated. Moreover, it is the marshals who decide whether any improper act lowers the dignity of a dance, and punish accordingly. Not many years ago a ḥaciut woman gave birth to a child while a dance was taking place and the infant was slain by one of the marshals. The usual explanation made to the uninitiated for a death within the dance-house is that a supernatural being wound the roof to fall and kill the victim.

*595 Each marshal has, in connection with his prerogative of this vocation, a professional name, used only within the house where a ḥaciut dance is taking place and carefully concealed from the uninitiated. Some designations were obtained from ḥaḥaciut by an ancestor of the possessor, others were created on this earth with reference to some specific event, and duly made valid by presents to the ḥaḥaciut alone. Some of these names are:

Xwalakwis, "The Destroyer," so given on account of an

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*575
611

Frequently the marshals and associated kukwiat depute others to act as their executioners. Sometimes a shaman who is also a kwiat is asked to slay the offender, or a kwiat in whose ancestral family a knowledge of means for secret murder has been handed down for generations may be called upon. The executioner is told that if he fails he will himself be killed. Although no Bella Coola would admit that a person so charged had committed murder by other than magical means, it appears highly probable that such was the case. It is believed that long ago the kukwiat were able to kill an offending uninitiated person by drawing forth his spirit, wrapping it in hundred cedar-bark and casting it into the fire. The victim would die within a short time.

[761]
[762]

*575
203
628

The desire to carry out kwiat ceremonials with proper dignity and ritual not only acts as a strong bond of union among members of the society in a single village, but between those in different towns and even in different tribes. When a marshal has struck a kwiat, the ceremony, wherever it may be, is at once stopped. Two kukwiat are sent off to bear the tidings to the nearest village up the valley, and two more to the one below. The messengers go beneath the house in which a dance is taking place and knock on the floor of the back-room. Someone presently hears them and a kwiat goes out to investigate. When the envoys have told their tale he returns, whispers to the singers, and the ceremony concludes for that night. As soon as the uninitiated, if any are present, have been ejected, the messengers enter with blankets almost covering their faces and seat themselves between the fire and the back-room where the senior members crowd around to listen. From this village two more kukwiat are despatched with the news which is thus transmitted with remarkable speed from end to end of the valley. When next the marshals are admonishing the kukwiat of their respective villages, they do not fail to draw attention to the way in which the law has been upheld. Conversely, if a marshal hears indirectly that there has been a flaw in the ritual of a neighbouring village,

J. McGrath E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

who have gone adrift and never returned,* and of course increasing the fear of the uninitiated. They then go back to X's home where a marshal speaks, asking all to keep silence so that they will be able to hear X when he returns from the land above. No noise is permitted during his absence, even the discharge of muskets being forbidden. The man who carries the rope from which X escaped always receives a call on this night, because the supernatural beings have seen the important part he has played in the rite, and his person recognizes it in this way. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated and, accordingly, the rope-holder is some doctor who wishes to have a call. After the usual curing,* one song is composed for the rope-holder, and sung very softly, since the night's ceremony is termed Mahpowmay, "The Accordion Night," or Nuxwtmat, "The Silent Night." The uninitiated believe that the hahaetsa are filled with woe and foreboding at the fate before X. It is early morning before they dispersa.

The next day, nastalitsap for the rope-holder, the usual ritual is omitted since the presence of grief and fear must still be preserved. Thus the ceremony usual for the rope-holder's snake is not already. The collar and rope from which X escaped are hung on the wall of his house, and when a herald announces the hahaetsa during the evening, he bids them assemble to watch over these objects. Although a second song, composed during the day, is practised for the rope-holder, it is done so softly that the uninitiated from neighbouring houses imagine that the hahaetsa are really brooding over their loss. The only sound that reaches them is an occasional hoip, accompanying their fear. After the customary distribution of work and food the hahaetsa dispersa.

On the morrow, the rope-holder's guilm, the uninitiated are summoned, because it is assumed that members of the

*If a Comshut dies during his period of consciousness he is buried secretly. The uninitiated are told that his power enabled him to cross a crossing chasm to the land above, but that it failed him, so that he was unable to return to his friends.

*The contents of the Comshut hunting of whales, repeated four times.

2:McDowell: R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NER Bellacoola NES

575*
796*
787
593
575*
796*
787
593
772

telling them of his adventures, and presently they begin to sing the song, as if they had just learnt the chorus from X. Frequently the deception is increased by X first learning the song and repeating it to the singers in a voice sufficiently loud for the uninitiated to hear. The chorus of this, and every other song used for Cannibals, is of the land above and the dangers which X has survived. The singers add new facts and interjections to vary the monotony, but the subjects usually described are:

The flat land above with its many trails and the river that flows through it.

The gale constantly raging there which has blown the hair from X's head and the dirt from his body.

The cold across a yawning chasm over which his supernatural strength enabled him to leap. If a Cannibal dies when in consciousness, the bakwise bury the corpse secretly and tell the uninitiated that his power failed him on the other side of the chasm so that he was unable to return.

Ayaxtlas under his various names.

How his power helped him to escape the Atlum, "Tree of the Huge Jaws," evil beings who tried to kill X by sucking him into their gaping mouths.

The side-fires which are found on the edge of the flat land above.

The kindly being Gonnakhlilas, who gave him the necessary power to traverse the chasm. The uninitiated believe that unless a Cannibal meets this being he will be unable to return.

No one song for any Cannibal contains reference to all these beings and events, but it is on these that the singers draw for their themes, always altering and adding to produce a fine effect.

On this occasion X does not dance,* and the uninitiated are soon satisfied. As the bakwise are acting, one member chat another presses X for what he has done, and gives the most solemn warnings to all as to the necessity of complying

575*
796*
787

*There is difference of opinion on this point.

[illegible] R-1 ([illegible]) 1968
NES Belacoola NE5

(a) Recorded as song 910 (D 17), National Museum of Canada quartet, Reuben Robertson, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and summoner, sung by Tal'ia Charlie and Jonathan Frank. 533*

(b) In essence of Tsqalica's ancestors had been drowned; this is considered such a loss as to be an inheritable tendency and received accordingly. This song was composed by a mythical patrick held after the drowning of one of his sons. [761] [827] [195]

(c) Ilem means, literally, the successive rising of the sun from day to day; in his duration, the significance of. The span of life is shortening.

(d) This will explain the usual wordless chorus.

(e) Sacum. This is one of his uncle and chief's names.

(f) The reference is to an incident visited about Sacum in the beginning of time. He made, and gave life to a man who was the chief pot and slight. Alqantum wondered what the creature might be and sent down one of is eagle-like supernatural birds to spear him. Sacum, ignorant of the cause, knew nor's loss and with no idea that he was being carefully guarded, was shortly discovered. The myth is recorded in vol. 1, p. 41. [773]

Secular Songs

In contrast to the carefully prepared and logically worded 533* mourning songs, many of those used by shamanists extremely 756 tendentious. This is natural in view of the belief, already described, that the words and tune are given to sick person at the time that he is cured. Those who recover from an illness [759] are convinced that they must have received supernatural instruction, and so soon begin to ponder on the song brought to them at that time. A person of imaginative temperament easily persuades himself that the words which begin to form in his mind were actually brought by an agent and, having thus deluded himself, it is easy for him to convince others. The coherence of the song then depends upon the fidity of the patient, a factor which explains the extreme lack of skill in many compositions. The examples here given are, perhaps, unusually complete.

Song Tsal'ia Wuxwuxsalmi(a), a Kwagut Shaq(b)

I [illegible]	[illegible]
In the beginning(c)	the life-giving power(d) was made,
you that squatted	[illegible]
that is what we have given	within them(e).

[illegible]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

nemas, nemtin, nemsim: Member of same sex and same exogamic family as speaker. [601]

Nemkilem: Supernatural being who comes with Nankynem to bring a call to the latter's protégé. [614]

Nemkilemut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

nemit: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract. [826]
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.

nemnemkin: Toilet-hole.

nemlutmen: Recompense, virtually pay, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a mourning ceremony. [465] nemnlimmen: Exchange marriage. [589] nempalitmen: Passenger.

Ne-nei: Place near Nulkus.

Nemnemkin: Kwakiutl name created by cayayayat at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

nemmat di mimen: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker. [601] nemmat ni mimen: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.

Nemnemlas, "The Inhospitable One": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Nemnlemenk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemnlipnem: Supernatural being who created supernatural in the beginning of time.

Nemlemenk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemlipnem: Name occupied by the first settlers at Hainsmuk in the beginning of time.

nemo'l'emut: The use of potent medicines after seeing a ghost twice.

nemlmentmen or nemlmentmut: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dyed cedar-bark to Pinnipedia. [712]
2—The making of offerings to ghosts by the casting of food on a fire. [773]

Nemnu-ah: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemnulelkulem: Male supernatural being who travels with Nankynem, takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes denies happily.

Nemnulu: Mother House.

nemqa: Fishermen with inherited right to use of a salmon weir or of a place for catching shellfish. [424] nemqamenk, "A Calling Back", or "A Seizing": Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural artisans having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation. [334] [761]

Nemqlemit, "Where Water Emerged": House of one of the four groups of settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Nemqmelelelem: Kwakiutl name of a Bella Coola man.

Nemqmelelelqem: Professional name of a female dancer.

Nemqulemem: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Cayayayat.

Nemselkmut: Kwakiutl name of a Bella Coola man.

Nemsemenk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemsemenlik: Kwakiutl hunter mentioned in an origin story.

Nemslimmem, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the River": Supernatural name of sockeye salmon. [825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

Saiaiá: Thunder, anthropomorphized. [192]
Saiyuna: Kwakiutl name of a Kitamaat man. [121] saklás: Historical account; the term does not include secondary myths or other personal property. [173] sa-ñáimum: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a feast dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431] 2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sa-ñum: Consolidate; tamber. [25] sa-ñúmum: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sáhlhalaiwat: Profession of feasts conventions. [431] sáhlhamlin: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463] saul: Inclose relatives. [125]
Sawalwatsála Alqanaxw: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sawalwatsála: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of searching in the land above.
Sawalkin or Sawalkinaxw: One of the names of Mount Nadgále as chief.
Sawanaxwa, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Haus man.
3—A subdivision Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sáwa; sawáta, sáwá; sawáta plural, sáwawa: Sawáta, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sa-ska: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sáskia: Village on point between North and South Bentinck Arm.
Sáskiamuta: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sa-Sau: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] sáskin: Whatever, anyhow.
Sa-sal: 1—Kimsquit River. [412]
2—Village near the mouth of the river.
Sa-sáwaw: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley. [101] sasíwalin: Bath.
Sa-Sausaxa: Shaman's name acquired from Death. saw: Pillow.
sawalan, "Pillowed": Secret ceremonial at which an oil is present.
saxl, saxalas, saxlum: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Saxlum: Proper name of a younger brother mentioned in an orphan story.
sáskum: Brother.
sásamum: Tide flats.
sáskiala: Shore.
Sáskalaiwa: That part of Sawq" which did not fall to the earth at the beginning of time.
Sawalali: Village on Kitlope Inlet.
Sawalaiwa: Part of a peculiar ceremony.
sawqualáiwa, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steel-head salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'wata, "Hunting Place": Limits of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [105] sawlanáiwa: Leader of ceremonies. [121]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEH Bellacoola NEH

[illegible]: Spring figure.
[illegible]: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[illegible]: Mythic hero-like creature which can be raised as a salmon-[illegible].
[illegible]: 1—Supernatural herring women, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carver murderer living in the last century.
[illegible]: Rock around sand in factor initiation rites.
[illegible]: Rivers'ian for salmon.
[illegible]: Exile.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
[illegible], "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Disappointer's women, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[illegible]: Ancestral name assumed on earth by a Raven's man.
[illegible], "When Marriage Spoon": Third name after the winter solstice.
[illegible]: One of the river sculpins, the mythical sea fish.
[illegible], "The Coming of [illegible]": Fourth name after the summer solstice.
[illegible]: Sarcastic, the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[illegible], "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second name after the summer solstice.
[illegible], "The Time for Eating Coho Salmon": Third name after the summer solstice.
[illegible]: Powers, given unconventionally, at the time when a proposal of marriage is formulated.
[illegible], "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as desired for children by the ceremony of their mother from their father.
[illegible], "Sea Dance": Name of the winter solstice.
[illegible], "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Name of the summer solstice.
[illegible], "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the River": First name after the summer solstice.
[illegible], "Our who Cured": Functionary who protects sentinel or factor and sound [illegible].
[illegible]: Evil supernatural being who sets up consciousness for his followers in the land above.
[illegible], "Time for Shifting Salmon Weir": Fourth name after the winter solstice.
[illegible]: Factor name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: Assumed name of a Raven man.
[illegible]: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
[illegible]: Celebrated sorcerer.
[illegible]: Salmon-dish.
[illegible]: Avoid head-dress.
[illegible]: Breath, or power of being alive, or element in the human body.
[illegible]: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
[illegible]: Man led secret to a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[illegible], "Time for the Use of Clacker Dance Pole": Fifth name after the winter solstice.
[illegible], "Place to Spake": Dancer near mouth of the Kwatna River, accepted to give warning in times of danger.
[illegible]: Benign supernatural being who rescues Cuscilula to return from the land above.

[182]
[125]

[101]

[125]
[125]

[125]
[125]
[125]
[125]

[125]

[125]

4:Boas E-5 (1884-ca. 1890)292
NEA Bellacoola NEA

what cause this Everyone is due. Mythology and religion are so closely connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Sun, the sun-god (compare ang. sun). The eyes of the sun are his symbolism. What general is to be called Tsal'ex. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the following formulae: Alkum ulu'ang, Tsal'ex, 'Look on us where we are sparing, Tsal'ex,' and Tsal'ex, ulu'ulumaxlilq, 'Take care of us, Tsal'ex.' He is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with the actions and thoughts of men. These are given by Skamsamlilq according to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the Creation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Skamsamlilq, Tsal'ex'ex, Skelqa'qa'ex, and Ta'ula'ex. The sun wished to create the sun, but he was unable to change it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They assisted in the sky, and here the certain, which up to that time had been separated between heaven and earth, killing the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The sun attempted to heaven through the rift made by Skamsamlilq, and found there a beautiful place known to which all the birds lived. Skamsamlilq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his cry. The sun was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better sun. He live in the house of a great chief, who kept the conjuring (no-conjuring of, conjuring [illegible] in dancing). The conjuring was a small round receptacle (hand of wood) like an egg. The chief provided in patients and kept it in a partition from one of the rafters of his house. The sun knew that he could not shine in by close form, and resolved to a sun. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and he himself drop into the pool from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pool, swallowed the leaf and then became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the sun-to-[illegible]. The old chief loved the boy dearly and allowed him to play with the conjuring. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a sun.

When the sun had thus been obtained Skamsamlilq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Skelqa'qa'ex and Ta'ula'ex said: [illegible] Finally, Tsal'ex'ex carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country and thus became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Skamsamlilq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch animals, to build houses. He made them ceremonies, that man should have order in dress, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by men.

The Bilqula believe that Skamsamlilq and his brothers still continue to give new ideas to men. They say that they are designs of painting or carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Skamsamlilq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

The soul is believed to dwell in the eyes. It is similar in shape to a bird [illegible] to an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies away the person must die. Diseases are also to be ascribed to souls.

[76] having charge of the birth of all animal beings. While she is rocking the [342] cradle, she sings, —

[69]

"[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]"

Another deity living in the House of Myths is the mother of flowers, called Sneel'mqs (Plate X, Figs. 7 and 9), the daughter of Sxekpel'mlm. It seems that this last name means "going to the right." This evidently refers to the fact that the sun is believed to move on his path towards the west, [342] face forward, and consequently during the spring months towards the sky moving towards the right; so that Sxekpel'mlm, moving to the right, means at the same time the springtime, when the sun is moving up the sky. This is the time when flowers begin to sprout. Every spring Sneel'mqs gives birth to all the plants in the order in which they begin to appear. A shaman is called to her aid by two old women who assist her (Plate X, Figs. 8 and 11).

Every year, at the time of the winter solstice, the deities determine who shall die during the coming year. Two beings called Kekemal'ts, the tsnel'mem are placed on the ends of a long plank, which is supported at its [761] center, and swings like a seesaw. Then all the men and all the animals are called to stand near the ends of the plank. When one of the swinging beings falls down from the plank, the person standing near it will die sooner than the one standing at the opposite end. The deities have a messenger called Sneetkel'ulks (that means "long ear"), who carries all the news from our earth up to the House of Myths. Ack'uml'ts has two children, — the deer, who is called Sneel'kcoxlm Ack'uml'ts, that is, "the deities son of Ack'uml'ts" (Plate VII, Fig. 6), and cinnamon Ack'uml'ts. I have not been able to learn any thing in regard to the functions of these two beings.

While Sneel and Ack'uml'ts are principally concerned with the fate of mankind, they do not personally interfere with the doings of men. Their daughters are carried out by four brothers, who are called collectively Sla-[772] [illegible] in Cook's language (Plate VIII, Figs. 1-4). These brothers are Sla-qal'lmulk ("the one who finishes his work by chopping wood"), Tsel'-tlmek ("the one who finishes his work by rubbing wood"), Sla-lqal'xcmlk ("the one who finishes his work by cutting wood"), and S-ka'lak. They have a house called c-Ulqamlks. There four brothers live in an elevated room in the rear of the House of Myths. They are engaged in carving and painting. It is said that they gave man his arts. They taught him to build canoes, to make boxes, to build houses, and to carve in wood and to

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

that the animal had not spoken, a sure intimation of insanity and death unless it is killed immediately. 996* 787 825

A few years ago a dog gave warning to its master by placing its paws on his shoulders as he sat on the ground, and howling over his head. Such unusual behaviour should have convinced him of the necessity of killing his pet to avert some calamity, but he paid no attention to it. A few days later, it seemed to him that he saw the face of a friend appear at an uncurtained upper window where no human being could be. The next morning he found an axe, which he had long lost and supposed stolen, imbedded far up in a tree near his house. These three incidents all presaged disaster, and a few days later he shot and killed himself when crazed by drink. [962]

The actions of wild animals are considered even more important. Not many years ago a famous Kitsequit hunter saw a bear and attempted to shoot it. He raised his musket and took careful aim, but was prevented from pulling the trigger. This should have warned him of the potency of the animal, and of the wisdom of avoiding the spot in future. The bear moved away without molesting him, but exactly one year later he was killed by a mountain goat at precisely the same place. No one knows which supernatural being had chosen to assume two forms in that locality.

The Bella Coola believe that animals, being supernatural, have powers and abilities which they conceal from the white man. Wolves do not kill their prey with their fangs, but with bird arrows which shamans alone can see; beaver do not cut with their teeth, but with crook-handled adzes. Even more striking is the virility of yearling mountain goats. An old Bella Coola described how he and another man were once hunting goats. His partner killed a fat yearling, which they laid on its back and skinned. The killer was about to dismember it, when the animal began to kick. First it shook one hind leg, then the other, then in succession each fore-leg, and lastly its head. Then the goat stood up and gave itself a shake, which caused the skin to return to its proper position, 996* 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

thrown on it. One rather philosophic old man suggested that in this way the soul could easily return to Nacmit-a. It is possible that this means of disposal was carried out in former times, but no informant had actually seen it practised. The Bella Coola state that cremation is carried out by the Kitlobe* and the Carriers. On the morning after a burning, young men of the former tribe rush to the spot and smear their faces with the semi-charred bones, amid much shouting. The Carriers are said to stand with their bodies inclined over the burning corpse and to smear on their faces any grease exuded from it. The accuracy of these statements is very doubtful, and can have no bearing on the reputed practice of cremation among the Bella Coola. 764 829

The bodies of rich or poor, chiefs, commoners, or slaves, all are buried in a similar manner though with differences in the complexity of ritual. Nor is any different method practised for criminals, murdered people, or those committing suicide. It is believed that in case of self-destruction the body cannot separate into its elements and reach Nacmit-a; that part which becomes the ghost is able to go to the land below, but neither spirit nor life can ascend. According to one man, who may, however, have been affected by Christian influence, this is because Alyanim decrees the length of life and any wilful shortening is insulting to him. Suicide is rare among the Bella Coola and four cases only were heard of. One woman killed herself in shame at having accidentally set fire to a village, another because her husband was unduly jealous, and two men through bladder stricture. 766 762 [775]

On the whole, Bella Coola methods for disposal of the dead have altered but little since the coming of the white man. The change from sub-aerial exposure to interment was probably not due to foreign influence although the introduction of metal shovels has facilitated the digging of graves and probably hastened the movement. A change in posture has, however, taken place. In former times, a corpse was always buried 777 764

*Not at present, at least within the memory of elderly people.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

539 to commemorate the killing of the eagle. The text of his song described [424] how he had come to this earth and how he had slain the bird which had [535] been his own cloak. This dance was duly validated by presents of salmon, and has since been carried out by the descendants of Smanaw. It is assumed that the concept of such a dance was given to him by Alquntim before he left Nacmir-a, but he used his own discretion on this earth as to the actual reason for it.

At this gathering of people, virtually a potlatch, Smanaw took for himself the name Awaqilaia, "What Fills People." He chose this name with reference to the countless salmon caught in his weir.

Smanaw next travelled to Bella Bella seeking a wife. His fame and wealth were so well known that he was able to wed Tlitlawait, the daughter of a powerful chief. She had the valued prerogative of wailing, a right which had been duly validated by presents. Her father told her that when she was going with Smanaw to Kimsquit she would pass Yayalmgi, a man who had been turned to stone on the skyline above the western side of Dean Channel, about five miles from its head, and that unless she wailed as she passed him her children would be unable to enjoy this prerogative. The reason for this injunction is not now understood; it is merely recognized that as Yayalmgi became petrified near Smanaw's home he became, in some manner, a crest. As the canoe bearing Tlitlawait passed Yayalmgi she began to wail and weep, nor could her husband soothe her. He, for his part, told the herald, Nacilliag, who had come with him from above, to call out as follows:

"Hello! Crest, our chief has married a Bella Bella woman; as you are his crest, so are you here."

[484] When Nacilliag had called this a second time the stone man answered.
[763] Ever since, passers-by have addressed Yayalmgi, and a failure on his part to reply is considered an omen of death.

Tlitlawait brought her husband several valuable prerogatives, a nanak dance with the large cone-shaped whistles, several kaelar dance rights, as well as some dyed cedar-bark. According to one of Smanaw's descendants, this is how the nanak ritual reached Kimsquit. Among the Bella Bella, whales can only be eaten by chiefs, and Smanaw received this right from his father-in-law. The latter also gave his son-in-law a dead whale, which was towed behind the canoe towards Kimsquit. Smanaw knew that his people would object to it being brought into the river, since there was a firm belief that a whale would drive away the salmon. Accordingly, he beached the carcass in the fiord and there dried the meat in smoke.

Smanaw now determined to give an elaborate potlatch at which he planned to portray his prerogative with regard to the whale. He decided to build his new house of the semi-subterranean type; when it was finished

McDerath K-5 (1922-1924)1968
NEB Bella-coola NEB

CHAPTER VIII

DEATH

Death Rites—Memorial Rites—Fate of the Dead

Death Rites

DEATH is marked by even more complicated and prolonged rites than marriage. Like so many primitive peoples, the Bella Coola not only carry out elaborate rituals soon after the actual decease, but hold lengthy commemorative and mourning ceremonials in later years. As these require the co-operation of a large number of people, the death of an individual affects a wider circle than his own relatives, and the celebrations have, therefore, an important social as well as religious significance. 196 [182]

CAUSES OF DEATH

It is not surprising that the Bella Coola, believing in the omnipresence of the supernatural, should consider various peculiar occurrences to be causes of death. One of the simplest of these is to hear the falling of a tree when there is neither wind nor other reason to account for it. Such a fall is audible only to the person whose it warns of approaching death, either to himself or to one of his relatives. A number of men may be in the forest together, when one of them hears the crash of a tree and notices that his companions are unaware of it; he realizes that this is an omen and protects himself by calling out: 263

"Let this evil recoil against whoever has been plotting evil against me."

The basis of this customs is the belief that someone has been practising black magic against the hearer, who, by this answer, is able to cause the sorcery to recoil upon the malefactor. Even more dangerous than to hear a falling tree, is to have one crash [154] [124] to earth close by. In the winter of [illegible] three Bella Coola were almost crushed in this manner; within a year the deaths took place of the wife of one, the mother of the second, and the daughter of the third. This was considered definite confirmation of their belief.

When a chief dies, a supernatural woman, Nemalk-ik-i, "The Weeper," comes to earth to lament the loss. Crying piteously, she walks to and fro in the woods near the village where the death has taken place, but can be heard or seen only by a person in whose family there will soon be a bereaving. This can be counteracted by going boldly to her and collecting some of the clotted mucus that drips from her nose as she weeps. If this is wrapped in the finder's clothing and stored for a year, it brings him good fortune and probably defeats the impending death, but to see "The Weeper" without knowledge of the proper procedure is to court disaster. A prominent Bella Coola woman died in June, [illegible], and her son believed that he heard the lamentation of the supernatural visitor about six the next morning in the woods behind the missionary's house. He rushed forth to find her, but was unsuccessful. Within a few days, one of his sisters died, as was to be expected.

A comparatively common bird in Bella Coola is the Tsnilmc, which is about the size of a robin and dark, greenish brown.* Its whistle is frequently heard and no significance is attached to it, but it is an omen of death if a Tsnilmc comes close to a house and chirps out, "Ts-i-i." On the night of February [illegible], [illegible], one called beneath the window of a man who was about to start on a journey in his motor-boat. Next morning, although the bird lay dead beside his house, he insisted on starting. He camped at Resurrection Bay where he was awakened by a voice calling his name, but could see no one. This was probably an owl, a bird which often foretells disaster by calling the name of the person to whom it will occur. Even this did not deter him and within twenty-four hours his heart caught fire, his goods were destroyed, and he, himself, barely escaped. The Bulu Cools regard coincidences of this kind as confirmation of their beliefs.

* The bird could not be identified, although it belongs to fact, an [illegible].

As to the last instance, death does not always follow the hearing or seeing of an omen; it may simply presage some calamity. It is dangerous for a person to be addressed by a dog, although it is well known that dogs understand human speech and can talk if they desire. At the time of the writer's visit, it was a matter of general knowledge that a dog had spoken to a middle-aged Bulu Cools woman a few years earlier. The animal was shot immediately, and the woman never revealed what it had said, but in spite of these precautions she became insane and has never fully recovered.

The same man, Fiyoubengi, near Kimaguli, who figures so prominently in Bulu Cools mythology, is another death omen. In early times, all who passed his station used to call out to him, and it was thought that those whom he failed to answer would die within a year. In that case, the voice was welcome, but the speech of an owl is still regarded with dread. If one of these birds utters the name of a dead person, the individual hearing it will soon die.

Besides these well-recognized omens, the Bulu Cools believe that any peculiar visitation or hallucination is a probable precursor of disaster. In many cases these fears are unjustified, but there are always sufficient accidents and misfortunes to corroborate their belief. An old Kimaguli man told of the manner in which his son had once come rushing into the house saying that he had seen a strange, black-faced creature. His father feared that it might have been Gedemane.

"Perhaps it was," continued the old man, "for my boy soon died."

Irrespective of the actual cause of death, about which the father is uncertain, he is convinced that he knew of its coming by his son's omen-apparition.

to kill an enemy, but his success is accredited to his supernatural possessions which have given him skill as a warrior rather than to his own ability.

It is felt that no ordinary explanation is sufficient to account for the death of a great chief. No matter what may have been the actual cause, it is always said that the supernatural Carpenters, who in the beginning of time created mankind, came down and "seized" or "killed back" the deceased, thinking him too good for this world. It is believed that these beings are from heaven, and that Alguanim allows them to possess influential people. This sentiment is always expressed in mourning songs for a dead chief, but although accepted as a matter of fact, it is little more than a formulated belief which serves to comfort the mourners. The infraction of a taboo is another reason frequently given for a chief's death. It is said that there was a heat wave and the earth shook before the death of Pedro; he became ill immediately, and his stomach began to swell. The witches chief said that Dang-a had had fallen upon him, but the common belief was that he had erred in some ritual act. In any case, he died within a few hours.

[illegible]

Word of a critical illness spreads rapidly through the village and the house in which the sufferer is lying becomes a rendezvous for friends asking about his condition. Failure to do so would be considered ungracious, with the result that there is such a constant coming and going that one is denied the sick person. Shamans are called upon to practise their powers in a noisy manner, and female relatives weep and wail. The din is indescribable.

When the patient shows no further indication of life, the shamans cease, but the mourners redouble their cries. Relatives, friends, and sympathizers all crowd into the house and begin to weep, often adding verbal lamentations. The progress of the news from house to house can be traced by the wailings. When-

[illegible]
NEA Bellacoola NEA

this rite is neglected no more salmon will come to the river. No 764 precautions are necessary after the food has been digested. [725]

Many men prepare their coffins before death. If this has [769] not been done, a large, wooden box is provided by a kinsman [402] of the deceased. The body is dressed in good clothing and bound into a squatting position, head between knees, hands clasped around shins, and the knuckles just above the level of the soles of the feet. In this posture it is thrust into the coffin.
Particularly if the corpse has been brought from some distance and rigor mortis has set in, it may be necessary to break the back-bone and even to crush the skull before the box can be closed. A comb is placed on the back of the neck, within the [775] coffin, to prevent the ghost from returning to haunt the survivors. A little choice food is placed beside the body of a dearly loved child for nourishment during the journey to the over world.

From this point onwards, the funeral rites differ according 875 to the rank of the deceased. On the death of an influential 766 chief, the senior members of that society meet as soon as possible to arrange the dramatization of the coming of Malido.
A cousin, son, brother, or other near relative is always present even if he has little importance in the affairs of the society. If the death has taken place during the night, the conference is held the following morning and the rites begin at noon. There may be delay until all have gathered, but about the middle of the first possible day two cousins are seen up one of the mountains behind the village. They carry large, cone-shaped whistles which they blow twice. The sound is plainly audible in the village and all, whether or not members of the cousin society, recognize that a supernatural being is drawing near. After a short interval, another whistle is blown by a cousin concealed on the roof of the house in which the corpse is lying, and after another pause the same sound comes from within, beside the body itself. Most of the uninitiated know that this is the voice of Malido (also called Sisiutlpenem), [776]

ning of time. The following speech was made by an elderly Bella Coola chief at the funeral of his great-granddaughter in June, 1900:

"Granddaughter!* Go with your grandmother* to the mountain above Tsimsil where my first [peerless] ancestor came to earth. Go to the mountain across the river where Kelt descended; go to the north where your ancestor found a copper house with a raven inside; go to the Skeena where another of your early ancestors found a whale; go to all the places where your forefathers experienced the incidents recorded in our myths; go and be happy.* I do not wear these ever-recurring deaths in my family, but I am helpless. I hope that Sisiutlaxwa will come hunting us."

Turning to the Carrier Indians who were present, the old man continued: "Thank you for coming twice within two days to share our grief."

Turning back towards the grave, he went on:

"I have made ready the road for you.* Your grandfather* and I are grieved; our families became united when your parents married, and the bond was cemented by your birth. Now it is lost. When you were born, I rejoiced; now I am sorry. You are all right; you cannot fall because you are supported* by the names and fame of your father and mother, your grandfather and grandmother, your uncles and aunts, and your other ancestors who have passed away here to Sunset. You run with them in your own village where is located your power from the experiences of your forefathers.

*The term, above, was used, although the child was really a great-granddaughter of the grandmother that had buried her three previously.

*One of the first people to reach this earth.

*The places and people mentioned were all described in the myths of the dead child's ancestral family.

*A reference to goods distributed by the speaker at a ceremony held a few days previously when it was certain that the child would soon die.

*The child's mother's father.

*Apparently, incidentally, a word having the sense of physical support. The implication is that the deceased relatives are doing to such a deep circle that the presence of their bodies is enough to prevent any one of them, including the dead child, from falling.

accompanied such kindly sentiments towards him that he would be glad to have his friend receive it.

In recent years the number of inconsolable objects has increased enormously with the introduction of metal wreaths, gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully placed near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not remove an open wreath; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undoubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange is a rare event and would cause animosity if carried out by anyone except a near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected over his grave, a common Bulu Bulu custom. This is built immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The surviving relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no other mark for the grave is put up until a memorial pollarch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-parsnips, which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave; they are food belonging to the dead person. The white men has taught the Bulu Cuda how to plant apple-trees and these are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath. The Bulu Bulu are said formerly to have replaced or renewed the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bulu Cuda practice. Indeed, a grave is never occupants of the canoe, heard a roaring noise and saw a fish-eye, similar to those used by the Bella Coola, crossing across Burke Channel, which is about a mile and a half wide at this point. They were close to the beach and a brave man cut a passage through the obstacle. A similar egg was once seen crossing across South Bentinck Arm.

An unusual apparition may be regarded as an omen of death. For example, not many years ago a young half-breed saw a motor-boat moored to the bank of North Bentinck Arm with an eagle moored to the stern. He ran his own motor-boat towards it, but as he approached the eagle became a man. Then as he drew still nearer, never taking his eyes off the other boat, it, with its occupant, sank beneath the water, without leaving as much as a ripple. On relating the incident to his father, the latter recognized it as an omen of death. Six months later the half-breed's sister died, thus confirming her father's prognostication.

Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate

Experiences such as have been cited in the last section are regarded as of possible, and not infrequent occurrence at the present time. On the other hand, supernatural aid granted to those in misfortune, though it is the theme of many stories, is not considered as likely to happen now. The Bella Coola believe the narratives to be chronicles of actual events, and base their conceptions of many supernatural beings on their characteristics as therein described. There is no ceremonial significance attached to any of these stories, they may be, and are told by anyone, frequently for entertainment. Frequently, there is a feeling that the moral brought out in such tales is of value in educating the young people, though this point is never emphasized.

Supernatural aid granted to an unfortunate person is usually substantial. Power or charmed magic is conferred by the recipient, although memory of the experience is "It seems as if you attracted the others like a magnet," said the father to his son.

The latter did not answer immediately, but later he said:

"You were right," and he told him what had happened.

"You have obtained supernatural good luck," the old man replied simply.

Following his son's instructions the father prepared seven and twenty [illegible] to bring back the luck of the Mother of Bodies. They collected every scrap of it, which they powdered very carefully, and said small portions [illegible] to their sons with such success that they became wealthy.

Another supernatural being from whom supernatural good fortune may be obtained is Ohsumb-ma, "The Female Whatever." When a chief dies she comes to wail, wandering through the woods near the village, where sometimes she can be seen in the form of a weeping woman. As she cries, she wipes away from her eyes, which exhibit her a glass-like substance about a foot in length. Anyone who sees her should take the transparent stones, and wrap it in some article of his own clothing; it will bring him good fortune. Hence [illegible] of Jan 11, 1911, the infant daughter of a Bulu Cuale died, and about seven o'clock on the following morning, the wailing was heard in the woods behind the missionary's house. The brother of the dead child's father rushed off as fast as he could the weeping one. Luckily for did not succeed, because he did not know about collecting the stones, and trouble would have come to him had he seen the supernatural being without knowing how to deal with it, in fact, even to have Ohsumb-ma is considered an omen of death.

It will be seen from the foregoing specific instances that supernatural good luck is usually obtained by the sharing of some powerful creature. But, since every living creature is endowed with supernatural power, it follows that any object obtained from a bird or an animal that has acted in a peculiar way may be the cause of supernatural good fortune if it be kept for one year in the manner previously described. Some they have? In this case, for example, a reliable woman asserted that she had heard one, though she had since forgotten them as they had no social significance. Bella Coola shamans usage [illegible] of a simple type, with few words, and with cases of no great difficulty, all clearly akin to our [illegible]. Hence they could easily be invented by anyone. A person who recovers from a severe illness is expected, both by others and by himself, to have had such an experience, consequently it is easy for him to interpret the confused thoughts of a sickness as a visitation from a supernatural being. Thus it seems probable that a shaman deludes himself as well as others with regard to the songs.

[illegible]

A certain man had a similar experience, when he too heard Tlesqulitlin a without actually seeing her. He was in a canoe on the river, near the point between North Bentinck Arm and Labouchère Channel, and distinctly heard her whistle, accompanied by four beats on a drum. This may have been an omen, as he died soon after wards. Occasionally, Tlesqulitlin a appears to dreamers and gives information, as she did to this man's mother, instructing her to brush her body with spruce boughs to avoid smallpox. She followed this advice and both she and her husband escaped unscathed from the epidemic.

A shaman who died about 1900 received his power in the following manner.

He had been spearing salmon salmon in the Bella Coola River one summer when one of the fish stumbled to skin in his hands as he removed it from the water. From this event some mysterious malady covered his body, no one could cure him, and by December he had wasted away to a walking skeleton. Then, one morning, he heard whistling which he was sure must be the voice of Tlesqulitlin a. He hardly said nothing about this, nor was it heard by anyone else. The same sound was repeated on the next two mornings, and on the fourth she appeared.

[illegible] with one or the [illegible] a [illegible] which is repeated on [illegible]. Examples of these songs are given here [illegible].

575 They dispute in this manner concerning the capture of 746 every kind of salmon and even about the berries. Ant'lkan-lada keeps up a running stream of comments to the uninitiated.

"Listen to the stupid Kwakiutl. That is what they did when they were with Wiwaxia. They spent most of their time sleeping, and the rest of it arguing. Don't you be such silly fools as they are. Watch what you are doing, and you may be fortunate enough to see me in the woods and become a dancer."

As soon as the uninitiated have watched these beings for a time, they are expelled and the ritual ends in the usual manner.

768 In conclusion, a word may be said regarding the attitude 776 of the Bella Coola to Wiwaxia and his canoe. Like all other supernatural manifestations it is capable of bringing good or evil to the beholder. An encounter of every Wiwaxia dancer must have seen it and observed it in person, but it is a dangerous visitor now the less. Sometimes, at night, a hunter encamped on one of the fiords hears a grunting sound accompanied by short paddle strokes. If he calls out "yaw!" loudly, no harm will come to him, but if he omits to do so he will soon die. One informant affirmed that within his lifetime a party of Kwaguis hunters were waiting for high tide when they heard the grunting. They failed to hail the craft and presently a sound reached them as if a number of paddles had been placed in the water to check the course of a canoe; in fact, the ripples splashed on the shore at their feet. In a few years they were all dead.

THE DANCE OF REVITALIZATION

575 One of the most interesting of the Bella Coola dances is 746 that portraying Nawacha, who is virtually Mother-Nature, 824 giving birth to the flowers and trees in the spring. The following account is of the manner in which Kalla-i, a Kwaguis man, performed the rite. The ritual appears to be identical [184] in Bella Coola, as only one account need be given, and the [776] performer may be spoken of as X.

This dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial

[The Dance of the Stone Man]

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

APPENDIX D

[illegible]

Ballinger. Gaelic name for pressure given to a house bridegroom by the father of the house bride.
Bobbleheadlin. Supernatural being whose omnomb is not to the land above.
Bonny: Gaelic.
Bumbumbiddy, "Wee Bingo Dee Feed". Synonym for the supernatural being Wiseman.
Bunnies. Designation for a series of difficult and impossible Gaelic words.
Bushrum. Said to be blessed with abilities, the mythic object obtained by a shaman from the supernatural bumbumbiddy.
Bunker, plural: bunkers, mythic, bunkers, mythic plural: bunkyman.
1.—Bunkers comprising those entitled to perform shamanic labours during the annual ceremonial season.
2.—Shamans of the bunkers.
3.—"The Longest Day". Designation sometimes applied to a supernatural being, especially a specified one, or to a person having power to cast the death.
Burgoo. Triangular Gaelic dancer living in the late century.
Bullet. Beloved son, especially a child, born in the creative time of the world.
Bullbrook. Gaelic.
Bunbiddy. Wiseman dwelling on Fire Dragon in the beginning of time.
Bunyan. Gaelic name.
Bunbiddy. Supernatural name of Cormorant.
Bun-Yanny. Wiseman.
Bunbunnybiddy. Wiseman name required for the two spirits of time.
Burbiddy. Unidentified bird of which the note is an omen of death.
Bunbiddy. Proper name of a Bella Coola man.
Bunbiddy. Proper name of a Bella Coola man.
Bunbiddy-cousin. Proper name of a male Dreamer Bay Cannibal.
Burbiddy. Sacred generation, "galaxy," said to be found on the Queen Charlotte Islands.
Bunbiddy. Dragonfly bangle.
Bunbiddy. Famous Bella Coola member.
Burgoo. One of the workers.
Bunny. Proper name of a Dragon man.
Bun-bun-ny. "The Big One". Leader with supernatural being.
Bunbiddy. Man who came to earth one days to the beginning of time.
Bun-bun. Dragon member.
Bunbun. Dragon man transformed to an ancient story.
Bunbun. One of the two men to earth a Kitsumat Fire in the beginning of time.
Bunbun. Gaelic dwelling in the late century.
Bunbunny, "One Who Has Gotten Right". Name given by a wife to a companion of eighty received from her husband's relatives.
Bunbiddy. Influential Gaelic woman expressed in the beginning of time by a Dragon chief, the word is a synonym for Wiseman-chief.
Bunbiddy Bunbunny. One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Bunyanbun-yan. Lullaby.
Burbunny. Gaelic expression used in a sitting figure.
Bunbiddy. 1.—Fire or map in the moon the galaxy.
2.—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, one far from to land.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] THE WELLA CHELA INDIANS

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

APPENDIX D

Ezulu: Kibiko River.
Ubhudu: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time.
Umu: Animal's outside.
Ufu: Sign of the heathen, foretelling death.
Umuzi: Commerce, in Bulu Bulu language.
Umkhwenu: Gentle voice to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him.
Umkhi: Resurrection Day.
Umlu, hold-ungi: 1—Village in the lower Bulu Cindu valley.
2—Hold-ungi.
3—Name assumed for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimpoti in the beginning of time.
Ung: Station, either buried or absent.
Umkhwen ne Kumkhi: Free night of a buried dance.
umkhukhuku: 1—Heavy supper in Kumpoti's house.
2—Name obtained from them by a Zulu man in the beginning of time.
Umkhwen: Eminent rite to which the performer's head appears to be pulled off.
Ulu: Clearly secret leader of sprain rents.
Umpumulo: Any act of an endless nature which prevents a supernatural being from seeing the appearance.
Ulu: Protects distributed when a sacrificial initiate dances. They are provided by the dance "To Shield Our Eyes" from the spectrum and serve to incorporate the companions and others who have assisted in the rite.
Umu: Hole.
Umu: Hands.
Umuhlulu: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
Umuzi: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the dance of a goatskin to secure for being served with food to a male woman.
Umuti: Small woodpecker, species unidentified.
Umuzu: Winter wren.
umuti: Spreading medicine salmon.
Umhlu: Intangible hunter prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia.
Umhlu: Pomegrate.
Umuhlulu: One of the first women to settle at Umuhlu in the beginning of time.
Umuhlulu: One of the first men to settle at Umuzi in the beginning of time.
Umuzulu: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked.
umkhwenu: To group freely with both hands, sculpture.
umugwe: Trees, plural.
umu'ni ukuti: Ceremony resembling a goatskin given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding the main rite.
umuzu, "When In Good": Synonym for abomination, the separation of a wife from her husband.
Umuzi ne: Synonym for Pseudohumulus: Supernatural being who disembodiedly hangs head from his fellows.
umuhlulu: 1—Shadowed figure, usually in some form, which appears to avoid and shift invisible.
2—the appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Umuhlu: Supernatural human of mountain giant.

Kilbuna E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)[852]
NEA Bellacoola NEA

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swooms it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking the shell. The shaman bears its hunting wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking the shell the owner becomes crazy. 774 756 [844] [753] [824]

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Dog. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Dog will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself. 954 [776]

When asked more closely about the certain difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: "When an Ayeka'i'ing wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Mt. Saint) who will initiate him. So Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way." [771]

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ch'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 112), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soiled by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called ceck. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms. 753 755 759 [826]

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or spear, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die. 682 759 [828]

I will have a few current beliefs:—

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about me. 827

Slight singing of the ears indicates rain, loud singing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eye indicates that one will cry. [777]

If a dog chases and bards in the sheep its owner will die. 825

The breaking of a bow without an apparent cause is unlucky. 763

777

Wars.

When a war party was expected the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and covered their 726 729

1:bb:Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

211 in the appearance of the poles. Sometimes one is erected at *556 the front door of the house with an opening at its base through 998 which all must pass to enter the house, or a pole may be sided 582 and stand on the opposite side of the sidewalk; the choice in [184] either case depending upon the usage recorded in the ancestral myth. Instead of a totem-pole, a chief may display his ancestral chiaks by means of paintings on the front wall of his house, or by carved house-posts supporting the longitudinal beams, if such had been used by his ancestors. Moreover, a chief entitled to display a totem-pole may choose to use only paintings. If he validates these by presents, they give him the same dignity and importance as a totem-pole, particularly if he cannot validate its construction by lavish gifts. Most Bella Coola poles are only about fifteen to twenty feet in height, and though [171] it is possible that a few families had prerogatives entitling them to construct lofty poles, such as used by the Haida, it is unlikely that such were ever common.

When a chief who has erected a totem-pole before his house gives another potlatch, he may wish to put up a second pole beside the first. Occasionally two or three poles stand before the house of a chief, but one is more frequent or even none at [964] all. At death the pole is often taken to the cemetery where it acts as a memorial-post (I, p. 461). Otherwise it remains standing until some other occupant of the house wishes to erect another in its place, when the first is pulled down and neglected.

Coppers

*556 The Bella Coola use coppers for only two purposes: casting [964] on the ground upon which the representation of a deceased relative had trodden, or throwing into the fire when the figure has left the house. In either case, they are said to "make home for the dead." Although used but rarely, the occasion when a copper is employed is so important that to obtain one and increase its value is a vital consideration for every chief.

[177 434] Most of the coppers now used by the Bella Coola are made

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 immediately before, or during the early stages of a potlatch, in *556 order to receive goods immediately, but with the proviso that it shall be returned to him for throwing into the fire. This [432] method has the advantage of providing the chief with goods [426] when required, and doubles the worth of the copper.

Coppers are not always rescued from the ashes and given to poor men. If one is still lying in the fire after several days, [364] the donor of the potlatch removes it and fastens it to the memorial-post over the grave of his deceased relative. It may be left there, or another chief wanting a copper may buy it from the donor and increase its value in the usual manner. Only a small price is paid in such circumstances, since the copper, having served its purpose, is practically valueless.

177 The Bella Coola state that in ancient times coppers were 435 worth less than at present, and that the change in sentiment regarding them is due to Kwakiutl influence. All agree that *556 the value placed upon them at Fort Rupert and Alert Bay is greater than elsewhere on the coast. The Bella Coola believe that the Kwakiutl distribute presents in respect to their coppers and that their values mount to enormous sums when the gifts are returned. It is clear that the importance of coppers, like the potlatch and other elements of culture, has increased in recent years through the influence of the coastal tribes.

*556 It is almost impossible to define coppers in the nomenclature of economic theory. They are not mere articles of barter, since they have no practical use outside the ceremonies of chiefs. Nor are they standardized units of trade or cur-[436] rency, since each differs not only from all other coppers, but also at different periods. In a sense they serve as tokens of [211] what has been expended; representations of them may be carved and painted on totem-poles where they serve as marks [532] of the goods which the chief has given away, but this is only a minor consideration. A copper can perhaps best be described [426] as an investment which can be applied only to one purpose, [435] "the making of bone for a deceased" person. It grows more valuable at every transmission in accordance with the goods ex-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

those just described. The giving of these at this time is not 583 obligatory, nor does it affect the validity of the coming marriage. It is merely a mark of friendly feeling between the two groups of relatives, and, by adding to the importance of the event, increases the potential strength of the unborn children.

If either X or Y should die during the period of engagement, 584 the presents, or their equivalent, must be returned to the [583] donors. No formal methods are employed to ensure this, [626] but the force of public opinion suffices to compel a man to do that which is proper; in fact, he is anxious to do so. If Y should die, an effort is made to replace her with a sister, cousin, or other near relative, so that the friendly relations entered upon by the two families may not be lost. The gifts mutually given by the two families may be returned and re-donated or the substitute simply takes Y's place without further arrangement. Sometimes, in spite of the wishes of their parents and the [154] elaborate rites carried out, either X or Y breaks the engage- [583] ment by going to live with somebody else. It is then a mark of pride for the family of the offender to return the gifts they have received, and almost equally a mark of honour for the aggrieved party to give back what has been bestowed upon them, in order to demonstrate how little value they place on the possession of goods.

Though a lengthy engagement is desirable, it may be curtailed. If, for example, one of X's relatives should die before the usual period has elapsed, Y's father may suggest an immediate wedding. He knows that X's family will have heavy [764] expenses in connection with the burial and mourning rites, hence it is courteous to offer a quick marriage with the financial advantages accruing to them at the ceremony. In this case, X either does not work at all for Y's family, or for only a short time. Moreover, if Y reaches marriageable age without her father receiving suitable proposals, he can himself take the initiative by consulting the parents of an eligible young man. If the suggestion is agreeable, the engagement is announced in the manner already described, and the marriage takes place

1:Mc:Dwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

carried out, her relatives are expected to return to her husband's family the goods received during the engagement and at the wedding. The matter is then settled. If the deceased has a younger sister, cousin, or other near relative, an effort is usually made to have this individual replace the dead wife.* No further goods are given, except perhaps a few to add dignity to the transference; the new wife merely replaces her dead sister and the bond between the two families continues unbroken. If the husband should die, his wife's relatives are considered honorable and endowed with the minds of chiefs if they restore to his relatives the presents which they have received. But if the wife can be remarried to one of his relatives, there is no need for this and the two families continue to enjoy the mutual strength acquired by the long period of engagement and exchange of benefits and presents.

If death takes place after the repurchasing of the wife, there is no need to return presents, since the rebuying has cancelled the expenditure by the husband. If children have been born and the woman has long become practically a member of her husband's family, she is buried by them as a matter of course, but should she die soon after marriage, her own family usually performs the obsequies.

With the passing of many years of married life, the repurchasing several times of the woman, and the birth of children, she becomes so much a member of her husband's family that his death seldom ends the arrangement. The widow is by no means a slave and usually is master of her own destiny, especially if she has children and has reached a position of eminence in the community. Since the desirability of preserving the bond between the two families is fully realized, it is accordingly customary for a widow to wed her husband's brother, or a husband his deceased wife's sister. But in each case the ritual of marriage and exchange of presents must be to kill an enemy, but his success is accredited to his supernatural possessions which have given him skill as a warrior rather than to his own ability. 961 926

*The native term emphasizes the fact that the new wife is virtually inherited by her husband.

It is felt that no ordinary explanation is sufficient to account for the death of a great chief. No matter what may have been the actual cause, it is always said that the supernatural Carpenters, who in the beginning of time created mankind, came down and "seized" or "called back" the deceased, thinking him too good for this world. It is believed that these beings are keen hunters, and that Ilyunim allows them to pursue influential people. This sentiment is always expressed in mourning songs for a dead chief, but although accepted as a matter of fact, it is little more than a formalized belief which serves to comfort the mourners. The infraction of a taboo is another reason frequently given for a chief's death. It is said that there was a loud crash and the earth shook before the death of Pathe; he became ill immediately, and his stomach began to swell. The stricken chief said that Sang" itself had fallen upon him, but the common belief was that he had erred in some ritual act. At any rate, he died within a few hours. 961 622 [775] [538]

RITES FOLLOWING DEATH

News of a critical illness spreads rapidly through the village and the house in which the sufferer is lying becomes a rendezvous for friends asking about his condition. Failure to do so would be considered ungracious, with the result that there is such a constant coming and going that rest is denied the sick person. Shamans are called upon to practise their powers in a noisy manner, and female relatives weep and wail. The din is indescribable. 963 [956]

When the patient shows no further indication of life, the shamans cease, but the women redouble their cries. Relatives, friends, and sympathizers all crowd into the house and begin to weep, often adding verbal lamentations. The progress of the news from house to house can be traced by the wailings. Mean- 964

764 while the relatives are preparing the body for disposal. For a child, these services are performed by the parents; for a married man whose parents are dead, by his brothers and other kindred; for a married woman, by her husband or the members of her own family. If she has borne no children, it is customary for her relatives to carry out the funeral rites, especially if she has been many times rebought from her husband. If such repayment has not been made, it is considered correct for a husband to bury his wife, although it is a point of honour for her relatives to reimburse him later for his expenditure. On the other hand, when children have been born and financial assistance mutually given and received several times, it is proper for the husband to perform the funeral rites, although he may receive assistance from his wife's kinsmen. There is no rigid ruling on the point, but bickerings seldom occur in connection with disposal of the dead. Members of the ancestral family are ready to assist in every case, both on account [614] of the disgrace that would follow a niggardly funeral, and also [556] as a means of displaying their wealth.

The first essential is to wash the body, a rite performed by men for a man, by women for a woman. It is immaterial who does this though some of the relatives usually volunteer. Neither husband nor wife touches a dead consort, though it [134] is said that long ago a man would hold intercourse with a deceased wife to indicate his extensive grief. The most influential member of the immediate family takes the lead in the various necessary acts, although there is always endless discussion and advice from members of the ancestral family and others interested. A nose-ring is placed in the septum [301] of the corpse; if this is omitted, the body will not be able [175] to dissolve into its elements but will range the earth as a walking phantom, causing injury to anyone who observes it. If the deceased has just eaten some of the first run of spring [525] salmon or olachen, a shaman washes out his mouth with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark which he throws into the river. The essence of the salmon is thus extracted from the body; if this rite is neglected no more witches will come to the river. No precautions are necessary after the final has been signaled.

Many men prepare their coffins before death. If this has not been done, a large, wooden box is provided by a kinsman of the deceased. The body is dressed in good clothing and bound into a squatting position, head between knees, hands clasped around shins, and the knuckles just above the level of the soles of the feet. In this posture it is thrust into the coffin. Particularly if the corpse has been brought from some distance and rigor mortis has set in, it may be necessary to break the back-bone and even to crush the skull before the box can be closed. A stone is placed on the back of the neck, within the coffin, to prevent the ghost from returning to haunt the survivors. A little cheap food is placed beside the body of a dearly loved child for nourishment during the journey to the next world.

From this point onwards, the funeral rites differ according to the rank of the deceased. On the death of an influential nzond, the senior members of that society meet as soon as possible to arrange the dramatization of the coming of Malektile. A nzond son, brother, or other near relative is always present even if he has little importance in the affairs of the society. If the death has taken place during the night, the conference is held the following morning and the rites begin at noon. There may be delay until all have gathered, but about the middle of the first possible day two nzond are sent up one of the mountains behind the village. They carry large, cone-shaped whistles which they blow twice. The sound is plainly audible in the village and all, whether or not members of the nzond society, recognize that a supernatural being is drawing near. After a short interval, another whistle is blown by a nzond concealed on the roof of the house in which the corpse is lying, and after another pause the same sound comes from within, beside the body itself. Most of the uninitiated know that this is the voice of Malektile (also called Sizzisqawam),

[illegible] E-5 ([illegible])[illegible]

[illegible] Dellacorvia [illegible]

422
764

Permission to [illegible] National Archives [illegible]

Personal possession held on a [illegible]

[illegible]

PLATE [illegible]

211
.9L4
S32

Memorial figure and personal possessions on a grave

[p 442 (B)]

PLATE [illegible]

Photograph by [illegible], National Museum of Canada

Memorial posts showing crests of the deceased

[#442 (c)]

211
764
532

[Figure (3)]

Pleiopsis to 1 : 1000. Normal division of nuclei.

Ornamental figures of ethals and fous

Proceedings of the Royal Society, B, Vol. 127, Pl. 40
Mrs. Dorothy Wyatt del.
Cambridge University Press

PLATE II

211
964
532
778

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Totem-pole serving as a memorial post

[p 142 (E)]

[P 442(e)]

Photograph by A. J. Smith, Forest Officer (C)Chada

Memorial post with wooden representations of coppers given away by the deceased

THE NORTHWESTERN TRIBES
BRITISH COLUMBIA AND YUKON

311
.724
S32
4/71

Photo: Ch. 1 Kim, Korea Green Cross

Mimosid pen with model cows and figures representing dairy

[p 442 (b)]

Lib. McDermott E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

body became eagle down and was wafted upwards is psychologically of the type which might serve as basis for a rite of this kind. If the descendants of the person to whom this had happened had dramatized the incident at subsequent deaths, a custom analogous to the one here described would have arisen. 575 766 424 [779]

DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

There is no fixed time for the disposal of a corpse. When possible, it takes place on the day following death, but as many as four days may elapse if delay is necessary for the performance of the rite just described. Another reason for postponement is the absence of near relatives; if they can be summoned within four or five days, the funeral may be delayed until their arrival. There is always endless discussion concerning the exact details; all relatives and members of the ancestral family take part, though the wishes of a son, brother, or other near kinsman are usually followed. In this, as in so many points of Bella Coola ritual, an influential chief often overrules the desires even of those who are more closely related to the deceased. 764 [796] [554]

Heralds announce the hour chosen,[6] usually about noon, and the people begin to assemble in the deceased's house, even strangers being welcome. Women wail dolorously, and another indication of the occasion is the bundles containing clothing, cooking utensils, and other articles belonging to the dead person. The lid of the coffin has been left open, but when everything is ready, an elderly man is asked to strike it, once, with a stone; then the lid is closed. Planks have been removed and a hole made in one of the front corners of the house, through which the man throws out the stone. The women redouble their lamentations as an old woman, previously asked to do so, lights a bundle of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and climbs through the opening carrying this. No request has been made for pall-bearers, but any strong men, especially [203] [609]

[6] This is done at present, even after the carrying away of the "body." In former times it was omitted when the corpse was secretly buried by the xusek. [178]

[964] friends of the deceased, pick up the coffin and carry it through [762] the hole. In former times it was frequently difficult to obtain [984] pall-bearers for a slave or friendless person on account of the [961] taboos to which a person performing this service was subject. If a dead person should be taken through a doorway, others using it would soon follow the corpse to the next world. For the same reason, a body must never be moved across the central line of a house; the passage is, therefore, made from the side where it happens to be lying. As soon as the corpse has been taken through, the removed planks are quickly replaced. Mourners and guests stream out through the doorway and follow the coffin, some of them carrying the bundles containing part of the goods of the deceased. Meanwhile the pall-bearers follow the woman with the torch to the cemetery, taking care to carry their burden so that it faces the direction
[761] in which they are going; if a dead person is allowed to look backwards, he will beckon some relative to accompany him and the one so summoned will soon die.

There is a cemetery near every village, usually fifty to a hundred yards behind the row of houses in a place from which the heavy timber has been cleared. On arrival, the pall-bearers set down their burden close to the spot where the guide has placed her flaming bark on the ground. The personal possessions of the deceased are likewise deposited near the fire, which is kept alight by female relatives throwing on it small quantities of the dead person's clothing and utensils. The near kinsmen of the deceased choose the exact site of the grave, which must never be dug before the bringing of the corpse.
[423] There is no ownership of plots within the cemetery, so that the hole can be made wherever desired. A favourite location is close to the grave of a mother, father, or other near relative, but this is optional; bones are sometimes uncovered when digging, and in that case earth is thrown in once more and a new site selected. There are no professional grave-diggers, [767] nor are arrangements made in advance for men to perform this duty, but friends, especially strong young men, are willing to undertake the task and bring with them tools for the purpose. When the location has been chosen, they start their work without further instructions, taking care that the corpse shall face east. It is said that this is done because the sun rises in that quarter, a statement that is probably a mere rationalization. Graves are usually about five feet deep, so that the digging requires some little time, especially in winter when the ground is frozen. All the young men are willing to help and relieve one another at intervals. Meanwhile the women are squatting on the ground near the coffin, some of them throwing objects on the fire, and all wailing intermittently in a high-pitched, tuneless sob into which a mourner sometimes inserts words as if her agony had overcome her. [764] [767]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Please return whence you came," moans one woman, while another sobs out:

"Perhaps you were unhappy with us and wanted something we could not give you on earth."

The sun sent down the people of Sneel and Sneilk-il, who accordingly regard that being as their crest. Mourners of those villages, as well as other individuals to whom the sun stands in the same relationship, are accustomed to address him, saying: [773]

"Please increase your light to guide the way. Our child returns to you."

One woman, whose relatives had been killed by jealous rivals owing to their success in giving potlatches, prayed:

"Come no more. Those for whom you gave light have gone; henceforth shine only whither they have departed."

In some cases such doleful lamentations are mere lip service, but they often express very real grief at the loss of a friend or relative. It is also felt that such sympathy affords comfort to the mourning kindred.

As the grave grows deeper, the relatives keep measuring it and the coffin to insure a close fit and avoid unnecessary digging. As soon as it is ready, an elderly man who has been requested to perform the rite, steps to the north side of the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

964 grave carrying a spruce bough in his hand. He touches with it the edge where he is standing, then, in sunwise order, the east, south, and west margins. This circuit is repeated four times and the branch tossed away to westward. This essential [794] ceremony is based on a belief that the lives, or perhaps the spirits, of the grave-diggers have been drawn from them into the grave and are in danger of being pressed down by the coffin. Should this occur, they would have short lives. The spruce branch enables the supernatural elements to leave the cavity and return to their owners who suffer no ill effects. Anyone, other than a grave-digger, can perform this rite.

The coffin is now lifted into the grave, care being taken that the corpse faces east. As already described, it is in a squatting position with haunches almost on the ground. Boards have been prepared in advance, and with these the grave-diggers make a roof-like covering, placing at each corner [775] a stone weighing from ten to fifteen pounds, to prevent the ghost from returning to trouble the survivors. Earth is thrown in on top of the boards, and as it falls the wailing breaks out dolorously in a final crescendo of mourning. [760] If a chief has been buried, his fellows sometimes sing a xe-tla [533] song. At this time it is proper for one or more chiefs to rise and speak. No one is required to do so, nor is there any rule 537 as to the order in which they make their remarks. The first 964 speaker is usually a prominent man related to the survivors, though seldom a son, brother, or other near relative of the deceased. A speech is generally addressed in part to the spirit of the dead person, telling it where to go; in part, to the mourners. For a dead child, emphasis is laid on the fact that although he did not live long enough to be incorporated into his ancestral myths on earth, this will be done for him in his future home. In conclusion, an appeal is often made to Hqumtlw, under the name of Smaialala, to take pains that [775] the spirit of the dead is given its rightful place in Nuxmáit-a, in [773] the section where its first forbears were created, and whither the spirits of its dead ancestors have returned since the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ning of time. The following speech was made by an elderly Bella Coola chief at the funeral of his great-granddaughter in June, 1922: 764 537

"Granddaughter![7] Go with your grandmother[8] to the mountain above Tcmoti where my first [patrilineal] ancestor came to earth. Go to the mountain across the river where Qsil[9] descended; go to the north where your ancestor found a copper house with a raven inside; go to the Skeena where another of your early ancestors found a whale; go to all the places where your forefathers experienced the incidents recorded in our myths; go and be happy.[10] I do not want these ever-recurring deaths in my family, but I am helpless. I hope that Sixsinqutsam will cease hunting us." [773]

Turning to the Carrier Indians who were present, the old man continued: "Thank you for coming twice within two days to share our grief." [648]

Turning back towards the grave, he went on:

"I have made ready the road for you.[11] Your grandfather[12] and I are grieved; our families became united when your parents married, and the bond was cemented by your birth. Now it is lost. When you were born, I rejoiced; now I am sorry. You are all right; you cannot fall because you are supported[13] by the names and fame of your father and mother, your grandfather and grandmother, your uncles and aunts, and your other ancestors who have passed away here in Xumqo-ts. You rest with them in your own village where is located your power from the experiences of your forefathers.

[7]The term, ahmis, was used, although the child was really a great-granddaughter.
[8]The grandmother had been buried two days previously.
[9]One of the first people to reach this earth.
[10]The places and people mentioned were all described in the myths of the dead child's ancestral family.
[11]A reference to goods distributed by the speaker at a ceremony held a few days previously when it was certain that the child would soon die. [963]
[12]The child's mother's father. [431]
[13]Supported, Ahkumulis, a word having the sense of physical support. The implication is that the deceased relatives are sitting in such a close circle that the pressure of their bodies is enough to prevent any one of them, including the dead child, from falling. [195]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764
537

They will look after you and, being chiefs, they will be able to do so properly. You will be strong indeed. I am heavy with grief. My grandchildren alone serve to anchor me to Sqmqo·ts; otherwise I would go to Tsmaal.[25] Now that you have gone I may become light-headed and depart. No. I have other grandchildren and great-grandchildren. I will bear up and be a man, and show myself the chief that I am by right."

During this speech the mourners remained seated on the ground, many of the women wailing at intervals and the men listening with more or less attention except those who were filling in the grave. Once or twice the speaker hesitated for a suitable word and suggestions were called out to him.

As the old man finished speaking and sat down, another chief arose.[26]

"Children," he said, addressing the parents of the dead child, "You have indeed suffered misfortunes. A few days ago, your mother[27] died; today, your daughter. Perhaps it is all for the best. Remember how many ancestors who have gone before will be waiting to receive the child; she will be well cared for. Death passes no one, chief or commoner, but do not despair even at this double visitation. Your mother[27] never did an evil action to anyone, never said a harsh word to anyone; try to imitate her. See! I have neither father nor mother. They are both dead; we all go the same way."

In conclusion he urged the step-father of the grieving father, husband of the woman who had died a few days previously, to bear up.

As the second speaker finished, a third arose and spoke briefly.

"I am sorry," he said, "for Joe[28] in his grief today. We have [25] The home of the speaker's ancestral family.

[26] No arrangements had been made in advance concerning who should speak or the order in which each should address the mourners.

[27] The mother of the child's father had died a few days previously.

[28] Referring to the mother of the child's father.

[29] The dead child's mother's father; he was addressed by his ancestral name on this occasion.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1914)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

put his granddaughter into the ground beside her grandmother but it may all be for the best."[1] 764 537

There is no doubt that condolences of this nature assist the mourning relatives to bear up under their grief. This fact was emphasized by several Bella Coola, and in addition the writer was able to observe it on several occasions. They readily respond to suggestions of any kind and undoubtedly derive comfort from the laudatory comments of influential chiefs.

Speeches of this general nature are always delivered as the grave is being filled in. Sometimes this work is finished before all who wish to do so have expressed themselves, sometimes the remarks are so short that they are ended before all the earth has been thrown back. When the hole has been filled to ground level, it is stamped down and the surplus earth scattered out of sight among the bushes, no mound being thrown up. 764

Great care is always taken to prevent the return of the ghost. In addition to the weighting with stones already described, other methods are used before the funeral party leaves the cemetery. Heavy boards are usually laid flat over the grave and rocks piled on these bar the way up from below. A further precaution is the setting upright of four stakes, one at each corner of the hole, and fastening ropes of cedar-bark between them along the east and west sides of the grave. The significance of this is not fully understood, except that the ghost cannot pass the strands. Four spruce saplings are cut and placed either between the grave and the village, or one on each side of the hole; their sharp needles form an effective barrier. 764 775 [824]

While these precautions are being taken, any clothing and utensils brought to the grave and not already consumed are thrown on the fire and allowed to blaze brightly. The ashes 764

[1] It was impossible to record these speeches verbatim at the time of their delivery. The writer was able to make notes, which were amplified by each speaker later telling him what he had said. Although lacking literal accuracy, the above may be considered essentially correct. [126]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 are never disturbed, being considered, in some vague way, "bad." The tools used for digging the grave are left standing upright in the loose earth, an action for which no explanation can be given by the Bella Coola. When these various rites have been performed, the funeral party returns to the village and disperses.

766 845 At present, interment is the customary method for disposing of the bodies of all except twins, whose bodies are placed in trees. Formerly, other means were sometimes employed, as 764 they still are occasionally. Instead of inhumation, a coffin 178 was frequently placed on a scaffold close behind the deceased's house. Whenever another relative died, planks were laid across, above the first box, and the new one deposited on these, so that in time the scaffold grew to resemble a house-like structure with many compartments. In the last century a certain shaman, Áskankots by name, is said to have pointed out that corpses were frequently carried off by wolves, snuuq, and other animals. For this reason he persuaded the people to inter their dead.

764 Somewhat similar to this practice was the placing of corpses in trees. Until the last few years this was sometimes done with poor children; formerly, it was not unknown even for chiefs. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned that the coffin containing the body of his grandfather, a chief, was placed in the crotch of a tree where no rain could penetrate. This means of disposal was probably never habitual. Even at the present time, the corpse of a dearly loved child is occasionally placed above, instead of under the ground. If the parents desire to do this, they erect in the cemetery a carved figure of one of their crests and deposit the coffin on top of it. This is, of course, a graphic representation of the deceased's origin myth and symbolizes the way in which the dead person has become associated with it.

According to several of the older men, cremation was practised by the Bella Coola for some time after the first settlement of the earth. A fire was built outside the house and the body thrown on it. One rather philosophic old man suggested that in this way the soul could easily return to Nusmāt-a. It is possible that this means of disposal was carried out in former times, but no informant had actually seen it practised. The Bella Coola state that cremation is carried out by the Kitlobe[29] and the Carriers. On the morning after a burning, young men of the former tribe rush to the spot and smear their faces with the semi-charred bones, amid much shouting. The Carriers are said to stand with their bodies inclined over the burning corpse and to smear on their faces any grease exuded from it. The accuracy of these statements is very doubtful, and can have no bearing on the reputed practice of cremation among the Bella Coola. 764 764 829

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The bodies of rich or poor, chiefs, commoners, or slaves, all are buried in a similar manner though with differences in the complexity of ritual. Nor is any different method practised for criminals, murdered people, or those committing suicide. It is believed that in case of self-destruction the body cannot separate into its elements and reach Nusmāt-a; that part which becomes the ghost is able to go to the land below, but neither spirit nor life can ascend. According to one man, who may, however, have been affected by Christian influence, this is because Ālquntām decrees the length of life and any wilful shortening is insulting to him. Suicide is rare among the Bella Coola and four cases only were heard of. One woman killed herself in shame at having accidentally set fire to a village, another because her husband was unduly jealous, and two men through bladder stricture. 766 762 [775]

On the whole, Bella Coola methods for disposal of the dead have altered but little since the coming of the white man. The change from sub-aerial exposure to interment was probably not due to foreign influence although the introduction of metal shovels has facilitated the digging of graves and probably hastened the movement. A change in posture has, however, taken place. In former times, a corpse was always buried 177 764

[29] If not at present, at least within the memory of elderly people.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 squatting, now it is customary to use the extended position.
764 It is impossible to state whether this is the direct result of white teaching, or whether the ease with which large boxes can now be made has led to interment at full length.

RITES FOLLOWING DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

768 Interment of the corpse does not end the ceremonial necessitated by a death in the community. As already described, some of the clothing and utensils of the dead person are burned during the funeral, but all are not destroyed at that time. The proportion kept for future treatment is immaterial, nor is there any established usage concerning the type of object reserved. During the days following the funeral, relatives of the deceased carefully gather his clothing, cooking utensils, rifles, and all other articles which have been his personal property or used exclusively by him. On the fourth day, these are taken to the cemetery by his immediate family, accompanied by as many of their friends as wish to show their sympathy. A fire is kindled near the grave and on it is deposited whatever can be burnt; other objects are either cast into the flames or piled near at hand (see Plate 17). It is most important that every article belonging to the deceased should be disposed of in this way. There are two reasons for this. First, it is considered indecent to use the possessions of a dead person; they would have the effect of poison on anyone doing so. Secondly, the ghost of the de-
[775] ceased receives goods that are burnt or deposited on the grave
[753] four days after the funeral. If deprived of what belongs to him, a ghost punishes the offenders by causing sickness.
178 Occasionally a new rifle, or some other treasured possession, 768 is kept by a relative or friend; this is contrary to the established custom, but is justified by considering the article to be a gift from the deceased or a memento of him. No one would accept such a legacy unless he felt sure that the dead man entertained such kindly sentiments towards him that he would be glad to have his friend receive it.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In recent years the number of incombustible objects has increased enormously with the introduction of metal utensils, gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully placed near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not resent an open transfer; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undoubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange is a rare event and would cause animosity if carried out by anyone except a near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected over his grave, a common Bella Bella custom. This is built immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The sorrowing relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no other mark for the grave is put up until a memorial potlatch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-paranips, which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave; they are food belonging to the dead person. The white man has taught the Bella Coola how to plant apple-trees and these are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath. The Bella Bella are said formerly to have replaced at intervals the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bella Coola practice. Indeed, a grave is never

Indeed, a grave is never
965 disturbed except, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a [789] portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the [961] opener, so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

968 Burning or deposition near the grave is not restricted to the actual utensils and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be laid dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready [964] by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person seems indescribably indecent. In recent years, the crop, if a man dies after tilling and sowing a field, is allowed to ripen, and then rot unharvested. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is [961] apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of [984] death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that has been in contact with a corpse.

The rituals described above may be considered as religious 964 in nature; almost equally important are the social require-431 ments of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This 556 indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members
[614] of the ancestral family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the woman who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way. Failure to do so brands the relatives as misers with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and recompense to funeral assistants is usually deferred until 764 that time. Such was often true even in former years, although 431 poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped 556 to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any con- [575] venient ceremony, such as a non-sacred sisaok dance. As [796] repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature. It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual; at present it never occurs. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the crest, the [766] goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery. Those who carried them were the ones who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge.

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is 764
the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If 783 spring salmon or olachen are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or twenty according to some infor- [825] mants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly, friendless slave being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The taint on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but automatically lapses after ten days.

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that Sā-lma [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 783 [776] comes and sits on the coffin during every funeral, seeking further victims. Death has so contaminated a widow or widower that she or he will fall an easy prey unless ceremonially purified. No special acts are carried out between interment and the burning of goods four days later, but the following four days must be spent in a small shelter of branches behind the village, hidden from sight in the forest. Within this the man or woman lies on the ground with legs close together and bent [841] at the knees, in the same position as a girl during the four days after her first menstruation. A male friend accompanies a widower; a female, a widow. This companion keeps a fire burning and administers to the comfort of the patient, for such a bereaved person is considered to be. Every evening the two return home and leave again the following morning. On one of these days, the companion scours the woods east of the village to find four spruce saplings growing within sight of each other in an east to west direction. To this place he leads the survivor on the morning after the fourth day of concealment[11] in the shelter. He bends down the top of the western sapling and ties it into a loop with a rope composed of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. The widower, or widow, crawls through this opening to the east and then makes a circle, sunwise, around the sapling. Passing to the next one, the same procedure is repeated, and so in succession for the third and fourth, each being left tied into a loop. There are at least two variations in this rite: Instead of passing through four saplings, some individuals choose to crawl four times through a single one, with a sunwise circuit intervening in every case. If the survivor be a member of a family in which it is customary to use four saplings, and if the friend cannot find four in proper alignment, he cuts a number of spruce branches and sets them upright, butts in the ground, leaving a small hole between them. Four sets of these are arranged, as substitutes for four saplings, and the crawling through takes [11] There is variation in the exact time for this rite. Some individuals practise it on the fifth day after death and omit the waiting in the shelter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kimsquit is called Sqlan'li, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [825] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [626] [302] [834] [587] [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

prerogatives connected with the ceremony. The actual re- 556* counting of the myths may be done by a fluent speaker on 769 behalf of the bereaved man, and when he has finished speaking, [533]
it is proper for several of his peers to make complimentary [537] speeches, lauding the future donor for his intentions. Food is then served and the gathering breaks up.

The preliminaries of a memorial potlatch do not differ from those of an ordinary one. There is the same counting and recounting of goods, the same giving and receiving of presents, the same lending and borrowing. When at last the donor is ready, the heralds call his fellow-villagers to his house for announcement of the arrangements and allotment of the work. As at a potlatch, food is provided on a lavish scale, and there is the same sham-fight with a battering-ram ending in the destruction of part of the house. Then the carpenters receive their instructions; some to make different sections of the new structure, some to paint ancestral designs on the front and back walls, and some to make the various objects required.

The first difference between a memorial and an ordinary 211 potlatch is apparent at this allotment of work. Instead of a 556*
totem-pole to record the glories of the donor's ancestry,[11] car- 764 penters are requested to make memorial-posts for the dead 769 relative who is being commemorated. These are erected in the cemetery near the grave and are of three kinds, although it is unusual for all three to be set up for a single chief.

The first consists of a wooden post carved with the design of one or more of the deceased's crests (see Plates 19 and 20). [532]
These figures are usually representations of the bird or animal cloaks used by his first ancestors; it is customary to portray the one traced through the father on the right, that traced through the mother on the left. Instead of a cloak, the figure may portray the post down which swarmed his first ancestor in the beginning of time, or Mount Nusdalst in human form, wearing a broad-rimmed hat as he did before he turned to [11] Even the construction of a new house and the painting of new designs is often omitted.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

211 stone and served as landing-place for some of the first settlers.
556 In fact, any of the dead person's crests may be used according to the wishes of the chief giving the memorial potlatch. A 764 figure displayed in this way cannot be used as the guise in 769 which the dead relative returns, but as every individual has several crests, inability to use one does not make it difficult to carry out the rite. According to one well-informed old man, when a design has once been used in a cemetery it cannot again be shown by members of the ancestral family, having itself become "dead." Other informants flatly contradicted this statement, and it seems clear that the above is true only with regard to the use of the figure in connection with the return of the deceased. The erection of the figure serves to remind all beholders, especially foreign guests summoned to the memorial potlatch, of the ancestral myth of the deceased. It is, there-
[778] fore, equivalent to a totem-pole erected during a man's lifetime, in fact, one of these is sometimes moved to the cemetery to serve as a memorial-post (see Plate 21). Instead of placing a representation of the crest in the cemetery, one is sometimes painted on broad boards and placed on some conspicuous promontory where all who pass by will see it and think of the person commemorated.

The second type of memorial consists of plain poles set upright in the cemetery, one for each major ceremony given by the deceased. Potlatches, memorial potlatches, and kukusiatel [609] (II, p. 29) are alone indicated in this way, these being the only ones to which foreign guests are invited. These poles suggest, in a general way, the greatness of the deceased.

The third type of memorial-post comprises representations of the goods given away by the deceased. These are usually [532] painted on boards attached to a post set up near the grave. On this are pictures of canoes, coppers, slaves, and other valuables distributed at potlatches or memorial potlatches (see Plate 22). Alternatively, there may be a series of small poles, each surmounted by a model canoe manned by miniature human figures, symbolic of a canoe and slaves given away

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(see Plate 23). So, too, wooden representations of coppers are often affixed to an upright post. Not only men are commemorated in this way, a father often places over his daughter's grave pictures of the goods used to rebuy her from her husband; wooden plaques representing coppers are commonly used for this purpose.[24] Such symbols are usually cut down after a year owing to a vague feeling that it is not proper for them to remain standing too long. The function of this type of memorial is to mark the social status of the dead person as judged by the riches given away by him, or on his behalf, during his life-time. With the introduction of writing, the Bella Coola have been quick to recognize it as an easy means for recording the wealth distributed by a chief. In consequence, signs are often painted and erected, giving in figures a statement of his financial transactions. Another recent introduction has been the tombstone. One of these is often set up with the name of the deceased carved on it to perpetuate his memory, and a representation of his crest to record his ancestral history. Such a memorial combines the functions of the first and third types.

As the carpenters labour at the memorials, other arrangements for the ceremony proceed apace. As at a potlatch, the fellow-villagers of the donor may be invited repeatedly to his house for the performance of susaok dances, but this feature is often omitted, especially if there are no neophytes to be initiated. The mask to be worn by the deceased relative must be prepared in secret; or if several are to be commemorated at the single ceremony, one must be made ready for each. As the time draws near, envoys are dispatched to invite foreign guests if it has been decided to have strangers present. This has been customary for many years, but during the period when no features of the potlatch were allowed at a memorial potlatch, the latter was sometimes carried out in the presence of the donor's fellow-villagers alone. The actual departure of the

[24]The National Museum of Canada, at Ottawa, has specimens of these wooden coppers.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 departed. A few days later the same ritual was carried out 769 again, with a similar lavish distribution of food. This was often done at intervals of two or three days for several weeks, depending on how much food the donor was prepared to use. The amount required was so great that the rite was considered, in some ways, more difficult than a potlatch.

[178] As already mentioned, however, it became customary in the last century to incorporate features of the ordinary potlatch into one of a memorial nature. In such cases the first [533] singing of the mourning songs with display of marks by the professional mourners is as just recorded, but there is no recalling of the guests merely to listen once more to the songs. Instead, the ritual differs but slightly from that of an ordinary potlatch as already described (I, p. 182). An occasion is found to conduct the guests to the memorial-posts erected, and to in-
[178] form them of the significance of the designs depicted. This same practice has been continued since the introduction of tombstones, and the meaning of the writing upon them is interpreted. The entry of the deceased in the form of his crest, and the subsequent use of a copper, is the same as already recorded. This is frequently followed by the singing of a susook mourning [533] song if one of the near relatives owns this prerogative of foreign origin. If so, he walks slowly around the fire in a wide circle, shaking his rattle, and singing, unaccompanied. Most, if not all [177] of these songs, are in the Bella Bella language and the right to [425] use one has in every case been obtained through intermarriage with a member of that tribe. At intervals, heralds call out:

"Listen to the chief's lament."[27]

When presents are distributed to validate the whole ceremony, mention is always made of the different features for which they are given. As at a potlatch, the most important is the return of the dead, but at a memorial potlatch another [211] essential is the display of the memorial-posts. These have been [764] carved, painted, and set up, but are worthless unless validated [27] There is no reason why this should not take place at a potlatch, but no instance of its performance was noted.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

by presents, and the greater the number of these, the greater the value of the memorial. Nothing need be added concerning this point, or other rites, to the detailed description given in vol. I, chap. IV. 556* 769 [211] [764]

Psychologically, the memorial potlatch is of tremendous importance. There may be a vague feeling that the ritual is of actual assistance to the deceased since grease burnt at it reaches him, and is of service to him, but such a belief is no more than an intangible sentiment of no weight in the lives of the people. Quite otherwise is its effect on the survivors, especially on the donor. A memorial potlatch is considered the fitting tribute of respect to a chief, and if none of his near relatives should hold one, they would brand themselves as unmindful of the fame of their dead kinsman. In recent years the white man's law has prohibited the potlatch, but chiefs have often preferred to go to jail rather than to forgo this form of memorial. The reason for this cannot be explained better than in the words of an old man whose only daughter, a "Chieftainess," died in 1922. He determined to hold a memorial potlatch and expressed himself to the writer, as follows: [648]

"If I should fail to do what is right under the circumstances, to do what my ancestors would have done, my heart would be dead, dead as my daughter. But if I call the people, if we sing mourning songs for my child, I will be able to bear my grief. I shall have done what is right, and will be able to hold up my head with anyone, knowing that the rites have been performed for my child which are due her as a chief. If I allow her to be neglected, I would be ashamed and miserable. Jim [another "chief"] warned me when I first told him of my intention that the law forbade such ceremonies. I cannot help that. If I am sent to jail, to jail shall I go. I would rather have that happen than that my daughter should not receive fitting treatment as a chief."

In this case, though only abbreviated rites were carried out, their performance unquestionably lessened the father's grief, a fact observed on several occasions. Not only does it comfort

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 769 a man and assuage his sorrow to know that he has shown fitting respect to the dead, there is also a gain in social prestige. As the whole community respects, admires, and sometimes envies a man for having carried out a memorial potlatch, there is no doubt that he is pleased and gratified to such an extent that his grief is dulled. These two factors must constantly be kept in mind; memorial potlatches serve to commemorate the dead, but in so doing they add to the social importance of the donors. The two combine to bring considerable comfort to the chief who has lost a dear relative. In some cases the social prestige is the real motive, the grief assumed and unimportant; but in others the latter is the only factor that matters, and a chief is entirely oblivious to any increase in his own status. In most memorial potlatches, both feelings are present in the mind of the donor, and both are gratified.

DETAILED ACCOUNT OF A FUNERAL

764 114 In the preceding pages, an attempt has been made to describe the traditional death rites of the Bella Coola. The following section comprises a detailed account of funeral ceremonies witnessed in 1922. The contrast between these and the ones already recorded, will indicate some of the changes [178] in custom which are of such importance in studies of cultural [182] growth or decline. The following description will also serve [571] to demonstrate a point repeatedly mentioned, the manner in which business transactions and arrangements of all kinds take place whenever the people have been called together.

[123] On June 27, 1922, the death occurred in Bella Coola of Jessie, Mrs. Samuel King, daughter of Captain Schooner. The latter, now deceased, was one of the writer's most trusted friends, and as a result of this friendship it was possible not only to attend the actual rites, but to ascertain much of the feeling underlying them. This advantage had its drawbacks, since it was manifestly impossible to question either the father or the husband of the woman too closely. The details will be described, in spite of some repetition entailed thereby, both to record customs surviving the decay of Bella Coola ritual, and as a means of illustrating the sentiments of the participants. To avoid native terminology, white man's names will be used throughout. It will be necessary to understand the relationships of those taking part in the ceremony, as shown in the following pedigree:* 764 [114] 601 764

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PEDIGREE I*

PEDIGREE II

Samuel King was a widower with one daughter at the time of his marriage to Jessie, by whom he had no children. His 764 159

*No attempt has been made to record the complete pedigree; only those who took part in the ceremony are indicated.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 stepson, George Nelson, had not been living with his wife for about one year.
159

Early in the afternoon of June 27, Captain Schooner was notified by telephone of the serious illness of his daughter at the cannery where she was working. He set out immediately, but found her dead on his arrival. Without waiting to consult Samuel King, he called together the chiefs who happened to be [622] in the vicinity, Willie Mack, Jim Pollard, Billy Pollard, Bobby Nebby, and Alexander Clallaman.* He informed them that 764 he did not propose to let his daughter be thrown carelessly into 769 the ground like a dog, but that he was going to hold a memorial potlatch immediately after the funeral. Schooner, being a *556 numitl chief as well as father of the dead woman, was able to 159 do as he liked, and no one objected to this plan, although in [178] former times such a ceremony neither took place at once, nor in summer. If Samuel had been present, he would have been consulted as a matter of course. It was quite fitting for Jessie to be buried by her father, since she had borne her husband no children, and had been rebought several times. Moreover, Samuel lacked the determination and prestige of his father-in-law. Having settled this main point, Captain Schooner intimated that as Jessie's granddaughter, Dan Nelson's infant, was at the point of death, it would be well to combine the mourning for both at the single ceremony. No mention was made of the amount to be used for the rite. Schooner himself had $200 to expend for the purpose which would have been sufficient, and his attitude was that he neither knew nor cared whether his relatives would assist him. Soon after the other chiefs had left, Reuben Schooner arrived from the logging-camp from which he had been summoned. Father and son discussed arrangements not only for the actual interment, a simple matter, but for the memorial potlatch. It was decided that the dead woman should return as a composite figure consisting

*None of them was closely related to the Schooner family.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

of Eagle, Raven, and Blackfish, three of her crests of which the masks were available. They agreed that Timothy Snow[11] was the best carpenter available and that he should be commissioned to put them in shape and arrange their use. Reuben wanted to sing a sisaak mourning song, to which he had a prerogative derived from his Bella Bella mother, and it was also decided that the band[12] should play. Reuben informed his father that he would contribute $60 towards the expenditure.

764 769 556* 159 [553]

Meanwhile Jessie had been washed by female friends, clad in her best clothing, and laid in her coffin. This was a rough box, contributed by the manager of the cannery and shaped like a white man's coffin. At intervals, women came near and wailed dolorously without heeding others similarly engaged. The news was carried to all the Bella Coola, those men who owned gasoline launches taking the word to the logging-camps without being requested to do so. A Carrier Indian who happened to be returning from the cannery spread the word through the village, where each woman who received the message hurried off to some friend, with whom she began to wail.

764 159 [203]

Early on the following morning, Captain Schooner returned home with his wife, Jessie's stepmother. He had been crying and was sad, but seemed willing to talk. He spoke of the proposed memorial potlatch, and expressed the sentiments recorded on vol. I, p. 473. He was grave and dignified, absolutely determined to perform what he considered to be the necessary ritual, oblivious of consequences, and heedless of what he held to be an unjust law. During that summer, Captain Schooner had been a rather heavy drinker, but on this occasion he abstained from wine, and said that he hoped no one would show disrespect to his daughter by appearing in a drunken condition either at the funeral or the subsequent rites. It is [769] [273]

[11] He was not closely related to the Schooners.

[12] Most of the younger Bella Coola were members of the band, performing white man's music on white man's instruments. Andy Schooner was bandmaster, but it is unlikely that this influenced the decision, since the performance of the band was customary at funerals when the writer was in Bella Coola.

[178]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 worthy of record that his wishes were scrupulously obeyed.
159 During the morning he was visited by the singers and other chiefs to discuss details of the coming ceremonial.

Meanwhile Samuel King had been summoned from his 764 logging-camp. He wished to show his own grief, and also his 159 sorrow that the union between his family and the Schooners, 584 forged by his marriage to Jessie, should be terminated. No children had been born to cement the bond. He consulted his brother and sister, who agreed with him that a marriage between his daughter, by a former wife, and George Nelson would be desirable. The girl was consulted and raised no objections.
[769] Samuel then addressed Captain Schooner who was favourably disposed, so it was decided that this ceremony should take *[556] place in connection with the memorial potlatch. It would be a real, not a fictitious marriage, as the girl had reached adolescence several years previously.

764 Another visitor to Captain Schooner that morning was 159 Joe Williams. Several years earlier, when he had given a ceremony in honour of two of his children who had died, Captain Schooner had contributed $100 as "A Blanket for George Nelson's Wife." This was really part of the marriage [583] transaction, although deferred for a number of years after the actual time of the wedding. This sum had been divided as follows: $20 to Joe Williams; $20 to Mrs. Joe Williams; $10 to Mrs. George Nelson; $10 to her brother; $20 to Lame Charlie; and $20 to Mrs. Lame Charlie. Joe consulted the recipients and found that all were willing to repay their indebtedness at this time. Captain Schooner did not ask for it, but Joe was glad of the opportunity to do the proper thing at the right time and thus rise in popular estimation. He and his relatives decided to return $150, a sum which he mentioned to Captain Schooner that morning.

[583] Joe Williams, his wife, and Mrs. George Nelson also decided to take advantage of the gathering to rebuy the last named from her husband. The fact that they had been separated for at least a year and that the woman had been living an immoral life did not alter the necessity of rebuying her "to make good the path" of her children. For this purpose they decided to give a copper and a sum of money; it was impossible to learn the exact amount. Joe told Captain Schooner of their intention. 764 159 [583]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

About noon the body was brought in a canoe from the cannery in its closed coffin and lifted ashore at a convenient spot near the cemetery. Those manning the canoe were young men who happened to be at the cannery, irrespective of whether or not they were related to Jessie. The coffin was laid on a grassy place and Captain Schooner seated himself beside it. People were passing and repassing, some sat down for a time, then moved off to dinner. Occasionally, a woman would sit and wail, the most constant being Reuben's married daughter; Captain Schooner moved around talking to his friends amidst the eerie wailing. About 1.30 P.M. everyone in the village had assembled, including a number of Carrier Indians, anxious to see the sight. Captain Schooner withdrew to his house after asking Bobby Nebby to summon the chiefs to meet him there. The messenger, who thus acted as herald, went around the gathering whispering to each; in addition to those notified at the cannery the preceding evening he called all the older and most influential Bella Coola, Albert King, Samuel King, Joe Williams, Joshua Moody, Alec Davis, Lame Charlie, Judas, and Nebuchadnezzar. Captain Schooner requested the last named, an important chief, to take charge of the ceremony. At this time Samuel King told Nebuchadnezzar, who informed the others, what had been arranged for his daughter and they agreed that it was good. It was tacitly assumed that George Nelson would be delighted; probably he had been on friendly terms with the girl for some time. Joe Williams also told Nebuchadnezzar the two business propositions that he intended to carry out, the return of the money to Captain Schooner, and the rebuying of his daughter. Nebuchadnezzar informed the people concerned. At this meeting it was decided that various chiefs should speak after the Christian service at the grave. [203] [584] [537]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

●764 159 Meanwhile the rest of the population was sitting near the coffin. They wore no special dress or other mark of grief. Samuel King and some of his relatives had brought bundles containing Jessie's clothing, pots, pans, and other personal possessions, which they set down near the coffin. About two [533] [177] o'clock the band gathered and began to play, the favourite selection being "Annie Laurie." This went on for some time after the return of the chiefs from Captain Schooner's house. They had decided that Täl·io Jenny, one of Captain Schooner's distant relatives, should carry the fire in front of the body. When all was ready she lit a bundle of rags, placed it in a pot, and set off for the cemetery, followed by all in a straggling and orderless procession. Some strong young men bore the coffin, for Jessie must have weighed over two hundred pounds; some brought tools for digging the grave; others took the bundles of clothing. There was no fixed allotment of tasks; a man or woman carried anything or nothing according to his or her wish.

The cemetery is situated about fifty yards behind the old village of Ḷomqo·ts. The heavy timber has all been cut away and second growth has sprung up everywhere except around the newer graves. Captain Schooner had decided that his daughter should be buried near several of her relatives, and it was to this spot that Jenny led the procession. She set the pot down near the site of the grave, and the coffin likewise was placed on the ground nearby. Captain Schooner, Jim Pollard, and a few of the other old men chose the exact situation and a number of the young men began to dig. Jenny, and other women, added pieces of Jessie's clothing to the fire so that a constant small blaze was kept up. As the grave was being dug [533] the band performed at intervals, while the women sat wailing near the fire. Other men and women were seated on the ground or walking around idly near the grave, talking but seldom laughing, while the Carriers were a little farther away. [852] Children were playing around. The grave was dug about five feet deep, in shape corresponding to the coffin, but orientation was not carefully observed. Those wishing to dig took turns with the tools; there was no supervision, and no orders given. When the grave was ready, Jim Pollard asked Judas to perform the rite with the spruce bough, which he did with a branch brought by one of the youths. The young men lowered the coffin into the grave while the band continued to play. The missionary then read the Christian burial service, after which he withdrew. Some of the young men brought planks from old houses near-by, sawed them to the size of the grave and laid them over the coffin as a cover. At this juncture Judas, one of the oldest and most conservative of the Bella Coola, rose to speak. First he offered consolation to the mourning relatives by pointing out that all must travel the same road. Then he spoke to Jessie, telling her not to linger, but to travel back the path of her ancestors from generation to generation until she reached the place where they first came down from above, and thence to ascend to Nusmät·a. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of the speech, which was punctuated by calls of "Ye·" from the male Bella Coola. The next speaker was Jim Pollard, the most influential Kimsquit and a personal friend, though not a relative, of Captain Schooner's.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 159 [533] [797] 764 159 537

"Go," he said to the dead woman, "Go to the localities from which came your first forefathers in the beginning of time. There you will find your most valuable ancestral possessions. Go at once, do not linger and lose yourself on the road from generation to generation."

Turning to George Nelson, he went on, "Do not be downhearted, all of us must travel the same road. It was made by no man, it is the work of Älquntäm."

Looking back once more to the grave, he said, "In Qomqo·ts are buried many illustrious relatives of yours. You will be among friends, whereas we are left to lament your departure."

It was impossible to write down the words at the time and the above record is not literally correct, although it expresses the gist of the speech. [126]

Captain Schooner whispered to Robert Hood, another of the 764 159 203 769 556*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 older Bella Coola, asking him to announce that he, Schooner, 159 with Dan and George, was going to hold a memorial potlatch that evening to which all were invited. Robert is not a herald [203] but undertook this duty owing to the absence of qualified 769 heralds. Meanwhile the grave had been filled in and the *[556] people began to drift away as it rose to ground level. Their attitude throughout had resembled that of white people at a funeral, and the hilariousness that characterizes so many [852] Bella Coola gatherings was entirely absent except among the playing children. By 4.30 P.M. all had left the scene.

769 In view of the large number of guests expected it had been decided to hold the memorial potlatch, not in one of the old-
*556 fashioned houses, but in the village hall, built according to the [344] white man's style of architecture and illuminated with swinging [354] gasoline lamps. This is a large, rectangular building, undivided by partitions, with a stage at one end and a door at the other.
[533] About 6.30 P.M. the singers, Nebuchadnezzar, Jim Pollard, Billy Pollard, Alec Davis, Kimsquit Alec, and Robert Hood, gathered at the hall and seated themselves below the stage.
Billy Pollard had prepared a mourning song during the day, Kimsquit Alec another, and it was decided to use two others that were well known to all. The singers sat and practised these four for some time, while at intervals various Bella Coola strolled in, listened for a few minutes, then walked out again.
Anyone was allowed to do so, but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile Captain Schooner had brought 264 $10 worth of rice, raisins, and condensed milk which he placed 769 beside a huge iron cauldron outside the front door. Jim To-
*556 Morrow, a Bella Coola of no great intelligence, volunteered to act as cook and soon had a fire blazing and the food boiling.

About 8.00 P.M. the people began to assemble, bringing their own plates and other utensils. After considerable delay and chatter, the guests took their places in the hall, seating themselves regardless of rank on benches ranged along the two side walls and massed at the rear. By mutual consent a portion of the single row of benches along the left wall was reserved

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

769 these various amounts making $864 when added to the previous $410.[41]

* 556 It was first decided to give a present to everyone as "Eagle Down Shaken Off by the Dead Woman." Captain Schooner and his assistants thought first of the bottom house in the village, remembered who lived in it, then, after a little more discussion, agreed upon the amount each should receive. This was whispered to Nebuchadnezzar, who held up a bill and called out, for example:

"$10 for so-and-so."

A number of young men had volunteered as messengers and one of them took the money to the designated recipient. After giving to all in the bottom house, they passed to the next above it, and so in succession for the whole village. Absentees were remembered and their presents received by friends or relatives. Kusiut names were used because Nebuchadnezzar was unfamiliar with the little-used ancestral designations. Contrary to ancient usage, the amounts varied; some chiefs received as much as $20, a child, $1, or 50 cents. Each recipient accepted his gift without showing whether it was more or less than he had expected. There was not sufficient change, so that five persons were often named together and a $5 bill given to the first mentioned for sharing with the other four, a transaction always carried out honestly. Many of the Carriers [609] were strangers, so they could not be rewarded in accordance with their rank, but $50 was given to one of their chiefs to share as he thought fit.

465 Not all the money was distributed in this way. Payments 769 had to be made to those who had assisted at the funeral. Gifts were bestowed upon the women who had washed and dressed * 556 the corpse; to the men who had helped to make the coffin; to the canoe-men who had brought the body to Bella Coola; to ● 764 the pall-bearers; to the grave-diggers; to the woman who had carried the fire; to the singers, especially to those who had [41] The exact sums contributed by Samuel King and George Nelson could not be learnt.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

composed the tunes used; to the carpenter who had prepared 465 and used the masked figure; to the members of the band, 769 including a payment for their services whenever Dan Nelson's child should die; to a carpenter to erect a fence around the 556* grave; to another to cut the representation of an eagle on a 764 stone to be erected over the grave; to the speakers at the funeral; to the speakers at the rite then taking place; to those who delivered the money; to the youth who, with pencil and paper, assisted in keeping accounts; to the cook, and to all others who had assisted in any manner. In every case the amount was announced, the bill held up, the name of the recipient stated, the reason for his reward, and the money was then taken to him by a messenger. Captain Schooner really decided how much each should receive, he being in the best position to judge what was suitable, and there being no fixed scale of charges to help him. Work paid for in advance, such as the erection of the fence, was carefully carried out.

A little money had been kept to validate the assumption 769 of ancestral names by several children of the Schooner family. 556* Everyone received a small amount, a child sometimes as trifling a sum as 25 cents. Captain Schooner had virtually 553 chosen who was to receive which designation, although he 425 received advice from all his relatives. Harry Schooner's infant was given the name, Pätcätcus, a reference to the manner in which the first beams of the morning sun strike the lofty summit of Mount Nusqalst. Reuben's son was called eltmäls, a Snulle·tl designation connected with the crash when the first Song fell. The myths in which these names were embodied were not expounded; in fact, they had been almost forgotten, even by Captain Schooner. Täl·io Jenny wished to transmit one of her names to Andy Schooner's infant; this was announced in the same way as the others and validated with them by the gifts to all. Jenny had not contributed to the common stock, but some of it was used with the understanding that she would later repay. Nebuchadnezzar announced the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"She was my daughter, I have a right to do as I like." 768

Samuel King and the others accepted the exchange as a matter of course and made no comments. Captain Schooner took no part in the burning of his daughter's goods, this being the task of those with whom she had been living, and who accordingly knew which were hers. The fire was kindled by a married daughter of Reuben Schooner, though it could have been done equally well by any woman. On the following 783 morning, July 1, Samuel King went with a friend to the forest 764 and passed four times through a small spruce sapling bent into an arch. This was the last incident in the funeral rites.

Fate of the Dead

LIFE OF THE DEAD

Little need be added to the account given in vol. I, chap. 775
II of the fate of those parts of a man which go at death to Nusmät·a. The spirit and the life travel back the path of the deceased's ancestors from generation to generation until they reach the place where his first forefather came to earth and where his cloak, if he had worn one, floated back after his alteration to human form. When the spirit and the life of a descendant reach the spot, they change into a being having the form of the cloak, and so return to Nusmät·a. The spirit and the life of one who is a member of several ancestral families visit the localities where the transformations to human shape of all his ancestors occurred. The Bella Coola believe that these two elements can assume many crest forms, but they do not know whether this entails the simultaneous assumption of many shapes to comprise a composite figure; or whether the spirit and the life, which become a single entity in the case of a member of one ancestral family, become multiple for one who is a member of several. When lamenting a dead person, mention is always made of the various scenes which he will have visited, and the forms he will have assumed. At a memorial potlatch, the deceased may return as a hybrid, or as tries to speak to living relatives, but his whistling anguage is 775 unintelligible and frightens the hearer. Ghosts dislike urine, and the only means known to keep them away fron a house is [789] to sprinkle this liquid outside the door, a common Bella Coola custom. There is no actual danger in hearing a ghost, and 761 little even in seeing one, provided the observer doe not relate his experience, but should he try to do so, somethig happens 775 to his mouth as if an invisible hand had been clamped over it 753 to prevent his words issuing forth. He can neitler eat nor drink and soon dies.[48] It is possible that other beings are responsible for this same affliction, but as no suffer has ever been able to explain the cause of his ailment, no one knows.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The most dangerous ghost is that of a person who, buried [764] without a nose-ring, is unable to disintegrate into his elements.
The sight of such an apparition causes almost immeliate death through contraction and closing of the mouth.

An unpleasant habit of ghosts is the throwing of stones at 775 the living. This is done partly from a love of mischief, and partly to remind their relatives of their needs. An old Kimsquit man described how, when encamped on King Island, he had almost been struck by a stone which seemed to fall from a tree. He realized that it must have been thrown by a ghost, [753] and his opinion was confirmed when he found he could not [755] speak. He instantly built a fire and cast on it both food and clothing as offerings to the dead, which had the effect of loosening his mouth. Pondering on the reason, he remembered that one of his relatives had died not far away, and that he had failed to give him any crumbs for a long time. In this case, as in many others, the stone was visible, though the thrower remained invisible.

Even near approach to ghosts is sometimes dangerous. The same man related how, when hunting, he heard what he thought was the note of a water ouzel, and passed by heedlessly. In a few minutes he thought he heard the cackling of geese, but the sound, instead of continuing to come from a pond a few hun-

[48]The disease attributed to the actions of ghosts may be lock-jaw. [164]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

them renders it more likely that they will grant his requests. Therefore, a shaman is usually called upon to perform the following rites: 756* 782

(1) Washing the mouth of a person who has died without voiding from his body the first salmon or olachen of the season (I, p. 436). [764]

(2) Asking assistance for the complicated rites of the potlatch (I, p. 192). [556]

(3) Request for assistance before starting on a journey, by puffing eagle down into the air (I, p. 106). [484]

(4) Request for aid by means of placing food on the water and blowing eagle down into the air at Mesatche Nose and Kwatna (I, p. 109).

In fact a supplication to any supernatural being can be made with greater prospect of success by a shaman than by any other person.

The Power of Shamans

As has been said, a shaman actually has power within himself, and this is so strong that it may be a source of danger to others. If a man should pass behind one so endowed when the latter is eating, his spirit would be drawn from his body into the shaman's mouth, which would close with a click, crushing the spirit and killing the man. This is quite involuntary on the part of the shaman. It happened more than once among the early inhabitants, and since that time people have been very careful not to pass behind an eating shaman; this taboo was still in force until about 1885. A shaman, too, is said to be able to recall a spirit which has left its body, and thus caused illness. It is believed by some that shamans can see the position of a person's tally post, and so judge the length of his life. These examples show the varying beliefs of different Bella Coola concerning the powers of shamans. 756* [761] [264] [178] [755]

But the force within the shaman is really more dangerous to its possessor than to others. As certain "unclean" objects are able to subdue supernatural beings, so do these same ob- 756* 783 841

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

doings, and offered to make them members of the kusiut society in return for their silence. Though uninitiated persons, even this tempting bribe was refused by the two youths. Next, each of the malefactors offered a daughter as wife to each of the partners, and they accepted this bargain. For their part, the sorcerers were glad to escape at any cost, since they had been caught red-handed; they knew that henceforth they would have to assist their captors, but this was preferable to exposure. 539 754

The two groups parted company; the boys continued their journey to the upper village and the sorcerers went on their way to some cave in the mountains. Within a few weeks, each youth married the daughter of one of the malefactors, with whose assistance they were able to give potlatches and become influential personages.

A FAMILY OF KWATNA SORCERERS

Near the village of Kwatna there used to be two cemeteries. One was on a small point of ground at the mouth of the river which became an island at high tide; here were interred the bodies of chiefs alone, a custom said to be without parallel on the coast. It is not known why there should have been this special burial-ground, but the place was always spoken of as "The Chiefs' Island." Instead of being buried, coffins containing commoners were laid on ledges of rock at the base of a cliff behind the village; this custom, though unusual, is known elsewhere on the coast, at Kimsquit and Port Simpson, for example. [764 171]

Many generations ago, there was a time when the corpses of commoners frequently disappeared from the ledges on which they had been placed, and although it was believed that a sorcerer was responsible, no one knew whom to blame. One old woman had lost nearly all her numerous relatives when she realized that, though there had been many deaths in the village and some families had been almost wiped out, no members of one group had been taken. This roused her suspicions; she soon noticed that whenever anyone was sick, four brothers of the family in question always made some plausible excuse to leave the village and proceed up the other arm of the inlet. She concluded that this could be no mere coincidence, the four must be sorcerers. Within a short while, another of her relatives fell ill and died in spite of all that could be done; this reduced her family to herself and her infant. On the day after the funeral, the four brothers said that they wanted to gather hemlock boughs and set off in a canoe up the other arm of the inlet for the purpose. They did not come back at night and the villagers assumed that they had been delayed and had camped. The bereaved woman, however, who had hidden herself below the village, saw the brothers paddle back around the ālqim: Something long sought-for on account of its especial desirability, such as well-grained wood.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

ālqim was mnas: Child whose parents were long engaged and who is accordingly regarded as being well prepared for. [554] ālqlus: Susook initiate concealed within the back-room.
Ālqnulis: One of the first men to settle in Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
ālqo: Guests at a potlatch.
Alqoxunkam, "The Shelterer": Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
ālłpmātmis, "What Has Been Shaken Off": Term applied to presents distributed when a corpse has been carried through the roof. The implication is that they are dust shaken from the fingers of the deceased. [431] [764] Ālquntām: 1—The supreme god.
2—One of the first men to settle on the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
4—Tail of a Stunx repository.
Alquntāmaāks: 1—Mountain on the north side of the lower Bella Coola.
2—Name assumed by one of the first settlers at Snuhli in the beginning of time.
ālłwallaixelx: Old people, especially parents; this is a polite term for direct address. [601] Ālłwathintutl: Supernatural artisans who made mankind in the beginning of time. [576] ālq"il: Presents given to validate the initiation of a kusiut.
Alqwutimut: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [431] ālāmnuskwanāhmx: Professional mourner.
ālāmnuyaiyetl: Professional droner at marriages. [463] ālāmyaanx: Professional hunter.
ālāmyelit: Professional warrior.
Ālukan·i: Kimsquit fisherman living in the last century.
ālē'xu: Olachen net.
Ālisiāx: Celebrated hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
ālłskt ol di łwalum: Second oldest sibling. [601] Ālissmos: Repository of a Kimsquit Cannibal where cures are effected. ālutuemlk: Professional warrior. [463] ālutuxaiāxum: Professional river guard.
Ālwolsqāmus: Mountain near mouth of the Kimsquit River.
ālukwala: Shaman.
ālulixwstmm: 1—Meeting of those who have given potlatches. [753]
2—Unidentified disease said to attack only chiefs.
ālultimut: Marriage associates, i.e. those who, not being relatives, wish to associate themselves with the bride's family in the financial transactions of a marriage.
Ālunłkāmtmm: Name applied to the supernatural artisans with reference to their construction of everything used by mankind.
Āluskinwaxam, "Cloud-Covered": Name applied to the supernatural being Noākxnm with reference to his frequent invisibility.
Āluskman·aix, "The Highest of All Chiefs' Sons:" Name of Smaoan's son in the beginning of time.
Ālus·limāu, "Falling Star-Fish": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.
Alusqox, "The Roof-Maker": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.
ālvālāk: One who has received a commission for carpentry work in preparation for a potlatch. [465]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

mixmixqulp: Leaf of salalberry.
mla·madjut: 1—Omen of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence, [824]
2—Smallpox. [787]
mlka: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mna, vocative, mnao: Child. [601]
Mnakais: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mnk': Excreta.
mnmnts, vocative, mnmnnicän·i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to children when used by an old person. [614]
mnskänmaxts: The commemoration of a chief's potlatches and other major ceremonies by means of plain posts erected near his grave. [211]
Mnilato·smm, Tide-Measurer: A supernatural being. [764] Mstelos: Man mentioned in a song.
Mtlakila: Supernatural being who gives potency to sisaok rites.
mtletsts: Grandiloquent expression used by the kukusiut with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives. [776]* mtlälosäm: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living. [775]
2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
mok': Pounded, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
mokwaks: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by kusiut initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
moqla: Lice.
moqwila: Adolescent youth. [825]
moxmoxk': Blue grouse.
moxmoulolkänds: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion. [301] mu: Hand net for catching olachen. [227] mudcämhekstn: Yellow cedar stave decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
mustomax: Wrestling.
Mutan·a: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nain'akwas: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Nä'mu: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Namu.
nän·: Grizzly bear.
Nänäntlis: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time. [825] Nänätl: Kusiut name of a Nusqalst man.
Nänätskwi: One of the first men to settle at Stmx in the beginning of time.
Nänäskwitl: One of the names of Mount Nusqalst as chief.
nän·imnt: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling. [827]
Naas: Indeterminate locality in the distant east. [15.2]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nusefa: The visit to every house in the village by a Mystery dancer on receipt of his call.
nusiemi, plural, nunusiemi: Singer.
nusikwkta: Quiver for carrying arrows. [415] Nusimusta: Mountain near Astu·an·i.
nusiutāls or nusiutālsap: Second day of a kusiut dance.
Nusixilaixaikm: Synonym for Tutwai·es: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
nuskasiutsta: Repository.
nuskoli: Any unusual occurrence, regarded as an omen of death. [763] Nuskolālnumsta, "Whence Things Came Down": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nusfelusta: Wash-basin, especially the supernatural one that remains in the land above.
Nuskiayk: 1—Supernatural being presiding over the Land of Ashes.
2—Locality on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, not far from the head.
Nuskmāta: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.
Nuskumidjusta: Axe carried in the beginning of time by the man who was later turned to stone as Mount Nusfalst. 2
Nuskumnāt: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.
Nu·skokhnmg: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
nuskotla: Wasps' nest. [825]
Nuskwalnkānda: One of the first women to settle at Snuisli in the beginning of time.
nuskwanātsta: House in which a memorial potlatch is being held.
Nu·lāum: Mountain on south side of lower Bella Coola.
Nuslexwgmawdum, "The Cherished One": Designation applied to one of the sons of Alquntām.
nushusta: House in which a potlatch is taking place.
nushmg: One who has gone to give potlatches in a new sphere; this rhetorical expression is commonly used when referring to a dead chief. [195] nustkāksta: Wash-basin used by a shaman when curing.
Nustkakstāmidjut, "He Whose Wash-Basin Is in His Own Body": One of Tlitcaplilāu·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans. [756] nustkumaksta: Enclosure behind fire in which kusiut dancers are secluded. [764] nustkwutsa: Cleansing rites in connection with death.
Nustukwaltmg: Tlsiyākum name acquired by a Kimsquit man as a result of a supernatural experience.
Nusmālermai: 1—Eagle that perched on a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time.
2—Name, derived from that of the eagle, of one of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Nusmāt·a: 1—"Place of Stories": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nusfalst in the beginning of time.
Nusmāt·aiau·a, "Woman of Nusmāt·a": Probably wife of Alquntām.
Nus·mālleix: Mountain on north side of lower Bella Coola.
Nusmālliumsix: Subterranean chamber in which rivers were confined in the beginning of time. [772]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

sḷxqalikw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Stcā·tsxom: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
stcuq": That part of a house on either side of the central fire. [513] Stcitoma: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being.
2—Sleep, intangible kusiut prerogative.
stciusnām: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Ṣtcqwastlustkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] ste·ptl: Shadow.
stetqumas: Hammer, archaic. [412]
stekao: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
sḷiatmālxs: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other. [601] stihua: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
stiṗ: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] shikx: 1—Caribou hide.
2—Thong made of caribou hide. [825] shxom: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285] sḷiaxkt: Caribou.
sihms: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Sihmsila: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] sihmstā or sihmstānālos: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
sihmstaliktsta: Body.
sihmstānālosām: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Sihwaxwakniman·a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Sihwaxwekanam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] sihka: Mountain goat grease.
sḷskālaya: Castor. [824]
Sḷskiut, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Slskla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
sismas: Octopus. [825]
Sisoakulxs: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
sisqwasma: Red rock paint. [386]
sisla: Singer's baton. ṣlsulk: Text.
sliła·qaxs: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823] stuin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased.
Stuxx: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [764]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story. [262] stutum: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
stutusilks: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sukulil: Black raspberry. [824] sulatu: Ocean.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [823] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected againt the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or olachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the bones of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

1: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

796
765

/For information on the details of the memorial potlatch ceremonies for the dead, see category 769./

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 578 Island chief was felt by the Bella Coola to be quite natural; one of their own chiefs might have resented the insult in the same manner. This account may have no historical basis, but it is a clear example of Bella Coola sentiment.

*556 648 558 [765] Further examples may help to clarify this point. A few years ago a number of Kwakiutl Indians visited Bella Coola to perform a mourning ceremony in honour of a deceased Bella Coola who had a Kwakiutl name from his grandfather, a member of that tribe. All the natives were invited to a large house, where the visitors gave a dance according to their own ancestral myths; the songs which were used recounted the history of the Kwakiutl name of the dead man. After thus displaying their prerogatives, they felt themselves obliged, and proud, as hosts, to give presents as validation. The sum of $546 was distributed among the guests. Realizing that it would be impossible to return such a sum by holding ceremonials in Fort Rupert, the home of the Kwakiutl, the leading Bella Coola decided to return the compliment immediately. The amount to be given was discussed at great length. Appreciating the courtesy of the foreigners in thus coming to pay honour to the deceased, it was not wished to insult them by giving a larger present, which would have had the effect of intimating that the recipients considered the $546 a trifling amount. Accordingly it was finally agreed to give the visitors about $300, which was done as validation of a Bella Coola ceremony at which the strangers were present. Thus the hosts allowed themselves to be shamed as a mark of courtesy. Not to be outdone in politeness, the Kwakiutl chief made a speech, expressing his willingness to allow the Bella Coola to drive him (this occurred in the days of horses and carts) to the wharf to take the steamer. In other words, he allowed the Bella Coola to put him in their debt, as they had allowed him and his party to do with respect to the distribution of money. The visit terminated with friendly relations maintained on both sides.

123 533 *556 424 The need of validating every ceremonial act by presents can be further illustrated by the following instance. When a man, ư-wnaisa, with the prerogative of enforcing obedience 424 to river taboos. Ever since, the owner of this name, when it 463 has been duly legalized, has had the right to perform this function. In some cases, such as carpenters and singers, the validation of a prerogative has not brought with it the necessary 551 693 ability, so that the incumbent remains a properly ratified, but [793] non-functioning, craftsman. No mechanical skill is required by a River Guardian, hence the owner of the name ư-wnaisa has always been able to perform his duties.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

From time immemorial certain restrictions have been en- 784 forced concerning the river: No refuse may be thrown in, 825 otherwise the olachen would remain in the ocean. For the same reason, women at certain periods are not allowed to bathe 226 lest a speck of blood should blind the fish and prevent them [515] from seeing the route. Occasionally an olachen with red eyes 841 is caught; this is caused by some heedless woman. When the [562] fish are running in the river, women are not allowed on the bank, nor to repair the nets. At high tide, it is forbidden to drive stakes for olachen nets.

The number of prohibitions increases during the critical period of the salmon run. Then no freshly hewn planks can [502] be set afloat, and even a canoe which has just been completed must be kept for ten days before launching. No one whose [765] husband or wife has died within the last year can embark at the village, but must proceed to a landing-place at the head of the fiord. Most important of all, refuse of salmon must be deposited in the woods; if thrown into the river, the fish would smell it and avoid the stream. Even accidents such as the upsetting of a canoe, or the spilling of olachen grease, are considered to be offences.

Disregard of any of these injunctions is displeasing to the 688 salmon and it is the duty of the River Guardian to punish the 693 offender, irrespective of his rank. In case of slight infringements, he beats the guilty person or throws him into the river. The guilty person usually scrambles out, but should he be swept away and drowned, no recompense can be claimed by entertained such kindly sentiments towards him that he would be glad to have his friend receive it.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In recent years the number of incombustible objects has increased enormously with the introduction of metal utensils, gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully placed near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not resent an open transfer; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undoubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange is a rare event and would cause animosity if carried out by anyone except a near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected over his grave, a common Bella Bella custom. This is built immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The sorrowing relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no other mark for the grave is put up until a memorial potlatch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-parsnips, which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave; they are food belonging to the dead person. The white man has taught the Bella Coola how to plant apple-trees and these are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath. The Bella Bella are said formerly to have replaced at intervals the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bella Coola practice. Indeed, a grave is never

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Indeed, a grave is never 765 disturbed except, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a [789] portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the [761] opener, so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

768 Burning or deposition near the grave is not restricted to the actual utensils and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be laid dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready [764] by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person seems indescribably indecent. In recent years, the crop, if a man dies after tilling and sowing a field, is allowed to ripen, and then rot unharvested. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is [761] apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that [784] has been in contact with a corpse.

The rituals described above may be considered as religious 764 in nature; almost equally important are the social require-431 ments of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This 556 indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members of the ancestral family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite [614] manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the woman who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way. Failure to do so brands the relatives as misers with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kimsquit is called Sqlan'li, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [825] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [626] [302] [834] [587] [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

765 religious rites affecting the whole community. In spite of the prohibitions enforced, it is said that a widow or widower usually becomes fat after the death of a partner. This observation agrees with several instances known to the writer, but whether it is of universal application is doubtful, although the Bella Coola emphatically state that this is the case.

Memorial Rites

THE MEMORIAL POTLATCH

177 556 769 [622] The most important, as well as the most complicated, mourning rite is the memorial potlatch, skwanät, for which so much wealth is required that it can be carried out by chiefs alone. This ceremony, being associated with sisaok rites, has altered enormously in form within recent years. Before the introduction of cone-shaped whistles and other foreign elements, it was almost indistinguishable from an ordinary potlatch and the two were occasionally combined, having as central feature the return of the deceased in the form of his crest. Among the tribes of the outer coast, especially the Bella Bella, the two types of ceremonial were apparently distinct, and as the Bella Coola adopted more and more of their neighbours' sisaok ritual, they followed their custom in this respect as well. It is said that a certain Noäkila, uncle of a man about sixty years of age in 1922, was the last to combine both. The Bella Bella felt that he had thereby committed a ritual error for which he would be punished; within a few years he died, and the Bella Coola assumed that this was due to the unanimous expectation of his death on the part of the Bella Bella. From that time onwards, the Bella Coola were careful to separate features belonging to potlatches from those of memorial potlatches.

After a comparatively few years, the white man's domin- [648] ation had increased so enormously on the central coast that the potlatch, including both types, was prohibited by law. Owing to the consequent difficulty of performing complicated

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 messengers may be marked with the same ritual as at a pot-769 latch, but there is always curtailment of susaok features if rites of that nature are to be omitted.

Meanwhile other preparations have not been neglected.
424 Among the prerogatives embodied in many origin myths, is that of the presence of professional mourners at memorial
*556 potlatches. If mention of these is made in the ancient tradi-769 tion of the donor's ancestral family, it is a matter of pride for [767] him to do as was done by his ancestors in the distant past. For example, it may be recorded that at the memorial potlatch of some ancient chief, a number of his younger relatives appeared with red paint smeared upon their faces, with finely chopped undyed cedar-bark in the hair, or with bands of the [765] same material across their heads. Ałquntäm had decreed that they should thus exhibit their grief, and the descendants of the chief have since had the privilege of doing likewise. Such signs of mourning may not, however, be worn without proper validation. It is only the members of the ancestral family who are entitled to don these marks, and among them, only those whose right has been confirmed by the distribution of presents. This is a masculine professional prerogative, known [562] by the same name as the feminine one of uttering a droning cry to which it is closely akin. The right is ratified at memorial potlatches, and the donor of one is glad to do so as a means of displaying his own wealth as well as of making plain the glory of his ancestors to whom the one being commemorated has [767] returned. There is no mention of professional mourners in [171] the myths of many families, nor are they ever as important in Bella Coola as among the Bella Bella and other tribes of the outer coast. If such belong to the family of the donor, he notifies the incumbents and asks them to be ready, although, eager to act, they seldom wait for such an invitation.

533 The most difficult task is the preparation of mourning songs
*556 at which the singers toil for several weeks. The donor first invites them to his house and recounts the myths from which 769 they must be composed. These may include several traditions

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*
586
578

wax·munmuisumnimotnu	si·xwotldimutnudja	xwas·iāsqiliqsoals
you are the prey of misfortune,	you unmarried mother;	you are sqili(d), you women
xwas'lālye·ya·lusals	Ānāna	Yumtcaia	somtcaia who pretend to be virtuous(e).	Alas(f)!	I am ashamed,	I am Som(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Qānmaxwulxs·alotskidax	dāsboitldtsālotskidsaix	*yao oldistānābsul·ux*ʷ
Exactly similar	is the little boy's nose	to that of the round-headed aiyaoyaqolosdidai	Ānāna	Yumtcaia	somtcaia
Qolosti(h).	Alas!	I am ashamed,	I am Som.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) This differs from most Hāiyākum songs in that Som was an unmarried mother, not a faithless wife. She was held up to scorn by the men of Kimsquit and this song composed for her by a certain Blo·qwas. [848]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 38a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) It is said that women, even of slave blood, used to endeavour to increase their importance in the eyes of their children by boasting, falsely, of ancestral history. [554]

(d) A term of opprobrium, difficult to translate. It is said to imply slave ancestry, but is more probably a mere epithet, referring to the female organs. [195]

(e) This is addressed to women in general.

(f) An expression of pain or sorrow, used under all circumstances. [192]

(g) The theme is here changed as if it were Som herself speaking. This is a common device in all kinds of songs.

(h) Qolosti was supposed to be the father of Som's child.

Mourning Songs

533*

Mourning songs excel all other Bella Coola compositions in length, complexity, and wealth of detail. Especially those composed for mighty chiefs contain numerous references to the ancestral history of the deceased and mention incidents referred to in origin myths, a source of pride to the survivors and of envy to those who listen. [765] [766]

Song Used for Qowi when Mourning his Son, Qwinas(a)

A Sūmalma	waxlākdatoms	Hālinaywao	sānābsulhpai
Why has my son done so(b)?		Come, ye who are residents of foreign lands(c)

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(h) That is: I incorporate myself into.

(i) The reference is to another of Sinuxut's myths dealing with the coming to earth of Hamcat near Kimsquit. Nunuḡsmāls was the name of his house. 533*

(j) Referring to Goose Island once more.

(k) That is: Goose Island where our relatives, the Bella Bella, get their food, had just emerged and become visible. It was impossible to obtain a separate translation of these two subdivisions.

(l) Referring again to Goose Island. This small piece of land is shaped like a whale, and, as already described, it was originally one. Ālqunṭām bade the animal come to the surface to be changed to stone; then Wāāku settled there as soon as the water had dried from what had been its back. [773] [823]

(m) The literal translation of each subsection may be inaccurate.

Song Used for Yeālos of Kimsquit(a)

A Yenaoisandax	wakwalundal	sābxwaixisundai	disonx̄ʷsudai
It is good(b);	our(c)?	has lifted	the sky(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Q̄āqwaxqwisandai(e)	disiutsudai	skāaiyaldumdai
He was Raven(f),	the supernatural one	when he descended dinulunikāsdai

the post(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Snuqwla·xlisundai	distālhmxdai	yeyālosdai	sāliplisdai
He is bright(h),	the chief	Yeālos;	he carries siāsxwilāklaixi	dilāliās·udai

a unique	copper(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 47a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been composed over one hundred years ago and since used repeatedly.

(b) With the significance of: It is highly satisfactory.

(c) The meaning of this word is obscure. It refers to the crest of Yeālos with the added implication of a memorial. It applies to the memorial rite being given. [765] [152]

(d) When a chief dies, it is said that the people in their grief feel as if the sky were pressing them down. A memorial rite lessens their sorrow and lifts the burden.

(e) When this word was being sung for the phonograph, the singer erred and replaced it by part of the first word of the third part.

(f) That is: He was in the form of a raven. The reference is to one of the first ancestors of Yeālos.

(g) Meaning one of the posts which stretched between earth and sky in the beginning of time. [773]

(h) This refers to Yeālos. He was formerly weighed down with grief, but by giving a memorial rite he is like the sun as it shines out brilliantly from behind the clouds.

(i) A reference to a special kind of copper mentioned in the chief's origin myth.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

C Wasiḳwiltsamälsnkja I fear the coming	äldiḳwatlnusamdai figure(g),	yao disno'oyulxultäs hail Sno'olxults

yao Älquntaiämsudai Älquntäm(h).

(a) This song was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of an infant into the society. The full ritual was not performed on that occasion, and it was impossible to learn the proper procedure. The neophyte's patron is Sno'olxults Älquntäm, whose protégés are usually Scratch or Breaker dancers, but Änudukänuts has neither of these prerogatives. [776]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 49, National Museum of Canada; trio, Reuben Schooner, Täl-io Charlie, and Jim Pollard, the last-named acting as announcer. This song was composed by Reuben Schooner.

(c) The theme is worded as if the neophyte were speaking to the uninitiated whose ranks he has just left.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(e) This refers either to supernatural power or to some object imbued with it.

(f) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions. The meaning of the whole is obscure, although the implication is that the dancer now knows everything having, figuratively, forced open the repository.

(g) More accurately, the memorial figure; the meaning is obscure.

(h) The dancer's patron.

Kusiut MOURNING SONGS

533*
765 ●
575 ×

Several prominent kukusiut died during the spring and summer of 1923. Memorial rites of the usual nature were held, but in addition several kusiut mourning songs were composed and used in their honour during the next ceremonial season. When a relative was initiated, his song contained numerous references and words of the type normally restricted to mourning songs. Such a combination may occasionally have taken place in former times, but the present comparatively common usage is due to the difficulty of holding regular potlatches. In each case the kusiut rites were abbreviated, and no description of the proper ceremonial was obtained. The following are examples of combined kusiut and mourning songs:

[766]
[777]
533*

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Kitlmintämem: The chasm that keeps a foolish man from success as a chief; the concept is semi-anthropomorphized.

kitsän: First catamenial discharge.

Kilde·t: ustämx village.

kixta: Supernatural creature dwelling in the ocean.

[756] Kiyekdmut: Shaman who received power from ghosts.

Kumsixwalaxtsta: Bella Coola hunter.

*[103] Kumxkwt, "Canyon": Bella Bella designation for the Dean River, whence the anglicized Kimsquit has been derived.

Kindust: Nass River.

Kinlkinl: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

[825] kints: 1—Whale.
2—Ancestral name of a Tal·io woman; this is said to be an exclusively feminine designation.

Klak"amot: 1—Name acquired by a Bella Bella man in the beginning of time.
2—Influential Qomqo·ts chief, who died about 1910.

[825] k'lax"u: Muskrat.

klp: White fir (?).

[824] kman·i: Herring.

kmxdjut: Prerogative of biting oneself.

knum: Dried salmon.

knumdjut: Synonym for ähukla: one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of masked representations of the deceased. The word is derived from knum.

[825] kokolikum: Porpoise.

Kokostxum: Supernatural being who behaves in an erratic manner.

[845] ko'la: Twin whose birth is attributed to salmon.

[824] Ko'laints: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

koluloxo: Unidentified berry (strawberry?).

Kolxeta: Supernatural female shaman who guided Winwina.

Kol·iaiyuhmx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.

kolku"hmx, "Earthy Ones": Ghosts.

koluhmx: Land, region, earth.

[533] kolulo·s: First part of song.

Kotink': Treeless mountain about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.

[825] Kpapstustusailaix, "The One Who Makes Us Fat": Supernatural name of cohoe salmon.

[765] kpustmm: Goods distributed to validate songs used at a mourning ceremony when no representation of the deceased has been employed.

[578] kqosnäm: Insult offered to foreigners at potlatches concerning their manners or food.

[609] krämkusaix or krämkusnäm: Synonym for kslämkusnäm, investment-present.[1]

[426] Ksmnimmdmut: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] kukpi, vocative, kukpai: Grandfather.

kukusiutak: Kusiut ceremonial at which foreigners are present.

kuhx: The construction of salmon-weirs.

[1]This was the pronunciation of the word by the individual with an idiosyncratic r sound.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Łäläxsa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Łähaml: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Stunx story of the beginning of time.
Łälläläämdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Snuiłli in the beginning of time.
Łäläxmän·a: Smooan's son in the beginning of time.
łäläs·i: Small portable canoe.
łälstam: Desertion of a spouse. [586]
Łäxsmai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.
łahmtmakgwao: Imitation potlatch carried out by nusäxkämy.
Łäknus: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.
Łilixwnimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Smooan for his son in the beginning of time.
lima: To loot.
Łixlixkikka: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.
łixwnimut: Person of placid disposition.
łdłła: Bull-roarer.
łdł: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, łm, is supposedly derived from this. [556] łm: Potlatch.
łmkmitł: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.
Łmołim: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821]
Łmołis di Nusäxkämy, "The Potlatch of the nusäxkämy": Second moon after winter solstice. [805] Łhamkila, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nukiłs in the beginning of time.
łkełuwädjut: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756] łkumkeksta: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.
łmänkmm: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556] łmänsimtim: The turning over of a mountain.
Łe'ys: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
łqomksksta: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Qwiyai in the beginning of time. [765] łqła: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [302]
'Łämdimut: Cannibal kusiut name used by the first settlers at Sałłia in the beginning of time.
Łłiqwam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola male Scratcher. łuklai: Aversion.
Łukwala: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsmołł man.
2—Shamanistic power.
łułłułłmut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787]
Łulqwan·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.
Łułukwahntmm, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Łłłcäpllän·a, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

skalk': Devil's-club.
skalnānxdits: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] Skāmi, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Snuiłli chief about 1910. [765] skāmtsk: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
skāx: Anus.
skānm: Splinters projecting upwards from the bole of a broken tree-trunk. [824]
Skamolsqmān·a: One of the first women to settle at Snuiłli in the beginning of time.
Skatpts: Chief of the spring salmon.
skatsāmkm: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585] skelixts: Merganser. [825] skekwadjut, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the announcement of betrothal. [584] ski: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [431] Skimutcitl: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
skinap, "Cure Ye!": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
skinwas: Cloud. [825] skma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [412] skma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon.
skmaix, skmanl, or skmdjut: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755]
2—Final kusiut rite at end of the ceremonial season.
skmim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Skml, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": a'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
Skmnānl: House used by a group of first settlers near Stuax in the beginning of time.
Skmnulān·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nusłalst in the beginning of time.
sks'tcalx: Fungus. [824]
sklsmaixts: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of susok head-dress.
skq: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
skokk': Rose.
Skolikwan·a: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
skotl: Wasp. [825]
Skolsemmusta: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727]
Skqwāhtl: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Słskistl in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
sksi, socatiw, sksai: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] sklāq: Suitable place in the river for setting olachen nets.
sklsa: Game played with throwing stones.
skusiut: Synonym for yeaxmax, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukusiut in addition to a dance rite. [424]
skwakwa: River sculpin. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[765] skwanät: 1—Memorial potlatch.
2—Mourning song.
3—The wailing of mourners at a grave.

[763] Skwanät·ăn·ä, "The Weeper": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

skwanätänkusaix: Professional kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Snitsmän·a during kusiotem dances.

skwatsta: Name.

Skwo·ts: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

Sla·kl: Whitewater River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

[824] sloos: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

slăqk'i: Smoked spring salmon with the bone removed.

[252] slaxkt: Many, adjective.

[554] slaxmidjut, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Sla·: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] sleli: Game, resembling a tug-of-war, played with wooden loops and spears.

[578] slemts, vocative, slemtsakais: Grandchild; the vocative indicates endearment.

slexwxnix: The deposition of eagle down on the heads of those quarrelling to pacify them.

slĭ·s: Gall bladder.

sloptsta: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a susook whistle, referred to as the breathing of Mislakila.

sluk': Olachen grease.

Slexlekwailq: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[778] 2—Place of petrified power at site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphized being responsible for power in this locality.

Sliłm: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

slkumsta: The voice.

[824] slkuml: Dried elderberries.

slukwala: 1—Shaman-like power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
[821] 2—Bella Coola woman.

slulqm: Eclipse.

slwosamlikw': 1—One who keeps in touch with a concealed Cannibal.
[424] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist kusiut or susook dancers; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Smaiaikila: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaialoila: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaien·a: 1—Synonym for Slexlekwailq, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] smaiusta: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

smämätshnalp: Debris from cones eaten by squirrels.

Smaoan, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Smaourak: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

smär·amy, vocative, smär·amy: Friends.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Snuqā·ɣ': Affluent of the middle Bella Coola.
Snuqwaix: Kimsquit woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Snuqwaxwāls: 1—Copper Raven that perched on house of first settlers at Älqälāxl in the beginning of time.
2—Name given to the Raven design used by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
snusaiks: Skeleton. The word is obviously a derivative of saiks.
Snusilkāls: 1—"The Wise One": One of the more important supernatural beings.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsmotl man.
Snusmkāls: Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Älqälāxl, probably a supernatural designation.
Snusmilkānk': Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Älqälāxl, probably a supernatural designation.
[374] Snuskeluts, Cold: A supernatural being.
Snuslaxwai, "The Mystery of Älqunäm": The place where the supreme god puts what he wishes to conceal, such as the correct solution of the Mystery dance. The concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
snusɣ: Generic name for several supernatural animals.
snusɣindjän·a: Right front corner of a house on entering.
Snuhari: Pronunciation of Snuhli by a man with idiosyncratic r usage.
Snuhli, "Place of Dog Salmon": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
●[765] snutlänkn, "A Shoring Up": Term used to describe the functions of mourning songs.
Snulkänäls, "Box": 1—One of the first women to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—Box in Qomoqwa's house.
3—Name of a Täl·io man derived from the last.
Snulle·tl, "Place of Nq Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Snuthmɣ: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Snutqomikaista: Point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
[821] snutsälätst: Race of dwarfs, presumably mythical.
Snulsiaxwanem: Whirlwind, anthropomorphized.
[778] Snulsiktäls: Generic term for four supernatural, eagle-like creatures.
Snuwals: Place on South Bentinck Arm where curative power is localized.
snuyaxlämut, "Bring Light": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the lower Bella Coola valley.
snuyax·iäk: One who seeks embers.
Snuxmuthmän·a: One of the first women to settle at Täl·io in the beginning of time.
Snuxwuläls: Name of first settlers at Älqälāxl in the beginning of time.
Snuyaxlikwan·a: Rivers Inlet name used by a Bella Coola kusiut woman.
[484] solits: Food carried for consumption on a journey; the term is also applied to the provender brought from above by the first people in the beginning of time.
sol'okun: Hunting-ground owned by an ancestral family.
Som: Woman mentioned in a song.
sonɣ^w': see dä sonɣ^w' dä.
Sonxwoäks: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Sonxwan·a: One of the first women to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
[431] sonxwadjut: Synonym for sywomaɣs, the preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Ṫwalosdimut: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

twihmdimut, "A Coming up from Below into Plain Sight": Term used with reference to the obtaining of a call through the medium of Dark-Shade.

[424] tpāmūl, "Whence We Came": A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[103] Tpałsik: Old village near the head of Dean Channel, at the site of the present cannery on the opposite side of the fiord from Manitou Cannery.

Tpnpx·iaqim: Tree, inhabited by owls, behind the supreme god's house.

kwunikwalotl: Space in a house between central fire and row of chiefs seated behind it.

U

U·sḟāxus, "What Is Wanted Is Lacking": Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alqałāxl in the beginning of time.

W

Wałkus: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ḫwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuhli in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwlst in the beginning of time.
4—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
5—Name of the Kimsquit River as chief.
6—Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.

[825] wai·s: 1—Cohoe salmon.
2—Name acquired by a man from cohoe salmon.

Waiuxnm: Man who descended to the Clearwater River in the beginning of time.

Wakitmai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stnx in the beginning of time.
2—Fraser River.

Wakwus: Village at Kwatna Inlet. This word is in the Bella Bella language.

Wałąkitmai: One of the first men to settle at Stnx in the beginning of time.

[825] wal·āsgia: Lynx.

walikw': Woman who has deserted her husband.

[586] wakmptnm: To express a desire concerning the disposal of one's goods after death.

wakcinu: "I go."

[824] wałilikwatsałłtsałats, "The Most Potent of the Pond": Water-lily.

Wanqł: Name of Smaxan's grandchild in the beginning of time.

Wanuq: 1—Rivers Inlet.
2—Collective term for the villages on its shores.

Waoxqalaix: Nusaxkāmq name of a Kimsquit man.

Waowal·is: Celebrated shaman, central figure in an ancient tale.

Waoyal·a: Tribal name of one of the Bella Bella-speaking groups.

Wa·pat: Mountain near Stnx.

Wasila: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

waskusiutaix: Death in the house where a kusiut dance is taking place.

[533] was·nāx·imutsts: Mourning songs regarded as expressions of real, not ceremonial, grief.

[765] wasonq'' wawitłłoqstil: Synonym for sonq'': The sky.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [823] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected againt the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or olachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the bones of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

554 it to the digestive tract. After a man has given four potlatches
* 556 he feels superior to those who have been unable to do likewise.
622 His name is "bright," "clean," "heavy," "firm," or "upright"
[578] in Bella Coola terms, and so, likewise, his seat. He feels independent and proud. Such a chief will fearlessly enter the back-room where ceremonial rites are taking place, even if not entitled to do so.

"He is so strong, he can go where he will," say the Bella Coola.

The advice of such a man is taken because of his ability and prestige, especially by the members of his own family. A few years ago, for example, when a certain Bella Coola died, his brother wished a kusiut name-prerogative of the deceased to pass to the dead man's daughter. The girl's mother's father, a numiti chief, objected, and his desires were followed, although the name in question was not connected in any way with his family. In small matters, too, people gladly carry out the [592] wishes of a chief. Work around the house is done for him without thought of disobedience. An old man was asked whether, when he was young, chiefs gave many orders and acted as masters in their households.

"You bet," the old man answered emphatically with a dry chuckle.

231 It is difficult now to form an accurate estimate, from obser-552 vation, of the influence of chiefs solely through virtue of the 622 goods they have expended. But the following is a concrete example. In November, 1923, the writer, while walking through the Bella Coola village, was bitten by a dog. He was told that the animal belonged to a certain old woman. When next he saw the owner he asked her whether she knew that her dog attacked passers-by.

"Yes," she answered, in a matter-of-fact tone, "He is a chief and can do what he likes."

Further questioning elicited the information that the old
• [766] woman and her husband, the childless last survivors of an ancestral family, had transmitted some of their ancestral names to their dog, and had distributed presents to validate the bestowal. Consequently, the animal is a chief (see Plate 11)[1] and can do as he likes. When it dies it will be mourned as a chief. Moreover, a number of people have returned the presents which they received at the time the dog was made a chief, and this money is kept by the woman and her husband, to be used when they perform the rite of mourning for the dog at death. 231 552 622 766

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When this is possible, in the present degenerate days, it is not difficult to understand how, formerly, a great chief felt himself above the restraints that hindered lesser men. The last great Bella Coola chief was Potlas, who died between 1870 and 1880. His influence and power were so great that he was a virtual ruler, daring anything. If he requested a young man to take his food box home and the youth was slow to obey, Potlas had no hesitation in killing him on the spot. Such great power, though unusual, is intelligible to the Bella Coola, since Potlas gave far more potlatches than any of his contemporaries. Other chiefs have been known to attempt a similar arbitrary use of power, but have failed, since their prestige was not great enough to justify it. The fame of a mighty chief spreads up and down the coast, and protects him and the members of his family from being ambushed and slain in any sporadic foray. During an actual fight, however, a chief had to take his chances with the rest, but the comparative immunity was a great advantage. 556* 622 [156] [628] [726]

The Bella Coola recognize the fundamental differences between their own concepts about chieftainship and those of other coastal tribes with whom they come in contact. This point was mentioned in the course of conversation by several men. The most powerful chief known to them was Tsilsa, who, they say, was virtual monarch of the Kitkatla. None of his subjects could go hunting without his permission, and he had rights to a certain share of their booty. At any ceremony presents had first to be given to him, and if he were slighted in this respect, he would kill the offender. It is be- 171 556* 622 829 present, and the fame of the initiate is thereby carried farther afield than would be possible if only Bella Coola were in attendance. Every individual duly secluded and given a sisaok name feels himself ceremonially allied to others who have had a similar experience, and they form a grouping which may be termed the sisaok secret society. 553 556* 575

[1] [Sec. cat. 116, P 186 (c) - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The close connection between this society and chiefs is obvious from the presence of names of each type in the same ancestral myths. None the less, every chief, that is a person with duly validated ancestral name and seat, is not a sisaok, unless he has validated a sisaok name for himself and undergone the period of seclusion. Conversely, a man may be a duly authorized member of the sisaok although lacking a seat and the other marks of chieftainship. The relationship is, however, so close that the Bella Coola think of the sisaok society as a society of chiefs. Sisaok dances take place at potlatches and funerals, and occasionally at gatherings of less importance. Difficulties arise at the death of a chief who has failed to use some of his goods for the acquisition of a sisaok name. Such a case took place at the death of an important Bella Coola in the summer of 1923. Theoretically, he was ignorant of sisaok rites, but after much discussion these were used on account of his importance as a numitl chief, an instance of the manner in which a man's personal importance over-rules ceremonial dictates. 575 622 [553] [535] [766] [183]

The Bella Coola believe that only some of their sisaok name-prerogatives came to this earth at the beginning of time with their first ancestors, and that many more have been acquired later by supernatural experiences. These were especially common among their forbears as they ranged over this earth seeking places to settle in the beginning of time. No sisaok name can be assumed casually; each must have had a specific origin. There are few sisaok origin myths, though theoretically there should be one to account for every name. The explanation appears to lie in the undoubted fact that many sisaok prerogatives have been acquired comparatively recently 424 551 575 773 [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 556 622 the time the earth was settled, ought to be chief of that village. If he has been able to give the necessary potlatches to weight his possession of that name, the fact that he is the legal descendant of the first chief will add a certain amount to his prestige, but unless he has been able to do this his influence will be slight.

* 556 622 766 [775] Thirdly, potlatches smooth the way for the giver after death. Before the corpse of a chief is removed from the house where he has died, a speaker always announces the number of potlatches he has given and the total value of goods distributed at them. These gifts in a vague way are felt to make easy the deceased's path in the next world as they have done in the present. The feature of the potlatch, though firmly believed by some of the older people, plays a less important part in the life of the Bella Coola than might be expected.

* 556 What are the requisites for giving a potlatch?

[424] (1) Possession of an ancient myth, containing a name or names. Probably every Bella Coola has this requirement. A man's family may not be the proud owners of one of the ancestral myths dealing with the first settlement of this earth, but they will at least own some ancient myth which they can elevate by giving a potlatch. As has been said, the owner of one of the most ancient names in many cases chooses to elevate one of lesser antiquity, a course which must, perforce, be done by one who lacks an origin myth. The slight feeling of defer-
[554] ence with which those are regarded who hold the names of the first inhabitants of the earth, the mighty chiefs of old, is subordinate to the very real feeling of respect in which is held the successful giver of potlatches. The descendant of one of the first people has the potential right to chieftainship, but unless he can give potlatches he will fail to gain that eminence.

* 556 769 (2) An occasion for giving a potlatch is never lacking. It consists of a number of closely associated rites, any one of which will serve as a reason for the ceremony. The most important feature, the return of a dead ancestor or ancestors to visit the living, is available to anyone at any time. The Bella

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bellabella NES

BC
* 539

air. As they did so the feathers began to move, gradually rising in the air until some passed through the roof. It was as if a miniature whirlwind of gentle power were agitating them. As the three continued to use the sticks, the corpse itself began to move, finally disintegrating into the down and passing through the roof. As it did so the three said:

"Go back whence we came. Ty.....,"

Since that time the people of Owikl have disposed of their dead in this manner.

The first Ikhistic brought with him from above not only the right to a nawl dance, but also a Cannibal hamat dance (II, p. 71) with the Bella Bella name Lebeac. He had, moreover, the rare privilege of performing hamat and nawl rites on alternate nights.

BC
[766]
[177]
[324]

This myth is important since it embodies an account of the disappearance of a corpse through a roof, a method of removal of the dead now practised by the Bella Coola in the case of chiefs. This means is recognized by the Bella Coola to have been a recent introduction from either Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet to Tal'ia, and thence to Bella Coola. Judging from this account, it would appear that such a method of removal of a corpse must be considered as originally a prerogative embodied in a myth, although it has ceased to be regarded as such in Bella Coola. The man from whom this tradition was obtained said it was only one of the type current in Bella Coola, though such are common in Bella Bella. It was obtained by the marriage of one of his ancestors to a woman of Owikl, and was used as theme for a mourning-ceremony at the death of his sister.

BC
177
513

AN EARLY BELLA BELLA MYTH TRANSMITTED BY MARRIAGE TO BELLA COOLA*

BB
539
BC
* 539

In the beginning of time, when the population of the earth consisted only of the few people who had come down from above, Tuklimar were in the Bella Bella town, Kqayal, where, as was common at that period, people had no houses but were sheltered under huge trees which Ahousaht had placed there for that purpose. Tuklimar was in the form of a man at the time and fell in love with a girl of the village. Her father, Ma-ni, agreed to the match and the two were married. The husband never slept with his wife; when he wished children, he willed that they *Obtained by Andrew Moody.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

before their birth. When the mother of the twin described in the last paragraph was awaiting delivery in a temporary shelter in the woods, its roof fell, cutting her head. The old woman who mentioned this occurrence stated that both her grandmother, the Sockeye Salmon, and her sister, a Spring Salmon, though still unborn, were aware of the accident and remembered the comments of the midwife. 845

On account of their uncanny power, twins are considered weaklings and usually die young in spite of the care lavished upon them and the taboos observed by their parents.[1] A dead twin, instead of being buried, is put in a box which is placed in a tree far away from the village. Every year the river changes its course, eating into its banks in order to reach the tree containing the body, and this continues until it reaches its goal and sweeps away tree and coffin. 966 [928]

Childhood Instruction

When working in the field, an anthropologist almost inevitably concentrates upon ceremonials and other epochs in an individual's life, to the detriment of the daily routine which in Bella Coola, as everywhere else, is fundamentally important although it defies description on account of its intangibility. A child grows up in a large house, occupied by several families, in which there is little privacy. The parents provide food and clothing, but more distant relatives take a greater share of responsibility for this than do white people. When food is being given out, a child soon learns that he will be given some of it, and that he will have his portion in any distribution of presents. Furniture, bedding, and other necessities are reduced to a minimum, but a boy or girl is welcome to sleep with relatives should his own parents wish to go hunting or fishing. The sense of power possessed by a Bella Coola with many relatives is largely intangible, but it has practical applications as 114 855 [967] [967]

[1] It is probable that the arduous life led by a twin and its parents during the first year after birth lessens its chances of survival. Therefore to say, this explanation does not find favour with the Bella Coola.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

this rite is neglected no more salmon will come to the river. No 764 precautions are necessary after the food has been digested. [825]

Many men prepare their coffins before death. If this has [763] not been done, a large, wooden box is provided by a kinsman [602] of the deceased. The body is dressed in good clothing and bound into a squatting position, head between knees, hands clasped around shins, and the haunches just above the level of the soles of the feet. In this posture it is thrust into the coffin.
Particularly if the corpse has been brought from some distance and rigor mortis has set in, it may be necessary to break the back-bone and even to crush the skull before the box can be closed. A stone is placed on the back of the neck, within the [795] coffin, to prevent the ghost from returning to haunt the survivors. A little choice food is placed beside the body of a dearly loved child for nourishment during the journey to the next world.

From this point onwards, the funeral rites differ according 575 to the rank of the deceased. On the death of an influential 766 nuxalk, the senior members of that society meet as soon as possible to arrange the dramatization of the coming of Mulaxtile. A nuxalk son, brother, or other near relative is always present even if he has little importance in the affairs of the society. If the death has taken place during the night, the conference is held the following morning and the rites begin at noon. There may be delay until all have gathered, but about the middle of the first possible day two nuxalk are sent up one of the mountains behind the village. They carry large, cone-shaped whistles which they blow twice. The sound is plainly audible in the village and all, whether or not members of the nuxalk society, recognize that a supernatural being is drawing near. After a short interval, another whistle is blown by a nuxalk concealed on the roof of the house in which the corpse is lying, and after another pause the same sound comes from within, beside the body itself. Most of the uninitiated know that this is the voice of Mulaxtile (also called Sisiutlpatwam), [796]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

but even if unaware of the fact, they realize that some supernatural, invisible visitor has arrived.

Heralds go from house to house, and sometimes to adjacent villages as well,[8] inviting the people to pay a farewell visit to the dead man who will soon leave them; in this invitation the sisaak name of the deceased is used. The guests assemble at once, irrespective of their rank or membership in the sisaak society. To mark their grief, female relatives pull out tufts of their hair, and both men and women of the immediate family cut their hair short. The body, either in its coffin or covered with blankets, is placed between the central fire and the back-room, immediately behind the place where the singers take their stations. When all are present, a son or other near relative who is also a fluent speaker, stands up and expounds how the Chief, meaning Mutlakila, has come to visit the dead man, and how all should try to understand the song he has brought.[9] A hidden sisaak has been blowing a whistle intermittently, and the singers pretend to be able to understand words of a song in its notes. In reality they have prepared in advance the new one which they now beat out, accompanied by their voices. The theme either describes the coming of the supernatural visitor, or recounts the number of potlatches given by the deceased, and the manner in which these will make smooth the path whither he is going in the same way that distributed goods validate a chief's seat in this world. This song is practised and improved upon amid the booming of the whistle as if the singers were constantly gaining new ideas and embellishments from the words of the supernatural visitor. Sometimes a few incidents are added from the sisaak myth. After several repetitions, a relative of the dead man asks the singers to beat out the latter's sisaak songs, as many of them as are remembered from the time he was first initiated into the so-

[8] The Bella Bella are said to invite foreign guests to this ceremony.

[9] Sometimes the people are present when the coming of Mutlakila, heralded by whistling and a thump on the roof, takes place. There are variations in this, as in all other sisaak rites.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ciety. These are given several times, serving to recall the ceremonies in which the chief took part during his life. At intervals, the new song is repeated and ssaok members of the audience join in as they become familiar with the words. Frequently one or more relatives of the deceased dance in his stead during the singing. The details of this rite, especially of the songs used at it, differ considerably according to the actions of the person during life; if a mighty chief, the donor of many potlatches, this fact is described in the song, whereas only an incident from the ancestral myth can be used for a young ssaok. If some of his female relatives are professional wailers, they function during the ceremony. In all circumstances, the rite aims to comfort the grieving kinsmen, an end which it usually achieves. 533 575 766 [535] [767]

As already described, ssaok ceremonial was in a state of transition at the time of the coming of the white man. Previous to that date, a spectacular funeral prerogative had been adopted from Rivers Inlet,[4] which has since been claimed by a number of ssaok. All the Bella Coola know of this ceremony, and most of them desire to perform it at the death of a dearly loved relative; at the present time this is possible owing to the slight regard paid to prerogatives, but it is certain that a few years ago it would have been forbidden to most people, and that it was never a universal Bella Coola rite. 575 766 177 424 [178]

When this rite is performed, the corpse is allowed to remain in its coffin for at least one night after the day on which Mulakila came and the ssaok songs were sung. Meanwhile the carpenters have prepared an imitation body, usually of rags on a light framework, and a wooden representation of the deceased's crest. Since this figure is to come through the roof and carry aloft the corpse, stout hooks are attached to its feet. In theory, the bird or animal disguise used by the first ancestor 575 766 532

[4] One old Bella Coola stated that this prerogative was obtained during his own lifetime from a Rivers Inlet chief who moved to Tal-ia. It is impossible to state accurately when this ritual was adopted by the Bella Coola, though it is unquestionably of recent origin.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 of the deceased, traced patrilineally, should come for the body, 766 but this is difficult to arrange in case of whale, bear, and other [532] marine or land mammals. Consequently, it has been customary to use only raven or eagle for this purpose, and it is assumed that at least one of these birds is present in the ancestral history of every individual as a result of the marriage of some of his forbears with a woman possessing one of these crests.[5] It is a common practice for an influential sisaok to prepare a figure of this kind during his life-time and tell a son or other trusted relative where it has been hidden; if this has been done, it obviates the necessity of carpenters manufacturing one at short notice.

Several days are often required to complete these arrangements, but on the first evening possible, which may be two or three days after the death, the people are summoned to the dead man's house. The singers take their usual positions behind the fire and beat out the song used at the mourning ceremony already described; then, as on that occasion, they follow it with a number of the deceased's sisaok songs. Once more they strike up the one newly composed and, as it is proceeding, whistling is heard, accompanied by the screaming of an eagle or the croaking of a raven. Those who are not members of the sisaok society do not understand that these sounds are produced by hidden members blowing whistles on the roof. There is a crash on the planking and, through a space opened by the removal of several boards, the face of the bird crest can be seen peering in. It is a dramatic spectacle and the audience gasps appreciatively, especially those who see in it a manifestation of the supernatural, testifying to the importance of the deceased. If the stage management has been accurate, the figure appears at the termination of the song, but if it has arrived during the actual singing, the singers beat time slowly and cease to use their voices. The eagle, or raven, keeps squealing repeatedly and gradually comes through [178] [5]The use of only raven or eagle is probably a degeneration due to recent decay of custom.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the hole in the roof, ponderously and slowly, until its talons grip the "b[illegible]." In the same gradual fashion it carries this upwards until, just before the burden disappears through the roof, one of the principal singers leads his fellows and the audience in calling out: 575 766

"Ye··," which has the significance of, "May you have a safe passage whence you came and whither you are going."

As soon as the bird has disappeared, its notes are heard from above, growing gradually fainter as the actors blow their whistles less violently. An eloquent sisaok stands up and expounds how the deceased's crest has come down from above to carry away his body, and often mentions incidents in the ancestral myth to explain why this bird had appeared. A young man is sent up to replace the roof boards and the hidden accomplices rejoin the audience unostentatiously. The corpse itself remains hidden in some back corner of the house where it was concealed at the time the dummy was seized, so that nothing indicates what has taken place.

The relatives must give presents to all who have witnessed this ceremonial prerogative. These are now distributed without regard to the rank of the recipient; such gifts are not returnable and are said to be, "What Has Been Shaken Off," like dust from the departing body. A meal, likewise provided by the kinsmen of the deceased, is next served, and as the people are eating, it is customary for senior sisaok to make laudatory speeches, extolling the dead chief and comforting the survivors by reminding them of the way in which he will be looked after in virtue of his ancestral traditions. This procedure may continue for several hours, and it is only when no one else wishes to speak that the people disperse. [556] [537]

It is not easy to comprehend the attitude of the Bella Coola to this rite. Some influential sisaok state emphatically that in former days it was possible to carry it out so realistically that the uninitiated were deceived, and never suspected that the actual corpse was later on buried in secret by the singers, carpenters, and sisaok. On the other hand, those who do not 575 766 781

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 wish to emphasize the importance of this society, state that 766 the deception was always apparent, and that even the hooks 781 and ropes by which the figure was manipulated could be seen. Still others regard the ceremony as a symbolic means of portraying the manner in which a man's crest comes to carry away his spirit and life. It seems clear that different interpretations must always have been accepted by different members of the community. A young and ingenuous uninitiated, steeped in the atmosphere of the supernatural, may well have believed that he was gazing upon an actual supernatural being, as the senior sisaok desired him to do; others must have recognized that a deception of some kind was being practised, but dramatization is such an important factor in Bella Coola life that individuals often disregard the difference between semblance and reality, and it is contrary to custom for a person to cast aspersions upon the prerogative of another. It is easy for such an one to accept the drama as a symbol or representation of the manner in which the crest carries off the intangible elements of the dead. This is certainly the attitude of the Bella Coola at the present time. Everyone realizes that the crest is of human manufacture and that the corpse itself is not carried away, but the rite is still performed and gratifies the survivors by giving them an opportunity to display their prerogative and the cloak of the deceased's ancestor.

[184]

575 Perhaps because of its relatively recent introduction, de-766 tails of the performance of this rite are not fully standardized In some cases, the crest is made to appear at the same time as Mulakila, instead of at a subsequent ceremony. It is assumed that the origin of the rite is in some ancient myth in which the body was actually taken above by the crest, an act copied, with the aid of carpenters, by the descendants of the person to whom this occurred. There are no myths of this nature current in Bella Coola, although it is thought that such must have been common among the peoples of the outer coast to explain the prevalence of the practice in that area. One old man mentioned that an Owiki myth in which a

[424]

[773]

[424]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

body became eagle down and was wafted upwards is psychologically of the type which might serve as basis for a rite of this kind. If the descendants of the person to whom this had happened had dramatized the incident at subsequent deaths, a custom analogous to the one here described would have arisen. 575 766 424 [773]

DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

There is no fixed time for the disposal of a corpse. When possible, it takes place on the day following death, but as many as four days may elapse if delay is necessary for the performance of the rite just described. Another reason for postponement is the absence of near relatives; if they can be summoned within four or five days, the funeral may be delayed until their arrival. There is always endless discussion concerning the exact details; all relatives and members of the ancestral family take part, though the wishes of a son, brother, or other near kinsman are usually followed. In this, as in so many points of Bella Coola ritual, an influential chief often overrules the desires even of those who are more closely related to the deceased. 764 [796] [554]

Heralds announce the hour chosen,[8] usually about noon, and the people begin to assemble in the deceased's house, even strangers being welcome. Women wail dolorously, and another indication of the occasion is the bundles containing clothing, cooking utensils, and other articles belonging to the dead person. The lid of the coffin has been left open, but when everything is ready, an elderly man is asked to strike it, once, with a stone; then the lid is closed. Planks have been removed and a hole made in one of the front corners of the house, through which the man throws out the stone. The women redouble their lamentations as an old woman, previously asked to do so, lights a bundle of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and climbs through the opening carrying this. No request has been made for pall-bearers, but any strong men, especially [203] [609]

[8]This is done at present, even after the carrying away of the "body." In former times it was omitted when the corpse was secretly buried by the sisaek. [178]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 friends of the deceased, pick up the coffin and carry it through the hole. In former times it was frequently difficult to obtain [766] pall-bearers for a slave or friendless person on account of the [784] taboos to which a person performing this service was subject. [761] If a dead person should be taken through a doorway, others using it would soon follow the corpse to the next world. For the same reason, a body must never be moved across the central line of a house; the passage is, therefore, made from the side where it happens to be lying. As soon as the corpse has been taken through, the removed planks are quickly replaced. Mourners and guests stream out through the doorway and follow the coffin, some of them carrying the bundles containing part of the goods of the deceased. Meanwhile the pall-bearers follow the woman with the torch to the cemetery, taking care to carry their burden so that it faces the direction [761] in which they are going; if a dead person is allowed to look backwards, he will beckon some relative to accompany him and the one so summoned will soon die.

There is a cemetery near every village, usually fifty to a hundred yards behind the row of houses in a place from which the heavy timber has been cleared. On arrival, the pall-bearers set down their burden close to the spot where the guide has placed her flaming bark on the ground. The personal possessions of the deceased are likewise deposited near the fire, which is kept alight by female relatives throwing on it small quantities of the dead person's clothing and utensils. The near kinsmen of the deceased choose the exact site of the grave, which must never be dug before the bringing of the corpse. [423] There is no ownership of plots within the cemetery, so that the hole can be made wherever desired. A favourite location is close to the grave of a mother, father, or other near relative, but this is optional; bones are sometimes uncovered when digging, and in that case earth is thrown in once more and a new site selected. There are no professional grave-diggers, [767] nor are arrangements made in advance for men to perform this duty, but friends, especially strong young men, are willing to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 grave carrying a spruce bough in his hand. He touches with it the edge where he is standing, then, in sunwise order, the east, south, and west margins. This circuit is repeated four times and the branch tossed away to westward. This essential [774] ceremony is based on a belief that the lives, or perhaps the spirits, of the grave-diggers have been drawn from them into the grave and are in danger of being pressed down by the coffin. Should this occur, they would have short lives. The spruce branch enables the supernatural elements to leave the cavity and return to their owners who suffer no ill effects. Anyone, other than a grave-digger, can perform this rite.

The coffin is now lifted into the grave, care being taken that the corpse faces east. As already described, it is in a squatting position with haunches almost on the ground. Boards have been prepared in advance, and with these the grave-diggers make a roof-like covering, placing at each corner [775] a stone weighing from ten to fifteen pounds, to prevent the ghost from returning to trouble the survivors. Earth is thrown in on top of the boards, and as it falls the wailing breaks out dolorously in a final crescendo of mourning. [766] If a chief has been buried, his fellows sometimes sing a xe·tla [533] song. At this time it is proper for one or more chiefs to rise and speak. No one is required to do so, nor is there any rule 537 as to the order in which they make their remarks. The first 764 speaker is usually a prominent man related to the survivors, though seldom a son, brother, or other near relative of the deceased. A speech is generally addressed in part to the spirit of the dead person, telling it where to go; in part, to the mourners. For a dead child, emphasis is laid on the fact that although he did not live long enough to be incorporated into his ancestral myths on earth, this will be done for him in his future home. In conclusion, an appeal is often made to [775] Alquntäm, under the name of Smaialotla, to take pains that [773] the spirit of the dead is given its rightful place in Nusmät·a, in the section where its first forbears were created, and whither the spirits of its dead ancestors have returned since the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 are never disturbed, being considered, in some vague way, "bad." The tools used for digging the grave are left standing upright in the loose earth, an action for which no explanation can be given by the Bella Coola. When these various rites have been performed, the funeral party returns to the village and disperses.

766 845 At present, interment is the customary method for disposing of the bodies of all except twins, whose bodies are placed in trees. Formerly, other means were sometimes employed, as 764 they still are occasionally. Instead of inhumation, a coffin 178 was frequently placed on a scaffold close behind the deceased's house. Whenever another relative died, planks were laid across, above the first box, and the new one deposited on these, so that in time the scaffold grew to resemble a house-like structure with many compartments. In the last century a certain shaman, Ǎskankots by name, is said to have pointed out that corpses were frequently carried off by wolves, snuuq, and other animals. For this reason he persuaded the people to inter their dead.

764 Somewhat similar to this practice was the placing of corpses in trees. Until the last few years this was sometimes done with poor children; formerly, it was not unknown even for chiefs. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned that the coffin containing the body of his grandfather, a chief, was placed in the crotch of a tree where no rain could penetrate. This means of disposal was probably never habitual. Even at the present time, the corpse of a dearly loved child is occasionally placed above, instead of under the ground. If the parents desire to do this, they erect in the cemetery a carved figure of one of their crests and deposit the coffin on top of it. This is, of course, a graphic representation of the deceased's origin myth and symbolizes the way in which the dead person has become associated with it.

According to several of the older men, cremation was practised by the Bella Coola for some time after the first settlement of the earth. A fire was built outside the house and the body

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

thrown on it. One rather philosophic old man suggested that in this way the soul could easily return to Nusmät·a. It is possible that this means of disposal was carried out in former times, but no informant had actually seen it practised. The Bella Coola state that cremation is carried out by the Kitlobe[28] and the Carriers. On the morning after a burning, young men of the former tribe rush to the spot and smear their faces with the semi-charred bones, amid much shouting. The Carriers are said to stand with their bodies inclined over the burning corpse and to smear on their faces any grease exuded from it. The accuracy of these statements is very doubtful, and can have no bearing on the reputed practice of cremation among the Bella Coola. 764 764 829

The bodies of rich or poor, chiefs, commoners, or slaves, all are buried in a similar manner though with differences in the complexity of ritual. Nor is any different method practised for criminals, murdered people, or those committing suicide. It is believed that in case of self-destruction the body cannot separate into its elements and reach Nusmät·a; that part which becomes the ghost is able to go to the land below, but neither spirit nor life can ascend. According to one man, who may, however, have been affected by Christian influence, this is because Ālquntäm decrees the length of life and any wilful shortening is insulting to him. Suicide is rare among the Bella Coola and four cases only were heard of. One woman killed herself in shame at having accidentally set fire to a village, another because her husband was unduly jealous, and two men through bladder stricture. 766 762 [775]

On the whole, Bella Coola methods for disposal of the dead have altered but little since the coming of the white man. The change from sub-aerial exposure to interment was probably not due to foreign influence although the introduction of metal shovels has facilitated the digging of graves and probably hastened the movement. A change in posture has, however, taken place. In former times, a corpse was always buried 177 764

[28] If not at present, at least within the memory of elderly people.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and recompense to funeral assistants is usually deferred until 764 that time. Such was often true even in former years, although 431 poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the 556 express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any con- [575] venient ceremony, such as a non-sacred sisaok dance. As [796] repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature.
It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual; at present it never occurs. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret [766] after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the crest, the goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery.
Those who carried them were the ones who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge.

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is 764
the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives 783 of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If spring salmon or olachen are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or twenty according to some infor- [825] mants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly, friendless slave being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The taint on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but automatically lapses after ten days.

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that Sā-lma [776]

775 dred yards away, rapidly drew near the hunter along the trail. He raised his musket and stepped aside, but though the sound went past him down the path, he could see nothing. Terrified, he realized that he had been near two ghosts, and rushed back [756] to the village. A shaman was called who informed him that he had met his dead father's sister and another relative, both of whom were hungry. The hunter, too weak from fright to help himself, watched the shaman light a fire and throw on it [755] a considerable amount of food and goods. Finally, he ripped the hunter's shirt from his back and threw it into the flames. Consequently, no harm resulted from this experience.

Ghosts, like all other supernatural beings, can, of course, control their powers so that their appearance does not injure a beholder. A few years before 1922 a certain Qaxolān·i, whose ancestral name was Lo·qwa·t, was encamped at Saskwanuts on the Labouchere Channel side of King Island. At dusk a woman came to his fire and proceeded to warm her cape. He recognized from her green face that she must be a ghost and boldly asked her what she wanted.

"I have been searching for mussels," she replied, "but without success."

In an instant she vanished and Qaxolān·i experienced neither good nor evil from this apparition. The Bella Coola say that this being may not have been a ghost as he had thought, [776] but was perhaps one of the under-sea dwellers who have somewhat the same appearance.

Since ghosts, like other supernatural beings, are believed to possess both wisdom and power, it might be thought that they would be invoked frequently. Instead, death has altered their character to such an extent that they are avoided and 756 kept at a distance. The only time that an appeal is made to 775 a ghost is when a young person dies without apparent reason and the survivors wish to learn the cause. The body is buried 787 with a long cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and [766] undyed cedar-bark projecting from its mouth and stretching to the surface. The relative desiring information summons to his house several shamans whose powers have been obtained

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754 in a skirmish by the Carriers, one of their women mutilated a body by poking out the eyes. The corpses were rescued and [727] a Bella Coola with secret knowledge dropped into the eye sockets some potent medicine. As the corpses rotted, the murderers began to suffer pains, and the woman who had poked out the eyes lost her sight. As a blind, old woman, she had been seen by several men with whom the matter was discussed.

To Cause the Death of a Murderer (three means)

(1) Two women were murdered at Kimsquit in 1915. 754 Before they were buried, an elderly Bella Coola put a secret 682 medicine on the back of the neck of each so that the murderer [766] would die from a disease located there. Within eight months, a Rivers Inlet man succumbed to a deep sore at the back of the neck, and it was assumed that he must have visited Kimsquit unseen and perpetrated the double murder.

Medicines like this and the preceding are widely known, but it is sorcerers who specialize in using them.

(2) When a man dies suddenly and murder is suspected, [766] although the perpetrator is unknown, place the corpse within an old, hollow spruce log. As it rots, needles and dirt enter the flesh and at the same time the body of the murderer becomes lacerated and full of sores. This method was employed [695] during the lifetime of an informant and caused the death of the suspected murderer, whose guilt was thereby accepted as proved.

(3) Bury the victim's body with a toad in its mouth and [766] the murderer will soon die.[4]

To Kill 754

Lift a corpse from the ground and point it at one or more individuals. This causes their death in the near future.

[4]This information was obtained from one informant only; details were unavailable, and confirmation from others could not be secured.

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed
781 and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the [787] dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sympathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member
[761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut
778 to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the per-
787 formance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is equally well known that his specific power has been brought 424 to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuskāsiutsta (also called nusxi'ipsta), by the supernatural woman Ano'likwolsaix. Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Ano'likwolsaix; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 781 796 a woman about sixty years of age, vividly recalled her fears when she, a young woman, gave her first performance. It was the Dance of Winwina (II, p. 187), in which she had to call out loudly when a large number of uninitiated persons, including Carrier Indians, were present. One of the marshals was her great-uncle and he had carefully taught her what she was to say. A few minutes before the time for her announcement he came to where she lay hidden in an enclosure behind the fire:

"Do you see your relatives here?" he said. "Look at your father, your mother, and your uncles. If you fail to say what you are expected to say, they will all die in a few weeks, and so will you. Be bold!"

The woman asserted that it was the most terrifying experience in her whole life because, though she knew there was [688] deception in the rites, she also knew the power of the society and that the threat of death in case of error was no idle one. She was so frightened that she forgot the carefully learnt words and it required the prompting of the hidden marshal to get her through the ordeal.

But once the first rite has been successfully negotiated, it is a proud day for the novice. He feels himself a real kusiut and glories in his superiority over his former associates. For the rest of the season he, like everyone else who has performed a dance, must attend every rite. Energetic novices sometimes give their dances on two, or even three, successive years, though usually a man allows five or six to elapse between displays.

*575 ● 766 [533] If X should die during the year's interval between his initiation and his first dance, he is secretly buried by his fellow kukusiut without the customary mourning rites, and with no uninitiated persons present at the grave. His song, if one has been composed for him, is sung softly, and he is interred adorned with his collar of dyed cedar-bark. During the next ceremonial season, that at which he should have danced, it is necessary for a brother, or other near relative, to receive a call since it is felt that a dance once begun must be completed, and the patron shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society. 575* 766

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that, in former times, the kukusiut sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead kukusiut, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch. 575* 769 533 177

The Ritual of Specific Dances

General Observations about the Dances

A detailed description of various kusiut dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nusqulxwaista. Several kukusiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kusiut season. 575* 796* [424] [776]

The Dance of Noākynim[11]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Noākynim, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly 773 824 825

[11]Cf. Boas, p. 60.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

who have gone aloft and never returned,[11] and of course increasing the fear of the uninitiated. They then go back to X's home where a marshal speaks, asking all to keep silence so that they will be able to hear X when he returns from the land above. No noise is permitted during his absence, even the discharge of muskets being forbidden. The man who carries the rope from which X escaped always receives a call on this night, because the supernatural beings have seen the important part he has played in the rite, and his patron recognizes it in this way. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated and, accordingly, the rope-holder is some kusiut who wishes to have a call. After the usual curing,[12] one song is composed for the rope-holder, and sung very softly, since the night's ceremony is termed Alolipsumy, "The Actionless Night," or Nuxstimut, "The Silent Night." The uninitiated believe that the kukusiut are filled with woe and foreboding at the fate before X. It is early morning before they disperse. 575* 796* 787 [184]

The next day, nusiutälsap for the rope-holder, the usual ritual is omitted since the pretence of grief and fear must still be preserved. Thus the necessary wood for the rope-holder's masks is cut silently. The collar and rope from which X escaped are hung on the wall of his house, and when a herald summons the kukusiut during the evening, he bids them assemble to watch over these objects. Although a second song, composed during the day, is practised for the rope-holder, it is done so softly that the uninitiated from neighbouring houses imagine that the kukusiut are really brooding over their loss. The only sound that reaches them is an occasional koip, accentuating their fear. After the customary distribution of work and food the kukusiut disperse. 575* 796*

On the morrow, the rope-holder's gotlas, the uninitiated are summoned, because it is assumed that members of the [787]

[11] If a Cannibal dies during his period of concealment he is buried secretly. The uninitiated are told that his power enabled him to cross a yawning chasm in the land above, but then it failed him, so that he was unable to return to his friends. [766] [772]

[12] This consists of the frenzied beating of sticks, repeated four times. [761]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

telling them of his adventures, and presently they begin to sing the song, as if they had just learnt the theme from X. Frequently the deception is increased by X first learning the song and repeating it to the singers in a voice sufficiently loud for the uninitiated to hear. The theme of this, and every other song used for Cannibals, is of the land above and the dangers which X has survived. The singers add new facts and information to vary the monotony, but the subjects usually described are:

The flat land above with its many trails and the river that flows through it.

The gale constantly raging there which has blown the hair from X's head and the dirt from his body.

The trail across a yawning chasm over which his supernatural strength enabled him to leap. If a Cannibal dies when in concealment, the kukusiut bury the corpse secretly and tell the uninitiated that his power failed him on the other side of the abyss so that he was unable to return.

Alquntäm under his various names.

How his patron helped him to escape the Alskam, "They of the Huge Jaws," evil beings who tried to kill X by sucking him into their gaping mouths.

The tide-flats which are found at the edge of the flat land above.

The kindly being Sinawukälälum, who gave him the necessary power to recross the chasm. The uninitiated believe that unless a Cannibal meets this being he will be unable to return.

No one song for any Cannibal contains references to all these beings and events, but it is on these that the singers draw for their themes, always altering and adding to produce a fine effect.

On this occasion X does not dance,[*] and the uninitiated are soon expelled. As the kukusiut are eating, one marshal after another praises X for what he has done, and gives the most solemn warnings to all as to the necessity of completing

[*]There is difference of opinion on this point.

J: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEB

424 sunly he begins to grunt, and calls the name of either a man
*575 or a woman. The person so designated must take the per- *796 former's hands, thus assimilating his power, and in his turn begins to shake and grunt, amid the laughter of all. Presently 787 the "gift" is returned, and later passed to another recipient.
Sometimes a modest woman shakes her head instead of her 831 hips, to the intense amusement of the audience. After some 522 time the owner draws his power to himself and the main cere- [796] mony of the evening proceeds. It is said that the supernatural beings above perform circuits.

The Death of a Kwiat

*575 A detailed description of kwiat dances and ritual has now ●766 been given, but certain special features still remain. One of *796 these is the method of disposal of the body of a dead member 987 of the society. In dances which are completed in four days, there is little likelihood of the performer's death, but this is by no means uncommon during the long seclusion of a Cascibal for example. In this case there is no wailing, and the death is concealed from the uninitiated, sometimes even a wife being kept in ignorance of her husband's decease. A mask representing the person of the dead man is hung in the house behind the fire as a constant reminder of what must be done.
From the ceremonial point of view, the serious aspect lies in the fact that a call has come which has not been sent back, and which cannot be sent back by the receiver. The moieties discuss the matter and agree that it must pass to some kwiat, a near relative of the deceased, who is informed of the decision and does not dare refuse, even if he should wish to do so. After a delay of two or three days, the body is taken secretly to the grave and buried, while the kwiatsir sing the dead person's song. This causes the call to shift to the chosen relative who completes the ceremony in due course. In the case of a Cascibal, for example, a considerable amount of time is allowed to elapse, and meanwhile the uninitiated are told that the kwiatsir are still waiting and watching for his return.

Schoolcraft E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

When all hope has been abandoned, they are summoned and the relatives complete the ceremony, doing only that part of it left undone by the original recipient of the call. The principle is the same as that described when a novice dies, that someone must finish the rite. This aspect of the hactsa ceremonial is still preserved unconsciously as the winter found to his cost. It was proposed that he be formally initiated into the society, but this was not allowed on the ground that he would not be present the following winter to complete the rites necessitated by the coming of the call.

575* 796* 766 787 [23]

The Final Rite

The commencement of the hactsa season is regulated by the coming of Nuskymas, but its conclusion is a matter of arrangement. By February the number of hakaxtsa wishing to dance has become negligible and the marshals decide to terminate the ceremonial season. It must be remembered that an enclosure has been built in every house where an important hactsa dance has taken place, and that as long as these are in existence the uninitiated have not been allowed to live in these houses. The social life of the community has accordingly been profoundly disturbed. Of course several dances may have taken place in a single dwelling, but even allowing for that, the fact remains that the uninitiated have been forced to dwell temporarily in perhaps only one or two houses. The most obvious mark of the end of the ceremonial season is the destruction of these enclosures.

575* 796* 791 784

A few nights after the last nakawas, the herald summons the hakaxtsa to the house in which it took place. They sit down but the usual drumming is omitted. Presently sticks are distributed and one of the singers takes his place to lead in the customary funeral keening. But before he raises his horn, one of the marshals, or another hactsa with ability in that respect, steps to the centre of the house and spits vocally in all directions, his aim being to deluge the house and spectators with a spray of saliva. Then the singer leads the keening of

575* 796* 787 784

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] 599*
you are the pay of mothers, | you commited mother, | you are spilt(d), you women 576

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] 578
who pretend to be virtuous(s). | Alas(!)! | I am ashamed, | contrite I am free(s).

[illegible]

B [illegible] | [illegible] | you [illegible]*
Exactly similar | to the little boy's nose | so that of the round headed

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
([illegible]). | Alas! | I am ashamed, | contrite I am free.

[illegible]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) This differs from most Bella Coola songs in that Gon was an unmarried mother, not a faithless wife. She was held up to scorn by the men of Kitamgaris and this song composed for her by a certain Bilqanu. [841]

(b) Recorded on song VII D 30a, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pelkey.

(c) It is said that women, even of slave blood, used to endeavour to increase their importance in the eyes of their children by boasting, falsely, of ancestral history. [554]

(d) A term of opprobrium, difficult to translate. It is said to imply slave ancestry, but is more probably a mere epithet, referring to the female organs. [195]

(e) This is addressed to women in general.

(f) An expression of pain or scorn, used under all circumstances. [192]

(g) The chorus is here changed as if it were Gon herself speaking. This is a common device in all kinds of songs.

(h) Qalcat was supposed to be the father of Gon's child.

Mourning Songs

Mourning songs excel all other Bella Coola compositions in length, complexity, and wealth of detail. Especially those composed for mighty chiefs contain numerous references to the ancestral history of the deceased and mention incidents referred to in origin myths, a source of pride to the survivors and of envy to those who listen. 599* [765] [764]

Song Used for Qaat when Mourning Mr. Gon, Qatsmalit

A [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Why has my son done evil? (Gon, ye who are residents of foreign lands!)

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

C Wa-ciplalhwa-ciplalya I fear the coming	ala-ciplalhwa-nuxalai figure(s),	yun ilcwa'cyaxalalai hail Ina'alala	533*

yun Ilgwanlaxwalai Ilgwanlaxw(?).

(a) This song was used during the Ixcitat season of 1923-4 at the initiation of an infant into the society. The full ritual was not performed on that occasion, and it was impossible to learn the proper procedure. The neophyte's person is Ina'alala Ilgwanlaxw, whose prerogatives are usually Scratch or Breaker dances, but Anakalamatx has neither of these prerogatives. [176]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 49, National Museum of Canada, trio, Reuben Schooner, Pete Charlie, and Jim Pollard, the last-named acting as conductor. This song was composed by Reuben Schooner.

(c) The chorus is worded as if the neophyte were speaking to the unnatural whose cooks he has just left.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(e) This refers either to supernatural power or to some object infused with it.

(f) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions. The meaning of the whole is obscure, although the implication is that the dancer now knows everything having, figuratively, found upon the supernatural.

(g) More accurately, the memorial figure; the meaning is obscure.

(h) The dancer's person.

Ixcitat MOURNING SONGS

533*
965
575*
[166]

Several prominent Ixcitat died during the spring and summer of 1923. Memorial rites of the usual nature were held, but in addition several Ixcitat mourning songs were composed and used in their honour during the next ceremonial season. When a relative was initiated, his song contained numerous references and words of the type normally restricted to mourning songs. Such a combination may occasionally have taken place in former times, but the present comparatively common usage is due to the difficulty of holding regular potlatches. In such case the Ixcitat rites were abbreviated, and no description of the proper ceremonial was obtained. The following are examples of combined Ixcitat and mourning songs: [177] 533*

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The ashes of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the column. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [823] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they choose themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and sway through the clubs, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, choosing new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or oolachen. Widow and widower choose themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their children are considered outcasts, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relatives invite the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this could the mourning, and that it was "the same as giving away the house of the deceased." 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

his relatives. This punishment is customary in cases of the upsetting of a canoe. Death is the penalty for throwing refuse into the river, particularly during the summer, and until the coming of the white man the River Guardian exacted it without hesitation.

THE PROFESSION OF UTTERING A DRONING CRY

At the appearance of masked figures representing supernatural beings, whether in susaok or kusiut dances, many of the women repeatedly utter a peculiar, high-pitched, droning cry which adds considerably to the weirdness and impressiveness of the occasion. Ability to do this depends on an ancestral prerogative duly confirmed by the distribution of presents. Many ancestral myths describe how some of the first women were given by Alqutām, or acquired in other ways, the right to drone, and mention is made of the name used by each with respect to this prerogative. Unlike the one previously described, many of the first women possessed this privilege, which is accordingly common at the present time. A name of this type is usually confirmed in girlhood, sometimes even in infancy, and being of relatively slight importance may be validated at a ceremony of less dignity than a potlatch. One of these names is Nunuqwelelslaiyen-a, which has reference to the blue-green sheen of some abalone-shell brought from the east by Raven in the beginning of time, as described in the ancestral myth in which this name is included. For many years there has been considerable laxity with regard to this prerogative, and women lacking it have even been urged to drone in order to add to the solemnity of the occasion and to increase the wonder of the uninitiated.

There is another similar prerogative, enabling the incumbent to drone at mourning ceremonies. In the beginning of time, Smaoua of Kimsquit married Tlālwaitl, the daughter of a Bella Bella chief, who had this right. It has since been transmitted from one of her descendants to another at Kimsquit.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424
767
463 quit. Details of this prerogative were not obtainable, but it seems to follow the general type.

THE PROFESSION OF FIRST BERRY PICKER

All women can pick berries, but in every village there is at least one who has the prerogative of picking the first of every kind. The origin of this right is lost in dim antiquity, but, like all others, each first berry picker has a special professional name embodied in her ancestral myth which must be duly validated before she can function. One of these is Stlxwaxwak-nimän·a, another is Łə'yə. Though normally reserved for women, one of these names is occasionally given to a male child, in which case it is said to have been hermaphroditized. No one would dare to pick berries until the legal picker has paraded up and down the sidewalk carrying on her back her picking basket decorated with a representation of the sun, an act which is believed to ripen the berries.

222
424
[463]
[551]
[562]
[532]
[789]

"Get ready to pick red elderberries [or whatever species is ripe] tomorrow," she keeps calling out.

The berries may then be picked by anyone. This is repeated for every variety. As far as could be learnt, there was no social mechanism to punish a woman who picked berries before the announcement of the official picker; obedience seems to have been so universal that infractions are said to have been unknown though formerly there may have been some penalty of which even the memory has disappeared.

[688]
[183]

THE PROFESSION OF WARRIOR

The profession of warrior is another prerogative handed down from the distant past and requiring validation before it can be used. As with other rights of this type, magical means are in many cases employed to make any young man brave and successful, but there are a number of warriors confirmed as such by the distribution of presents at the time of bestowal on them of professional names. At the present time, it is

701
[424]
[463] [431]
[551]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ciety. These are given several times, serving to recall the 533 ceremonies in which the chief took part during his life. At 575 intervals, the new song is repeated and sisaok members of the 766 audience join in as they become familiar with the words. Frequently one or more relatives of the deceased dance in his [535] stead during the singing. The details of this rite, especially of the songs used at it, differ considerably according to the actions of the person during life; if a mighty chief, the donor of many potlatches, this fact is described in the song, whereas only an incident from the ancestral myth can be used for a young sisaok. If some of his female relatives are professional [767] wailers, they function during the ceremony. In all circumstances, the rite aims to comfort the grieving kinsmen, an end which it usually achieves.

As already described, sisaok ceremonial was in a state of 575 transition at the time of the coming of the white man. Pre- 766 vious to that date, a spectacular funeral prerogative had been 177 adopted from Rivers Inlet,[4] which has since been claimed by a 424 number of sisaok. All the Bella Coola know of this ceremony, [178] and most of them desire to perform it at the death of a dearly loved relative; at the present time this is possible owing to the slight regard paid to prerogatives, but it is certain that a few years ago it would have been forbidden to most people, and that it was never a universal Bella Coola rite.

When this rite is performed, the corpse is allowed to remain 575 in its coffin for at least one night after the day on which 766 Mutakila came and the sisaok songs were sung. Meanwhile 532 the carpenters have prepared an imitation body, usually of rags on a light framework, and a wooden representation of the deceased's crest. Since this figure is to come through the roof and carry aloft the corpse, stout hooks are attached to its feet. In theory, the bird or animal disguise used by the first ancestor

[4] One old Bella Coola stated that this prerogative was obtained during his own lifetime from a Rivers Inlet chief who moved to Tal'ds. It is impossible to state accurately when this ritual was adopted by the Bella Coola, though it is unquestionably of recent origin.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 friends of the deceased, pick up the coffin and carry it through the hole. In former times it was frequently difficult to obtain [766] pall-bearers for a slave or friendless person on account of the [784] taboos to which a person performing this service was subject.
[761] If a dead person should be taken through a doorway, others using it would soon follow the corpse to the next world. For the same reason, a body must never be moved across the central line of a house; the passage is, therefore, made from the side where it happens to be lying. As soon as the corpse has been taken through, the removed panks are quickly replaced. Mourners and guests stream out through the doorway and follow the coffin, some of them carrying the bundles containing part of the goods of the deceased. Meanwhile the pall-bearers follow the woman with the torch to the cemetery, taking care to carry their burden so that it faces the direction [761] in which they are going; if a dead person is allowed to look backwards, he will beckon some relative to accompany him and the one so summoned will soon die.

There is a cemetery near every village, usually fifty to a hundred yards behind the row of houses in a place from which the heavy timber has been cleared. On arrival, the pall-bearers set down their burden close to the spot where the guide has placed her flaming bark on the ground. The personal possessions of the deceased are likewise deposited near the fire, which is kept alight by female relatives throwing on it small quantities of the dead person's clothing and utensils. The near kinsmen of the deceased choose the exact site of the grave, which must never be dug before the bringing of the corpse.
[423] There is no ownership of plots within the cemetery, so that the hole can be made wherever desired. A favourite location is close to the grave of a mother, father, or other near relative, but this is optional; bones are sometimes uncovered when digging, and in that case earth is thrown in once more and a new site selected. There are no professional grave-diggers, [761] nor are arrangements made in advance for men to perform this duty, but friends, especially strong young men, are willing to undertake the task and bring with them tools for the purpose. 764 When the location has been chosen, they start their work [767] without further instructions, taking care that the corpse shall face east. It is said that this is done because the sun rises in that quarter, a statement that is probably a mere rationalization. Graves are usually about five feet deep, so that the digging requires some little time, especially in winter when the ground is frozen. All the young men are willing to help and relieve one another at intervals. Meanwhile the women are squatting on the ground near the coffin, some of them throwing objects on the fire, and all wailing intermittently in a high-pitched, tuneless sob into which a mourner sometimes inserts words as if her agony had overcome her.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Please return whence you came," moans one woman, while another sobs out:

"Perhaps you were unhappy with us and wanted something we could not give you on earth."

The sun sent down the people of Sinxl and Snulk·tl, who [773] accordingly regard that being as their crest. Mourners of those villages, as well as other individuals to whom the sun stands in the same relationship, are accustomed to address him, saying:

"Please increase your light to guide the way. Our child returns to you."

One woman, whose relatives had been killed by jealous rivals owing to their success in giving potlatches, prayed:

"Come no more. Those for whom you gave light have gone; henceforth shine only whither they have departed."

In some cases such doleful lamentations are mere lip service, but they often express very real grief at the loss of a friend or relative. It is also felt that such sympathy affords comfort to the mourning kindred.

As the grave grows deeper, the relatives keep measuring it and the coffin to insure a close fit and avoid unnecessary digging. As soon as it is ready, an elderly man who has been requested to perform the rite, steps to the north side of the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 messengers may be marked with the same ritual as at a pot-769 latch, but there is always curtailment of sisaok features if rites of that nature are to be omitted.

Meanwhile other preparations have not been neglected.
424 Among the prerogatives embodied in many origin myths, is that of the presence of professional mourners at memorial
*556 potlatches. If mention of these is made in the ancient tradi-769 tion of the donor's ancestral family, it is a matter of pride for [767] him to do as was done by his ancestors in the distant past. For example, it may be recorded that at the memorial potlatch of some ancient chief, a number of his younger relatives appeared with red paint smeared upon their faces, with finely chopped undyed cedar-bark in the hair, or with bands of the [765] same material across their heads. Ālquntām had decreed that they should thus exhibit their grief, and the descendants of the chief have since had the privilege of doing likewise. Such signs of mourning may not, however, be worn without proper validation. It is only the members of the ancestral family who are entitled to don these marks, and among them, only those whose right has been confirmed by the distribution of presents. This is a masculine professional prerogative, known [562] by the same name as the feminine one of uttering a droning cry to which it is closely akin. The right is ratified at memorial potlatches, and the donor of one is glad to do so as a means of displaying his own wealth as well as of making plain the glory of his ancestors to whom the one being commemorated has [767] returned. There is no mention of professional mourners in [171] the myths of many families, nor are they ever as important in Bella Coola as among the Bella Bella and other tribes of the outer coast. If such belong to the family of the donor, he notifies the incumbents and asks them to be ready, although, eager to act, they seldom wait for such an invitation.

533 The most difficult task is the preparation of mourning songs
*556 at which the singers toil for several weeks. The donor first 769 invites them to his house and recounts the myths from which they must be composed. These may include several traditions

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This endogamic principle will be described in greater detail in vol. I, chap. VII, but mention of it here has been necessary to explain the composition of the ancestral family. 582 [614]

In recent years there has been a tendency for some men to marry foreign women in order that they, or their children, might obtain new prerogatives. Thus a trend towards exogamy has arisen from the same reason which is supposed to have caused endogamy. The offspring of such marriages cannot enjoy the feeling of strength and comfort that comes from the membership of both parents in the same ancestral family, but some individuals have felt that this was offset by the gain of highly desirable foreign prerogatives. It is said that this practice was initiated by a certain Potlas, father of a man about sixty years old in 1923. White influence probably had nothing to do with this radical innovation, although its wide adoption has been made more easy by the establishment of peaceful conditions on the coast. [554] [177]

Strong as is the belief in a common ancestry, it is unlikely that this would have sufficed to hold together the members of the ancestral family, without some definite prerogatives. These are of two kinds: names and land. 614 554

NAMES

The fundamental principle governing Bella Coola nomenclature is that each name must have originated in connection with some event of comparative importance. It is unthinkable to apply a casual designation to a child. At a person's death his name, or names, may be transmitted to a relative, and it is proper that the owner of a name should know when, by whom, and for what reason, it was first created. Tradition affirms that, before coming to this earth, the first people were all given designations by Alquntam; these have been carefully handed down and are still in use. One name cannot be given to two individuals; instances occur of two people having the same one, but in such cases they have different origins. One person may have several names of different kinds, each carrying 551 [768] [553] [773] [428]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

597 736 Ignorant of his ancestral names, and lacking the means to validate them even if someone should tell them to him, owing no hunting-grounds, the unfortunate infant is little better than a slave. This is almost unthinkable except in the extremely rare contingency of a child being left without relatives.

Although public opinion does not impel kindly treatment to orphans left without kindred, yet many Bella Coola have charitable dispositions and it is not unknown for a family to adopt and tend an infant without reason or hope of reward. One old man mentioned how his mother and a Chilkotin child had been born on the same day when a party of the latter had been encamped near Nuxqalst. A few days later they left for the interior, abandoning the infant. The grandfather of the old man chanced to pass their camp while the ashes of their fire were still warm and found the baby, whom he brought back, to be a brother to his own daughter. His wife suckled the two, giving each a breast, and treating the foundling as her own. When the boy grew into manhood, he went back to his own people, but never forgot his adopted parents. Forty years later he visited Bella Coola, bringing with him his own wife and family. The old man who related this incident recalled the manner in which the Chilkotin had instructed his children to regard him as their brother.

597 [768] Children are not the only persons to be adopted. On the death of an adult his relatives may "adopt to replace" someone who has a striking facial resemblance to the deceased. Thus, some time after the death of his sister, a certain man was in Bella Bella and saw a Bella Bella woman who closely resembled her. He desired to adopt her, and since he was a man of importance, his wish was granted. To legalize the transaction [431] he distributed valuable presents among the Bella Bella. A person so adopted does not usually change his abode, nor does [401] he lose membership in his own family; instead, he becomes a [835] member of two, with full rights to names and prerogatives in both, is addressed with the same kinship terms as if related by blood, and is likewise considered a member of the family as far as incest rules are concerned

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 A man who is giving a ceremony of any kind can offer few greater 583 insults to his wife's relatives than omission to ask their assistance. The 578 following is a good instance of such an insult:
602 About 1900 a man and woman were married and had three children. Then the mother died, before being repurchased from her husband. In addition, the husband had assisted his wife's father when one of his younger children had died; so that it was most fitting that the wife's relatives should contribute to any ceremony given by the husband. Four years later the husband proposed to marry once more, and to have the wedding occur at a potlatch. But on the day of xlāxtwm, he insulted the relatives of his dead wife by failing to invite them. The cause of the feud was not disclosed, but the husband increased it by again failing to invite her family when, during the potlatch, they should have rebought her for the benefit of his young relatives about to be initiated into the ranks of the tsāsk. The father of the dead woman came forward uninvited with a large present for each, saying in effect:

"I, too, have a right to contribute to add prestige to my daughter and her children."

In this way he defeated the wiles of his son-in-law who had hoped to shame his father-in-law by the failure of the latter to contribute to his potlatch. The son-in-law endeavoured to excuse himself by saying that his late wife's relatives had not assisted for so long that he thought they would not wish to do so. This retort further incensed the father of the dead woman so that next day he and his wife publicly gave the donor of the potlatch $300 "to make clean where we sit."

This somewhat lengthy description has been necessary to explain the important part which the repurchase of wives plays in the lives of the Bella Coola; it is one of the fundamentals of society and is, therefore, worthy of attention.

DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE

● 768 Either death or divorce can terminate marriage. The de-[586] cease of a wife is an unfortunate affair, quite apart from the grief which it may cause her husband. Two families have been brought into peculiarly close relations through her, and now the bond itself has snapped; delicate financial arrangements have been undertaken, and it is not easy to settle these without ill-feeling, particularly if the alliance was a return marriage. If no child has been born, and no repurchasing of the wife carried out, her relatives are expected to return to her husband's family the goods received during the engagement and at the wedding. The matter is then settled. If the deceased has a younger sister, cousin, or other near relative, an effort is usually made to have this individual replace the dead wife.* No further goods are given, except perhaps a few to add dignity to the transference; the new wife merely replaces her dead sister and the bond between the two families continues unbroken. If the husband should die, his wife's relatives are considered honourable and endowed with the minds of chiefs if they restore to his relatives the presents which they have received. But if the wife can be remarried to one of his relatives, there is no need for this and the two families continue to enjoy the mutual strength acquired by the long period of engagement and exchange of benefits and presents.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

If death takes place after the repurchasing of the wife, there is no need to return presents, since the rebuying has cancelled the expenditure by the husband. If children have been born and the woman has long become practically a member of her husband's family, she is buried by them as a matter of course, but should she die soon after marriage, her own family usually performs the obsequies.

With the passing of many years of married life, the repurchasing several times of the woman, and the birth of children, she becomes so much a member of her husband's family that his death seldom ends the arrangement. The widow is by no means a slave and usually is master of her own destiny, especially if she has children and has reached a position of eminence in the community. Since the desirability of preserving the bond between the two families is fully realized, it is accordingly customary for a widow to wed her husband's brother, or a husband his deceased wife's sister. But in each case the ritual of marriage and exchange of presents must be

*The native term emphasizes the fact that the new wife is virtually inherited by her husband.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 squatting, now it is customary to use the extended position.
764 It is impossible to state whether this is the direct result of white teaching, or whether the ease with which large boxes can now be made has led to interment at full length.

RITES FOLLOWING DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

968 Interment of the corpse does not end the ceremonial necessitated by a death in the community. As already described, some of the clothing and utensils of the dead person are burned during the funeral, but all are not destroyed at that time. The proportion kept for future treatment is immaterial, nor is there any established usage concerning the type of object reserved. During the days following the funeral, relatives of the deceased carefully gather his clothing, cooking utensils, rifles, and all other articles which have been his personal property or used exclusively by him. On the fourth day, these are taken to the cemetery by his immediate family, accompanied by as many of their friends as wish to show their sympathy. A fire is kindled near the grave and on it is deposited whatever can be burnt; other objects are either cast into the flames or piled near at hand (see Plate 17). It is most important that every article belonging to the deceased should be disposed of in this way. There are two reasons for this. First, it is considered indecent to use the possessions of a dead person; they would have the effect of poison on anyone doing so. Secondly, the ghost of the de-
[795] ceased receives goods that are burnt or deposited on the grave
[753] four days after the funeral. If deprived of what belongs to him, a ghost punishes the offenders by causing sickness.
178 Occasionally a new rifle, or some other treasured possession, 768 is kept by a relative or friend; this is contrary to the established custom, but is justified by considering the article to be a gift from the deceased or a memento of him. No one would accept such a legacy unless he felt sure that the dead man entertained such kindly sentiments towards him that he would be glad to have his friend receive it.

In recent years the number of incombustible objects has increased enormously with the introduction of metal utensils, gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully placed near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not resent an open transfer; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undoubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange is a rare event and would cause animosity if carried out by anyone except a near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected over his grave, a common Bella Bella custom. This is built immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The sorrowing relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no other mark for the grave is put up until a memorial potlatch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-parsnips, which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave; they are food belonging to the dead person. The white man has taught the Bella Coola how to plant apple-trees and these are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath. The Bella Bella are said formerly to have replaced at intervals the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bella Coola practice. Indeed, a grave is never

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Indeed, a grave is never
965 disturbed except, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a [789] portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the [961] opener, so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

968 Burning or deposition near the grave is not restricted to the actual utensils and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be laid dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready [964] by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person seems indescribably indecent. In recent years, the crop, if a man dies after tilling and sowing a field, is allowed to ripen, and then rot unharvested. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is [961] apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of [789] death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that has been in contact with a corpse.

964 The rituals described above may be considered as religious in nature; almost equally important are the social require-431 ments of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This 556 indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members of the ancestral family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite [614] manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the woman who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way.
Failure to do so brands the relatives as misers with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death

1:McIlwraith E-S (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

769 sum being used for each name, and the bills were displayed *556 before messengers carried them to the recipients.

553 Finally, Jim Pollard took the opportunity to bestow on 425 Captain Schooner the name, Swanhali. This designation [614] was the property of the donor's ancestral family and should [622] not have been transmitted without the consent of all its members. Jim had probably informed several of them of his intention, but no objections would have been raised if he had overlooked this courtesy, since he is the only nemit chief among them, and the only one with determination and prestige. It was not an outright gift, since it was announced that it must be returned to the donor's family on Captain Schooner's death. Jim Pollard acted as his own announcer for this transaction, explaining that he gave the name in gratitude for the help which Captain Schooner had rendered at the death of his, Jim's, father about twenty years before. He promised that at the earliest opportunity he would give presents to validate the transmission.

769 During the lengthy distribution of money, the audience had *556 shown unmistakable signs of weariness. It was now between 2.00 and 3.00 A.M., and as soon as Jim had finished speaking the guests dispersed quietly, though many of them gathered in groups in one another's houses to discuss what had taken place.

Captain Schooner slept late after the lengthy ceremony, but was proud and contented when interviewed about noon. He felt that what was fitting for his daughter had been performed, and was willing to take the consequences of having broken the law.

●968 Little else of note occurred in connection with Jessie's funeral. Samuel King deposited near her grave a sewing-machine which his wife had used for only a short time and Captain Schooner decided to replace this with an older one belonging to his wife. He made this exchange on the afternoon of June 30, when Samuel, in company with a number of women, was burning the rest of Jessie's clothing and possessions. Captain Schooner explained his act by saying:

bibliOverlaid E-1 (922-09243)948
MES Bellacoola MSS

"She was my daughter, I have a right to do as I like." 761

Samuel King and the others accepted the exchange as a matter of course and made no comments. Captain Schooner took no part in the burning of his daughter's goods, this being the task of those with whom she had been living, and who accordingly knew which were hers. The fire was kindled by a married daughter of Reuben Schooner, though it could have been done equally well by any woman. On the following morning, July 1, Samuel King went with a friend to the forest and passed four times through a small spruce sapling bent into an arch. This was the last incident in the funeral rites. 763 764

Fate of the Dead

LIFE OF THE DEAD

Little need be added to the account given in vol. I, chap. 11 of the fate of those parts of a man which go at death to Nuxalk-a. The spirit and the life travel back the path of the deceased's ancestors from generation to generation until they reach the place where his first forefather came to earth and where his cloak, if he had worn one, floated back after his alteration to human form. When the spirit and the life of a descendant reach the spot, they change into a being having the form of the cloak, and so return to Nuxalk-a. The spirit and the life of one who is a member of several ancestral families visit the localities where the transformations to human shape of all his ancestors occurred. The Bella Coola believe that these two elements can assume many great forms, but they do not know whether this entails the simultaneous assumption of many shapes to comprise a composite figure, or whether the spirit and the life, which become a single entity in the case of a member of one ancestral family, become multiple for one who is a member of several. When lamenting a dead person, mention is always made of the various scenes which he will have visited, and the forms he will have assumed. At a memorial potlatch, the deceased may return as a hybrid, or as 765 accustomed to do when alive; but the workmanship is shabby and unsubstantial, sometimes even comparative. Ghosts do not act like human beings, but usually walk backwards, sometimes even on their hands, and spend much of their time playing a game resembling football with large, globular objects made of some light substance. They communicate with one another both by whistling and in a language which resembles the strangest of speech made by a temporal person. Some individuals believe that there is a supreme chief in the land of ghosts, Mitt-istat, who dwells like Pluto to preside over the shades. He figures in certain stories describing descents to the lower world; but many Bella Coola know nothing of his existence below, although it furnishes a plausible explanation for his coming by right to molest human beings. Like Swainson he causes blood to rush forth from the mouth and genitals of anyone whom he seizes; death follows, and a new victim has been acquired for his kingdom. The more common belief is that the villages of ghosts have chiefs like those of human beings. It is thought, indefinitely, that after a long period of time the ghosts die, and some of them may then return to this world as infants. A child born with dimples in its cheeks, which are regarded as indications of previous beatings for rings, is believed to be the reincarnation of some unknown ancestor.

At death, the ghost does not immediately appear in the land below, but remains for four days within the back room of a house corresponding in style to an ordinary Bella Coola dwelling. It is believed that one of these large houses is beneath every village* and that the dead pass straight down through the earth into it. Meanwhile the goods, burnt at the grave during the funeral, as well as those deposited beside it, have fallen through the ground and notified the ghosts that a newcomer has arrived. The wealths assemble from all directions and fight over the articles, some of which are obtained by the one who owned them during life. On the fourth day after the funeral, the relatives of the dead person have the remainder of his property, which passes through the earth to the ghost for whom it is intended. Clown-singers have taken their places and begin to have our music, and presently the recently deceased appears, stepping backwards from the back-room in time to the beating of sticks. He is at once surrounded by his fellows, each anxious to learn the latest news of relatives still alive. This dance is really to welcome the new arrival, and takes place irrespective of his rank. After it has been held, it is hopeless to attempt to rouse a dead person, although that has been done several times during the four days immediately succeeding death.

*There may be one large house, extending beneath the world like Pluto's abode; it was impossible to obtain definite information on this point.

Only shamans are able to pass down into the land of the dead, though stories are told of inadvertent visits to it in relatively recent times. Human beings are prevented from visiting their dead relatives, but the latter, being supernatural, can come to the earth at will. They are always dreaded, and anyone who hears their whistling or their tongueless chatter returns to his house, and hopes they will pass by. Shamans can understand their speech and to them the dead explain their mission. If the relatives of a dead person have failed to have all his personal possessions, he returns to earth to inform them, through a shaman, of the omission. The house is searched for anything left out and it is burnt so once now the ghosts, though no one knows how a ghost would punish failure to give him his property. Thoughtful people, remembering the scarcity of food in the land below, frequently give presents to their dead relatives by casting small morsels of food on the side of the central fire nearest the front door, beneath which is a passage to the lower regions. The food becomes magnified as it falls down this, so that even small fragments are sufficient to feed many hungry ghosts. Since the introduction of metal stoves, it has become customary to throw food into a fire kindled for the purpose in the cemetery; the most suitable time is at dusk, although people are always afraid that spectres may be prowling around at that hour. If sufficient presents are not given

If the war had not been of long duration in which economic [727] losses failings had been around, captives were often ran-somed by their relatives, who came unwelcomed for the purpose when the loss of lands had subsided. Failing this, prisoners remained as slaves, the children especially growing up virtually [726] as members of their owner's family as far as food and clothing were concerned, though never sharing in the prestige of his ancestral family. Torture or killing of prisoners seems to have been a rare practice. One extremely old Kitsegukla woman related that in her childhood she had seen a captive crucified out on the bare rocks at the side of the room, burned there, his corpse crucified with arrows, and allowed to die. No other similar conditions could be obtained and it seems probable that this must have been an unusual case. It is true that hostilities have long ceased, but the Bella Coola have clear recollections of other long-abandoned customs, and it is unlikely that torture was ever a common occurrence. It is, of course, one about which silence is to be expected, but information would have been obtainable if the custom had been common or if it had been one which played an important part in the lives of the Bella Coola.

Scalps were hung on a cord and dried like salmon, then [722] suspended as valuable trophies in the taker's house. When [721] setting out on a war expedition, he would often cover his head with one, holding it in position by weaving it into his hair. [721]
At a man's death, they were either inherited by his heirs or were taken, burnt with his other possessions. It is said that the Fort Rupert people used to tie scalps to handles to their canoes. When the Bella Coola went to war to avenge [721] for a murder, instead of scalping a victim, they sometimes [721] brought back his whole head and impaled it on a stake over [721]
the grave of the person avenged. [721]

At this late period it is virtually impossible to form any [721] opinion as to the amount of bloodshed in wars waged by the Bella Coola. Several of the older people spoke in glowing terms of the slaughter accomplished by their ancestors, but all

1:McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 778 A man may claim descent from as many as eight of these groups, that is, he may be a member of eight ancestral families. Some restrictive means must have been employed to limit the choice of marriage partners, otherwise a man's membership in ancestral families would have been far greater than it is. The explanation lies in the high regard with which the members of an ancestral family esteem the prerogatives they have received from their forbears. With the marriage of the first women, their brothers were called upon to share their rights, both practical in regard to hunting territory, and ceremonial with regard to dance prerogatives, with their sisters' children. Bella Coola mythology contains no references to unwillingness on the part of the first men to do this; in fact, their own children benefited equally from the marriages of their fathers with other women. But, say the Bella Coola, after these first marriages, necessarily exogamic, men realized that it would be foolish to allow their children to marry far afield and so diffuse valuable prerogatives. It was far wiser for a man to seek as future son-in-law a youth belonging to the same ancestral family as himself or his wife. Then any resultant children would come into this world provided by both parents with common relatives, so that the child would be, as they express it, "Held close and supported by a close circle of ancestors."

582 614 [778] Bella Coola logic does not explain how marriages could have been arranged in the early generations without violating the laws of incest. The endogamic principle displayed at that time, however, has been carried out until the present day, so that a man endeavours to arrange marriages for his children with members of the same ancestral family. One of the strongest Bella Coola desires is to "make good the path" for his offspring, and this can best be done when they are born amply provided with relatives of common ancestry. There is [614] no belief in the active participation of distant ancestors in the affairs of men, yet, though incapable of clear expression, the Bella Coola feel strongly that a child is born into the companionship of its deceased relatives back to the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Although guests from different tribes are sometimes invited to other ceremonials, it is at potlatches that they are essential. Since the validity of such transactions as marriages, divorces, or the assumption of professional prerogatives depends on the presence of witnesses, and since the importance of such a rite depends on the number of witnesses, a man is always eager to carry out any public performance at a potlatch when he is sure of the attention of foreigners, and the consequent wider diffusion of knowledge of what he has done. The man who has invited guests is usually willing to allow others to perform at his potlatch, since it increases the complexity and importance of the affair. It follows that no two potlatches are alike; one will contain features entirely lacking in another. Moreover, the wealth of the donor determines how many rites he himself will cause to be performed. The fundamental concept of the potlatch is the inviting of guests from abroad to witness rites in connection with an ancestral myth, especially the return of a recently deceased relative of the donor to visit the living.

At any important potlatch the following rites are carried out, and in the account of the ritual it will be assumed that these alone are taking place. If the reader bears this summary in mind, he is less likely to be confused by the complication of rites.

(1) The return of a dead ancestor to visit the living.

(2) The initiation of young men or women into the cusad society. This includes the validation of a cusad name for each, and a period of seclusion in the back-room. The initiates may either be relatives of the donor of the potlatch, or young persons whose relatives are taking the opportunity to carry out the rite in the presence of foreigners. Some of the initiates may already be members of the society, undergoing a further period of seclusion in order to increase their status by a further distribution of presents.

(3) The payment by the wife of the donor and her family of goods to "release" her from her husband. This is a legal fiction, though necessary to maintain the status of the children.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

532 622 the time the earth was settled, ought to be chief of that village. If he has been able to give the necessary potlatches to weight his possession of that name, the fact that he is the legal descendant of the first chief will add a certain amount to his prestige, but unless he has been able to do this his influence will be slight.

532 622 946 [775] Thirdly, potlatches smooth the way for the giver after death. Before the corpse of a chief is removed from the house where he has died, a speaker always announces the number of potlatches he has given and the total value of goods distributed at them. These gifts in a vague way are felt to make easy the deceased's path in the next world as they have done in the present. The feature of the potlatch, though firmly believed by some of the older people, plays a less important part in the life of the Bella Coola than might be expected.

What are the requisites for giving a potlatch?

556 [424] (1) Possession of an ancient myth, containing a name or names. Probably every Bella Coola has this requirement. A man's family may not be the proud owners of one of the ancient myths dealing with the first settlement of this earth, but they will at least own some ancient myth which they can showm by giving a potlatch. As has been said, the owner of one of the most ancient names in many cases chooses to showm one of lesser antiquity, a course which must, perforce, be done by one who lacks an origin myth. The slight feeling of deference with which these are regarded who hold the names of the first inhabitants of the earth, the mighty chiefs of old, is subordinate to the very real feeling of respect in which is held the successful giver of potlatches. The descendant of one of the first people has the potential right to chieftainship, but unless he can give potlatches he will fail to gain that eminence.

532 [554] (2) An occasion for giving a potlatch is never lacking. It consists of a number of closely associated rites, any one of which will serve as a reason for the ceremony. The most important feature, the return of a dead ancestor or ancestors to visit the living, is available to anyone at any time. The Bella

Coola say that the return of the dead "washes away grief," and unquestionably it has a comforting effect on the mind of the donor of the potlatch.

(3) Wealth. Unless a man has the necessary goods with which to make presents he cannot invite guests, no matter how important may be his ancestral myths and names. Some of this wealth he may be able to amass by his own labours, but unless he is assisted by his wife's family it is virtually impossible for him to succeed. The Bella Coola believes that a man cannot become a chief except through large payments made by a woman's family when they "rebuy" her from her husband. In other words, no man can succeed without the support of his wife. In choosing a mate a man is guided almost entirely by the ability of her family to give him financial support. In some cases an elderly couple assist a married son to give a potlatch; this custom, though considered quite proper, is not common.

(4) Supernatural assistance. To the Bella Coola this is quite as important as the preceding. One man may work very hard but his efforts are never crowned with success, whereas another man will prosper in every venture. This is due to the supernatural attributes given by the supreme god to the latter. By prayer, ceremonial cleaning, and other means, a man may increase the powers granted to him, but if these are entirely lacking, he can never hope to rise to the position of chief.

****

In describing the potlatch, it will be convenient to refer to the donor as X, and assume him to be a middle-aged member of the noble society, whose name and name, though duly verified, lack importance through his previous failure to give large presents.

For a number of years X has prospered. He has amassed quantities of skins, blankets, tools, copper ornaments, clothing, canoes, baskets, dentalium shell, slaves, and other valuables.

adopted, probably as a prerogative obtained through marriage, from the Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people. The diversity in ritual supports this view. There was not sufficient time for the procedure to become stabilized between the introduction of the concept and the dissolution of Bella Coola social life through the influence of the white man. It is also possible that the tatsinam was added to nusk rites from the older a'ulk society (I, p. 975).

Whatever may have been the history of the tatsinam, it provides Y with a mask, or with two, if two figures have appeared. He guards them jealously, though secretly, throughout his life and uses them only on ceremonial occasions. It is one of these masks which will be brought out if one of his family gives a dramatic representation of his return after death. A mask of this type is sometimes wild, but the legatee alters the design before using it.

A short pause follows the singing of the second, or third, song, during which some chief or chiefs may make a laudatory speech concerning Y's family history. Then the singers again sing the first song, and nusk members of the audience join in. Similarly, the second song is practised. These two are sung, time after time, until the nusk have thoroughly mastered them. When the singers consider that this has been accomplished, they call X, who communicates with the nusk man outside who has the whistle, and again its eerie notes are heard. Some of the uninitiated, believing that the supernatural being who gives potency to the ritual is at hand, hurriedly leave in fear. At the same time some of the nusk conduct to the back-room the second initiate whose acquire to be sung that night. The procedure in his case is identical with that described for Y. Usually it is considered sufficient to include two on one night, though there may be exceptions. When the songs of the last have been sung, food is distributed and the people disperse.

A few nights later the same ritual is repeated for two more initiates, who join their predecessors in the back-room. Here they spend their time in silence, the only essential being the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 184 ings to reward carpenters and others who had helped X prepare for his potlatch, but in Bella Coola this was usually done the following night.

556 769 535 575 [533] New comes what the Bella Coola regard as the most important feature of the potlatch. The singers strike up one of the songs of a senior xaxa, perhaps a sisi chosen for his skill in acting. As he dances, clad in his ceremonial costume and head-dress, whistling is heard without the house. A number of xaxa are making the noise and they modulate it so that it appears to draw nearer and nearer. This is effected either with whistles of different sizes or by blowing harder. The dancer rushes out of the house. The whistling continues in a series of short bursts, as if a conversation were being carried on in that language. The xaxa or sisi returns, and the audience, silenced by the mystery of the affair, listens to his explanation:

"It is so-and-so," he announces, using the ancestral name of one of X's deceased relatives. "The crest has come to pay his son [or whatever relation X may be to him] a visit. I will bring him in."

While he speaks, continuous whistling is heard from without, but when he leaves the house it once more takes on the form of a dialogue. Presently he returns, followed by a masked figure in the centre of a group of members of the xaxa society. If the deceased's first ancestor had been an eagle, in that guise [532] the figure will appear—an eagle mask on his head, and his whole body, except perhaps the feet, covered by a large blanket thickly covered with eagle down and furnished with painted wooden wings. The dancer is usually entirely blinded by this costume, but he is guided by a number of the xaxa whose presence is attributed to the necessity for guarding and paying honour to the supernatural visitor. Among those who accompany him there is always a man with a whistle, the note of [533] which simulates the cry of an eagle, and this is sounded at intervals. The actor bends in imitation of a bird and shakes [532] himself, lifting his head and opening the movable beak by means of a hidden string, while the whistle sounds. Then he 556* stoops down and hops a few steps eagle fashion. Slowly, with 769 pauses and turnings around, the figure circles the fire and retires through the front door, always attended by a number 595 of masks. The actor displays considerable dramatic ability, 575 and the performance is strikingly effective in the large, plank-built house, illumined only by a smoky central fire which [592] casts flickering shadows over the intently watching audience.

Although publication can be held without this feature.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The dogs, alone uninpressed by the solemnity of the occasion, skulk to and fro.

If a whale is represented, a large wooden frame-work is [592] carried by several men who walk inside of it. Raven, bear, or other animals may also be used, according to the ancestral myth of the deceased. Some of the first people came to this earth as men, but there have always been a sufficient number of intermarriages to permit everyone to portray some bird or beast, obtained from the family into which an ancestor married. A supernatural object claimed to have been seen by a forefather can also be used on these occasions. In some cases a composite figure is used. Such may have the head of an eagle, a killer whale projecting from the back, and a raven on [592] its chest. In such a case these three creatures have been connected with the ancestry of the deceased, and his spirit is believed to have assumed these forms. Great individual choice [184] is allowed in such matters.

If several of X's deceased relatives are being commemorated, the sound of whistling is again heard from without, a short time after the departure of the first masked figure. A senior mask goes out, and the same ritual is repeated. This time the masked actor represents some other bird or animal.
Three, or in some cases four, dead people are thus shown, though, as a rule, [illegible]. The actual management of the figures is left to the direction of the carpenters who have made them. Often a foreign workman is employed, as a mark of respect for his skill. In spite of all precautions there are often delays about the final preparations, especially with regard [556] [769] [575] [535] to a complicated figure such as a whale, and in that case an expert dancer among the guests is called upon to perform. It is announced that this is, "to make clean the road for the dead."

After each masked figure has disappeared, the sound of whistling from without grows gradually weaker, as the apparition returns whence it came. In solemn silence X takes a copper* which he has had in readiness, breaks it across his knee,* and throws it either into the fire or down on the ground in the track that the figure has taken. Then the announcer calls out loudly:

"It is for his crest.* It has 'made bone for the dead.'* Then he continues, speaking for X and using the first person:

"My heart is glad at seeing my father.* At death he returned back on the path of my family's ancestors and donned our ancient crest. He now lives in Nuxwáit-a, whence he came to visit us and whither he has now gone back."

[771] The significance of the throwing down of a copper is entirely unknown to the modern Bella Coola, although they still perform the ritual. In some vague way it is felt that "bone," which may imply stability, has been provided for the deceased. The act thus appears in the light of an offering to the dead, but this sentiment is not clearly appreciated by the participants in the rite; the present has been made for, rather than to, the one being mourned.

The copper, now valueless, is picked up by any chief and given to a poor man.

After a short interval a number of youths begin to distribute presents, provided by X, which have been placed in readiness. Gifts of equal value are given to all foreign male guests; [564] [481] [325] [436] while the women receive even less valuable. These presents

*One of the glaucous of native copper, such as were formerly beaten out and used as tokens of value by the coast tribes of British Columbia. Their employment by the Bella Coola will be described later in greater detail (I, p. 102).

*The breaking is symbolical ritual.

*That is: "For the dead man, now in form of his crest."

*Or whatever relative the deceased may have been.

are strictly non-returnable, being regarded as "eagle down,"* and having, therefore, a ceremonial significance. They validate and mark the importance of the representation just displayed. They are spoken of as having been shaken off by the dancers as he departed to return to his home above. 556* [769] [45]

If there are many sunsi initiates concealed within the back-room, some of them may now be called upon to dance, but usually this is reserved for the following night. Unless some of those included are going to dance, food is distributed and all disperse. [575] [535]

THE POTLATCH: THIRD DAY

This is the day when presents are given and, with the previous, is the most important of the whole ceremonial. The following are its features.

During the Day

(c) Distribution of much food, and sometimes of insults to the guests by excessive presents, or by the destruction of valuables. [577]

During the Evening and Night

(a) Dramatic representation of some object connected with X's ancestral myth.

(b) Distribution of presents by X to recompense the craftsmen who have assisted in the potlatch.

(c) Repayments by X of gifts received at previous potlatches.

(d) Giving of presents by X to some of his guests.

(e) Distribution of presents to strengthen X's name.

(f) Distribution of presents to strengthen, or establish, name for a number of young men.

(g) Dancing of the sunsi initiates. 556* [769] [45] 575

(h) Distribution of presents to recompense those who have [illegible]

(i) Distribution of presents to recompense those who have assisted the sunsi dancers.

(ee) Distribution of presents to validate the sunsi dances and the names thereby acquired by the initiates.

*The Bella Coola state that the Eagle down was for this is one or gone.

Swanton B-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

in the appearance of the poles. Sometimes one is erected o the front door of the house with an opening at its base throug which all must pass to enter the house, or a pole may be set and stand on the opposite side of the sidewalk; the choice i either case depending upon the usage recorded in the ancestr myth. Instead of a totem-pole, a chief may display his ancest tral claims by means of paintings on the front wall of his house or by carved house-posts supporting the longitudinal beams, such had been used by his ancestors. Moreover, a chief w ished to display a totem-pole may choose to use only painting If he validates these by potlatches, they give him the same di nity and importance as a totem-pole, particularly if he cann validate its construction by lavish gifts. Most Bella Coo poles are only about 10 feet to twenty feet in height, and thoug it is possible that a few families had prerogatives entitling the to construct lofty poles, such as used by the Haida, it is m likely that such were ever common.

When a chief who has erected a totem-pole before his hou gives another potlatch, he may wish to put up a second po beside the first. Occasionally two or three poles stand beh the house of a chief, but one is more frequent or even more tal. At death the pole is often taken to the cemetery wh it acts as a memorial-post (I, p. 46). Otherwise it remai standing until some other occupant of the house wishes, erect another in its place, when the first is pulled down or neglected.

Copper

The Bella Coola use copper for only two purposes: rarely on the ground upon which the representation of a deceas [illegible] relatives had troubles, or throwing into the fire when the figu has left the house. In either case, they are said to "make hot for the dead." Although used but rarely, the occasion when copper is employed is so important that to obtain one of increase in value is a vital consideration for every chief.

Most of the coppers now used by the Bella Coola are non

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of their occurrence in most ancestral myths.[9] There seems to be no mythological explanation for the casting of a copper into the fire after the passing of the representation of a deceased relative, but the desire of chiefs to use them at potlatches is the result of their use under similar circumstances by their ancestors. Some ancestral myths lack reference to coppers, but their use is common to all, whether or not embodied in such. It is said to be easier for a chief to acquire coppers if they had been used by his ancestors, but this is not essential.

556* 773 [769]

When arranging for the appearance of a dead relative, the donor of a potlatch is careful either to possess a copper, or to be able to borrow one at the right moment. As soon as the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up, breaks or bends his copper, and throws it into the fire "to make bone for the deceased." No matter how valuable a copper may have been, it is now worthless; its value has been expended on the purpose for which it has just been employed. It lies unheeded in the flames, a valueless article belonging to no one.

556* 769

At some convenient time, either hours or days later, any chief may remove the copper and give it to a poor man, only taking care to choose an individual who has not recently received one. It is said that the gift is "to patch his canoe." It is now the poor man's property, but it has no value, since no goods have been expended for it. The new owner straightens and repairs it, if necessary by riveting on the broken pieces, thus making it ready for further use. The poor man may keep the copper for years, or it may be only a few weeks before some chief, preparing for a potlatch, offers, perhaps, $10, for it. In the old days, values were computed in slaves, canoes, salmon, and other commodities, but now in dollars. If two chiefs should happen to want it, the poor man may haggle about the price, though in such a case the two rivals would probably agree amicably rather than lower their dignity by seeming to be interested in a matter of money. It is to the advantage of a

556* [735] [325] 495 556* 437

[237]

[9] Wooden shells and copperplates are mentioned for the same reason; the former are mentioned in several origin myths, the latter in two at least.

1:McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

765 religious rites affecting the whole community. In spite of the prohibitions enforced, it is said that a widow or widower usually becomes fat after the death of a partner. This observation agrees with several instances known to the writer, but whether it is of universal application is doubtful, although the Bella Coola emphatically state that this is the case.

Memorial Rites

THE MEMORIAL POTLATCH

177 The most important, as well as the most complicated, 55 mourning rite is the memorial potlatch, ckwanit, for which so 769 much wealth is required that it can be carried out by chiefs 622 alone. This ceremony, being associated with cusuk rites, has altered enormously in form within recent years. Before the introduction of cone-shaped whistles and other foreign elements, it was almost indistinguishable from an ordinary potlatch and the two were occasionally combined, having as central feature the return of the deceased in the form of his crest. Among the tribes of the outer coast, especially the Bella Bella, the two types of ceremonial were apparently distinct, and as the Bella Coola adopted more and more of their neighbours' cusuk ritual, they followed their custom in this respect as well. It is said that a certain Nuklis, uncle of a man about sixty years of age in 1922, was the last to combine both. The Bella Bella felt that he had thereby committed a ritual error for which he would be punished; within a few years he died, and the Bella Coola assumed that this was due to the unanimous expectation of his death on the part of the Bella Bella. From that time onwards, the Bella Coola were careful to separate features belonging to potlatches from those of memorial potlatches.

After a comparatively few years, the white man's domin- 648 ation had increased so enormously on the central coast that the potlatch, including both types, was prohibited by law. Owing to the consequent difficulty of performing complicated

1:M:Howatth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

rites, the Bella Coola were again led to carry out at a single gathering features which properly belonged to several. To combine the memorial potlatch with the potlatch, being a return to an earlier custom, presented no serious difficulties and was consequently widely adopted. The Kimsquit people, moreover, seem never to have adopted the clear Bella Bella differentiation, and as the rapid decrease in population threw them in ever closer contact with the Bella Coola, their influence tended to lessen differences between the two ceremonials. 177 556* 969

At the present time, a memorial potlatch is almost identical with an ordinary potlatch in practice. The same rites are often carried out at both; each varies considerably, and when the distinctive elements are omitted the two become indistinguishable. None the less, they are never confused in the minds of the participants. The house where a potlatch, ómu, is taking place is called a wadmots, that where a memorial potlatch, ótwadi, is occurring, a wadwanditsa. In giving invitations and making comments, heralds are careful not to refer to the ritual under the wrong name; in fact, it may be said that the chief difference between the two is in the minds of the donor and his guests. Sociologically, both are considered to be on a par. Equal wealth is required, and each can be performed only by a chief, both on account of the expenditure involved and owing to the difficulties in procedure which are thought to be too great for a lesser man to surmount. 556* 969 [203] [222]

Difference in the donor's motives is usually sufficient to separate a memorial potlatch from an ordinary one. The latter is given by a chief desirous of increasing his prestige by lavish expenditure, for which one of the excuses is the validation of the appearance of a dead relative. Although this is the central feature, so many other rites are performed that it is sometimes obscured or may, indeed, be omitted entirely. On the other hand, a memorial potlatch occurs as soon as possible after the death of a father, mother, or other dearly loved kinsman, and it is clear to all that the donor's reasons for the rite are to commemorate the deceased, and to console himself and his [222]

1;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*556 diate family. Confusion is probable only when a chief is •769 bereaved after he has stored up goods and made preliminary preparations for a potlatch; he may then carry out the rites intended, but designate the ceremony a memorial potlatch.
[575] More often, however, the affair is limited to rites associated with the decease. Consequently, there is omission of the initiation of neophytes into the nusa and a'alt societies,* there is no establishment of new seats for young relatives of the donor, and no strengthening of his own. It must be empha-[184] sized once more that there is no unalterable sequence of prescribed rituals at either potlatch or memorial potlatch; the omissions just mentioned are customary, not universal, and when present the ritual of the two ceremonies is identical. Except on those rare occasions when omitted at a potlatch, the return of a dead relative is the central feature of both.

In recent years, the great increase in wealth has made it [771] possible for a chief to perform a memorial potlatch soon after the death of an esteemed relative. This was rarely the case in former times, but as there was no other reason for which valuables were so ardently desired, every expedient was used to obtain the necessary goods. Occasionally, a chief happened to have the needful goods stored up so that he could give a memorial potlatch almost immediately. To such a fortunate individual the term, yanla, was applied, a word difficult to translate but combining the significances of rich, ready, fortunate, and reserved.

[796] Memorial potlatches, like those of the ordinary kind, are usually held in the early autumn, though occasionally one may be postponed until after the kwiat season. When an intending donor has decided that he owns sufficient goods, he first calls in his fellow-chiefs and makes known his intentions, at the same time expounding in considerable detail the myths which [533] he proposes to use as themes for mourning songs, and for other

*Performance of such rites at a memorial potlatch would be considered sinful by the Bella Bella and were always omitted during the period when their influence was important.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

prerogatives connected with the ceremony. The actual re- 556*
counting of the myths may be done by a fluent speaker on 769 behalf of the bereaved man, and when he has finished speaking, [533]
it is proper for several of his peers to make complimentary speeches, lauding the future donor for his intentions. Food is [537] then served and the gathering breaks up.

The preliminaries of a memorial potlatch do not differ from those of an ordinary one. There is the same counting and recounting of goods, the same giving and receiving of presents, the same lending and borrowing. When at last the donor is ready, the heralds call his fellow-villagers to his house for announcement of the arrangements and allotment of the work. As at a potlatch, food is provided on a lavish scale, and there is the same sham-fight with a battering-ram ending in the destruction of part of the house. Then the carpenters receive their instructions; some to make different sections of the new structure, some to paint ancestral designs on the front and back walls, and some to make the various objects required.

The first difference between a memorial and an ordinary 211
potlatch is apparent at this allotment of work. Instead of a 556*
totem-pole to record the glories of the donor's ancestry,[30] car- 764
penters are requested to make memorial-posts for the dead 769 relative who is being commemorated. These are erected in the cemetery near the grave and are of three kinds, although it is unusual for all three to be set up for a single chief.

The first consists of a wooden post carved with the design of one or more of the deceased's crests (see Plates 19 and 20). [532]
These figures are usually representations of the bird or animal cloaks used by his first ancestors; it is customary to portray the one traced through the father on the right, that traced through the mother on the left. Instead of a cloak, the figure may portray the post down which swarmed his first ancestor in the beginning of time, or Mount Nusfalst in human form, wearing a broad-rimmed hat as he did before he turned to [30] From the construction of a new house and the painting of new designs is often omitted.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE4

211 stone and served as landing-place for some of the first settlers.
*556 In fact, any of the dead person's crests may be used according 764 to the wishes of the chief giving the memorial potlatch. A 769 figure displayed in this way cannot be used as the guise in which the dead relative returns, but as every individual has several crests, inability to use one does not make it difficult to carry out the rite. According to one well-informed old man, when a design has once been used in a cemetery it cannot again be shown by members of the ancestral family, having itself become "dead." Other informants flatly contradicted this statement, and it seems clear that the above is true only with regard to the use of the figure in connection with the return of the deceased. The erection of the figure serves to remind all beholders, especially foreign guests summoned to the memorial potlatch, of the ancestral myth of the deceased. It is, there-
[778] fore, equivalent to a totem-pole erected during a man's lifetime, in fact, one of these is sometimes moved to the cemetery to serve as a memorial-post (see Plate 21). Instead of placing a representation of the crest in the cemetery, one is sometimes painted on broad boards and placed on some conspicuous promontory where all who pass by will see it and think of the person commemorated.

The second type of memorial consists of plain poles set upright in the cemetery, one for each major ceremony given by the deceased. Potlatches, memorial potlatches, and kukuxiutsk (II, p. 29) are alone indicated in this way, these being the only [609] ones to which foreign guests are invited. These poles suggest, in a general way, the greatness of the deceased.

The third type of memorial-post comprises representations of the goods given away by the deceased. These are usually [532] painted on boards attached to a post set up near the grave. On this are pictures of canoes, coppers, slaves, and other valuables distributed at potlatches or memorial potlatches (see Plate 22). Alternatively, there may be a series of small poles, each surmounted by a model canoe manned by miniature human figures, symbolic of a canoe and slaves given away

2:34:Dewalth K-5 (1922-1924)1941
NES BeGlacomia NES

(see Plate 25). So, too, wooden representations of coppers are often affixed to an upright post. Not only men are commemorated in this way, a father often places over his daughter's grave pictures of the goods used to relieve her from her husband; wooden plaques representing coppers are commonly used for this purpose.* Such symbols are usually cut down after a year owing to a vague feeling that it is not proper for them to remain standing too long. The function of this type of memorial is to mark the social status of the dead person as judged by the riches given away by him, or on his behalf, during his life-time. With the introduction of writing, the Bella Coola have been quick to recognize it as an easy means for recording the wealth distributed by a chief. In consequence, signs are often painted and erected, giving in figures a statement of his financial transactions. Another recent introduction has been the tombstone. One of these is often set up with the name of the deceased carved on it to perpetuate his memory, and a representation of his crest to record his ancestral history. Such a memorial combines the functions of the first and third types.

As the carpenters labour at the memorials, other arrangements for the ceremony proceed apace. As at a potlatch, the fellow-villagers of the donor may be invited separately to his house for the performance of sacred dances, but this feature is often omitted, especially if there are no neophytes to be initiated. The mask to be worn by the deceased relative must be prepared in secret; or if several are to be commemorated at the single ceremony, one must be made ready for each. As the time draws near, envoys are dispatched to invite foreign guests if it has been decided to have strangers present. This has been customary for many years, but during the period when no features of the potlatch were allowed at a memorial potlatch, the latter was sometimes carried out in the presence of the donor's fellow-villagers alone. The actual departure of the mourners may be marked with the same ritual as at a potlatch, but there is always curtailment of usual features if rites of that nature are to be omitted.

*The National Museum of Canada, at Ottawa, has specimens of these wooden coppers.

Meanwhile other preparations have not been neglected. Among the prerogatives embodied in many origin myths, is that of the presence of professional mourners at memorial potlatches. If mention of these is made in the ancient traditions of the donor's ancestral family, it is a matter of pride for him to do as was done by his ancestors in the distant past. For example, it may be recorded that at the memorial potlatch of some ancient chief, a number of his younger relatives appeared with red paint smeared upon their faces, with freshly chopped undyed cedar-bark in the hair, or with bands of the same material across their heads. Ayamtim had decreed that they should thus exhibit their grief, and the descendants of the chief have since had the privilege of doing likewise. Such signs of mourning may not, however, be worn without proper validation. It is only the members of the ancestral family who are entitled to don these marks, and among them, only those whose right has been confirmed by the distribution of presents. This is a masculine professional prerogative, known by the same name as the feminine one of wearing a drawing cry to which it is closely akin. The right is verified at memorial potlatches, and the donor of one is glad to do so as a means of displaying his ever wealth as well as of making plain the glory of his ancestors to whom the one being commemorated has returned. There is no mention of professional mourners in the myths of many families, nor are they ever so important in Bella Coola as among the Bella Bella and other tribes of the outer coast. If such belong to the family of the donor, he notifies the members and asks them to be ready, although, eager to act, they seldom wait for such an invitation.

The most difficult task is the preparation of mourning songs at which the singers toil for several weeks. The donor first invites them to his house and recounts the myths from which they must be composed. These may include several traditions of different ancestral families to which the deceased belonged, irrespective of whether or not he had said a name from one, being a member of the group, its songs can legally be used in his honor. Elements from different myths are often combined into one composition, corresponding to the different localities and characters which the dead person has visited in travelling back the path of his multiple ancestors to the beginning of time. If one person only is being commemorated, four songs are prepared; if several, two are used for each. Those for any individual is unlucky. Two types, chanant and dualcadal, are in common usage, and the singers, after consultation with the donor of the ceremony, decide which shall be employed. The former describes in some detail features from one or more of the deceased's ancestral myths, mentions the journey which he has taken to visit the individuals and scenes referred to, and calls on him to assume the form of his first forefather. A common theme is to state the origin of his name, and how he loved it so greatly that he left the earth to follow it back through time and space. The following is an abbreviated version of such a song, based on the origin myth of Kitlaho:

"We have been unable to actually see him. Go whither Kitlaho came, and become a raven. Go to the east and get abalone-shell; go to the west and get copper. They will actually see."

Another chanant of the same type is:

"Your first ancestor circled the world with the aid of an abalone-shell paddle. Do you likewise. They will greatly see as nothing on earth could do."

On the other hand, an dualcadal seldom refers to the ancestral history of the deceased, but to his actions during life. It records the number of slaves, canoes, and other valuables given away as potlatches,* and alludes to other praiseworthy actions. This type of mourning song, though usually used only for a child, can be employed for a dead child. In this case, the theme describes the efforts of the parents to incorporate the deceased in the traditions of their ancestors, and the number of times he had been ceremonially married. The text of one used a few years ago is:

*The analogous method of making known a man's distribution of wealth is by a totem sign over the door (see Plate 34).

"We said, Dad! Annabelle (the child's name was the last when she was born. What more could we have done? Why did she leave us?"

The text may refer to the prerogative of employing mourners, as in the following:

"Come ye professional mourners, help me to give voice to my lamentations."

The tunes of mourning songs are usually remembered from year to year, and the singers may merely alter words to make an old song applicable. In some cases, such compositions are changed so slightly that they become virtually possessions of an ancestral family, and may then be preserved for generations until even the history of the names embodied is forgotten. Occasionally, ancient relationship between two such groups can be deduced from the occurrence of the same names in their mourning songs, although all traditions of intermarriage have been forgotten. There is considerable difference between the tunes of chanted and deadhouse, in fact, this distinction may be more important than the themes, since the latter do not invariably conform to the types just described. A few tunes of ancestral history may be incorporated into a song dealing primarily with the actions of the deceased and ex-wives. Sometimes four of one type are used, sometimes two of each. Much thought is devoted to the compositions, the singers meeting every day to try over and improve one another's efforts. The more long and complicated, require much practice, since any error would be an admission of great inefficiency. These daily rehearsals take place in the dove's house and he is required to provide food for the singers. It is not uncommon to see a song of Bula Bula origin, since the Bula Gula admit that members of their tribe excel in compositions of this type.

such an adoption occurs only when the deceased was the owner of a Sulu Sulu cyth and the song in question had been used to mourn a real / fictitious relative. It is contrary to custom to use the name words of a song not composed for a member of the deceased's ancestral family.

The actual delivery of invitations by the mourner to the distant guests does not differ from the manner already described, except that they are said "to come to visit the sick [dead]." The significance is, of course, that the mourner's condition is that of a patient. To indicate the reason of their visit, guests or a substitute patient always wear a little dyed cedar-bark around their heads.

On arrival, the property of foreign guests is conducted to the donor's house, where they make themselves comfortable in the section allotted to them by the heralds. An elderly Sulu Cuda chief who a famous orator has been asked by the donor to speak, so he rises to do so as soon as his fellow-villagers have assembled and taken their places. No set phrases are used, but the speaker usually begins by reminding all present of the way in which their ancestors were created in Wawadi, and how almost extinct children. It is an occasion on which eloquence countrical, and the speaker delights in using as many archaic words and rhetorical expressions as possible, with constant reference to religious beliefs and ancient history as recorded in orthology. Then he speaks of the death which is the occasion / the ceremony. If the deceased were an old man, he is referred to by a special term not in common usage, ended sin, which implies wisdom and respect as well as extreme age. The man states that he has fallen, using the term ayuin, normally applied to the thunderous crash of some mighty tree. He spoke of a young chief as ca'Ilimdin, short-lived, a person who has been burned down by the supernatural Carpenters. He concludes by describing the worth of the deceased, the number of potlatches he gave and the manner in which his name was known to many tribes. Finally he tells of the donor's grief, of how this "sickness" has been alle-

537 viewed by the presence of welcome guests. Mention is fre-& 556 quently made of the journey taken by the dead man to the 769 scene of his ancestral myths. In addition to being an orator, [illegible] the speaker must also be a nuxalk chief, since it is felt that [illegible] none other can have the necessary assurance and poise to refer to these most sacred and important subjects. During the speech, sunbeams blow eagle down over the heads of all present.

Food has been prepared in advance, and as soon as the speaker has finished, the heredits call the guests to partake of it. The first course is then distributed, smoked salmon mixed [264] with chicken grease. Speeches are sometimes delivered during this part of the meal, as well as at the second course, cranberries with more chicken grease. If the guests have arrived during the afternoon, there is no delay between the feast and the ritual that follows, but if they have come during the morning, there is a gap until the evening. Visitors usually time their arrival for the early part of the afternoon.

537 The next event is a speech from one of the foreign chiefs, & 556 phrased in grandiloquent terms similar to those used by the 769 Bella Coola orator. He speaks of the manner in which the 609 supernatural Carpenters have hunted the deceased, but reminds 533 his hearers that this is because Alquntin has decreed it, therefore all must be for the best. He refers to the dead man's crest, and to the manner in which this guise will be available to him.
During the day, the singers have been careful to learn the tune of a mourning song sung by the ancestral family of each foreign chief likely to speak. This day now been due, often assisted by some of the guests, and always accompanied by their singing. No one dances to accompany the song; it is merely a verbal mark of sympathy, implying that the speaker himself knows the grief occasioned by death, and, also, that he was is sufficiently important to be able to use a mourning song. If, as is usually the case, there is more than one influential chief in the party, a second rises to speak, expressing in different terms the sentiments expressed by his predecessor. Another mourning song is sung for him in the same way. Sometimes so many as five or six speeches are made, each followed by a song of the same type. In such circumstances it is impossible for the Bella Coola musicians to learn all the tunes, but if five or six chiefs are present, it implies the presence of a large delegation among whom are always a number of singers. It is they who really learn our the tunes, assisted by their Bella Coola employer. When the last song has been sung, the guests present their hosts with gifts brought for the purpose. The donor himself receives the most valuable, but all the Bella Coola are remembered, chiefs to a greater extent than commoners. Such gifts are not to be returned; in fact, to do so specifically, especially soon after the receipt, would be insulting. After the distribution the evening concludes with the usual meal.

[illegible] R-1 [illegible]
[illegible] Bellewelle [illegible]

This meal is repeated at the arrival of every group of guests. It is uncertain whether or not all the mourning songs are again learned out after the song of the final speaker of the last group. This seems to have been done occasionally, and the distribution of presents by the guests likewise postponed. Just before the gathering breaks up, the hostess call out: "Hoolamamamap."

This serves as intimation that the Bella Coola rites will take place the following morning, and the guests prepare accordingly. Occasionally, when a man is poor, a memorial potlatch is held without the presence of foreign guests.* In such cases the preliminaries just described are, of course, omitted and the above call marks the commencement of the ceremony.

The next day the guests gather in the donor's house, clad in their best. The mourners are in attendance, each conspicuous with the proper mask. In many cases several of these carry miniature totem-poles, carved to represent bird or animal chiefs assumed by the donor's ancestors, and which will now be the forms of the one who has recently died. As soon as all have taken their places, an eloquent chief whom aid has been requested for the purpose stands up and recounts the dancer's ancestral myth in some detail, mentioning the source and meaning of the mourners' masks and the designs of the totem poles. There is continuous to the effect that the chief will "cry" by relating the history of his ancestors, which is also the history of the journey taken by his kinsmen, and that this recital will shame him up. The word used for this, nuxlimkim, is the one commonly employed for raising a heavy burden with the aid of a lever. Then the singers begin to lead out the first of the mourning songs, accompanying it with their voices and assisted by as many of the audience as are familiar with words and tune. Every effort is made to make the singing as impressive as possible to add dignity to the recital of the journey taken by the person who is being commemorated. The poems have attractively and are suitably impressed by the ancestral history of the dancer and his family. All the songs that have been prepared are sung in succession to the same strange. The lack of dancing distinguishes this type of ceremony from all others and adds somewhat to its impressiveness.

*This was probably quite common during the period when all potlatch feasts were memorial.

When the last song is the proper time for validating young relatives of the dancer as mourners. One of the numerous totem poles, which are light enough to be carried in the hands, is brought from the back room and given to the boy on whom this prerogative is being conferred. An eloquent speaker explains the meanings of the designs as displayed and enough of the family's ancestral history to make clear whence, and how, they were obtained. The singers begin to beat time slowly, and the youth endeavors to keep time with his feet, while he continues to hold the pole.

Meanwhile the dancer and his immediate relatives have been arranging the piles of presents with the inevitable counting and re-counting. As at a potlatch, a fluent speaker is commissioned to hold up the objects, once whence they have been obtained, to whom they are going, and for what purpose. He says, for example:

[illegible]

"Fifty skins become nothing on the path of Kalulu."

Everyone knows that the name the expenditure of the amount for the singing of a mourning song in connection with the myth in which Kalulu appears. Gifts must be given for each song, and it is the desire of the donor that they be of living value. So, too, is the validation of professional mourners concerned. The goods having thus been displayed, a free dance, further, called "Tuse" with reference to the donor's grief, is made, each guest receiving a gift of the same worth. It is not remarkable, being the legislation of the ceremony be too just-oriented. This is followed by donations to the carpenters, the singers, the professional mourners, and all others who have rendered assistance; to women, these are pay, though they are always referred to as free-will gifts made in gratitude for services rendered. Like the law, they are not remarkable. Finally, any goods remaining from the store that has been brought out are given to chiefs and other influential members of the community. Though not clearly stated, the recipients have that these are really investment-presents; when they reciprocate, they mention that they are repaying a gift made at a memorial potlatch. A plentiful meal is now served, during which several chiefs make complimentary speeches, and the gathering breaks up.

In former times, when features of the ordinary potlatch were borrowed from a memorial potlatch, the ceremony just described was the central point of the proceedings. It was the public conclusion of the journey taken by his deceased relative which allowed the donor's sorrow and filial love with pride. A few days after, in the late afternoon, the hostess called back the guests and the songs were sung and re-sung. Whatever cross-gifts were not used, nor were professional mourners in evidence; the sole function of the gathering was to provide opportunity for hearing the songs. They were repeated until far into the night, when a large meal was served and the guests departed. A few days later the memorial was carried out again, with a similar lavish distribution of food. This was often done at intervals of two or three days for several weeks, depending on how much food the donor was prepared to use. The amount required was so great that a rice was considered, in some ways, more difficult than a potlatch.

As already mentioned, however, it became customary in the last century to incorporate forms of the ordinary potlatch into one of a memorial variety. In such cases the first singing of the mourning songs with display of masks by the performers occurred in the past record, but there is no recalling of the guests merely to listen to more to the songs. Instead, the ritual differs but slightly from that of an ordinary potlatch as already described (I, p. [illegible]). An occasion is found to summon the guests to the memorial[illegible] received, and to inform them of the significance of the regalia displayed. This same practice has been continued via the introduction of [illegible], and the wearing of the wing upon them is incorporated. The story of the deceased in a form of his crest, and the subsequent use of a [illegible], is the rule as already recorded. This is frequently followed by the singing of a sacred mourning song if one of the more selective ones in perspective of foreign origin. If so, he walks slowly around in fire in a wide circle, shaking his rattle, and singing unaccompanied. Most, if not all of these songs, are in the Bella Bella language and the right to use one has in every case been obtained through intermarriage with a member of that tribe. At intervals, he will call out:

"Listen to the chief's honour."[illegible]

When presents are distributed to visitors the whole ceremony, mention is always made of 3 different features for which they are given. As at a potlatch, the most important is the return of the dead, but at a memorial potlatch another reference is the display of the memorial[illegible]. These have been carved, painted, and set up, but are without crests validated [illegible] There is no mention of the dances as at a potlatch, for as honoured of the performers are noted.

Lib: Dwenth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bulletin NES

by presents, and the greater the number of these, the greater the value of the memorial. Nothing need be added concerning this point, or other rites, to the detailed description given in vol. I, chap. iv.

Psychologically, the memorial potlatch is of tremendous importance. There may be a vague feeling that the ritual is of actual assistance to the deceased since grease burns so it reaches him, and is of service to him, but such a belief is no more than an intangible sentiment of no weight in the lives of the people. Quite otherwise is its effect on the survivors, especially on the donor. A memorial potlatch is considered the fitting tribute of respect to a chief, and if none of his near relatives should hold one, they would brand themselves as unmindful of the fame of their dead kinsman. In recent years the white man's law has prohibited the potlatch, but chiefs have often preferred to go to jail rather than to forego this form of memorial. The reason for this cannot be explained better than in the words of an old man whose only daughter, a "Chiefswoman," died in 1910. He determined to hold a memorial potlatch and expressed himself to the writer, as follows:

"If I should fail to do what is right under the circumstances, to do what my ancestors would have done, my heart would be dead, dead as my daughter. But if I call the people, if we sing mourning songs for my child, I will be able to ease my grief. I shall have done what is right, and will be able to hold up my head with anyone, knowing that the rites have been performed for my child which are due her as a chief. If I allow her to be neglected, I would be ashamed and miserable. Jim [another "chief"] warned me when I first told him of my intention that the law forbade such ceremonies. I cannot help that. If I am sent to jail, to jail shall I go. I would rather have that happen than that my daughter should not receive fitting treatment as a chief."

In this case, though only abbreviated rites were carried out, their performance unquestionably lessened the father's grief, a fact observed on several occasions. Not only does it comfort a man and manage his sorrow to know that he has shown fitting respect to the dead, there is also a gain in social prestige. As the whole community respects, admires, and sometimes envies a man for having carried out a memorial potlatch, there is no doubt that he is pleased and gratified to such an extent that his grief is dulled. These two factors must constantly be kept in mind; memorial potlatches serve to commemorate the dead, but in so doing they add to the social importance of the donors. The two combine to bring considerable comfort to the chief who has lost a dear relative. In some cases the social prestige is the real motive, the grief assumed and unimportant; but in others the latter is the only factor that matters, and a chief is entirely oblivious to any increase in his own status. In most memorial potlatches, both feelings are present in the mind of the donor, and both are gratified.

SPECIMEN ACCOUNT OF A FUNERAL

In the preceding pages, an attempt has been made to describe the traditional death rites of the Bella Coola. The following section comprises a detailed account of funeral ceremonies witnessed in 1922. The contrast between these and the ones already recorded, will indicate some of the changes in custom which are of such importance in studies of cultural growth or decline. The following description will also serve to demonstrate a point repeatedly mentioned, the manner in which business transactions and arrangements of all kinds take place whenever the people have been called together.

On June 25, 1922, the death occurred in Bella Coola of Jessie, Mrs. Samuel King, daughter of Captain Schooner. The latter, now deceased, was one of the writer's most trusted friends, and as a result of this friendship it was possible not only to attend the actual rites, but to ascertain much of the feeling underlying them. This advantage had its drawbacks, since it was manifestly impossible to question either the father or the husband of the women too closely. The details will be deof Eagle, Raven, and Blackfish, three of her cousins of which the results were available. They agreed that Timothy Snow* was the best carpenter available and that he should be commissioned to put them in shape and arrange their use. Rachel wanted to sing a sacred mourning song, to which he had a prerogative derived from his Bella Bella mother, and it was also decided that the band* should play. Rachel informed her father that he would contribute his towards the expenditure.

[1948] 1949 1950 1951 1952 1953 1954 1955 1956 1957 1958 1959 1960 1961 1962 1963 1964 1965 1966 1967 1968 1969 1970 1971 1972 1973 1974 1975 1976 1977 1978 1979 1980 1981 1982 1983 1984 1985 1986 1987 1988

Wanderbilt Jessie had been scalded by female friends, shot in her best clothing, and laid in her coffin. This was a rough law, contributed by the manager of the cannery and despised like a white man's coffin. At intervals, women came near and wailed dolefully without heeding others similarly engaged. The news was carried to all the Bella Coola, those men who owned gasoline launches taking the word to the logging camps without being requested to do so. A Cowichan Indian who happened to be returning from the cannery spread the word through the village, where each woman who received the message hurried off to some friend, with whom she began to wail.

Early on the following morning, Captain Schooner returned home with his wife, Jessie's stepmother. He had been crying and was sad, but seemed willing to talk. He spoke of the proposed memorial potlatch, and expressed the sentiments recorded on vol. 3, p. 470. He was grave and dignified, obviously determined to perform what he considered to be the necessary rituals, deliverer of consolations, and handler of what he held to be an unjust law. During this summer, Captain Schooner had been a rather heavy drinker, but on this occasion he abstained from wine, and said that he hoped no one would show disrespect to his daughter by appearing in a drunken condition either at the funeral or the subsequent rites. It is worthy of record that his widow were scrupulously closed. During the morning he was visited by the singers and other chiefs to discuss details of the coming ceremonial.

---

*He was an elastic object in the Schooners.

*Members of the younger Bella Coola were members of the band, performing white man's music on white man's instruments. Only Schooner and Sundancer, he is to believe, that this influenced the decision, since the performance of the band was necessary to furnish what the whites was in Bella Coola.

Wauneka Samuel King had been summoned from his logging camp. He wished to show his own grief, and also his sorrow that the union between his family and the Schooners, forged by his marriage to Jessie, should be terminated. Six children had been born to cement the bond. He consulted his brother and sisters, who agreed with him that a marriage between his daughter, by a former wife, and George Nelson would be desirable. The girl was consulted and raised no objections. Samuel then addressed Captain Schooner who was favorably disposed, so it was decided that this ceremony should take place in connection with the memorial potlatch. It would be a real, not a fictitious marriage, as the girl had reached adolescence several years previously.

Another visitor to Captain Schooner that morning was Joe Williams. Several years earlier, when he had given a ceremony in honour of two of his children who had died, Captain Schooner had contributed $100 as "A Blanket for George Nelson's Wife." This was really part of the marriage transaction, although delivered for a number of years after the actual date of the wedding. This sum had been divided as follows: $20 to Joe Williams, $20 to Mrs. Joe Williams, $10 to Mrs. George Nelson, $10 to her brother, $20 to Lame Charlie, and $20 to Mrs. Lame Charlie. Joe consulted the recipients and found that all were willing to repay their indebtedness at this time. Captain Schooner did not ask for it, but Joe was glad of the opportunity to do the proper thing at the right time and thus rise in popular estimation. He and his relatives decided to return $150, a sum which he mentioned to Captain Schooner that morning.

Joe Williams, his wife, and Mrs. George Nelson also decided to take advantage of the gathering to relieve the last mental from her husband. The fact that they had been separated for at least a year and that the woman had been living as married

1:36 Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

was not carefully observed. Those wishing to dig took turns with the tools; there was no supervision, and no orders given. When the grave was ready, Jim Pollard asked Judas to perform the rite with the spruce bough, which he did with a brush brought by one of the youths. The young men lowered the coffin into the grave while the band continued to play. The missionary then read the Christian burial service, after which he withdrew. Some of the young men brought planks from old houses near-by, sawed them to the size of the grave and laid them over the coffin as a cover. At this juncture Judas, one of the oldest and most conservative of the Bella Coola, rose to speak. First he offered consolation to the mourning relatives by pointing out that all must travel the same road. Then he spoke to Jessie, telling her not to linger, but to travel back the path of her ancestors from generation to generation until she reached the place where they first came down from above, and dance to second to Nacwaiw. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of the speech, which was punctuated by calls of "Ho!" from the male Bella Coola. The next speaker was Jim Pollard, the most influential Kimsquit and a personal friend, though not a relative, of Captain Schooner's.

"Go," he said to the dead woman, "Go to the localities from which came your first forefathers in the beginning of time. There you will find your most valuable ancestral possessions. Go at once, do not linger and lose yourself on the road from generation to generation."

Turning to George Nelson, he went on, "Do not be down-hearted, all of us must travel the same road. It was made by no man, it is the work of Alquanim."

Looking back once more to the grave, he said, "In Gonqu is are buried many illustrious relatives of yours. You will be among friends, whereas we are left to lament your departure."

It was impossible to write down the words at the time and the above record is not literally correct, although it expresses the gist of the speech.

Captain Schooner whispered to Robert Hood, another of the 764 older Bella Coola, asking him to announce that he, Schooner,

159 with Dan and George, was going to hold a memorial potlatch
[209] that evening to which all were invited. Robert is not a herald
764 but undertook this duty owing to the absence of qualified [554] heralds. Meanwhile the grave had been filled in and the [159] people began to drift away as it rose to ground level. Their attitude throughout had resembled that of white people at a funeral, and the hilariousness that characterizes so many Bella Coola gatherings was entirely absent except among the playing children. By 4.30 p.m. all had left the scene.

764 In view of the large number of guests expected it had been [554] decided to hold the memorial potlatch, not in one of the old-[344] fashioned houses, but in the village hall, built according to the [354] white man's style of architecture and illuminated with swinging [338] gasoline lamps. This is a large, rectangular building, undivided by partitions, with a stage at one end and a door at the other.
About 6.30 p.m. the singers, Nelsonhadzenaz, Jim Pollard,
Billy Pollard, Alec Davis, Kimsquit Alec, and Robert Hood, gathered at the hall and seated themselves below the stage.
Billy Pollard had prepared a mourning song during the day,
Kimsquit Alec another, and it was decided to use two others that were well known to all. The singers sat and practised these four for some time, while at intervals various Bella Coola strolled in, listened for a few minutes, then walked out again.
Anyone was allowed to do so, but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile Captain Schooner had brought 264 $10 worth of rice, raisins, and condensed milk which he placed 764 beside a large iron cauldron outside the front door. Jim To-[554] Morrow, a Bella Coola of no great intelligence, volunteered to act as cook and soon had a fire blazing and the food boiling.

About 8.00 p.m. the people began to assemble, bringing their own plates and other utensils. After considerable delay and chatter, the guests took their places in the hall, seating themselves regardless of rank on benches ranged along the two side walls and massed at the rear. By mutual consent a portion of the single row of benches along the left wall was reserved

Schl McDowell B-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellevonia NEA

for the Carriers and other foreigners. The cook began to ladle the rice into basins provided by Captain Schooner; these were taken by some of the younger men who poured helpings into the dishes of the guests. Spoons had been forgotten, and there was delay until these were provided by slivers split from a block of wood for the purpose. Contrary to ancient usage, no attempt was made to serve food to the guests in order of their rank. Men, women, and children were sitting everywhere, the infants kept moving around and crying continually throughout the performance, but no one seemed to be disturbed thereby. 769 556* 264 [178] [352]

When everyone had eaten, Nebuchadnezzar, who had been sitting facing the other singers, beat on the floor to attract attention and then rose to speak. He asked the help of all to make the ceremony a success, and thus assuage the grief of the bereaved relatives. 769 556*

Joe Williams and his daughter had taken their places on the right-hand side of the hall and had requested Willie Mack, a fluent speaker and influential chief, to assist them in arranging the financial transactions. They spread a blanket on the floor on which the bills were counted, and beside this Willie knelt. Joe gave him a sum of money, which was counted and re-counted; Willie then held it up in the vain hope that it could be seen by everyone in the hall. He announced the amount, also that it was to relieve (the divorced) Mrs. George Nelson from her late husband, and that it would "make clean the place where she sat." A young man delivered the money to George who added it to the general stock for later distribution. Next a copper was produced, held up, and presented to him for the same purpose. Meanwhile Joe, assisted by his mother and other relatives, had been counting the money which they proposed to give to Captain Schooner in settlement of the previously contracted debt. One hundred and fifty dollars were produced and handed to Willie Mack, who held them up and announced that it was in return for the $100 given by Captain Schooner on a previous occasion to Joe Williams, his wife, his son, his daughter, his mother, and his stepfather. The bills 769 556* 583 [537]

1:56:Dewalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

969 were taken by one of the younger men to Captain Schooner, 556 who accepted them without showing either gratitude or the reverse; this return was a matter that concerned the Williams family, not the Schooners. After a short delay, Billy Pollard moved over to the group and spoke to Joe and Willie Mack,
[584] to whom he gave $10. The latter stated that this sum, which he held up, and a horse, which was not produced, were being given to George Nelson to rebuy his (divorced) wife. Billy is not related to the woman, but had long been friendly and wished to share in making good the path for her children. This matter had not been previously broached. The choice of [537] Willie Mack as announcer was made merely because he was a fluent speaker and, as a chief, had the necessary self-confidence to act fittingly.

969 After these preliminaries, the main rite was begun. Jim 556 Pollard, an eloquent chief unrelated to any of the principals, 537 spoke at some length describing the journey taken by Jessie to visit the scenes of her ancestral myths. He was followed by a Bella Bella chief who happened to be in Bella Coola at the time. In the Chinook jargon he first expressed his sympathy and respect for Captain Schooner because he was carrying out the fitting rites, then asked leave to speak in Bella Bella because he found it difficult to express himself in Chinook. He described the journey which the deceased had taken owing to her membership in the ancestral family of her mother, a Bella Bella woman. No one paid much attention to the speeches; in fact, it was impossible at the back of the hall to hear what was said owing to the chattering and crying of children.

969 After considerable delay, the singers decided it was time to 556 sing the first mourning song. It had never before been used, 533 although the composer, Billy Pollard, had prepared it several years earlier and had merely altered the words during the morning after consulting Captain Schooner about his ancestral myths. The singers had learnt text and tune during the rehearsal a few hours before. It was impossible to record it in detail; in outline, it consisted of the words:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Child, you are an eagle now. You are like Xemcua.[11] He will provide an eagle cloak for you." 769 ●

The theme was continued throughout as if Captain Schooner were speaking and lamenting his daughter. At intervals the phrase was repeated, "My child has fled home." The leader of the singers, Jim Pollard in this case, kept calling out to the audience to cry and sing, and as many of them joined in as had come in earlier to listen to the words. The whole effect was strikingly dignified and impressive. 556* 533

Captain Schooner joined the singers for the second mourning song, since he alone was familiar with the details of the ancestral myth which formed the theme. In former times a bereaved parent would never have been obliged to assist in this way. Kimsquit Alec had composed the tune during the day and Billy Pollard called out the words, line by line, inviting the guests to join in. The theme consisted of instructions to Jessie: [178]

"Go," it ran, "To the mountain whither Sril[12] came. Thence travel to the Skeena where you will assume the form of a whale and be able to spout like one.[13] Go then to the far north where you will enter the copper house within which dwells a copper raven and where the salmon are taitaimy."[14]

This song was sung in the manner already described.

The third mourning song was one composed for a Tāl-io chief, Smaouxt, who had lost his daughter during the smallpox epidemic. Its use was justifiable, as Smaouxt was Jessie's mother's mother's mother's brother. It had a double significance since the dead woman's mother had allowed it to be used when lamenting the death of a brother of Samuel King, a member of the same ancestral family. Captain Schooner had altered the words to make them applicable to the present situation. The theme was:

---

[11] One of the first settlers of the earth, an ancestor of Jessie.

[12] Another of her first ancestors.

[13] One of Jessie's first ancestors had landed up the Skeena and there assumed the form and characteristics of a whale.

[14] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

●769 "Please stop crying. We have made good your memory.
+556 You are a light to your brother. Go to Smaoasx where he 533 stands among the abalone-shells far to the south.[50] Thence go overland to Rivers Inlet where a sḫāmtsk will serve as canoe for you.[51] You will see the long house where your ancestor obtained shaman's power."[52]

Meanwhile Reuben Schooner had been out of sight behind the curtain of the stage. After a short interval, he emerged [292] wearing a blue blanket decorated with mother-of-pearl buttons sewn on in raven design. He was followed by two other influential members of the sisask society, Alexander Clallaman and Nebuchadnezzar, similarly attired. Reuben began to sing in a low, sad, penetrating voice of considerable musical power and, followed by the other two, walked slowly in a sunwise circle around the hall, all the time shaking his right hand, held projecting outwards at right angles from his elbow. The song was in Bella Bella, and even the singer did not fully understand the meaning, and few of the audience had any idea of its significance. When the three had almost completed the first circuit, someone brought Reuben a rattle, which he clutched in his right hand as he continued his way. The reason of the shaking at once became evident; he should have had a rattle through-[178] out but few of these were left in Bella Coola at the time and it had not been possible to borrow one before beginning his song. Again the three slowly circled the hall, Alexander and Nebuchadnezzar calling out at intervals:

"Listen to the mourning song of the chief."

After the second circuit of the hall, Reuben paused near the singers and spoke to Alec Davis, a sisask siki. The latter [424] rose and stated how the prerogative of siki, including the right to sing, unaccompanied, a mourning song on occasions such as this had been transmitted both to Reuben and his brother Harry from Ao·sti, a Bella Bella chief to whom they were

[50] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.
[51] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.
[52] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.

Lib: Dwelth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

related through their mother. After a little further discussion, Harry took the rattle from his brother and began to sing as he walked around the hall, followed by Alexander and Nebuchadnezzar. Harry was less familiar than his brother with the proper words, but supplied this deficiency by humming. He was also less at ease, and he lacked the musical ability which had made his brother's singing so impressive. After a single circuit, he restored the rattle to Reuben, who continued to go around the hall as he sang. This time he paused at intervals, and kept glancing towards the door, his whole attitude betraying that something was interfering with the previously arranged plans. The purpose of the singing was to summon the dead woman in the form of her crest, but she did not appear. In early times those who were not nuaat were told that the words and music penetrated to the upper regions, reminding the deceased of the grief of his relatives and persuading him to return. This belief had passed away at the time of the ceremony here described, but the fiction was continued, and it had been planned that the representation of the deceased should enter when the song was finished. It later transpired that the delay was due to a number of white people who, having gathered at the doorway, made the performer unwilling to put on his masks and disguise. Reuben continued to sing half-heartedly, and finally cried out:

"Perhaps I have lost my power, it does not come."

Alec Davis, who had previously left the hall, came rushing in and called out in a loud voice:

"Somatle [Jessie's ancestral name and the one in connection with which she had been made a chief] is coming. She has been to the scenes of her ancestral myths. Her crests have taken her. She comes as Eagle, Raven, and Blackfish, bearing her grandchild."[11]

The speaker is a morose, rather surly individual, usually undignified and often drunk, but on this occasion his manner had changed in a remarkable degree. His eyes were bright, his [11]Although not yet dead, all hope had been abandoned for the child's recovery.

Schultz-Swanton B-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bella Coola NEB

919 556 expression animated, and, except for his dirty European clothing, he looked and acted like a religious dignitary taking part in an important ceremony, as was indeed the case. While he was speaking there came from without eerie notes of the large, cone-shaped whistles, combined with the yelping scream of an eagle. The effect, even on an audience which knew that these sounds were of human origin, was tremendous. Men and women stiffened in their seats and craned their necks to see what was taking place near the door. A number of the younger men had slipped away during Reuben's singing to help the masked dancer with his disguise. As some of these assistants continued to blow their whistles, others held up blankets to conceal the necessarily clumsy entrance of the performer through the narrow doorway.

919
556
535

These were dropped after a moment, and out into the centre of the open hall bounded a figure covered with a large white sheet so that only his bare feet were visible. On his head was an eagle mask, from the upper part of his back projected a blackfish, while the head of a raven peered forth from his chest. The dancer, Timothy Snow, who had been chosen for his skill in such matters, leapt forward in a crouching attitude and took a few short, mincing steps as if he were a gigantic eagle hopping on the ground. At once the older Bella Coola women began to drone out, "i . . . . . ," and continued as long as the performer remained in the hall. He bent down and turned slowly, sunwise, with arms pressed close to his body and neck contracted, then straightened, and took a few more mincing steps, followed by another turn. In this way he moved in a wide, sunwise circle around the hall, avoiding the middle where there would have been a fire in one of the old-fashioned houses. At intervals he raised himself on his toes and slightly spread his arms beneath the sheet, at the same time looking up so that it appeared as if the eagle were rising to gaze at an object in the distance as a sitting bird does so frequently. This brought the raven mask into plain sight. After a survey of this kind, he bent down and ran a few yards more. Alec Davis and two other masked fol-

[532]

769 ● 556 *
535

lowed the scene, blowing eagle down over him repeatedly. After one circuit of the hall, the performer passed out through the front door, from the vicinity of which was heard once more the large whistle and the screaming of the eagle, both growing less distinct as if the bird were flying away.

The wearer of the mask displayed considerable dramatic talent and succeeded in giving a realistic display in spite of the glaring lights which exposed his bare feet and betrayed the human handiwork of the mask in a manner impossible in the native type of house with a single, central fire as the sole illumination. The Carriers had watched the performance with interest, probably singed with contempt, but to the Bella Coola it was no mere spectacle, it was a religious rite of the highest importance. All the spectators realized that the figure was human, but this caused inconsequential as they gazed upon the representation of the dead woman in the form of her crests, to which they believed she had been transformed by death. Even the children were silent, and the only sound during the passage was the wailing of a sleepy infant. The eagle crest belonged to Jessie by virtue of membership in the ancestral family descended from her father's first ancestor, crated peculiarly, who had come to earth at Tsmaat in the form of this bird. The blackfish was a crest acquired through her mother; the raven represented a copper raven belonging to an ancestral myth of the dying grandchild. In former times, carpenters would have worked for weeks preparing an elaborate composite figure, but Captain Schooner wished no delay in the ceremony for fear of police interference, so that it was necessary to use what masks happened to be in existence and to place them in conjunction by means of the crude white sheet. Jessie had not been initiated into the nuxalk society, but no opposition was raised to the use of nuxalk whistles both on account of her status as chief, and owing to the influence of her father who, a nuxalk chief, feared no restrictions and heeded no conventions. Besides, both her brothers were initi-

769
556 *
424
171
[575
632]

969 556 824 178 575 622

ceremonial assault. In former times it is certain that objections would have been raised to this breach of ceremonial privilege.

There was a pause for several minutes after the withdrawal of the figure. Then Reuben threw a copper on the floor to the track taken by the actor "to make home for the dead woman." A number of chiefs went forward to join the singers and discuss whether or not the copper should be redeemed. No one wished to do so, so Captain Schooner said he would have it fastened to a post over Jessie's grave, a proposition to which all agreed.

969 556 535

After inconclusive discussion in which Captain Schooner, Nelsonhadnoone, Reuben Schooner, Jim Pollard, and Alec Davis took the principal parts, it was decided to sing the fourth mourning song at this point. There was no reason why this should not have been done at the customary time, after the other three, but wide latitude in detail was allowed in this ceremony; in fact, exact ritual never flourished in Bella Coola and has become increasingly rare in recent years. This song had been composed a number of years previously when Captain Schooner had called in the Bella Bella to a memorial potlatch, and great care had been expended on its composition owing to the skill of the guests in songs of this type. The words, altered to fit the circumstances, were phrased as if George and Dan were lamenting the loss of their mother and other relatives.

[178]

"I, we," they run, "are thinking of our mother, our brothers, our sisters, our mother's brothers, our mother's sisters, our father's brothers, our father's sisters, of all our dead relatives. Please, ye chiefs from abroad, turn your heads, listen to our wail. You revered great ones, let us all cry together. It is we who have called you hither; look upon us."

This song was sung in the manner already described, except that more of the Bella Coola were familiar with the words and tune and could accordingly join in.

969 556

Meanwhile Captain Schooner, with his sons Reuben and Harry and his grandsons George Nelson and Andy Schooner, had been crouching in a corner of the hall, poring over the money which was to be distributed to validate the ceremony,

U.S. Government Printing Office: 1924-[illegible]
HRA Bellacoola HRA

and deciding how to divide it. Harry Schooner is neither dominant nor capable, and lady acted only as clerk, so the actual decision rested with Captain Schooner, Reuben, and George. Daniel Nelson would normally have played a prominent part, but he was absent owing to the illness of his infant daughter. Samuel King joined the group, bringing with him two coppers, two rifles, and a sum of money, and whispered the purpose of this contribution. 769 556* 769 556* 583

After the usual pause George Nelson and Captain Schooner, the latter substituting for the absent Dan Nelson, stood up and walked around the hall carrying three coppers and two rifles. Then they returned to their places.

Nihuchalumoor had been asked by Captain Schooner to act as announcer on account of his good voice and self-confidence. He joined the group in the corner to call out whatever they whispered to him. First he stated that one of the coppers just displayed had been given to George Nelson to redeem from him his wife, Joe Williams' daughter. He explained that the other two, as well as the rifles, were presents from Samuel King, assisted by his brother, Albert, and his sister, Mrs. Alexander Chalmers, to George Nelson in consequence of the latter's marriage to Samuel King's daughter. This arrangement having been initiated by the relatives of the girl, it was fitting that they should give the first presents. [537]

Captain Schooner had first planned to expend $200 to celebrate the return of his dead daughter. His wife gave him $20 for the purpose, and when Joe Williams returned $150, he decided to use only $100 of his savings, making $270 in all. To this Reuben added $80, Harry $40, and Dan Nelson $40, increasing the total to $430. George contributed what he had received from Joe Williams for the repurchase of the latter's daughter, as well as what Samuel King had just given him. Samuel added to the pile some money belonging to Jessie, 769 556*

The writer could not learn why this money had not been destroyed with her other possessions. The reason may have been that the Bella Coola knew that, though a potlatch was illegal, the goods of a dead person could be distributed and by doing this at a community they hoped for no interference from the law.

969 these various amounts making $[illegible], when added to the previous $[illegible].

$ 556 It was first decided to give a present to everyone as "Eagle Down Shaken Off by the Dead Woman." Captain Schooner and his assistants thought first of the bottom house in the village, remembered who lived in it, then, after a little more discussion, agreed upon the amount each should receive. This was whispered to Nebuchadnezzar, who held up a bill and called out, for example:

"$10 for so-and-so."

A number of young men had volunteered as messengers and one of them took the money to the designated recipient. After giving to all in the bottom house, they passed to the next above it, and so in succession for the whole village. Absentees were remembered and their presents received by friends or relatives. Kaviar names were used because Nebuchadnezzar was unfamiliar with the little-used ancestral designations. Contrary to ancient usage, the amounts varied; some chiefs received as much as $10, a child, $1, or 50 cents. Each recipient accepted his gift without showing whether it was more or less than he had expected. There was not sufficient change, so that five persons were often named together and a $5 bill given to the first mentioned for sharing with the other four, a transaction always carried out honestly. Many of the Carriers [609] were strangers, so they could not be rewarded in accordance with their rank, but $50 was given to one of their chiefs to share as he thought fit.

465 Not all the money was distributed in this way. Payments 969 had to be made to those who had assisted at the funeral. Gifts $ 556 were bestowed upon the women who had washed and dressed 964 the corpse; to the men who had helped to make the coffin; to the canoe-men who had brought the body to Bella Coola; to the pall-bearers; to the grave-diggers; to the woman who had carried the fire; to the singers, especially to those who had compound the same sand; to the carpenter who had prepared and sawed the masked figure; to the members of the band, including a provision for their services whenever Dan Nelson's child should die; to a carpenter to erect a fence around the grave; to another to cut the representation of an eagle on a stone to be erected over the grave; to the speakers at the funeral; to the speakers at the rite then taking place; to those who delivered the money; to the youth who, with pencil and paper, assisted in keeping accounts; to the cook, and to all others who had assisted in any manner. In every case the amount was announced, the bill held up, the name of the recipient stated, the reason for his reward, and the money was then taken to him by a messenger. Captain Schooner really decided how much each should receive, he being in the best position to judge what was suitable, and there being no fixed scale of charges to help him. Work paid for in advance, such as the erection of the fence, was carefully carried out.

*The exact sums contributed by Samuel King and George Nelson could not be known.

A little money had been kept to validate the assumption of ancestral names by several children of the Schooner family. Everyone received a small amount, a child sometimes as trifling a sum as 25 cents. Captain Schooner had virtually chosen who was to receive which designation, although he received advice from all his relatives. Harry Schooner's infant was given the name, Päträtsaz, a reference to the manner in which the first beams of the morning sun strike the lofty summit of Mount Nazpaltz. Reuben's son was called ałwäłz, a Snake-ał designation connected with the crash when the first Sanyᵉ fell. The myths in which these names were embodied were not expounded; in fact, they had been almost forgotten, even by Captain Schooner. Tał-ła Jenny wished to transmit one of her names to Andy Schooner's infant; this was announced in the same way as the others and validated with them by the gifts to all. Jenny had not contributed to the common stock, but some of it was used with the understanding that she would later repay. Nebuchadnezzar announced the ours being used for such names, and the bills were displayed before messengers carried them to the recipients.

969 *556 583 425 614 622

Finally, Jim Pollard took the opportunity to bestow on Captain Schooner the name, Snaxalit. This designation was the property of the donor's ancestral family and should not have been transmitted without the consent of all its members. Jim had probably informed several of them of his intention, but no objections would have been raised if he had overlooked this courtesy, since he is the only wanalit chief among them, and the only one with determination and prestige. It was not an outright gift, since it was announced that it must be returned to the donor's family on Captain Schooner's death. Jim Pollard acted as his own announcer for this transaction, explaining that he gave the name in gratitude for the help which Captain Schooner had rendered at the death of his, Jim's, father about twenty years before. He promised that at the earliest opportunity he would give presents to validate the transmission.

969 *556 During the lengthy distribution of money, the audience had shown unmistakable signs of weariness. It was now between 2.00 and 3.00 A.M., and as soon as Jim had finished speaking the guests dispersed quietly, though many of them gathered in groups in one another's houses to discuss what had taken place.

Captain Schooner slept late after the lengthy ceremony, but was proud and contented when interviewed about noon. He felt that what was fitting for his daughter had been performed, and was willing to take the consequences of having broken the law.

968 Little else of note occurred in connection with Jessie's funeral. Samuel King deposited near her grave a sewing-machine which his wife had used for only a short time and Captain Schooner decided to replace this with an older one belonging to his wife. He made this exchange on the afternoon of June 30, when Samuel, in company with a number of women, was burning the rest of Jessie's clothing and possessions. Captain Schooner explained his act by saying:

995 one of the several causes which, it is believed, he has become. The point does not appear important to the Bella Coola, corresponding to their indefinite ideas concerning whether the spirit and the life have become a single being, or several.

Knowledge of the life had in Nuxmalo by the deceased, now in the form of his crest,* is most indefinite. In a general way it is felt that the actions of this being are similar to those carried on during life, but to a more advanced degree. A skilled carpenter is a better carpenter in the land above, a chief who has given many potlatches below can give more in Nuxmalo. This [399] belief finds expression in mourning songs which frequently state how Alquantlen has called a good carpenter to work above, or how a chief has gone to exhibit his generosity in a new sphere. It is doubtful whether this sentiment plays any real part in Bella Coola thought. The spirit and the life of a dead person have gone too far away to affect the living; what little is known of their actions has been handed down from the distant past and is mainly a matter of history. The only time that these 995 two merged elements come to this world is at a memorial pot- 969 latch, and formerly the uninitiated undoubtedly believed that 556 they were witnessing such a visit. Though the spectators were shown as a matter of course that the spirit and the life had become bird or animal, emphasis was laid on the fact that they had become the particular bird or animal crest of the donor's ancestral family. The effect of the memorial potlatch in former times, as at present, was, therefore, social rather than religious. Besides, the two parts portrayed have never been known 995 to affect a human being; they expect no offerings, grant no assistance, cause no injury, and are accordingly neglected.

In comparison with the above vague beliefs, Bella Coola information concerning ghosts is clear and exact. As already and the person shifts his promotion to the selection. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society.

[993] *It is accepted that men were created as human beings, and only assumed bird or animal shapes in order to reach the earth, but there is no corresponding belief that the spirit and the life change back from crest to human form on arrival above. Of course, the performance of human activities by anthropomorphic creatures presents no difficulties to Bella Coola thought.

It is said that, in former times, the Bella Coola sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In spirit, however, memorial songs were sung for dead Bella Coola, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch.

The Revival of Ancient Dances

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ABOUT THE DANCES

A detailed description of various Bella Coola dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nuxalkmcilla. Several kukusiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thereafterth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kusiut season.

THE DANCE OF Nuklpum[11]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Nuklpum, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly

[11] Cf. Boas, p. 40.

177 fathers. Inherited beliefs are too deep-rooted to pass away 771 entirely within a few generations. Even those who claim to [181] have adopted the new faith remain convinced of the potency of magic, and of the existence of those supernatural creatures which do not actively conflict with the white man's creed. Such lack of consistency is a world-wide trait, particularly intelligible among the Bella Coola whose philosophy abounds in contradictions, dependent upon statements handed down in the origin myths of different families.

626 The Bella Coola are constrained not only by the omni-[181] presence of supernatural beings; they are constantly subjected to the influence of their fellows. They are far less individualistic than white people. A chief may boast that he can do as [622] he pleases, that he can disregard the restrictions of lesser men; he often does so, but only because public opinion recognizes that he has reached a position of eminence by giving many potlatches. The duly validated warrior is brave because he
[703] feels that everyone is aware of his valour. The man who per-[769] forms some ceremony in accordance with an ancestral myth incorporates himself with his forbears, and is strengthened by the conviction that he has gained their support and approbation. In every phase of life, a person is profoundly affected
177 by the approval or disapproval of his neighbours. At present 626 the construction of small houses, each occupied by a single
342 family, makes it possible for a man to hide himself, or to do work unknown to the rest of the community. This lessens the force of public opinion, although it is even now more potent than conscience in checking anti-social acts. Formerly, in communal houses, every action was fully known, making individual freedom of thought and act virtually impossible. A man [602] is chiefly influenced by his relatives who take a great share in what the white man would consider purely family affairs. The effect of the group upon the individual must not be overlooked, nor can it be over-stressed in a study of these people.

177 The education and conversion of the younger men have 626 enormously lessened their reliance upon their fellows. In former 182
561

192*

[illegible]: Sonnglish hactsa gesticulative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract. [824]

Nuk: Eagle; supernatural dancer; in his exercises he is a yearling mountain goat.

[illegible]: Fire complete dance given by a hactsa initiate.

[illegible]: Mammal, any kind. [825]

Nanamuxit: One of the names of Green Blue Heron as chief.

Nankila: 1—One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.

2—One of the first men to settle at Inaklil in the beginning of time.

Nanlayum: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Nanamuxit: Name given to his grandson by one of the first settlers at Ninkul in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Hactsa gesticulative as a Bonsher; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.

[illegible]: Sloping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kitamaat, hactsa masks are hung.

[illegible]: The working end of a hand [illegible] for chicken.

Nanaijamaxa: 1—"The Adviser"; One of the names of the supreme god. [622]

2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; usually, "The Sages."

na'mistim: 1—Ceremony at which scandal names are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers. [553]

2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed. [796] na'mulgat: Assemblage of the hakamat to practise difficult [illegible].

Na-ganu, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Pacyahaw name given to a deserting wife.

Nanaklila: One of the names of Raven as chief.

nanakhlaka: Sentence of death passed by the hakamat on one of their fellows as punishment for an error. [618]

nanjam: A loan, especially of an ancestral right. [422]

Nankilyum: Synonym for Nanlayum, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Na'nes, "Inkomparable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nanjinda: Toilet-hole.

nanda: Birth.

Nankipa: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind. [821]

nankl-ne: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead. [769] nankl-ne da ikamin: 1—High tide. [823]

2—Long life.

nanjiguin: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold chicken-net post steady while being driven.

Na'qamiq, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Nasl": 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.

2—River flowing into head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.

Nasklaklaik: Synonym for Intsaxtsuk, an immoral supernatural woman.

nalpi: The achievement of success against supernatural odds; the term is used with reference to the solutions of the riddles of the Mystery dance.

nalumkwaxum: Any non-sacred dance held at the conclusion of the hactsa season. [535]

Nakwaxa: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

[619] [197] [575] [604] tribes. This differentiated them clearly from all neighbouring tribes.

B. Ceremonies. A member of a secret society in any of the above towns was accepted as a member in any other one. A person of another tribe, even if known to belong to a comparable society, was treated as an uninitiated person.

C. Origin and Religion. The people of Bella Coola, Talio, and Kimsquit felt themselves to be akin through acceptance of the fact that their ancestors had been created together in the beginning of time. This marked them off with [971] great clearness from all other tribes, especially from the Carriers of the interior. This belief formed a sentimental and religious bond of great strength.

Neighbouring Tribes

648 It is desirable to describe, briefly, the tribes with which the Bella Coola came in contact.

The Carriers

East of Bella Coola, amid the mountains of the interior, roved the Carriers. In summer they often came down to the river valley to fish or trade for salmon, and in winter they were sometimes forced by cold and starvation again to visit the Bella Coola, Bella Bella, or Rivers Inlet people. There was a [563] good deal of intermarriage between them and the inhabitants of the upper valley, so that the wanderers were able to spend the cold months with relatives. None the less, the Bella Coola [180] [578] considered these people utterly foreign in habits and beliefs, and to call a man a "Carrier" was, and still is, a deadly insult. The Carriers lacked the rich ceremonial life of the coastal peoples who, therefore, regarded them with scorn and contempt. [794] The presence of a few of the much-despised Carriers was, however, almost necessary to the correct performance of the winter dances since they were uninitiated spectators whom it was necessary to impress and delude.

"The Coming of Sacrificeholm."[1]

Fifth moon after the summer solstice: cuwiyal, "The Time for Racial Dances,"[2] or Sipachmain di Sint, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings."

Sixth moon after the summer solstice: Sinat, "Sun Down," that is, when the sun reaches the solstice.

First moon after the winter solstice: Swanhaqwum, "What Sweeps Away Food," or Sulili, "Angry Moon."

Second moon after the winter solstice: Sheweilwat, "Facing in Both Directions," that is, half the month belongs to winter and half to summer, or Lamalo di Nanichkiag, "The Podatch of the Nanichkiag" (I, p. 18).

Third moon after the winter solstice: Sinjum, "When Herrings Spawn." These fish are said to have arrived on the same day of this moon as the winter solstice in the December sun.

Fourth moon after the winter solstice: Siljuly, "Time for Making Salmon Weirs."

Fifth moon after the winter solstice: Sinawwal, "Time for Making Hand-Nets for Ulachon."

Sixth moon after the winter solstice: Sinitwl, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon." It is in this month that the summer solstice occurs.

The chief difficulty experienced by the Bella Coola in computing time rests on the fact that each month is judged by the moon, whereas the main periods of the year depend upon the solstices. One old man, from whom much of this information was obtained, stated that trouble always came at the winter solstice when the month was divided into two sections. The above list is obviously incomplete and incoherent, but it was the best available.

Supernatural Beings

In any primitive community the social, religious, political, and economic aspects of life are so interwoven that they

[1] See vol. II, p. 8 for a description of this mythical being.
[2] See vol. II, chap. i, for a description of these dances.

Boas, Franz, 1858-1942
NEA Bellacoola NEA

cannot be considered as distinct subjects; not only does this present difficulties to the investigator in the field, but it also makes it no easy task to describe the facts so obtained. With many tribes it is possible to deal first with the social life, and later with religion, shamanism, and other associated topics. Such a form of presentation has many advantages and would, if possible, have been followed. Unfortunately, the social organization and rank of the Bella Coola largely depend upon their religious beliefs as expressed in their mythology, and an understanding of at least the main features of these is essential. In this chapter a summary of these has been made, leaving for later description personal relations with the supernatural world and other points which do not profoundly influence the beliefs and practices of the whole community.

Like other peoples, the Bella Coola differ considerably in the fervour of their religious beliefs. But even allowing for individual variation, religious experiences and beliefs are matters of frequent occurrence and profound importance to the great majority of the tribe. The supernatural world is close around them; a sudden thought is caused by the intervention of a supernatural being; the peculiar action of an animal is an occurrence fraught with grave meaning; an unexplained sound always receives a supernatural explanation. The old beliefs survive even among members of the community who are nominal Christians, and those who hold to their ancient religion live in an atmosphere of the supernatural. The white man, whose scientific training and logic lead him to find a natural explanation for an incident, is puzzled and somewhat amused at what he often calls the childish beliefs of the Indian. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, seeing the hand of the supernatural in every untoward event, considers the attitude of the white man in seeking a natural explanation to be almost irreverent. The mental attitude of the Bella Coola to the supernatural does not differ vitally from that of the white man under like conditions; but whereas to white men religious experiences are most unusual, they are common occurrences to the Indian. A native convert, for example, finds no difficulty in understanding the Old Testament, for the frequent manifestations of the supernatural are like those to which he has been accustomed. One intelligent Indian went so far as to say that he was a better Christian than any white man because he believed every word in the Old Testament, while he had heard that white men doubted the historical accuracy of some of the stories there recorded.

McIlwraith, E.-S (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEB

The following incident illustrates rather clearly the attitude of the Bella Coola towards the supernatural. A few years ago a party, consisting of a number of Indians and one white man, was proceeding by canoe up Dean Channel. On the shore, some distance ahead of them, they saw what seemed to be a grizzly bear with its pelt showing the white sheen so much desired by hunters. Hoping for a shot at the animal, they paddled in behind a long point which offered a hidden means of approach. But as the canoe cautiously rounded the tip, within easy rifle range, all that could be seen was a white water-washed stump, somewhat resembling a bear in shape. To the white man it was obvious that they had all been deceived by this resemblance in the distance, but to the Bella Coola it was equally obvious that the bear had changed into a stump. A bear had been there, they had seen it, now there was a stump: "The bear must have changed itself," they said.

If the reader grasps the mental attitude which explains an optical illusion as a manifestation of the supernatural, he will be able to comprehend the important part played by supernatural beings in the lives of the Bella Coola. Creatures of this type, some anthropomorphic and others zoomorphic, range not only the mountains and forests of British Columbia, but also the waters beneath and the sky above. Their true home is on the flat country above the sky; most of them are merely visitors to this world. Supernatural beings of all kinds are termed sisut. The attitude of Indians towards them, and their concepts concerning them, can best be understood by the stories in vol. I, chap. x, and vol. II, chap. v. Bella Coola beliefs are not systematized; if a man is asked about the powers or functions of a certain supernatural being, he will usually answer by recounting a story in which that being appears. What is known respecting many of the lesser supernatural beings depends upon information contained in stories, and as many of these are personal possessions, it follows that there is tremendous variation in individual knowledge. Psychologically, this is of little importance; there are enough supernatural beings for everyone to know some of them, and to expect to meet or hear them in the forests. To insert many of the stories contained in later chapters would break the sequence of description; all that is here attempted is to give a general summary, in a way foreign to Bella Coola thought.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Supernatural beings are by no means all-powerful. It is true that they have miraculous powers and can work weal or woe to human beings who chance to come in contact with them, but likewise they may sometimes be overwhelmed by mortals armed with objects steeped in human essence, such as a blanket which has been worn until it is impregnated not only with the smell, but the physical being of its owner. In particular, shamans or other mortals of great strength have been able to conquer the supernatural ones. Consequently, it may be said that although supernatural beings live on a plane different from that of mortals, they are not omnipotent. Long, long ago, man was able to come in contact with them more frequently, but that golden age when the semi-mythical ancestors of the Bella Coola were living has long since passed away, though it is only within the last few years that such beings, particularly supernatural animals, have become comparatively rare. The Bella Coola give three main reasons for this:

(1) Supernatural animals do not like the sound of muskets and have moved far away.

(2) With increasing dependence on the canning industry, fewer hunters penetrate into their haunts in the distant parts of the mountains.

(3) The younger Bella Coola no longer take pains to purify themselves as a means of placating supernatural beings.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

rate most of them, are carefully used in accordance with the 776* functions of this supreme deity. As a Bella Coola has many [551] names, corresponding to his membership in various societies, his professional prerogatives, his ancestral myths, and mere nicknames, so has Ālqantām, who is a superman, many names, according to his special functions. It would be unthinkable [782] for a Bella Coola to pray to Ālqantām, yet it is common for him to pray to Mīnakais or Tātā, other names for the same being. The multiplicity of functions and designations approaches the point of obscuring the unity of Ālqantām, which in fact, some Bella Coola even deny. They state that Snuxālstla, Mīnakais, Smaialstla, and Nuxkmālsaix are one, but that Ālqantām, Snuxlkāls, and Nenedjenostem are three distinct supernatural beings. This seeming confusion presents [424] no difficulties to the Indian, since each family has its own [184] myths in which such facts are recorded. He believes these, [771] without questioning those of his neighbour, and it is even possible for an individual to believe two contradictory statements, if he happens to become the owner of two contradictory myths. Evidence collected in the field does not make clear whether the beliefs of the Bella Coola illustrate an incomplete transformation of a single deity into a number of minor ones, or whether they represent the almost complete fusion of a number of beings into one. Following the practice of the great majority of the Bella Coola, the supreme deity will be referred to as Ālqantām.

The most obvious attribute of Ālqantām is connected with 776* the sun. He can enter it and use it as if it were his canoe. In 821 form he resembles a man, and when he takes charge of the sun it appears as if the latter were a large, self-propelling, radiant boat with windows through which he looks forth. It is said that long ago he allowed mink to take charge of the sun, but the malicious animal ran it so close to earth that the intense heat killed almost all living creatures. When Ālqantām enters [825] the sun he wears a cloak, on the lining of which are salmon; reversing this causes the rivers on earth to teem with salmon.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The religious concepts of the Bella Coola are not limited to explanations of strange apparitions, nor to knowledge of a wide range of supernatural beings, anthropomorphic or zoomorphic. Many in whom they believe are invisible and intangible, though none the less potent. Almost every incident of life is attributed to the help or hindrance of a supernatural agency. If a fisherman constructs a salmon-weir, with a considerable amount of work, the Bella Coola ascribe his success to the assistance of some supernatural being or supernormal power; mere labour would never have sufficed. If a man has phenomenal success in hunting, it is because the supernatural has helped him in some way. It is not necessary that an anthropomorphic being should appear; they seldom do, but none deny that in some form or another supernatural ones have aided the enterprise.

This attitude is clearly evident in Bella Coola beliefs concerning the construction of canoes. Many professions depend upon prerogatives without which a person cannot hope to succeed. This is not true of canoe-makers, although it is a great advantage to one of them if Y'alätimut, the Master Carpenter, appeared to his ancestors in the beginning of time. Even without this in many cases a man can succeed in making a canoe if he is aided by a supernatural teacher, or Model Maker. No one knows much about this being, nor even whether there is more than one of them, but it is through his kindly intervention that a man is able to complete his complicated task. If carpenters who have left a half-finished canoe in the woods, hear adze beats, as they are returning to it, they remain away from the spot, knowing that their work is being done with superhuman efficiency by a supernatural artisan. Under such circumstances even a solitary man can construct one of the large, ocean-going canoes. About 1880 an expert carpenter, named Yalaha, was making stated definitely that his mother had told him Mackenzie came down the Dean River when her uncle was a young man. As if to confirm this statement he added the inconsequential detail that Mackenzie, in dire straits for food, killed and ate a dog, and that he was given a marmot-skin blanket.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 996* 961

Raven, blinded by his grief, did not believe him, and responded angrily:

"No, youare not my son. Why do you lie to me? Get out of this house."

Disgusted at this reception, O'mistwai obeyed. Just as he was passing through the doorway, Raven noticed the tattoo marks on his legs, and realized that, in spite of the change in his appearance, the visitor was really his son. He called on him to return, but O'mistwai paid no attention to his father's entreaties and sped far away. Raven's grief was beyond expression, but he could do nothing to repair the damage he had done. If it had not been for Raven's mistake, all mortals would return to life four days after death. [B04]

The above myth is widely known among the Bella Coola, and is supposed to be historically accurate. At the same time, few people allow it to influence their thoughts with regard to death or its causes. It is a fact, but one that belongs to the realm of ancient history rather than to everyday experience. When a Bella Coola dies, his relatives, though they know that his death is due to the folly of Raven, tacitly overlook this, and do not feel bitterly towards Raven. Bella Coola beliefs and theology are not systematized, hence it is quite possible for a person to realize a certain fact, such as the cause of death, and yet disregard it entirely. Considering that absolute contradictions can be believed simultaneously, it is not difficult to picture the mental attitude of people who believe, and at the same time disregard their belief. 771 961 996*

One of Raven's spectacular, and at the same time, beneficial exploits was the bringing of sockeye salmon to the Bella Coola River.[1] 539 825

In the beginning of time, no sockeye salmon inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to supply them. First he tried making wooden fish and throwing them into the water, but though he could animate them, they always died after jumping a few times. The reason for his failure, though he did not know it, was because he had omitted the small bone [774]

[1] This is an example of conflicting beliefs. In addition to assuming that salmon were sent down by Alquantun to furnish food for mankind, and that Raven supplied them in the beginning of time, the Bella Coola also believe that they are brought each year both by Nuhlymm and Wiwelm. [771]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER XI

MEDICINE, MAGIC, TABOO[1]

Introductory — Causative Medicines — Preventive and Curative Medicines — Sorcerers — Taboos — Ritual Acts — Miscellaneous Beliefs

INTRODUCTORY

THE beliefs described in the last chapter are essentially religious since they display an attitude of respect and often of propitiation to supernatural powers having greater strength than human beings. This is self-evident in the earlier sections and, though less noticeable, is present also in ideas concerning shamans since these men have themselves acquired ability placing them on a plane slightly removed from that of their fellows. Theoretically, it seems as if a clear division might be drawn between the concepts just recorded, and others of a magical nature in which, although the element of contact with the supernatural is present, yet the end desired is obtained by the mere performance of an action. To the Bella Coola there is a slight overlap between the two types. For example, the acquisition of an object from which supernatural good fortune may be secured is religious, but its use is virtually magical since once obtained, neither supplication nor further favours are necessary. Nevertheless, it is possible to separate most magical beliefs from most religious ones, though it must be emphasized that the cleavage is less distinct to the native than it appears to the white man.

If it is difficult to find a clear dividing-line between religion and magic, it is impossible to draw one between the latter and

[1] The late Harlan I. Smith has dealt with certain aspects of the subjects treated in this chapter in two articles: "Sympathetic Magic and Witchcraft among the Bellacoola" (American Anthropologist, vol. 27, no. 1, Jan.-March, 1925, pp. 116-121) and "Materia Medica of the Bella Coola and Neighbouring Tribes of British Columbia" (National Museum of Canada, Annual Report for 1927, Bulletin 56, pp. 47-68).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and those who have knowledge of them are sorcerers. Even 754 a man of this kind is not outside the pale of society unless he [755] practises indiscriminately; members of the kusiut society, for 789 example, frequently employ one to kill an individual who has [575] offended against their regulations (I, p. 740). A man is regarded as a sorcerer not on account of his knowledge but on account of the ends to which he applies it.

Closely related to, if not identical with, the belief that 784 certain consequences follow certain acts, is the conviction that the infraction of ritual prohibitions brings disaster. There are many such taboos, for so they may be called. Though most important at the critical periods of life, puberty, pregnancy, while observing ceremonial chastity, and so forth, there are many which must be obeyed at all times.

Restrictions pertaining to the river and regulations at birth and death have already been described. Like magical acts, these often verge on the religious owing to the belief that disregard offends supernatural beings. On the whole, however, it seems as if most infractions bring their own punishment without intervention of higher powers, a concept which throws [789] taboos into the category of magic rather than of religion, with the ever-present proviso that the two cannot be separated entirely from one another. With them may be associated a [788] number of ritual acts connected with fishing and hunting in which, though the element of propitiation is not absent, it is satisfied by the performance of definite rites. Finally, there have been included in this chapter a number of unimportant beliefs, the psychology of which cannot be analysed.

What is the basis of these rites defined as Medicine, Magic, 154 and Taboo? As already described, the Bella Coola either do 771 not explain their origin and function, or merely state that 789 Ālquntām is responsible, as he is for every activity of life. This is unsatisfactory because many which, viewed scientifically, have neither curative nor causative power, produce the desired end. A child who has been "made" a carpenter during infancy, usually grows up to be proficient in that profession; the person

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

154 who has been "cured" of an illness, recovers; the man whose •771 death has been "caused" by magic, dies. An average white 789 man would consider such statements to be erroneous, but they not only figure in stories and beliefs, but some of them have been actually observed by the writer. The explanation lies in the susceptibility of the Bella Coola to suggestion. The conviction that he is to die so weakens a man that death often results; belief that he is to recover, aids a sick person to throw off the malady. This sentiment, intelligible in case of disease, is equally applicable in other matters. The child who has been [868] endowed with carpentry skill grows up with the conviction to assist his labours. Moreover, his relatives and friends are also aware of it, and he receives every opportunity to practise, so that the outcome desired is often the consequence of the act.
789 Though the Bella Coola do not appreciate that psychological 828 and sociological factors may be the real cause of the result, they realize the importance of the power of thought. For [771] example, if a group of people is unanimous in wishing some end, or expects some event to happen, it is believed that their thoughts are strong enough to bring about its occurrence. The following examples illustrate this point:

It is said that when the white man first came to British Columbia, a tribe of Indians was living in a secluded valley, far to the south. As more and more settlers arrived, the occupants were driven from their homes and forced into the barren [787] mountains. One night, Ałquntām came in a vision to one of the natives, saying:

"I see what you desire; you want the white men to withdraw. You, yourself, are helpless. But if all your fellows wish the same, the white men will depart."

The man told all his friends and they agreed to concentrate the next night on their wish to expel the white man. A few failed to do so, and nothing happened. The second night there was the same lack of unanimity. The desire to drive away the intruders grew stronger in course of time, until one night this was the centre of the thoughts of all; next morning the white

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754 would probably fall a victim. He became ill in May, 1923,
961 and, though treated by a white doctor, grew steadily worse
789 until he died in the latter part of June, three weeks after the 828 year had elapsed. All the Bella Coola firmly believe that this [622] was due to the power of thought. The father of the woman was a powerful chief whose thoughts were accordingly potent, and some consider that his concentrated desires and expectations were enough to kill the accused, while others believe that his expressed statements convinced others of the result, and that it was their combined thought that caused the death. It usually requires the thoughts of more than one individual to lead to this effect. The doctor who attended this man stated that his patient had shown symptoms of melancholy and resignation during his last sickness; it seems clear that the expectation of death must have lessened his chance of recovery.

771 A prominent theme in Bella Coola folk-lore is the belief
954 that a person cannot long survive who has made himself un-
828 popular. It is sometimes stated that a magical means was [538] employed to remove him, and this was no doubt often the case; a person who learns that a "medicine" had been employed to kill him is in no fit mental condition to counteract the power of suggestion, particularly if he knows that others are aware of what has been done. His death is regarded as proof of the efficacy of the means employed and the belief of others grows stronger. As already stated, this conviction still survives. When this ethnological investigation was being conducted, a
[648] point under discussion was whether or not the Kimsquit people should be allowed to live in Bella Coola. One chief took the lead in objecting and everyone expected that, having thus roused the ire of would-be immigrants, he would die. He did so soon afterwards, and it is universally believed that it was caused by the concentration of the hostile thoughts of the Kimsquit. Similarly, the potency of taboos is increased by the fact that since [784] time immemorial the thoughts of everyone have been opposed to any infraction. Consequently, an offender is liable to punishment both for breaking an injunction and because he has gone contrary to something about which there has been universal agreement for generations. 771 754

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To understand Bella Coola medicines it is, therefore, necessary to regard them as concepts deep rooted in tribal history, and made potent by the suggestibility of those who practise them. This can be most clearly illustrated with regard to those effecting death, but is equally true with regard to all medicines, whether curative or causative. 828 [784] [755]

There remain for consideration the sociological aspects of medicines. Knowledge of most remedies has been handed down for generations as the property of ancestral families. Some are acquainted with one or two "cures," some with many, and some with none at all. The name of the discoverer of a particular medicine is usually lost in antiquity, though it is often attributed to someone described in the family's myth. Like other possessions based on mythology, a remedy of this type can be practised by any member of the group to which it belongs. If it is observed that a certain individual is using one of these successfully, others will ask him to apply it for them. Payment is always expected, but the sum varies enormously, depending upon the efficacy of the remedy, the difficulty of operation, the generosity of the person benefited, and so many diverse factors that no general conclusions can be made. A patient may observe the details of the treatment, but unless he is entitled to it, he would never dream of using it himself. This is due not only to honesty, but to the conviction that only a person with the inherited right to a certain cure can perform it successfully. Rarely, such knowledge is sold or given away outright, but, like other possessions of an ancestral family, this usually leads to friction and jealousy on the part of those overlooked. Some of the simple herbal remedies are common knowledge and are used by all, since remembrance of their ownership, if it ever existed, has been lost. At the present time it is difficult to learn details of proprietorship of some medicines, but these are indicated whenever possible. 424 755 757 [614] [465] [614] [425]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1941
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 ceremonial dances without making mistakes. The Bella Bella 856 paint a representation of a wolf's bladder for the same purpose.
[532] The basis of this medicine is the belief that it is the gall-[826] bladder which causes wildness and intelligent fear, and hence that anyone so treated will be careful not to make mistakes.
[825] A bird with a large bladder is thought to be difficult to approach, whereas a deer, which has a small one, or none at all, is often stupidly brave. This medicine is known only to the mem-
[424] bers of certain families and is used for the children of chiefs [622] alone, since errors on the part of others is a matter of little importance.

MEDICINES OF CHILDHOOD

789 Some of the instruction given to boys and girls, and the 856 acts which they are enjoined to perform, are virtually religious, and have accordingly been described in earlier chapters. For 771 example, when a lad washes in the river before daybreak, scours himself with a smooth stone and prays to Ālquntäm, he is carrying out what might with justice be called a religious act. If, however, he believes that mere wishing is enough to compel some desire or end, it is magical. Different Bella Coola have different sentiments concerning the exact means by which this method causes the desired effect. To some it is unquestionably a true prayer, but in other families it is customary for a father to take his son, when he has reached about eight years of age, and wash him four times, to the accompaniment of the usual prayer. It is believed that this causes the lad to grow up powerful and active, constantly striving for success. This type of washing may be called magical.

789 In the following there is no element of uncertainty; they 856 belong unquestionably to the category described in the preceding section.

To Cause Agility

The following medicine is frequently employed by fathers when their sons are first able to walk:

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

been displayed in their customs and beliefs, their habits, practices, and folk-lore, their outlook both towards the supernatural world and towards their fellows. /181

The following additional observations are the result of personal knowledge, and recorded after considerable thought.

When a white man begins to understand the Bella Coola, /181 he cannot fail to be impressed by their deep belief in the supernatural. /771 To them religion is no mental abstraction, but a living reality. They feel the presence of strange creatures around them, and they recognize non-human powers in every manifestation of their own minds; in fact, every incident, good or bad, is attributed to supernatural intervention. This does not mean that they regard life with stoic indifference, content to murmur Kismet at whatever fate befalls them. They realize that supernatural powers have endowed them with brains, with physical strength, and with the ability to win favour and gain help from active superhuman beings, and consequently they strive in a world teeming with potent forces. The individual toils as does a white man in the struggle of life, but he attributes his fortune, not to luck or to his unaided exertions, but to the assistance of non-human agents. If he is fortunate, it is because his spirit has been active; if unfortunate, because it has been too inert to protect him.

Contact with white men, particularly with missionaries, has /177 raised tremendous problems for the Bella Coola. The older /771 people have been but little affected; they may state that they are Christians, believing in the white man's god, but this often means only the knowledge of one more supernatural being whom they add to the already rich pantheon. It is quite otherwise with the younger people, particularly with those who have been away at school. Some adopt the new faith with fervour, continuing to see the same visions and to experience the same mental exaltations, but attributing them to Christianity. To [181] others, however, loss of belief in their own faith has caused a general scepticism; though they may accept the new religion, it does not become the vital force which the old was to their

177 fathers. Inherited beliefs are too deep-rooted to pass away
771 entirely within a few generations. Even those who claim to [181] have adopted the new faith remain convinced of the potency of magic, and of the existence of those supernatural creatures which do not actively conflict with the white man's creed. Such lack of consistency is a world-wide trait, particularly intelligible among the Bella Coola whose philosophy abounds in contradictions, dependent upon statements handed down in the origin myths of different families.

626 The Bella Coola are constrained not only by the omni-
[181] presence of supernatural beings; they are constantly subjected to the influence of their fellows. They are far less individual-[622] istic than white people. A chief may boast that he can do as he pleases, that he can disregard the restrictions of lesser men; he often does so, but only because public opinion recognizes that he has reached a position of eminence by giving many potlatches. The duly validated warrior is brave because he
[703] feels that everyone is aware of his valour. The man who per-[769] forms some ceremony in accordance with an ancestral myth incorporates himself with his forbears, and is strengthened by the conviction that he has gained their support and approbation. In every phase of life, a person is profoundly affected
177 by the approval or disapproval of his neighbours. At present
626 the construction of small houses, each occupied by a single
342 family, makes it possible for a man to hide himself, or to do work unknown to the rest of the community. This lessens the force of public opinion, although it is even now more potent than conscience in checking anti-social acts. Formerly, in communal houses, every action was fully known, making individual freedom of thought and act virtually impossible. A man [602] is chiefly influenced by his relatives who take a great share in what the white man would consider purely family affairs. The effect of the group upon the individual must not be overlooked, nor can it be over-stressed in a study of these people.

177 The education and conversion of the younger men have 626 enormously lessened their reliance upon their fellows. In former 182
561

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

577 edly until complete confidence was established, simplifying
[124] work in the field to an enormous extent. Equal trust could be placed on these men in other respects; articles of value were repeatedly left in their houses with the absolute certainty that they would be guarded with care. Some few individuals there were, however, who were neither honest nor trustworthy.
[777] Bella Coola religion is not concerned with ethics, but public 626 opinion demands honour in dealing with relatives or friends.
577 In former times, for example, debts incurred by an individual were considered a liability by his relations. If a man died after [426] buying goods on credit for a potlatch, his family were disgraced [602] if they failed to pay his bills; now, unfortunately, nothing con-[177] strains the younger people, many of whom try to avoid settling even their own debts, much less those of dead relatives. Individual conscience has not replaced the tribal and, more specifically, family influence. Dishonesty in small matters is not [648] uncommon, particularly in dealing with white people who,
[177] according to the Bella Coola, were the first to transgress. The older people bitterly lament the lack of morality of the younger and state, probably with entire justification, that they would have been prevented by the open life which prevailed when several families shared a single house. On the whole, however, the average Bella Coola is probably no less honest than the average white man.

153 Individuals vary enormously in mental ability. In making 124 this investigation, it was necessary to interview all the older people of the tribe. Disregarding those unwilling to provide information, it was found that some absolutely lacked the ability to explain matters with which they were familiar; some did not have sufficient patience to be good teachers; some were so forgetful that they would omit necessary points in a story or account; some were downright stupid, whereas others displayed mental ability of no mean order. In reading ethnological literature, one is apt to think of the troubles experienced by the author, and to overlook the fact that natives have as to their forefathers. Profound as these material changes have been, those of a psychological nature have been even more important. New worlds have been thrown open to them, stimulating ideas have been brought to their attention, and they have realized for the first time that the world is infinitely larger than they had imagined. Hand in hand with this extension of knowledge has gone disbelief in their own ancient lore. The white man, whose superiority and mechanical skill they admit, positively denies the actuality of their mythology, and laughs at the dramatic performances which were wont to fill the winter with engrossing interest. Such rites can flourish only in an attitude of profound belief: this has been so shaken that the dances continue listlessly, a mere shadow of a once living art. The young people were the first to embrace a scepticism that has rapidly grown into disbelief of the faith of their ancestors, and a half-concealed scorn for their elders, the upholders of the old customs. Worst of all, prohibition of the potlatch has made it impossible for a man to reach a position of social eminence. Moreover, since the holding of any type of ceremonial requires a distribution of gifts, formal gatherings of all kinds have become virtually impossible; even marriages have no longer the social support that formerly made them so lasting.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These cumulative blows would be enough to shake any civilization, and that of the Bella Coola has been entirely unable to adjust itself to the new conditions. The young people, having lost respect for their elders, are deprived of the advice and support essential to the continuity of culture. They ape the white man's dress; they want his mechanical devices, but have failed to assimilate them. For example, a gramophone in a Bella Coola house is an anachronism, while several similar articles spoil the old picture but do not provide a new one. Seeking to copy the new ways thrown open to them, they have achieved the outward show but not the substance, and in so doing have destroyed their own culture. In the old days they were ambitious to hold potlatches and willing to work steadily towards that goal; now, new desires have not kept pace with

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

751 Women wear tight anklets 'to prevent the calves of their legs from slipping down.' During their monthly 481 periods women place soft cedar-bark in the vagina. The bark is afterwards
824 burnt in the woods. The smoke of this fire is believed to be poisonous.

It is evident that the culture of the Bilqula is very greatly influenced 177 by that of the Kwakiutl. The secret societies and the potlatch ceremonies 551 are almost a copy of those of the Hôitsenk'. This influence has been so 556 deep that names of even deities and of the mythical ancestors of certain 575 gentes are purely Kwakiutl words, or have at least Kwakiutl endings. Thus 776 the name Aiamk'ilkya (see p. 413) is purely Kwakiutl, meaning 'good all 771 over the world.' K'emk'emk'ilkya is also a Kwakiutl word, meaning 'the rich one of the world.' The chief's name, Ma'lakyilatl (see p. 409) belongs to the same class of Kwakiutl names. On the other hand, the religious ideas of the Bilqula are very curiously developed, and apparently but slightly influenced by their neighbours. The whole Mamaxala'niq tradition is peculiar to them, but has been partly adopted by the Awiky'-ô'nuq, with whom the Bilqula have intermarried.

[pp. 425-449 not processed]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER II

RELIGION

The Universe—Supernatural Beings—Supernatural Elements in Human Beings—Means of Propitiation

The Universe

ONE of the subjects about which Bella Coola philosophers pondered in former times, and about which definite information has come down to the present generation, is the universe. The young people, who have absorbed a certain amount of education from the white man, are scornful of the beliefs of their fathers, but it was possible to obtain the following information from a few of the older men and women. 772 [177]

They say that the earth is circular and flat, like an island. What it rests upon is problematical, though the assumption is that it is water. The world is kept from capsizing by the supernatural being, Sninia, who lives amid the ice in the far north; he grasps a rope to which the earth is fastened, and he keeps it steady by maintaining a tension on the rope to hold the world against his feet. Long, long ago Sninia was seen by human beings, but in later years no one has penetrated to his distant home and the Bella Coola have little regard for him. It was in the distant past, also, that human beings discovered the earth to be round, after certain semi-supernatural men had made a circuit of it. The four corners of space have not the same importance to the Bella Coola as they have, for example, to the Indians of the Plains. It is only through questioning that the investigator learns that the East is regarded as the top of the world, the South is the sun at its zenith, the West is the bottom, and the North is nothing, merely the opposite to the south. These beliefs play little part in the lives of the people. [776] [823]

Above our earth stretches an inverted dome, its edges resting on those of the world. This dome, the sky, is called

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 sonx̌. If the Bella Coola were strictly logical, one should expect them to conceive the upper surface of sonx̌ as being convex. Instead, it is considered a flat surface, very similar to the earth, and no explanation is given of what fills in the spaces between the dome, concave as viewed from this world, and the upper plane which could rest only on the peak of the dome. But logical accuracy is not a Bella Coola characteristic. This flat land is called dāsonx̌dā or wasonx̌ wawtk-lloqosil. It is illumined by a second sun, shining on it as the sun does on the earth. Far in the east of this upper region are extensive tide-flats. This land above is the home of many supernatural beings, who will be described in due course. The relative position of the sun to this upper world is ill-defined. According to some accounts, it travels by clearly marked trails on the surface, and a transparent dome is postulated to explain how its light reaches this earth. Others state that it moves like a bird or flying canoe through the space between the world and the dome-sky above. On many of these points there is a striking difference of opinion, which the Bella Coola explain by saying that their information is derived from ancient stories, which are personal possessions, and that no one knows the beliefs of his fellows. A co-ordinated theology, as Boas points out, has not evolved among the Bella Coola.

The sky, as it may be called if the reader will bear in mind that it is the underside of a flat land, was not always in its present condition. The Bella Coola say that long ago the supreme god instructed his Carpenters (I, p. 39) to make a sky. They started from the eastern extremity of the earth, but after a considerable part of the dome had been erected, it fell with a thunderous crash, because no supporting posts had been set up. The part that escaped this calamity is called Salwalasam. Undiscouraged, the Carpenters continued their work with the assistance of posts and so built the sky as it is seen today. Then the supports were taken away.

As already stated, a sun shines on the land above. As that seen by mortals is attached to the land above, so is this upper sun attached to another land above the one of which our sky is the underside. Boas (p. 28) has described this upper land in some detail. A number of Bella Coola were questioned on this subject, but for some time no one could be found with knowledge of its existence. At length one of the older people remembered that a man who had died some thirty years ago had a personal story connected with it, and later a Kimsquit man was able to furnish definite information. He explained that in his family there was a myth dealing with this matter; others might have heard this myth, but since it was not their property, of course they would not be able to impart the facts contained in it, nor would they necessarily believe it. Consequently, an upper land, superimposed above that which is immediately over the earth, cannot be described as a Bella Coola belief; it is shared, so far as could be ascertained, by only two families.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The chief feature of this uppermost world is its distance and unapproachableness. To the supernatural beings living in the intermediate land it is a far-off place; in fact, their attitude towards it corresponds to that with which mortals regard the land above their own. The supernatural ones can, when they wish, visit this upper world, which is called Nuqulilli. A sun shines there, but it is a different kind of sun from that known to mortals. On the whole it appears that this upper sky-land does not differ materially from either the earth or the land immediately above. No human being has ever reached this distant land, so what little is known about it was brought down in the beginning of time by the first people.

In addition to these two upper worlds, the Bella Coola know of one, or perhaps two, below. One of these is inhabited by ghosts.[1] It somewhat resembles the earth, but is unsubstantial and ethereal. It is considered to be immediately

[1]At the present time the Bella Coola are in a state of transition between the old beliefs and the new. This concept is held only by the older people, so it might be more accurate to describe it as one which they, the tribe as a whole, used to know. It has been thought advisable to use the present tense throughout in recording customs and beliefs which are now rapidly passing away.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

beneath the Bella Coola valley, and the land of the living forms a dome over it corresponding to that of the sky over this world. But everything is reversed. A river flows in the land of ghosts, but it rises in the west instead of the east; when it is warm on this earth it is cold in the land below; when it is sunrise here, it is sunset there. Shamans are believed to have penetrated frequently to this land, and on information from them the Bella Coola base their beliefs.

There is another land beneath the ocean. In this live the fish and sea mammals in human form, as well as other beings to be described in the next section of this chapter. Like all other worlds it has a sun above it,[1] and conditions are said to be similar to those existing on this earth. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether this undersea world is at the same level as the land of ghosts, and whether or not it extends beneath the rivers.

Although Bella Coola concepts regarding the sun and other heavenly bodies will require further consideration, it will be convenient at this point to describe them in outline. The sun is regarded as a heat-radiating ball of such intensity that a human being cannot approach it. Its path, as it crosses the land above, varies from day to day until it reaches its limits at the solstices. As it travels, it is accompanied by the droning of two Ałiłłxa, supernatural feminine beings who remain continually, one in the east and one in the west. According to most informants, the ends of the sun's course, though fixed and invariable from year to year, are not marked by any visible means. Others state that at each limit there is the mouth of a snang, a mythological animal of enormous size.

The moon is thought likewise to travel[2] each day but is said to be very cold. Few stories are current concerning it, although the Bella Coola say that long ago a man tried to reach it, only to be driven back by the intense cold. A shaman who died not many years ago claimed to have received power

[1] One informant stated that our sun served that purpose.
[2] The Ałiłłxa drone as it travels, as they do for the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 Ālqantām is occasionally, but inaccurately, called Sunx, the [821] Sun.

Though Ālqantām often sojourns in the sun, his home is ●772 in the flat land above the sky, a huge house which figures *776 prominently both in Bella Coola mythology and present-day thought. The name of the house is Nusmāt-a. It resembles those constructed on this earth, but is boundless in size. Like [552] the houses of human beings, its name is changed according to what is taking place within. Every autumn the supernatural beings gather there to await the coming of Ālqantām at the winter solstice; while waiting they pass the time by performing the equivalent of the earthly kusiut dances (II, chap. 1). This assemblage is termed qulxwaix, and the house, during this period, Nusqulxwaista.

The following names of the house, with meanings, were obtained:

Nusmāt-a, "The Place of Myths."

Nusqwatlnaista, "Where Everything Was Begun."

Nuskslālnumsta, "The Place Whence Came the Falling Down."

Nusklhmnānumsta, "The Place Where Mankind was Made."

Nusālqantāmsta, "The Place Where Ālqantām Speaks."

Nusqulxwaista, "The Place of the Qulxwaix."

Nusīskunsta, "The Place of Meeting," or "The Council House."

Nulsaymāls. The meaning of this word is unknown.

Ānuxwolsukmāls, "The Moving House." The significance of this last name rests on an ancient myth in which the house is described as travelling from place to place.

773 To grasp the significance of these designations it is neces- * 776 sary to understand the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the creation. Their mythology contains no account of the origin or birth of Ālqantām himself, nor of the making of this world; in the beginning of time no living creature, either animal or vegetable, existed with the exception of Ālqantām. He, therefore, decided to alter and populate the world and

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

vidual's ancestors; it enters into his own future as well. When a Bella Coola dies, his spirit (I, p. 94) travels back on the path of his ancestors from generation to generation until it reaches the spot where the first one came to earth; there it assumes the bird or animal cloak used on that occasion and floats aloft to Nusmăt·a to live forever. Small wonder, therefore, that this house figures prominently in the thoughts of the Bella Coola, and that they cling tenaciously to a belief in it. 177 773 775

Knowledge of Nusmăt·a has been inherited almost entirely from the first ancestors of the Bella Coola, and only a few items of information could be gleaned concerning it. Most men think of it as an enormous replica of their own houses, but one individual, of philosophic temperament, expressed the opinion that it was without any inner partitions. His belief was based on the following incident: 772

Some years ago a young man died without apparent reason. His sorrowing father kept wondering: 772 787

"Why has my son died? Can he have committed some crime or made some mistake?"

Despondent and grief-stricken, for a whole year the man did not wash, ate little, and slept on the floor. At last he wandered away, alone, into the mountains. Night overtook him and he lay down to sleep without food. His son came to him in a dream, telling him not to lament, that he was in a better place than this world, for Ăłquntăm had recalled him to Nusmăt·a to use his voice, which was unusually powerful, as a means of conveying his wishes to the other occupants of the house. Thus comforted, the father returned home in the morning, washed, and again behaved normally. My informant suggested that cross walls would be a bar to the strongest voice, and that Nusmăt·a must consequently be partitionless.

Nusmăt·a contains not only the spirits of all deceased Bella Coola, it is also the home of most of the supernatural beings. These frequently descend to visit the earth, but always return to the house above. So far as could be learnt, the only being irremovably located there is an old woman, Sumqulpăls. The most prominent article of furniture in Nusmăt·a is Ăłquntăm's seat, in the central position behind the fire. Over it is laid 772 776 * [775] what is probably a moosehide, with salmon painted on it, symbolic of his guardianship of fish for the benefit of mankind. In other respects Nusmāt·a has no peculiarities. Behind the house is an enormous tree, Tsunsin·iaqim, in the branches of which live innumerable owls.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

After this description of Nusmāt·a, it is logical to return to its master, Ālquntām. Guiding the sun is his most spectacular occupation, but he also governs the movements of moon and tides. Powerful though he is, he continues to take an interest in the doings of mankind whom he created. Prayers are commonly addressed to him, and a certain type of shaman is believed to receive power direct from him. Other supernatural beings may work weal or woe to a Bella Coola, but he feels it is done with the sanction of Ālquntām. At every winter solstice he enters Nusmāt·a, where supernatural beings from all parts of the universe have gathered to greet him. This assembly is called qulxwaix, and Nusmāt·a is termed Nusqulxwaista[1] for its duration. While waiting, the guests perform kusiut dances, similar to those carried out by members of the kusiut society on earth (see vol. II, chap. 1). At Ālquntām's entry the heat becomes so intense that the occupants rush forth precipitately, some falling and being trampled upon in the crush. Only three[2] advisers, including Sexsexālaix (I, p. 41), remain to confer with him. They arrange the fate of human beings during the coming year; who shall be made a kusiut, who shall be born, who shall die. In each case the decision rests with Ālquntām, though he is influenced by his counsellors. Human beings can often learn in dreams what is being decided for them.

Ālquntām, in spite of his strength, shares the limitations of any other chief, and is not invariably successful. The Bella Coola delight in telling stories of how supernatural beings, especially the Raven, outwitted and defeated him. Even [1] Often pronounced Nusqualwaista.

[2] The exact number is uncertain.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 the top. He concluded that this must be the home of the woman. Before the door of her house, wherever it may be, there are miniature totem-poles which open their painted mouths and speak in the voice of the animal or bird portrayed. The writer did not hear that her home was in the land above [114] Nusmät·a, as Boas (p. 28) states. At the present time knowledge of Kämai·ts is so scanty that failure to confirm the previous observation is not surprising.

One or two passing remarks of elderly informants imply that Kämai·ts may once have been more important to Bella Coola belief than she is now. One old man, already in his [775] dotage, stated that long ago the dead used to dwell in her house. Another declared that long ago prayers were addressed [782] to her, which is never done now. The word kämai·ts is commonly used by the Bella Coola in a manner difficult to trans- [192] late. It serves as equivalent for "please" or "thank you," but has an underlying significance of a supernatural benisón or appeal. It is not a word to be used in casual conversation; it is reserved for important occasions or times of emotional stress. The comparative unimportance of Kämai·ts probably rests on the fact that she belongs merely to the realm of ancient history and has no sociological significance, even as the patron of a kusiut dancer.

• 772 Another supernatural being so far removed from this world that he enters but little into the lives of the Bella Coola, is * 776 Sninia. He is the male being whom Älquntäm sent down from above in the beginning of time to hold the earth in position, and who has since performed this duty. He lives among the ice of the far north, and has not been seen by mortals for many generations. He holds a rope fastened to the earth; when he is afraid that it has slipped slightly he takes a new grip and pulls the rope taut, pressing the world against the soles of his feet as he sits with legs extended, as a man would do to hold tight a kicking salmon. It is the tightening of the rope which [823] causes an earthquake. If Sninia should lose his grip entirely 575 the earth would capsize. He is patron for several kusiut * 776 dancers.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 encountered on land, but the sea likewise is the home of anthropomorphic creatures. Far beneath the surface is a land much [772] like the earth, inhabited by people resembling humans who sometimes assist a drowning person. The mysteries of this undersea world are known to the Bella Coola chiefly through accounts handed down from generation to generation, though its inhabitants have often appeared at the surface. Their hair is long and somewhat reddish, their bodies are hairless, and their faces are in many cases stained with black. One man stated that about three years before a Japanese, fishing near Namu, had caught in his net one of these people, a girl about two years old. He drew her into his boat, where she squatted on the bottom, docile and submissive. After a time the fisherman became frightened and threw his captive overboard. The [648] Bella Coola say that the Bella Bella, greater seafarers than [186] themselves, have more extensive knowledge of these undersea dwellers.

539 Similar, if not identical, beings live beneath rivers and lakes; they have often been seen on the surface, and occa- * 776 sionally, long, long ago, certain fortunate individuals saw their houses. Accounts of such are embodied in Bella Coola mythology and will be described later. The following can be considered an example of a simple type:

About three hundred years ago, Łxwumxwumlaix, a Kimsquit fisherman, built a pier-like framework, projecting into the Dean River, on which to stand while fishing for salmon with a long-handled[14] scoop-net. One August day he was using his net when, after a number of successful sweeps, it became very heavy. As the net came to the surface he found, to his amazement, that a small boy was hanging on the rim. A number of people who had been watching from the shore, called to him to throw away his net with its uncanny haul. Heedless of this advice, Łxwumxwumlaix tried to lift his net and, on finding it too heavy, began to draw it through the water so as to drag it out on the shore. All went well for the first few yards, till suddenly the boy shoved against the net, pushing the fisherman into the water on the other side of the pier. Immediately the supernatural one vanished from sight. As the bystanders rushed to [14]The handles of nets of this type are said to have been about thirty feet in length.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the Bella Coola. No one knows the name of the fire devourer, and it may be that he lacks form. Though ignorant of the law of conservation of matter, the Bella Coola realize that the wood must have gone somewhere, and postulate a land far across the western sea where burnt wood lies in shadowy heaps, each billet retaining its original form though it lacks material substance. This region is presided over by an evil being with a desire for human flesh (II, p. 468). 372 776* [772]

The above list by no means exhausts the anthropomorphic beings resident either in Nusmät·a or in this world. Those described are the most important, and suffice to make clear the religious attitude of the Bella Coola to beings of this type. Others appear in connection with kusiut dances only, and a consideration of them can be deferred until vol. II, chap. I, whereas some belong essentially to shamanism and allied subjects treated in vol. I, chap. IX. 776*

ZOOMORPHIC BEINGS

The attitude of mingled hope and fear with which the Bella Coola regard their supernatural anthropomorphic beings is typical of their thoughts and actions concerning zoomorphic creatures as well. In the supernatural world the dividing line between human and animal beings is not clearly defined; fabulous monsters have the mentality of supermen, and can be appeased, besought, or cajoled precisely as are anthropomorphic beings. Like those of human form, supernatural animals can bestow good or evil on human beings with whom they come in contact. The division shown in this chapter must, therefore, be regarded as merely for convenience; it does not correspond to a distinction in the minds of the Bella Coola. [781] [128]

One of the most dreaded animals known to the Bella Coola is the snunq, a monster about the size of a large grizzly bear, with long, silky, beautiful hair, blue-grey in colour. It walks almost upright on short hind legs, so that its long fore-legs touch the ground at intervals; these are provided with sharp

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ancient history and fame of his family. It is a matter connected with the past, a matter of the mind, a source of pride to him to have such a possession, but a matter that does not affect his daily life. 211 424 773

So far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola crests consist of the following birds and animals: raven, bald eagle, grizzly bear, black bear, wolf, whale, blackfish, merganser, loon, skämtsk, possibly deer, and the mythical double-headed snake, susiutl. To these must be added the sun, because some of the original people came to earth in human form by sliding down his eye-lashes, the sun-beams; and nultnikta, the posts which stretched from earth to the land above, down which a number of the first ancestors of mankind swarmed in human form. The Bella Coola believe that these posts are particularly common memorials among the tribes of the outer coast. According to some accounts it was these posts which supported the first sky until it fell. 825 [776] * [772] ● [829] [772]

A crest is connected almost exclusively with the distant past. A Bella Coola whose ancestor came to earth as a raven pays no attention to the ravens of the present time. The matter was approached from every possible angle and not the slightest sign of respect toward living specimens of a man's crest could be noticed. A query as to whether or not a man refrained from eating his crest was regarded as highly humorous. Nor is there any trace of fellowship between unrelated families even if they happen to have the same crest. The subject was broached repeatedly, until at last one informant smiled broadly and said: 424 779 825

"I know now what you want to find out, I can tell you all about it."

He recounted how the Kitkatla are, in his opinion, stupid enough to regard as brothers all those who have the same animal story even if they are members of different tribes. He said that when he was a young man at Victoria, where Indians from all parts of the coast used to meet, a Kitkatla had once asked him what was his animal. He was puzzled, but as the [648]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
825
774
772

at the back of the neck; this is called nulkālxita by the Bella Coola and it is thought to be especially important since the spirit (I, p. 94) is located there. Somewhat discouraged by his lack of success, Raven sat holding his head in his hands, pondering. Finally, he decided that he would have to visit Miāltama, the land of the salmon far beyond the western ocean.

His self-propelling canoe, Tohunkl, was soon made ready and Raven invited Mouse, a young woman, to accompany him. The two travelled without incident till they came to the flat land where the salmon had their homes. On the beach were myriads of canoes, each in reality the skin of a sockeye salmon. Raven had instructed Mouse to remain in his canoe, so when the sockeye salmon chief invited the two to his house only Raven accepted, though Mouse was urged most courteously to accompany him. Raven was conducted to the house, where his host threw his own daughter into the river. She changed into a sockeye salmon and swam to the beach; some of her father's servants cut her up and brought her to the house where she was cooked. The meal was set before the guest whom the chief instructed not to eat any of the bones. As he ate, Raven examined the salmon very carefully to see what had been lacking in his model, and soon discovered it to be the thin bone, shaped like a maple leaf, at the back of the neck. Seizing an opportunity when no one was looking, Raven secreted this bone against the palate of his mouth. When the meal was over and the guest had tied what was left of the food into a mat, someone collected all the bones and threw them into the river. Forthwith they became a sockeye salmon, which swam towards the shore. But after an instant, the fish began to behave peculiarly, swimming around madly in circles, and jumping in an aimless manner. Everyone agreed that a bone must have been lost, and they searched the house for it without success. They also examined Raven. Finally, one man thought of investigating the guest's mouth where they found the missing bone.

"Oh," said Raven, lying: "I did not know it was there."

As soon as the bone was thrown into the river the sockeye salmon became normal and swam quietly to the beach where it changed into the chief's daughter once more.

When the time came to leave, Raven asked the chief to tell his daughter to take his bundle of food to his canoe for him. Meanwhile Mouse had carried out Raven's instructions, which were to gnaw a hole in each of the sockeye salmon canoes. Raven entered Tohunkl before taking the parcel from the girl, and as he stepped in, the canoe was forced a little distance from the land so that she waded into the water to hand it to him. As she did so, he backed his canoe further out until

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

she had to follow him into water up to her waist. Then Raven suddenly grasped her under the arms, hauled her into his craft, and fled. The sockeye salmon men cried out in anger and leapt into their canoes for pursuit, but one by one they sank; Mouse had done her work well. For a time the chase was close; in fact, the sockeye salmon nearly caught Tobunkl in North Bentinck Arm, but as danger threatened, Raven seized a pole and delivered several vigorous thrusts which sent the canoe beyond the reach of the already sinking pursuers. The gashes made in the rocks by his shoves are still visible near the site of the Bella Coola Cannery, as well as the pole which he threw ashore when he had finished with it; it became petrified and can still be seen immediately behind the manager's house. At the south of the Bella Coola River, Raven threw the chief's daughter into the water. Her descendants are the sockeye salmon which visit that stream; and it is due to his failure to capture more than one, that so few sockeyes come to this river. 539 825 [778]

Another version of this myth was collected from a Kimsquit man.

It describes how Raven went alone in Tobunkl to the land of the salmon, in the guise of an old man. He was courteously received at the home of Skatpts, chief of the salmon, who gave him a meal of that fish. Raven carefully watched to ascertain what he had omitted from his wooden model, and when he found out that it was the bone at the back of the neck, he secreted one in the palate of his mouth. Presently one of the salmon women became ill, and Skatpts said:

"Old man, you have hidden a bone."

The salmon searched Raven, but failed to find what he had hidden, and he was able to return to Kimsquit with it. He added this bone to one of his models, and it was at once able to swim strongly; in fact, it became a real salmon.

This fish was the ancestor of all steel-head salmon, which are still called Samsamlkdimut di Qwax, "The Salmon-like Fish of Raven." They are not considered as valuable for food as other salmon. [262]

Another exploit accredited to Raven in the beginning of time was the bringing of herring to Kimsquit.

None of these fish then inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to bring them to increase the food supplies of his people. A gull happened to catch a single herring far from shore and brought it to Raven, who smeared Tobunkl with its scales. Then he set out for the land of the herring beyond the western ocean. On arriving, Raven went to the home [772]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5

BB 539 BC 539*

had followed my instructions this trouble would not have come upon you."

Meanwhile Ḷomoqwa had been questioning Ailsamka: "Why did you not obey Raven's instructions about cutting up Black Cod? You have been committing a very serious offence, but I shall return you to your parents tomorrow and you can tell them to be more careful in future about teaching people."

The land in which the little girl found herself was much like this earth, containing a river, with the ocean in place of the sky over it. An old woman, Snulqulẓäls di Ḷomoqwa, who was living in Ḷomoqwa's house, told Ailsamka not to eat any unfamiliar food which her captor-host might offer her, or she would be unable to return; whereas she would be all right if she maintained her customary diet. Presently someone asked her what she would like to eat; she named several of her favourite dishes and they were brought to her without demur. Next morning, it was really next year but she did not know that,[1] Ḷomoqwa prepared to send her back. From the doorway of his house she could see the cod lines hanging down through the water, and Ḷomoqwa asked her is she could see her father's.

"No," she replied, "he is not there."

In what seemed a few minutes, but in reality was several months, because Ḷä·pxsok did not begin his fishing until March, she saw his canoe approaching.

She said to Ḷomoqwa, "That is he. I recognize his paddle."

Ḷä·pxsok dropped his line, and as he did so began to cry, thinking of his dead daughter. Acting on Ḷomoqwa's instructions, Ailsamka grasped the lowest hook, while Ḷomoqwa sent a black cod to each of the others. After a while Ḷä·pxsok recovered from his spasm of grief and hauled up his line, assisted by his two sons who were with him in the canoe. So great was their amazement at seeing Ailsamka on the line that they refused to believe their eyes and wanted to throw the line back, but she quickly called out:

"I am your daughter."

The father thankfully drew her into the boat, exclaiming at her long absence; this was the first she knew that she had been away for more than a single night.

Her two brothers called out, "Ḷä·pxsok's daughter has returned, haul in your lines."

The news was passed from canoe to canoe, the fishermen drew up their lines and hurried ashore to Ḷä·pxsok's house, eager to hear what had happened. Fresh sand was spread on the floor, as is always done when [1] One day in the land of supernatural beings is equivalent to a year for mortals.

BC [772]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

described, at death the shadow, the body, and a portion of the life, descend to the land below where existence is continued as a ghost. These wraiths are usually termed, Kołkw"lmx, "The Earthy Ones," though they prefer the name Asiutänem, "They Who Have Become Supernatural." They enter into the lives and actions of the Bella Coola in a way entirely different from that of the elements which go aloft at death. 775

The land of ghosts, immediately beneath the earth, is similar to it. There are trees and bushes, stones, grass, everything as on the surface of the world. There is a river, too, but it rises in the west and flows eastward, contrary to the course of the Bella Coola. The sun that shines below is green and unnatural, giving an ethereal light like that of the moon which, indeed, it is sometimes said to be. The seasons are the reverse of those on earth; when mortals are in midsummer, it is wintertime for ghosts. The fluff which human beings see falling from cottonwood trees reaches the land of ghosts as snow. All earthly springs rise from the river in the land below; they never freeze in winter because they come from a warm region, and the coldness of spring water in summer is the result of coming from a land where it is winter. With the exception of the peculiar light, the only essential difference between the land of ghosts and this world is that food is very scarce in the former; berries grow below, and it is supposed that there must be fish and animals there, but it is common knowledge that residents there are always hungry. 772 775 [823]

The life led by ghosts is similar to that of human beings. They occupy the same type of house as before death, dwell in the same kind of villages on the river bank, wear similar clothes, have similar likes and dislikes, require similar food, and even enjoy the same kind of dances. One old Bella Coola even stated that the ghosts are able to summon supernatural beings from Nusmät·a to their kusiut rites. It is generally believed that no work is done below, although several of the older people denied this. According to these individuals, a ghost can perform more rapidly and easily whatever tasks he had been 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 accustomed to do when alive; but the workmanship is shadowy and unsubstantial, sometimes even transparent. Ghosts do not act like human beings, but usually walk backwards, sometimes even on their heads, and spend much of their time playing a game resembling football with large, globular objects made of some light substance. They communicate with one another both by whistling and in a language which resembles the attempts at speech made by a tongueless person. Some 775 individuals believe that there is a supreme chief in the land of 776 ghosts, Allal·iaiul, sent down like Pluto to preside over the shades. He figures in certain stories describing descents to the lower world; but many Bella Coola know nothing of his existence below, although it furnishes a plausible explanation for his coming by night to molest human beings. Like Sxaiawax [761] he causes blood to rush forth from the mouth and genitalia of anyone whom he seizes; death follows, and a new victim has been acquired for his kingdom. The more common belief is 775 that the villages of ghosts have chiefs like those of human beings. It is thought, indefinitely, that after a long period of time the ghosts die, and some of them may then return to [845] this world as infants. A child born with dimples in its ears, which are regarded as indications of previous borings for rings, is welcomed as the reincarnation of some unknown ancestor.

At death, the ghost does not immediately appear in the land below, but remains for four days within the back-room of a house corresponding in style to an ordinary Bella Coola [772] dwelling. It is believed that one of these large houses is beneath every village[43] and that the dead pass straight down through the earth into it. Meanwhile the goods, burnt at the grave during the funeral, as well as those deposited beside it, have fallen through the ground and notified the ghosts that a newcomer has arrived. The wraiths assemble from all directions and fight over the articles, none of which are obtained [768] by the one who owned them during life. On the fourth [43]There may be one huge house, extending beneath the world like Nusmai·a above; it was impossible to obtain definite information on this point.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

day after the funeral, the relatives of the dead person burn the 775 remainder of his property, which passes through the earth to the ghost for whom it is intended. Ghost-singers have taken [768] their places and begin to beat out music, and presently the recently deceased appears, stepping backwards from the backroom in time to the beating of sticks. He is at once surrounded by his fellows, each anxious to learn the latest news of relatives still alive. This dance is really to welcome the new arrival, and takes place irrespective of his rank. After it has been held, it is hopeless to attempt to rescue a dead person, although that has been done several times during the four days immediately succeeding death.

Only shamans are able to peer down into the land of the [756] dead, though stories are told of inadvertent visits to it in relatively recent times. Human beings are prevented from visiting their dead relatives, but the latter, being supernatural, can come to the earth at will. They are always dreaded, and anyone who hears their whistling or their tongueless chatter cowers in his house, and hopes they will pass by. Shamans [756] can understand their speech and to them the dead explain their mission. If the relations of a dead person have failed to burn [768] all his personal possessions, he returns to earth to inform them, through a shaman, of the omission. The house is scoured for anything left and it is burnt at once near the grave, though no one knows how a ghost would punish failure to give him his property. Thoughtful people, remembering the scarcity of [264] food in the land below, frequently give presents to their dead relatives by casting small morsels of food on the side of the [772] central fire nearest the front door, beneath which is a passage to the lower regions. The food becomes magnified as it falls down this, so that even small fragments are sufficient to feed many hungry ghosts. Since the introduction of metal stoves, [177] it has become customary to throw food into a fire kindled for the purpose in the cemetery; the most suitable time is at dusk, although people are always afraid that spectres may be prowling around at that hour. If sufficient presents are not given [756]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

575*
796*
787

Towards dawn, a herald goes through the village crying loudly:

"Get up, you young men! Get up all ye people! Something strange has come upon the young man."

The uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut assemble in X's house where he is acting as if demented, biting any of his associates except other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts. Meanwhile those who are not members of the society cower in their own houses, and are told that if they dare to look out, X, scenting them, will bite them to death. At intervals during the morning, X goes around to the other houses, naked and savage, snapping at everyone he sees. The uninitiated hide in the bedrooms, but peek out occasionally and hear his growlings and the shrieks of mock terror with which his associates greet his bites and threats. The kukusiut tell non-members when it is safe for them to leave their hiding-places for necessary purposes, but at all other times they remain in concealment, listening with fear to the dangerous maniac.

About midday X returns to his house where a large number of kukusiut have assembled. The uninitiated certainly, and perhaps some of the kukusiut as well, believe that Cannibals are carried away to the land above where they are exposed to great dangers, and to prevent this an effort is always made to bind the dancer. The marshals and X's relatives have made the necessary preparations, consisting of the manufacture of a long rope, in addition to the usual dyed cedar-bark collar and a bear-skin. The kukusiut enter whole-heartedly into the dramatic spirit of the rite, and the robe is thrust over X in spite of his furious struggles. Then the collar is forced over his head, while the women drone and the whistles sound eerily, to the wonder of the uninitiated listening from adjacent houses. The thick, cable-like rope is doubled and a circle of kukusiut form around the seemingly demented dancer, each man holding a section. X rushes against one part of the circle after another, as if to force his way out; sometimes he bends down, and those

[172]

[292]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

who have gone aloft and never returned,[44] and of course increasing the fear of the uninitiated. They then go back to X's home where a marshal speaks, asking all to keep silence so that they will be able to hear X when he returns from the land above. No noise is permitted during his absence, even the discharge of muskets being forbidden. The man who carries the rope from which X escaped always receives a call on this night, because the supernatural beings have seen the important part he has played in the rite, and his patron recognizes it in this way. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated and, accordingly, the rope-holder is some kusiut who wishes to have a call. After the usual curing,[45] one song is composed for the rope-holder, and sung very softly, since the night's ceremony is termed Ałoliqosnıms̱, "The Actionless Night," or Nuxstimut, "The Silent Night." The uninitiated believe that the kukusiut are filled with woe and foreboding at the fate before X. It is early morning before they disperse. 575* 796* 787 [184]

The next day, nusiutälsap for the rope-holder, the usual ritual is omitted since the pretence of grief and fear must still be preserved. Thus the necessary wood for the rope-holder's masks is cut silently. The collar and rope from which X escaped are hung on the wall of his house, and when a herald summons the kukusiut during the evening, he bids them assemble to watch over these objects. Although a second song, composed during the day, is practised for the rope-holder, it is done so softly that the uninitiated from neighbouring houses imagine that the kukusiut are really brooding over their loss. The only sound that reaches them is an occasional hoip, accentuating their fear. After the customary distribution of work and food the kukusiut disperse. 575* 796*

On the morrow, the rope-holder's qothm, the uninitiated are summoned, because it is assumed that members of the [787]

[44] If a Cannibal dies during his period of concealment he is buried secretly. The uninitiated are told that his power enabled him to cross a yawning chasm in the land above, but then it failed him, so that he was unable to return to his friends. [766] [772]

[45] This consists of the frenzied beating of sticks, repeated four times. [761]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

*575 society have recovered from the shock of X's disappearance.
*796 Thenceforth the kusiut dances continue night after night, but 787 the Cannibal remains hidden. Sometimes he is carried to a dance, concealed within a drum; more often he remains within the back-room of his own house or hides in some lonely part of the mountains. Throughout this period he eats little or nothing, and formerly used to devour a brew of roots that produced emaciation. The length of concealment depends entirely on X. If he desires to impress the uninitiated with the dangers which he has survived, he remains hidden for a long time; consequently, the period varies from a week to two months or even more. On every occasion that a marshal addresses the kukusiut he warns them to watch for X's return, and garbled accounts of this reach the uninitiated.

When X's relatives and the marshals have decided that the Cannibal has been long enough absent, they make arrangements for him to reappear. The time selected is always the night of a nebusam, and after the departure of the uninitiated on the preceding evening the marshals discuss arrangements with the kukusiut and allot tasks to various individuals. Sev-
[302] eral kukusiut shave X's head, except a small patch above the [772] forehead, to support the story which he will tell of the high winds prevailing in the land above, which blew the hair from his head.[46]

After the dismissal of the uninitiated on the following night of nebusam, the kukusiut make their final arrangements. When [805] they judge from the passage of the stars or the state of the tide that dawn is at hand, several members of the society climb to the roof of the previously selected house. First they sound a whistle, then thump on the roof with their feet, and call out:

Xwa·, xwa·, xwa·: this is a cry used by Cannibals returned from above which is supposed to indicate a longing for meat.

The kukusiut sleeping within, knowing that their house has been selected, are ready as soon as they are awakened. The [46] One old man mentioned that in his youth this was done with a sharpened piece of iron; he was unable to state what was used in earlier times.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

telling them of his adventures, and presently they begin to sing the song, as if they had just learnt the theme from X. Frequently the deception is increased by X first learning the song and repeating it to the singers in a voice sufficiently loud for the uninitiated to hear. The theme of this, and every other song used for Cannibals, is of the land above and the dangers which X has survived. The singers add new facts and information to vary the monotony, but the subjects usually described are:

The flat land above with its many trails and the river that flows through it.

The gale constantly raging there which has blown the hair from X's head and the dirt from his body.

The trail across a yawning chasm over which his supernatural strength enabled him to leap. If a Cannibal dies when in concealment, the kukusiut bury the corpse secretly and tell the uninitiated that his power failed him on the other side of the abyss so that he was unable to return.

Älquntäm under his various names.

How his patron helped him to escape the Älskam, "They of the Huge Jaws," evil beings who tried to kill X by sucking him into their gaping mouths.

The tide-flats which are found at the edge of the flat land above.

The kindly being Sinunukälälum, who gave him the necessary power to recross the chasm. The uninitiated believe that unless a Cannibal meets this being he will be unable to return.

No one song for any Cannibal contains references to all these beings and events, but it is on these that the singers draw for their themes, always altering and adding to produce a fine effect.

On this occasion X does not dance,[48] and the uninitiated are soon expelled. As the kukusiut are eating, one marshal after another praises X for what he has done, and gives the most solemn warnings to all as to the necessity of completing [48] There is difference of opinion on this point.

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

one is permitted to leave, and the uninitiated gaze in amazement as the seemingly endless rope continues to be drawn up through the roof, although the rattle itself can no longer be heard as if X had passed beyond earshot. They do not know that he has merely stepped from the ladder to the roof of the house, and thence to the ground, taking care to loop the cord over a projection so that he can continue drawing it out steadily. He has carefully practised rattling so that he can gradually lessen the intensity as if he were passing beyond ear-shot. One of the marshals describes the dangers to which X is exposed on his journey aloft, and calls on the kukusiut to sing his two songs to aid him. They are sung several times, but no others are used during the long night, nor are puppet-patrons employed as in kusiotem rites. The rope is being drawn from a large coil on the floor near the fire, and when the carpenters notice that it is nearly exhausted one of their number slips out to tell X to stop his climb. Presently, one or two yards of rope are quickly pulled through the hole in the roof and then all movement stops. 575* 796*

"He has jumped," cry the kukusiut.

A fluent kusiut explains to the uninitiated that the roof of the land above has opened before X's ever-lengthening ladder, that he has leapt from it to the ground above and tied his rope to something. On one occasion, a malicious rival cut the cable hoping that no one would notice the break, but luckily one of the watchful carpenters noticed it in time to knot the two ends. The kukusiut always explain that the rope is X's point of contact with the lower world, and that if it is severed, he cannot return. Accordingly, if the broken end had been drawn up through the roof, X could never have come back, and only his secret death would have served to maintain the reputation of the society. [772] 575* 796* 578 688

The rope remains stationary for some time, and then is seen to be coming back through the aperture. 575*

"X is returning," whisper the kukusiut to one another and the excitement becomes intense. 796*

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

*575 *796 Slowly and steadily the rope is lowered to the carpenters who coil it in a heap near the foot of the ladder. It seems an endless climb, as this part of the ceremony is expected to take quite as long as X's ascent, and must not be finished until just before dawn. At last the faint sound of the rattle is heard and presently the ladder itself begins to shake. Two or more senior members of the society climb up through the roof and return, amid the droning of the kukusiut women, with the traveller. The uninitiated gaze at him with fear and awe:

"He is indeed wonderful," they say to one another.

[302] [772] X's face was painted black and white when he started his climb, but it is now clean and the uninitiated hardly need to be reminded by the kusiut orator that the strong wind in *Sonx*ʷ has blown all paint from his skin. He sits down beside an eloquent kusiut to whom he talks at length and who excites the curiosity of the audience by telling them that they will soon hear all about it. When the tale is finished, the orator stands up and tells what the traveller has seen in the land above. He states that X found a certain number of tally posts leaning and straightened them, but he never mentions whose lives have thus been preserved. The uninitiated assume without question that X has just given the orator these details, though in point of fact he has done nothing of the kind, his apparent confidant having been chosen for his skill in inventing interesting items. As soon as the story is over, the uninitiated are told to leave. While the usual meal is being prepared the carpenters haul down the ladder and cast it into the fire without ceremony. The kukusiut listen to the usual admonitions of the marshals as they eat, and then disperse in the early dawn, wearied from the all-night session.

Most of the village sleeps through the day, but in the late afternoon the heralds summon the kukusiut to X's house. The dance of the Tally Posts resembles a kusiotem to the extent that four days of ceremonial follow the four days just described. The evening following X's ascent is lnxtāmem, the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[492] Ăxyat: Locality near Stuax where berries are plentiful.
Ăyauk: Chief living at Tăl-ip in the beginning of time.

A

am'hl-a: One of the a'alt dances.
am: I, first person singular.
[262] 'ar: Herring eggs when brought into house ready for preparation as food.[1] bakuk': Supernatural animal.

B

Balak^{w}: One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
ba-pka: To guess, as done by the uninitiated at a Mystery dance.
Baskaqumaine or Baskaqumaskoine: Kwakiutl supernatural being.
[825] bikk': Lamprey.
Biltmu: Kusiut name of a Satlia man.
bluzu-i: Abalone-shell.
Bilwaukk: Influential Kwatna woman who died about 1870.
[292] bqaut: Ball-topped hat worn by chiefs.
[622] Bla-qwas: A Kimsquit composer.
Ba'aiaum: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
bajs: Supernatural, man-like creature.

D

[821] [772] di sang^{w}da or sang^{w}: The sky, regarded as the lower side of a land inhabited by supernatural beings.
Dakdak-aleis: 1—"The Comer," synonym for Nuskymm.
2—The kusiut prerogative of seeing Nuskymm.
Dakdakan, "The Ever-Comer": Synonym for Nuskymm.
Dakdakamem: Supernatural being who awaits Nuskymm.
Dakdakanus: Supernatural dog salmon resident in the land above.
[601] di kuimuts di emts: Niece's husband.
di kuimuts ti nakum: Aunt's husband.
Dipem'nal: One of the first men to settle at Alpăkul in the beginning of time.
dritis: Archaic term for kusiut Breaker.[2] [824] dudik: Frayed cedar-wood, as used for tinder.
[372] djatlakti, plural, djaldjakkum: Son; term used in direct address for an adult.
[601] Djakp: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Dji Sinaait, "The Slave Owner": Designation of the supernatural woman Kamai-ti.
[101] Djaldimus: Collective term applied to the Kwakiutl-speaking peoples of the mainland.
Djaudja-as: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Dukseng^{w}: Chief of abalone-shell people on the lower Fraser in the beginning of time.
Dukseng^{w}: One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Dukspus: One of the first women to settle at Tăl-ip in the beginning of time.

[1] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.
[2] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#142

Nuuuuyymum: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ana'likwalsaix and serving as patron (?) to a kusiut dancer.

[787] nuuulitsi: Omen of death.

Nuuutmumkmum, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tlitsplitsa-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuuuumlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Xemoynu's house.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuuupim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuu'uuuuy: Kusiut name assumed by a Stuuc woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nu'uyuuum: Kusiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qaiatum is obscure.

Nu'uuuttumuuix, "The Widener": One of Raven's names as chief.

[585] nuqtaxilai'um: Synonym for ptsutum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuqtaxlikta, "Heedlessly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuqu-uta: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqtaltu-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqtymats, "Place of Much Xaymats": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqtymis: Nuxmal name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqilaqulu-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] nuqmuuu-ti uu xuy"uls: One year.

[828] nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuqpik, "Empty House": House in which a kusiut dance is taking place.

nuqsiut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuqsly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqsiltsu: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqusuu: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kusiutum and other important kusiut rites.

[777] nuq"uuuikim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuquhumlaix: Suuuk name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqualiax: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqulaia: The upper heaven.

nuqumu: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuquuulqlaa-i: A Stuuc repository.

Nuxlqumtumuix, "Where Alqumtum Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] nuxmymu-uuy: Cottonwood buds.

Nuxtqmis'ata, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smuuu in the beginning of time.

nuxtlumy: Canoe-maker.

Nuxlum: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuqulsi.

[535] [869] nuxtulamp: Children's dance which serves as training for kusiut rites and to provide entertainment.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nuxsa: The visit to every house in the village by a Mystery dancer on receipt of his call.

nuxiqul, plural, nuxxiqul: Singer.

nuxikuxta: Quiver for carrying arrows. [415]

Nuxinuxta: Mountain near Asw-ax-i.

nuxiuxtli or nuxiuxtlnap: Second day of a huxiut dance.

Nuxixilxixulhm: Synonym for Tutwal-ax: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.

nuxhxixtxta: Repository.

nuxkli: Any unusual occurrence, regarded as an omen of death. [763] Nuxkxlxlnuxta, "Whence Things Came Down": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

nuxlukxta: Wash-basin, especially the supernatural one that remains in the land above.

Nuxkiapuk: 1—Supernatural being presiding over the Land of Ashes.
2—Locality on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, not far from the head.

Nuxhmxta: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tsuxixi in the beginning of time.

Nuxhmxtjuxta: Axe carried in the beginning of time by the man who was later turned to stone as Mount Nuxkulx.

Nuxhmxtxi: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tsuxixi in the beginning of time.

Nu-xinkhxmq: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

nuxkuta: Wasps' nest. [825]

Nuxkuxlxkunda: One of the first women to settle at Tsuxixi in the beginning of time.

nuxkumxtxta: House in which a memorial potlatch is being held.

Nuz-kinum: Mountain on south side of lower Bella Coola.

Nuxkuqumxulhm, "The Cherished One": Designation applied to one of the sons of Alqumtim.

nuxkuxta: House in which a potlatch is taking place.

nuxkuq: One who has gone to give potlatches in a new sphere; this rhetorical expression is commonly used when referring to a dead chief. [195]

nuxlikxta: Wash-basin used by a shaman when curing. [756]

Nuxlikxtxmidjut, "He Whose Wash-Basin Is in His Own Body": One of Tlinxqu-Sisa-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

nuxlkumxuxkxta: Enclosure behind fire in which huxiut dancers are secluded. [764] nuxlkuxtuc: Cleansing rites in connection with death.

Nuxkuxulxuq: Tsuiyxhum name acquired by a Kimsquit man as a result of a supernatural experience.

Nuxmiuxuxi: 1—Eagle that perched on a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time.
2—Name, derived from that of the eagle, of one of the first men to settle at Ilnuz in the beginning of time.

Nuxmx-a: 1—"Place of Stories": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxkulx in the beginning of time.

Nuxmx-aiu-a, "Women of Nuxmx-a": Probably wife of Alqumtim.

Nuz-nuxlinix: Mountain on north side of lower Bella Coola.

Nuxnuxlinuxta: Subterranean chamber in which rivers were confined in the beginning of time. [772]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Nuxwiwaay, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago. 192*
nuxwiwaay: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [578] Nuxu: 1—Bersen district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nuxpalqa: Tal'ia bird hunter.
Nuxpemda: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tal'ia in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqaklad in the beginning of time.
3—Bell of the universe which, when broken, released the sun. [772]
Nuxpemsiiwa: Daughter of the first settlers at Alqaklad in the beginning of time.
Nuxsup: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Berrensum": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nuxu'ipata: Repository, archaic term.
nuxwu'a'nuxwu: The assumption of a name upon earth. [431] nuxwuxmqalu, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage. [585] nuxwu'pata: Wooden dish used for washing an infant. nuxwuhtamum: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [415]
nuxwlim: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [785]
Nuxwlnaw': Name of a celebrated shaman. [756]
Nuxwu: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Nuxwl, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
nuxwqamu: Alteration of a dance from nuxwl to hactiel.
nuxlaxlu: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck. [825] nuxlaxlumum, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [586] nuxlaxlumu: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431] Nuxlaxu, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Nuxlaqal: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nuxpalq in the beginning of time.
nuxlawalq: Parents of twins. [845]
nuxqamu: Well. [825]
Nuxlatmalu: Mythical house in the sky.
Nuxqamalu: One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nuxlalaw: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Thaqqilaw'a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nuxlim. [756] nuxlaqamu: A creation of new hactiel names, such as is occasioned by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nuxlaxalu: Kwakiutl rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
nuxlaxamu: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431]
2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
nuxqaxu, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who points upon the head-apes used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Nuxqmalt, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.
Nuhlmalu: Kwakiutl name of a Tsawatenok man.

7;Boas E-5 (1884-ca. 1890)1900 NE5 Bellacoola NE5

lished some remarks on the religious life of the Bella Coola in 1886,[1] which, however, contain so many misconceptions that they cannot be used to advantage. At the same time I published a brief description of the tribe, based on information received from a small group of members of the tribe who were travelling in Germany. In this description also there are a number of misconceptions. The Indians were shown a collection of masks from Vancouver Island with which they were not familiar. They gave, however, explanations of these masks, judging by the similarity to masks of their own tribe; consequently the explanations given there are not correct.[2] In 1890 I fell in with a number of Bella Coola who were fishing for salmon in Fraser River. The information obtained from them was published in the reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1891.[3] A. Jacobsen published a description of their ceremonies in 1891.[4] Philip Jacobsen described some of their traditions and customs in 1894 and 1895.[5] I published a collection of traditions in 1894 and 1895.[6] 114

III.

All the collections which have been made heretofore do not bring out clearly the principal characteristic of the mythology of the Bella Coola. The tribes of the North Pacific coast consider the Sun as the most important deity, but at the same time they believe in a great many beings of supernatural power. For this reason their whole mythology is very unsystematic. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, have developed a peculiar mythology, in which a number of supernatural beings have been co-ordinated. A system has been evolved which justifies our terming the supernatural beings "deities." The general features of this system are as follows:— 114 773 776

The Bella Coola believe that there are five worlds, one above another. The middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are spanned two heavens, while below it there are two underworlds. In the upper heaven resides the supreme deity, a woman who interferes comparatively little with the fates of mankind. In the centre of the lower heaven, that is in the zenith, stands the house of the gods, in which reside the Sun and all the other deities. Our own earth is an island swimming in the ocean. The underworld is inhabited by the ghosts, who are at liberty to return to heaven, whence they may be sent down again to our earth. The ghosts 772 [775] [175]

[1] Original Mittheilungen aus dem ethnologischen Museum der Königlichen Museen zu Berlin, 1886, pp. 179-186.
[2] Ibid., pp. 187-189.
[3] Seventh Report of the Committee on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, pp. 2-11; Report of the 60th Meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, held at Leeds, 1890, pp. 493-495.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, pp. 383-391.
[5] Globus, Illustrirte Wochenschrift für Länder- und Völkerkunde, 1894, pp. 173-176; 1895, pp. 7-12.
[6] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, pp. 281-291; 1895, pp. 182-193.

[113]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 who die a second death sink to the lowest world, from which there is no [775] return.

The upper heaven is called Atsá'xxl., or Sautx'lek·'a'la ti Sónx· t'aix·, or [776] Sónxaxl. Omq'ó'mkilik·a. The deity ruling there is a woman who is called Qamá'its, or Tsi sienaxti. ("our woman"), or Ek·!yak·imtóls'ti. ("afraid of nothing").

772 This heaven is described as a prairie without any trees. It is said that 776 in order to reach it one must go up the river from the house of the gods in the lower heaven. In another tradition it is said that in travelling from the lower heaven to the upper heaven one has to pass the rent in the sky which is called Tsi.ns'lótas ti Sónx· t'aix·. The house of the supreme deity stands in the far east, and a gale is continually blowing over the open country, driving every thing towards the entrance of her house. Near the house, however, it is calm. In front of the house stands a post in the shape of a large winged monster, and its mouth is the entrance to the house. In front of the house-door there is gravel of three colors,—blue, black, and white. Behind the house is a salt-water pond in which the goddess bathes. In this pond lives the st'siut, or xtsaltsalo'xem. This being sometimes descends to our world. Wherever it moves, the rocks burst, and slide down the sides of the mountains. It is described as a snake or a fish (see pp. 44, 66).

773 In the beginning of the world the mountains were of great height.
823 They were human beings who made the world uninhabitable. Qamá'its made war upon the mountains. She vanquished them, and made them smaller than they used to be. During this fight she broke off the nose of the mountain Yelyuls'mt., which is situated near Nut.!a'l. Its face may be recognized even now; and the Indians say that when its name is called, it answers. There are two mountains near the head-waters of Bella Coola River. The one is called Sl.ex·!ékosi't.; the other one, Na'xxl. The former had a fire, called Sautal'k·atmsta, burning in his house. This fire warned him of the approach of enemies. When Qamá'its made war upon the mountains, the fire warned its master. Qamá'its was coming down the river in her canoe, which is named "T!kun." When she approached, he broke her canoe, and she returned to heaven. The canoe has been transformed into stone, and may be seen to this day at the foot of the mountain Sl.ex·!ékosi't.. It is said that Qamá'its visits the earth every now and then. Her visits cause sickness and death. She is described as a great warrior.

772 In the centre of the lower heaven, which is called Sónx·, stands the 776 house of the gods. This house is named Nuamx'ts (the House of Myths), or Nuak!ostmal'xyts ("where man was created"), or Nuak·!.s.ns'mata ("the house from which people come down"), or Nuqulxmal'xyts ("the house to which people go"). In front of the house stands a post called Nu.tmt'xts. It is painted with representations of all kinds of birds. A white crane (?), Qō'xōx, is sitting on top of the post. The master of the house is Sunx, the Sun. He is also called Ta'ata ("our father"), or Smai'yakila ("the sacred one"), or Smayalō'ɔt.la. It seems that he is the only deity to whom the Bella Coola pray. They do not pray to Qamā'its, the deity of the supreme heaven. I have not found any prayers directed to the other deities of the lower heaven. I recorded a number of such prayers directed to the Sun. They are as follows:— 772 776 776 782 539

Atk'ī'xīlō'ɔmx Tātau'! ("Look on us where we are going, Father!")

Tātau'! atk'alīxwmdō'ɔx! ("Take care of us, Father!")

Tātau'! ɔk'alīxumtō'ɔx ala mentaiā'a'ts! Tātau' atēp'alōāɔlīōāx! ("Father! take care of our road! Take care of us!")

After a long-continued rain, they pray:—

Tupōn'mx Tātau'! hōt.'ē'īxutimō'ɔx, Tātau'! ("Wipe your face, Father! that it may be fair weather.")

The mountain-goat hunter prays:—

Ōnqa yōōtātāax, Tātau', ta mexmx'ōtmō, Smāyalōt.lau'! ("Let your children look at me, Smayalōt.la, Father!")

A person pursued by misfortune prays:—

Nūqlamēk'ī'mtex Tātau'! ōmōqomak'ma tō ti q!āyanxmtnxmt'ai'x. ("Make me happy, Father! You have given me too much misfortune.")

A sick person prays:—

Nūqlamēk'ī'mtex Tātau'! ak'a nūq'ōalōmtō'mx Tātau'! ("Let my life be long, Father!")

The successful hunter, or the woman who has found a plentiful supply of berries, prays:—

Nūnūqlamē'k'ōts ti mānāt'aix ak'a nūqlamēk'ōmts ak'a pōōtus ānōai'k'mēts'ats ak'āmk'ō ti aqlaiōt'aix. ("Father! You make me happy. You give me what I desire. Thus I find what I wished for.")

The Bella Coola also make offerings to the Sun. Hunters throw four small slices of seal-meat, of mountain-goat tallow, etc., into the fire as an offering to the Sun, in order to obtain success in hunting. Sick people burn parts of their clothing, which they decorate with red cedar-bark, as an offering to regain health. 776 782

The second deity, who is called Atk'untā'm, seems to be of equal importance. Sunx and Atk'untā'm stay in the rear of the House of Myths. Near the fire stays Sōōt.k'alxā'la. He is an old man who formerly ruled over 776 [772]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 the House of Myths, but who has given up his place in favor of Senx and Alk'unta'm. These two might be called the rulers of mankind. In most traditions they are described as trying to destroy man, notwithstanding the fact that they are considered the creators of mankind. This peculiar charac-773 teristic of these deities is clearly brought out in the traditions recorded on 776 pp. 78 ff. In one legend which I collected in 1890, Alk'unta'm's mother, Nanusômik·eeqonx'm, is described as a Cannibal, who inserts her long snout in the ears of man, and sucks out his brain. Eventually she was transformed into the mosquito.[1] I did not hear her mentioned as one of the deities residing in the House of Myths. According to the same tradition, the salmon were obtained by a man who gambled with Alk'unta'm, the stake being the salmon. Alk'unta'm lost, and the man took the salmon down [825] from heaven. Another legend of the origin of the salmon is recorded on p. 38, where it is told how the birds obtained the salmon. According to still another tradition (p. 94), the Raven obtained the salmon by marrying a salmon girl.
In the tradition quoted above, Alk'unta'm also gives to man the power to cure [755] disease by means of the water of life, which the shaman sprinkles on the sick person.

776 A number of inferior deities live in the House of Myths. They might be called the assistants of the principal deities. In order to understand their [772] functions, it is necessary to state that the deities residing in the House of Myths have particular charge of the religious winter ceremonial of the [196] Bella Coola which is called kû'siut, and which corresponds to the ts'ètsâ'eqa of the Kwakiutl. I have described this ceremonial, and its importance in [575] the social life of the Kwakiutl, in another paper.[2] The kû'siut is of equal importance to an understanding of the social life and mythology of the Bella Coola. It is sufficient to say at this place that the ceremonials performed during the kû'siut are mostly dramatic representations of myths [532] referring to the various deities, particularly to those of the House of Myths:
therefore masks representing these deities are used in the ceremonials.
Plates VII to XII[3] show a series of these masks. Figs. 1, 2, and 4 (Plate VII) are Senx, Alk'unta'm, and Snûlk'ulx·a'ls. The functions of many of the 575 inferior deities seem to refer solely to the kû'siut. These deities and their 776 functions are as follows: Six·sek·lai'x· (Plate VII, Fig. 6) ordains the death of man and animals. According to one statement that I received, there are four deities of this name in the House of Myths. It is his particular duty to kill those who transgress the laws of the kû'siut. This deity is mentioned by Jacobsen, who calls him Sek-seik Kallai.[4] Nusne'neq'als (Plate VII, Fig. 7), or the Snene'lq of the House of Myths, sits by himself in one

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 945.
[2] Report of the U. S. National Museum, 1895, pp. 311-738.
[3] Drawings by Mr. Rudolph Weber.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, p. 588.

776 [842] having charge of the birth of all animal beings. While she is rocking the cradle, she sings, — [639] "xoēxxoēsmaix·nimōta nēkō'k·s LA nōēx·L!L'malsaix· au au au au.

Azyotsētsk'ōx·'ats six·'ixōtayā'mk·tēts'ats snsmnxmk·'ā'howsōats ayawa sōyōnxsōats au au au au."

Another deity living in the House of Myths is the mother of flowers, called Nonō'osqa (Plate X, Figs. 7 and 9), the daughter of Snukpa'nLlts. It seems that this last name means "going to the right." This evidently refers to the fact that the Sun is believed to move on his path towards the west, face forward, and consequently during the spring months ascends the sky [821] moving towards the right; so that Snukpa'nLlts, moving to the right, means at the same time the springtime, when the sun is moving up the sky. This is the time when flowers begin to sprout. Every spring Nonō'osqa gives birth to all the plants in the order in which they begin to appear. A shaman is called to her aid by two old women who assist her (Plate X, Figs. 8 and 11).

Every year, at the time of the winter solstice, the deities determine who shall die during the ensuing year. Two beings called Kakēstsai'ōt. ōla xmā'noas are placed on the ends of a long plank, which is supported at its centre, and swings like a seesaw. Then all the men and all the animals [761] are called to stand near the ends of the plank. When one of the swinging beings falls down from the plank, the person standing near it will die sooner than the one standing at the opposite end. The deities have a messenger called Nutsēkoa'lsika (that means "long ear"), who carries all the news from our earth up to the House of Myths. ALk'unta'm has two children, — the deer, who is called Snoō'lēxēlts ALk'unta'm, that is, "the foolish son of ALk'unta'm" (Plate VII, Fig. 8), and LēXxonix·is ALk'unta'm. I have not been able to learn any thing in regard to the functions of these two beings.

While SēēX and ALk'unta'm are principally concerned with the fates of mankind, they do not personally interfere with the doings of man. Their thoughts are carried out by four brothers, who are called collectively Masmasala'nix or Ontsk·ē'mtēnēm (Plate VIII, Figs. 1–4). These brothers are MaLapā'litsēk· ("the one who finishes his work by chopping once"), Yula'timot ("the one who finishes his work by rubbing once"), MaL'apē'exōēk· ("the one who finishes his work by cutting once"), and IL'iLu'lak·. They [772] have a sister called L'a'qumēlks. These four brothers live in an elevated room in the rear of the House of Myths. They are engaged in carving and painting. It is said that they gave man his arts. They taught him to build canoes, to make boxes, to build houses, and to carve in wood and to 776 sign of the salmon-berry blossom: A'ī'mākᵉ has the shape of a kingfisher: and L'ētsā'aplēLana is painted with the design of a sea-lion bladder filled

532 with grease. She wears rings of red and white cedar-bark. The carving representing the kingfisher has the wings attached to the sides of the head, while the tail rises over the forehead. Xēmxēmalā'oLla is said to carry a small woman in his arms. Her name is Nuspō'xta. When the brothers and their sister threaten to do harm to man, she entreats them to desist. In some traditions these deities are described as the children of ALk'untā'm.[1]

776 In one tradition L'ētsā'aplēLanaᵉ is described as visiting houses and stealing provisions. She is then pursued by the person whom she has 773 wronged, and returns to the House of Myths. The deities are unable to cure her; but the person who wounded her is called in, and withdraws his arrow, whereupon she recovers.[1] Formerly I had the impression that these [114] ten deities were particularly concerned with the sisau'kᵉ ceremonial,[2] but this [575] impression has not been substantiated by the information I received during the past year. The ten deities appear much rather as deities of the kō'siut.

575 In the rear of the House of Myths there is a room named LlŌ'sta, in 773 which the son of the deities lives. His name is Ba'EXōLla or Snupaaxola'lt. When SEnx and ALk'untā'm desire to destroy their visitors, they send them 776 past the door of Ba'EXōL'la's room. The latter then rushes out of his room [772] and devours the visitors. He also initiates the Cannibal. According to the tradition of the tribe SE'nxLEmxᵉ, they acquired membership in the Cannibal Society in the following manner: Ba'EXōLla came down to the mountain SqtsL, where he met with the son of SEnxalō'LEla, the first of the tribe. He conducted him up to the House of Myths. He took him into his room, and gave him the name Q'oalaiu'tstimot. He put a snake into his body, which enabled him to pass through the water. When the youth applied his mouth to the body of a person, the snake tore pieces of flesh from the body, and devoured it. Then Ba'EXōLla took the youth to the upper heaven, past the rent in the sky, and to the house of the supreme deity, Qama'its. The two approached the house, being blown towards it by the strong gale prevailing in the open country of the upper heaven. They found Qama'its sitting in front of her house; and she said to Ba'EXōLla, "Why don't you come in? You wish that your friend should obtain great supernatural power. Bring him to my house, and I will give him what you desire. Stay for a short while where you are, and I will show you what I am doing. Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." After a little while the post closed its eyes. It grew dark at once, and the two visitors fainted, but soon they recovered. When the post opened its eyes again, it grew light. The visitors remained sitting on the ground, and

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 194.
[2] Seventh Report on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, p. 6.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

suddenly a strong wind began to blow, which rolled them over the prairie until they reached the door of the house. Then suddenly the wind calmed down. They remained sitting on the ground near the doorway; and Qama'its said, "Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." They were sitting opposite each other, watching the post; and when it closed its eyes, they were transformed into two stones, but they soon regained human shape. Then Qama'its asked them to enter. Now the woman took the youth's blanket, and gave him another one made of bear-skin set with fringes of red cedar-bark. She told him that this blanket was to keep him warm, and that it would direct his course. Next she fetched some water from the salt-water pond behind her house. She sprinkled it over the faces of her visitors, and told the youth to sing about his experiences in the upper heaven when performing the Cannibal dance. If she had not sprinkled the faces of her visitors with water, they would have died. She said to the youth, "Your country is not far away. Do not be afraid of the dangerous road that you have to pass. Later on there shall be many Cannibals like you. Do not be afraid to touch the food that another Cannibal may offer to you. You are strong because you have seen me." Then Qama'its sent him back to the lower sky. Here the gods placed him on the back of a bird (Sq'xsen), which carried him down to the sea. As soon as the bird reached the water, it uttered its cry, and at the same time the young man uttered the cry of the Cannibal. The people heard it, and said to one another, "That must be the boy whom we lost some time ago." They connected many canoes by means of planks, and paddled out to the place where the bird was swimming about. They covered the canoes with red cedar-bark and eagle-down, and tried to capture the youth; but when they approached, the bird swam towards the village. They surrounded it with their canoes; but the bird flew up, and disappeared in the sky, and at the same time the youth flew towards the village. When the people landed, he attacked them, taking hold of their arms; and the snake, which was still in his body, tore pieces of flesh out of their arms. The people sang and beat time in order to appease him. 575 773 776

In a second room in the rear of the House of Myths, next to that of the Cannibal, lives Kokō'slxem, another son of the deities. His room is called Nus'ō'lxsta. He initiates the Olx-dancer (see Chap. VI). 776 575

The path of the Sun is guarded by a number of deities. At sunrise is stationed the Bear of Heaven, Snanō's ti Sōnx t'aix (Plate X, Fig. 1). He is described as a fierce warrior, who protects the Sun against the attacks of his enemies, and he is the cause of the warlike spirit of man. His hair is tied up in a knot on top of his head. His mask is used in the sisau'k [772] [821]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

have to put the firewood. This opening is called K'awa'umsta, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Masmasala'nix spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following kū'siut song refers to these deities: — 776 821 [539]

Ai'mats tā mnatsai' tāsxts ti sō'nx'tsgi t'aix.
Aiēlx tā mnatsai' ōl ti S'alwalō'sems ti Sōnx' t'aix.
Sk'a ya'lx'tox ti si'lxnō tā mnatsai'.
Sk'a anōg'a wa exemē'x ti K'awa'umstask' ti Sōnx' t'aix' tā mnatsai.

("My child perished like the sky when it broke.
Go to S'alwalō'sem of the sky, my child!
Gladden my heart, my child!
Sit down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'nēkō'ōl, or Qenk'i'lst, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Alēp!alaxtnaix'. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Snēnik"pstak'imtōls," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [731] [753]

In the ocean lives a being called Sēlsāts, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the kū'siut ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kōlk"lōlē'mx'). It is called Asiuta'nem. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 775 their kō'siut. It is just below the burial-place of each village. The dancing-house is very large and long. It has four fires. The women stay on the floor of the house, while the men sit on an elevated platform. The houses have doors, but the ghosts who first reach the lower world enter the house through the smoke-hole. A rope ladder placed in the smoke-hole facilitates their entrance. Two men stand at the foot of the ladder. They are called Anôet.'axsalai'x'. For a person who has once entered the dancing-house there is no return to our earth. The souls are at liberty to return to the lower heaven, which they reach by ascending the rope ladder. Those who return to the lower heaven are sent back to our earth by the deities, to be born as children in the same family to which they belonged. Those who enjoy life in the country of the ghosts, and who do not return to heaven, die a second death, and then sink to the second lower world, from which there is no return.

I received another description from an old man. He stated that he reached the country in his canoe. He saw two trails,—one the trail of the living, one that of the dead. He followed the trail of the dead, and reached a village in which there was a dancing-house. The language of the ghosts differed from that of the living (see p. 42).

773 825 [823] The Bella Coola believe that in the far west is situated the land of the salmon, which is called Mta'lton. The salmon leave this country early in the spring every year, and ascend the rivers. They are believed to return to their own country in the fall. The following tradition is of importance, explaining the manner in which the salmon were first brought from their country to the rivers of our world:—

Once upon a time a man named Winwt'na lived at Q'o'mqotis. One day he was sitting in front of his house, looking at the river. He thought, "I wish fish would ascend this river." At that time not a single salmon visited Bella Coola River. Winwt'na entered his house and lay down, thinking about the salmon. One night while he was asleep he dreamt that with the help of all the animals he had made war upon the salmon, that he had vanquished them, and that since that time the salmon had ascended Bella Coola River. When he awoke he invited all the animals to his house, and told them about his dream. They all came, and when they had entered he shut the door. Then he spoke: "My brothers, I have invited you to my house that you may hear what I wish to do. You shall help me to obtain what I desire." The Mink asked him in what they were to assist him; and he replied, "I want to go to Mta'lton. There is not a single fish in our river, and I dreamt that with your help I vanquished the fish. Let us make war upon them. I shall certainly take some slaves, and we will place them in this river." Mink retorted, "I am glad that you are speaking,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 sonx̣ʷ. If the Bella Coola were strictly logical, one should expect them to conceive the upper surface of sonx̣ʷ as being convex. Instead, it is considered a flat surface, very similar to the earth, and no explanation is given of what fills in the spaces between the dome, concave as viewed from this world, and the upper plane which could rest only on the peak of the dome. But logical accuracy is not a Bella Coola characteristic. This flat land is called dāsonx̣ʷdā or wasonx̣ʷ wawtkłłoqosił. It is illumined by a second sun, shining on it as the sun does on the earth. Far in the east of this upper region are extensive tide-flats. This land above is the home of many supernatural beings, who will be described in due course. The relative position of the sun to this upper world is ill-defined. According to some accounts, it travels by clearly marked trails on the surface, and a transparent dome is postulated to explain how its light reaches this earth. Others state that it moves like a bird or flying canoe through the space between the world and the dome-sky above. On many of these points there is a striking difference of opinion, which the Bella Coola explain by saying that their information is derived from ancient stories, which are personal possessions, and that no one knows the beliefs of his fellows. A co-ordinated theology, as Boas points out, has not evolved among the Bella Coola.

[811] [821] [538] [424]

772 773 [776] The sky, as it may be called if the reader will bear in mind that it is the underside of a flat land, was not always in its present condition. The Bella Coola say that long ago the supreme god instructed his Carpenters (I, p. 39) to make a sky. They started from the eastern extremity of the earth, but after a considerable part of the dome had been erected, it fell with a thunderous crash, because no supporting posts had been set up. The part that escaped this calamity is called Salwalosam. Undiscouraged, the Carpenters continued their work with the assistance of posts and so built the sky as it is seen today. Then the supports were taken away.

772 821 As already stated, a sun shines on the land above. As that seen by mortals is attached to the land above, so is this upper sun attached to another land above the one of which our sky is the underside. Boas (p. 28) has described this upper land in some detail. A number of Bella Coola were questioned on this subject, but for some time no one could be found with knowledge of its existence. At length one of the older people remembered that a man who had died some thirty years ago had a personal story connected with it, and later a Kimsquit man was able to furnish definite information. He explained that in his family there was a myth dealing with this matter; others might have heard this myth, but since it was not their property, of course they would not be able to impart the facts contained in it, nor would they necessarily believe it. Consequently, an upper land, superimposed above that which is immediately over the earth, cannot be described as a Bella Coola belief; it is shared, so far as could be ascertained, by only two families.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The chief feature of this uppermost world is its distance and unapproachableness. To the supernatural beings living in the intermediate land it is a far-off place; in fact, their attitude towards it corresponds to that with which mortals regard the land above their own. The supernatural ones can, when they wish, visit this upper world, which is called Nuqwliäls. A sun shines there, but it is a different kind of sun from that known to mortals. On the whole it appears that this upper sky-land does not differ materially from either the earth or the land immediately above. No human being has ever reached this distant land, so what little is known about it was brought down in the beginning of time by the first people.

In addition to these two upper worlds, the Bella Coola know of one, or perhaps two, below. One of these is inhabited by ghosts.[1] It somewhat resembles the earth, but is unsubstantial and ethereal. It is considered to be immediately

[1]At the present time the Bella Coola are in a state of transition between the old beliefs and the new. This concept is held only by the older people, so it might be more accurate to describe it as one which they, the tribe as a whole, used to know. It has been thought advisable to use the present tense throughout in recording customs and beliefs which are now rapidly passing away.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

from the moon and stated that there were mountains and snow on it. It is commonly stated that the marks on the moon represent a man carrying a bucket. 821 [756]

The stars figure but slightly either in Bella Coola mythology or thought; it is not even known who made them. Two in the Great Bear constellation are called respectively Tpiksta and X̱inx̱ines, "Little Girls." A lone star in the same part of the sky, named A'lox, is said to be following the girls to the forest for illicit intercourse. [773]

Moon, stars, and above all the sun, were, and still are to a certain extent, used by the Bella Coola in computing the passage of time. There are no individuals with the definite prerogative of keeping count of time, but formerly wise old men used to do so.[4] Differences of opinion were the rule rather than the exception, a condition which often led to bitter disputes concerning the proper date for starting the winter ceremonials. Boas (p. 41) has recorded the Bella Coola calendar in greater detail than the present writer has been able to do. The making of calendrical observations is a lost art, and the following list of the months was all that could be learnt. It will be noted that these agree with Boas in regard to the months in the early part of the year, but not in those between the summer and winter solstices; no explanation is offered for this disparity. 805 821 [554] 578 [796] [114] [178] [114]

First moon after the summer solstice: Sikālamtak, which has the significance, "The Time for Sockeye Salmon to Ascend the River."

Second moon after the summer solstice: Si'islalitl, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon."

Third moon after the summer solstice: Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon."

Fourth moon after the summer solstice: Siqālx̱am, "The Time for Gathering Fern Root," or Sidakaos di Ānoᵊlikwolsaix,

[4] A Kimsquit informant stated that there were professional calendrical experts in his home when he was a young lad although members of the kusiut society (II, chap. 1) sometimes attended to this matter. [575] [463]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

not systematized; if a man is asked about the powers or functions of a certain supernatural being, he will usually answer by recounting a story in which that being appears. What is known respecting many of the lesser supernatural beings depends upon information contained in stories, and as many of these are personal possessions, it follows that there is tremendous variation in individual knowledge. Psychologically, this is of little importance; there are enough supernatural beings for everyone to know some of them, and to expect to meet or hear them in the forests. To insert many of the stories contained in later chapters would break the sequence of description; all that is here attempted is to give a general summary, in a way foreign to Bella Coola thought. 771 776* [424] [184]

Supernatural beings are by no means all-powerful. It is true that they have miraculous powers and can work weal or woe to human beings who chance to come in contact with them, but likewise they may sometimes be overwhelmed by mortals armed with objects steeped in human essence, such as a blanket which has been worn until it is impregnated not only with the smell, but the physical being of its owner. In particular, shamans or other mortals of great strength have been able to conquer the supernatural ones. Consequently, it may be said that although supernatural beings live on a plane different from that of mortals, they are not omnipotent. Long, long ago, man was able to come in contact with them more frequently, but that golden age when the semi-mythical ancestors of the Bella Coola were living has long since passed away, though it is only within the last few years that such beings, particularly supernatural animals, have become comparatively rare. The Bella Coola give three main reasons for this: 776* [756] [773] 776* 178

(1) Supernatural animals do not like the sound of muskets and have moved far away.

(2) With increasing dependence on the canning industry, fewer hunters penetrate into their haunts in the distant parts of the mountains.

(3) The younger Bella Coola no longer take pains to purify themselves as a means of placating supernatural beings.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*776 Ałquntäm is occasionally, but inaccurately, called Sınx, the [821] Sun.

Though Ałquntäm often sojourns in the sun, his home is 772 in the flat land above the sky, a huge house which figures *776 prominently both in Bella Coola mythology and present-day thought. The name of the house is Nusmät·a. It resembles those constructed on this earth, but is boundless in size. Like [552] the houses of human beings, its name is changed according to what is taking place within. Every autumn the supernatural beings gather there to await the coming of Ałquntäm at the winter solstice; while waiting they pass the time by performing the equivalent of the earthly kusiut dances (II, chap. 1). This assemblage is termed qulxwaix, and the house, during this period, Nusqulxwaista.

The following names of the house, with meanings, were obtained:

Nusmät·a, "The Place of Myths."

Nusqwatlnaista, "Where Everything Was Begun."

Nuskəlälnımsta, "The Place Whence Came the Falling Down."

Nuslımnänımsta, "The Place Where Mankind was Made."

Nusälquntämsta, "The Place Where Ałquntäm Speaks."

Nusqulxwaista, "The Place of the Qulxwaix."

Nusp̓skunsta, "The Place of Meeting," or "The Council House."

Nulsaxmäls. The meaning of this word is unknown.

Änuxwolsekmäls, "The Moving House." The significance of this last name rests on an ancient myth in which the house is described as travelling from place to place.

●773 To grasp the significance of these designations it is neces- *776 sary to understand the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the creation. Their mythology contains no account of the origin or birth of Ałquntäm himself, nor of the making of this world; in the beginning of time no living creature, either animal or vegetable, existed with the exception of Ałquntäm. He, therefore, decided to alter and populate the world and accordingly created four supernatural Carpenters. They in turn made a number of workers, ällqwatlıntutl nunuqomaxmlx. These beings, endowed with enormous power by Ällquntäm, chiselled from wood a number of human beings, the forefathers of mankind. Some men state that this was done by the four Carpenters, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that they were merely supervisors. No explanation is given of the means used by Ällquntäm to give life to the beings thus created. The workers made not only human bodies, but constructed their mentality, including the speech. Nusmät·a contains a large number of rooms, in each of which a different set of Indians, with a different language, was manufactured; thus is explained the diversity of tongues among the people of British Columbia. The Carpenters did not confine their attention to men and women. Supernatural beings, animals, birds, trees, flowers, fish, mountains, rivers, perhaps even moon and stars, all were created almost simultaneously by them under the direction of Ällquntäm in Nusmät·a. The sun alone was not made in this way. Ällquntäm chose the proper plumage or fur for each bird and animal, which the Carpenters painted and carved according to his instructions. As they provided men with different languages, so they furnished the birds and beasts with their speech, which men can no longer understand. Each was given the necessary tools for existence on the earth below; sharp incisors to beaver, strong talons to eagle, a penetrating eye to heron, and so on. The Bella Coola do not regard birds and animals as being of a lower order than themselves, for all were created by the same power, at the same time; in many respects they consider that they belong to a higher plane than human beings. It would be too great a digression to include at this point a number of myths describing the creation, but these will be found in vol. I, chap. VI.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Mythology does not record in detail the sending down to this earth of trees and plants or of the forefathers of all other Indian tribes; but the manner in which the first Bella Coola arrived is clearly stated. Around the walls of Nusmät·a were

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 hanging a number of bird and animal cloaks, representing ravens, eagles, whales, grizzly bears, black bears, and a few others. Alquntăm asked each individual which of these cloaks he preferred to wear. One selected a raven, another an eagle, and so on. Each donned his choice from the wall and immediately became the bird or animal chosen. Alquntăm gave each man or woman one or more names, and some food in compressed form; then sent him down in avian or mammal form. Even the animals could travel through the air like birds, and each landed on the peak of a mountain in the Bella Coola country, took off his cloak, and reassumed human form. The discarded coverings floated back up to Nusmăt-a. A few individuals, instead of coming to earth in animal form, swarmed down posts which stretched between the worlds.

177 773 This myth is fervently believed by the Bella Coola. Even Christian Indians, though they readily admit the biblical creation as applied to the white race, remain convinced of the manner in which their own ancestors came into being. At the present time, though most ancient beliefs are rapidly passing away, few, if any, Bella Coola doubt this account of the creation of their forefathers. Their conviction rests not only on the religious aspect of their life, but on the sociological. A man's [551] [424] most treasured possessions are the name brought down from above by his ancestor in the beginning of time, the knowledge of the form taken by that ancestor, and information about the place where he landed. A collection of myths of this kind is given in vol. I, chap. VI. Lacking knowledge of his first ancestor's form, a Bella Coola has slight chance of becoming a [622] [554] [567] chief; such lore is the birthright of every descendant of one of these first people, and those without it are almost certain to be the offspring of slaves. The social aspects of creation myths will be described later; at this point a broad outline must suffice. Nusmăt-a, "The House of Myths," is the place in which these myths were made, and are now stored, two reasons for its importance in the eyes of the Bella Coola.

[775] Nusmăt-a is not only connected with the history of an indi-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

vidual's ancestors; it enters into his own future as well. When a Bella Coola dies, his spirit (I, p. 94) travels back on the path of his ancestors from generation to generation until it reaches the spot where the first one came to earth; there it assumes the bird or animal cloak used on that occasion and floats aloft to Nusmāt·a to live forever. Small wonder, therefore, that this house figures prominently in the thoughts of the Bella Coola, and that they cling tenaciously to a belief in it. 177 773 775

Knowledge of Nusmāt·a has been inherited almost entirely from the first ancestors of the Bella Coola, and only a few items of information could be gleaned concerning it. Most men think of it as an enormous replica of their own houses, but one individual, of philosophic temperament, expressed the opinion that it was without any inner partitions. His belief was based on the following incident: 772

Some years ago a young man died without apparent reason. His sorrowing father kept wondering: 772 987

"Why has my son died? Can he have committed some crime or made some mistake?"

Despondent and grief-stricken, for a whole year the man did not wash, ate little, and slept on the floor. At last he wandered away, alone, into the mountains. Night overtook him and he lay down to sleep without food. His son came to him in a dream, telling him not to lament, that he was in a better place than this world, for Ālqunātm had recalled him to Nusmāt·a to use his voice, which was unusually powerful, as a means of conveying his wishes to the other occupants of the house. Thus comforted, the father returned home in the morning, washed, and again behaved normally. My informant suggested that cross walls would be a bar to the strongest voice, and that Nusmāt·a must consequently be partitionless.

Nusmāt·a contains not only the spirits of all deceased Bella Coola, it is also the home of most of the supernatural beings. These frequently descend to visit the earth, but always return to the house above. So far as could be learnt, the only being irremovably located there is an old woman, Snuiqulpāls. The most prominent article of furniture in Nusmāt·a is Ālqunātm's seat, in the central position behind the fire. Over it is laid 772 776 * [775]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dancers. Sninia differs from most supernatural beings in having his residence in this world instead of in the land above. 776*

Among the beings dwelling in the upper region are a number of Xemxemtnum, whose function it is to ask the sun to appear every day. It travels without their assistance, but if they neglected to arouse it, darkness would prevail all day. The only knowledge of these beings is derived from information given by the first people; they have not been seen by mortals since early days and do not act as patrons for kusiut dancers. [821]

Heat and Cold are regarded by the Bella Coola as anthropomorphic beings, but their beliefs concerning them have not become crystallized, perhaps because of their non-appearance as patrons of kusiut dancers. The following story is told of the annual meeting of Heat and Cold. 776* 821 539

Every spring Cold, Snuskulut, meets Heat, Squiltlus, in some undefined locality and says:

"You will not be welcome in the place to which you are going [the earth]. I have just come from there. People like to get up on cool mornings to start work, they won't pay any attention to you."

But Squiltlus replies: "No. They will welcome me. Everyone prefers to spend a few extra minutes in bed in the mornings. It is pleasant to do so when it is warm, hence I shall be welcome in spite of the eagerness of mankind for work."

In spite of its apparent definiteness, this account is regarded merely as a story, and it is doubtful if any historical accuracy is attached to it. The Bella Coola laugh when it is told, and the irony of the conversation is not lost on them.

S'pi', the Cold Wind, is another anthropomorphized being belonging to the realm of stories rather than to that of everyday life and profound belief. His wife is Alala, and their child is Ice. On a cold morning, if a Bella Coola finds ice on liquid left in a bucket or other container, he warms it at a fire until he can lift off the sheet, and throws it out of the door, saying as he does so: "Alalas--,[a] your child has become cold." 776* 821

Both the North Wind and his wife, uxumun-i, whose home [773]

[a] The vocative form of this word.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 is in the upper Bella Coola valley near Firvale, cause cold
● 773 breezes by blowing them through their anuses. utarwan-i es-[821] pecially is a prominent figure in mythology (I, p. 670), but she has not appeared for many generations and her actions belong to legend rather than to either religion or social practices. It is said that she has four sons who once wanted to break a large number of grass stalks. Finding it difficult to do so on account of their toughness, they asked their mother to freeze them; she did this and destroyed every other plant at the same time.

* 776 Another anthropomorphic being is Sxē'lāil, the super-821 natural South Wind of winter who brings storm and snow.
177 The Carriers affirm that every icicle which grows down until its end is in the snow in his walking-stick, and that to break [731] one causes famine. Some Bella Coola have adopted this belief and carefully refrain from destroying such icicles.

* 776 Supernatural beings experience the same difficulty as mortals in reckoning the passage of time. A number of calendrical experts live in the land above, whose duty it is to record both months and years. They are called Ālmunskālluaiyais or [575] Ālmunskitlum. They have been seen occasionally, and are shown, as masked figures, at nsaak (I, p. 180), but not at kusiut dances. Two of these beings always appear, and they argue about their observations after the fashion of humans.

Another denizen of Nuxmāt-a of slight importance in the social life of the Bella Coola is Xemxemālstis, a friend and [575] associate of Ālquntām. He acts as patron of kusiut dancers, and in this manner is brought to the notice of mortals. In the land above his function is to cherish Tlāqmā-ks, a being resembling a diminutive man, created by Ālquntām as a child to all supernatural beings. Xemxemālstis is its guardian or nurse; and for safety he usually keeps his charge in the far distant upper land above Nuxmāt-a, where Ālquntām frequently visits [777] the two. In some mysterious manner, Tlāqmā-ks has been known to reach this earth, giving good fortune to the lucky finder. He is in many cases spoken of as "The Cherished

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776*

the rescue of Lewumewumiale they saw him being carried downstream to a salmon-weir about three hundred yards below. The trap was raised at once, but it was too late; the rash fisherman was dead. No one could give a name to the supernatural being who had caused his death; it was merely one of those dwelling under the river. [539] [761]

Whales, too, are sometimes observed in the rivers, but though they appear to resemble those of the ocean they are really their supernatural prototypes. [825]

These human-like dwellers beneath the water can, as in this case, cause death, but they are usually regarded as uncanny rather than dangerous. But there is one undersea being whom the Bella Coola regard with unmixed awe; he is Ẉmaqme (see Plate 10), lord of the supernatural ones beneath the ocean, as Alqantém is lord of those dwelling above. He lives in an enormous house under the sea wherein the fish, the sea-mammals, and the sea-plants have their home. The Bella Coola believe that these beings can take human form at will,* and assume that their behaviour in Ẉmaqme's dwelling corresponds to that of human beings in the house of an earthly chief. In the beginning of time, when men were more powerful than in recent years, this house sometimes rose to the surface of the water and adventurous Bella Coola entered it on various occasions, leaving to their descendants tales of the wonders it contained. These accounts have become family myths and are described with others of similar type in Chap. vi, vol. I. Records of this kind vary greatly in detail; in fact, few agree more than in broad outline. Sometimes it is stated that denizens of the sea appear in Ẉmaqme's house in the flesh; other myths describe paintings of sea creatures around the walls and the manner in which these are brought to life by Ẉmaqme. Irrespective of the exact details, it is clear that he is chief of the undersea beings who serve him and hunt for him, the black-fish being especially proficient in this respect. Ẉmaqme resents any slight to his protégés and punishes any mortal who is unkind to them.

773 776* [24] [184]

*Bella Coola concepts concerning the transformability of men and animals will be described in the next section of this chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

including the dreaded point, Meestche Nose, in human form. As each came in, water swirled in and the canoe was tossed as if in a whirlpool; if it had capsized the occupants would have been devoured, but on each occasion one of the hunters threw a morsel of false hellebore on the surface, which stilled the waves. At last Sqmoqwe and his friends admitted defeat, granted the four fishermen the powers of shamans, and gave them certain prerogatives. 539 776 *

Though Sqmoqwe is usually unkind to mortals, and is correspondingly feared, instances are known in which he has bestowed shamanistic powers for no apparent reason. The Bella Coola say that the Bella Bella know more about Sqmoqwe than they do, since he is essentially an ocean-being and the Bella Bella are ocean people. It is possible that the Bella Coola concepts of this supernatural personage are entirely of Bella Bella origin. This supposition is strengthened by the fact that Sqmoqwe seldom appears in connection with the kwiatl society, but frequently with the nuxalk society, many of the rites of which came from Bella Bella. [756] 177 776 * [575]

Since human beings can travel on the sea only by means of canoes, it is not surprising that the Bella Coola think of supernatural beings as doing likewise. Their beliefs include at least three huge canoes, manned by supernatural beings. The most important is that of Nuklymm,* the name of its captain, whose crew consists of a number of supernatural birds and the hermaphrodite. Every year they come from the lands of the salmon and the berries, in the far west beyond the sea, and bear these to the coast of British Columbia. This belief, which runs counter to the conviction that Alquntám caused the animals and plants to grow, is merely one of the many inconsistencies of Bella Coola theology. Nuklymm comes every autumn on his way to attend the gathering of the supernatural beings in the land above, and his arrival in the Bella Coola River marks the commencement of the kwiatl dances. He is one of the most important of kwiatl patrons and his powers and functions are described in the chapter devoted to that 773 ● 776 * [575]

*Cf. Boas, p. 66.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

subject. He does not often appear to mankind, though every Bella Coola knows of his existence.

Another supernatural craft is that of Winwina.[17] It, too, brings salmon and berries from their home in the extreme west. Knowledge of this canoe is limited to certain families who own stories connected with it, and it likewise serves as patron for kusiut dancers. Although both Noākynum and Winwina can easily destroy human beings, they usually pay no attention to them, and have even been known to bestow supernatural power. Winwina will be described in greater detail in connection with kusiut dances.

The third canoe is termed Winās di Sā-lldjo-ts, "The War-Party of the Tide," or Winās di Ṡala, "The War-Party of the Ocean." Its home is among small islands in the ocean. It is a large canoe, manned by invisible submarine beings, who are able to drive it at tremendous speed wherever they wish. The members of the crew are not in themselves dangerous, but the craft is greatly feared because it always transports Sxle-xf'. This supernatural creature is about the size of a seal, brown in colour, and of jelly-like substance; it lies in the boat immediately aft of the place from which water is bailed and constantly rolls to and fro, like an animated mass of repulsive jelly. Poison is constantly spreading from Sxle-xf', and anyone placed in the canoe soon becomes weak, begins to shake like Sxle-xf', and presently dies. This canoe is a source of danger to those with whom it may come in contact, and an even greater peril indirectly. The poison emanating from Sxle-xf' kills clams and mussels in the vicinity and renders them unfit for food. In some cases they die at once, with open shells, and anyone finding them knows what has happened and does not eat them, but in other cases they live for a considerable period though saturated with the venom. If anyone eats these shellfish, he becomes flabby and jelly-like, and soon dies, unless a powerful shaman can conquer the poison. Sometimes when a party is encamped on the shore human wearer belongs to a sphere differing from that of supernatural animals and is dangerous to them. Consequently, if worn clothing be thrown on a fire it repels unpleasant visitors. Other powerful protections are false hellebore, and smoked salmon roe. A wise hunter always carries these and if he sees a dangerous creature such as a snuuq, he chews the two together and spits them towards the peril. Needless to say, if a kindly animal is seen, the hunter does not drive it away by these methods. Why false hellebore should be so effective is a matter of wonder to the Bella Coola themselves, for as a rule it is the human essence attached to objects which gives them their strength over the supernatural. Thus the most powerful of all charms are pads that have been used by women during their menses. If a woman travels on the ocean she is careful to carry some of them with her ready to repel any danger from the supernatural water beings.[10]

[17] Cf. Boas, p. 38.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776* 789 [824] [824] [841]

The manner in which the Bella Coola regard mythical animals and other evidences of the supernatural is illustrated by the following practice. Hunters always want to know the direction of the wind, and when the breeze is too slight to be discernible they blow upwards a small amount of eagle down, which is so light that the faintest breath of air will bear it down wind. What the logical white man considers a natural phenomenon, appears to the Bella Coola as miraculous; eagle down, stripped from the dead bird by human hands and stored for some time within a house, has become so humanized that it can conquer supernatural powers to indicate the direction of the wind.

776* 789 821 [224]

The mythical monsters already described are not the only animals regarded as supernatural by the Bella Coola. They believe that in the beginning Alquntam created men and beasts at the same time and in the same place, giving the former the greater share of power, but not exiling the latter to a different plane of existence. In those early days, the semi-supernatural

776* 825 773

[10] This matter will be described more fully in connection with Magic; see vol. I, chap. xx.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 forefathers of the Bella Coola had the ability to talk with 825 animals and birds. The men of today, who realize that such [773] intercourse is not now possible, assume that they have degenerated from the golden age of their first ancestors. On the other hand, they see no reason to believe that beasts have undergone a similar change, and take it for granted that they have continued in the supernatural, or semi-supernatural state in which they were created by Ăłquntăm. It is true that man is stronger than most animals, but that does not affect the attitude with which the latter are regarded, for supernatural and powerful are not synonymous terms. Ăłquntăm decreed that they should serve as food for mankind, and they have since obeyed his command, but the Bella Coola do not consider themselves undisputed lords of creation. They fear snusx, snuuq, and other creatures of great power, but they know how to avoid them; similarly, deer and mountain goats fear men, but they are not entirely defenceless, because their speed and agility give them advantages corresponding to those of men in combat with beasts stronger than themselves. All living creatures use the weapons with which they are equipped. For example, when a mountain goat eludes a hunter by scaling a precipice too steep for its pursuer, the latter considers it has escaped through supernatural climbing ability; whereas the goat has merely used the power granted by Ăłquntăm. Like-[789] wise, when a snusx or a snuuq is outwitted by the use of soiled clothing or smoked salmon roe, the means, unnatural to it, are natural to the human being employing them. Men and animals alike regard each other's weapons as supernatural.

In consequence of these beliefs, the attitude of the Bella Coola towards animals is fundamentally different from that of white men. They regard them as possessing human mentality, and even the ability to assume human form if they so desire. In fact, they believe that animals merely appear to them in the shape of beasts, but can change to human, or other form and behave accordingly whenever they wish to do [756] so. The degeneration of mankind has made it impossible for

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

men to see these transformed beings habitually, but even now, 776* or at any rate until a few years ago, shamans were able to lift 825 the intervening veil. From accounts given by those who have had such experience, the Bella Coola believe that Ałquntäm [756] gave to birds and animals, as well as to humans, the boon of [773] fire, and it is only the unworthiness of men that makes them unable to see the smoke rising from the houses of different creatures. In former times, fortunate hunters were able to do so, and consequently had phenomenal success. The smoke that ascends from the fires of different animals corresponds in colour to that of its owner; a mountain goat's is white, a beaver's, black, a squirrel's, red, a wolf's, gray, and so on.
When a goat stamps the earth on a mountain, it rings hollow, [823] as indeed it is to those animals, for their home is within; and when a hunter loses his quarry entirely, it is because the latter has entered its house. Shamans are sometimes able to hear [756] the gatherings of animals under the peaks. Like human beings, they dance to the accompaniment of music, and in all respects behave like them. They have their times of joy and sorrow, of success and failure. When ill they are cured by their own shamans, grizzly bear, sminq, and wolverine; these three also dance to welcome the dead. All animals and birds are like brothers, able to converse with each other and living harmoniously together in that other part of their life which only shamans have seen. Porcupine is the oldest, and a hunter [224] always tries to kill one before passing to more important prey.
The animals know about the actions of human beings and [784] show their aversion to certain habits by refusing to allow themselves to be seen by anyone practising them. For example, they do not like people to drink water in which dog salmon [224] have been soaked, and no hunter would dream of partaking of that food. Bella Coola mythology is full of accounts of human [773] beings who, with supernatural aid, were able to penetrate to [538] the homes of animals. Tales of this type would be unintelligible without understanding the attitude of the people to the animal and bird kingdoms.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

424 Before leaving the subject of supernatural animals, a word must be said concerning the attitude of the Bella Coola to 773 those in whose forms their first ancestors came to earth. If, 825 for example, a man's first ancestor descended as a raven, this knowledge is a valuable possession of himself and his family. [556] Indeed, the most treasured possessions of a Bella Coola are not the material objects collected by him through life, but the intangible rights wrapped up in his ancestral history. These are referred to under four names:

(1) Smaiusta, "Preserved Story"; the myth describing the coming to earth of a man's first ancestors in the beginning of time.

(2) Kəlelta, "What Was Sent Down"; the names and other possessions given by Ālquntām to a man's first ancestors in the beginning of time.

(3) Tsāmātl, "Whence We Came"; the place to which a man's first ancestors came in the beginning of time, and the one from which they have since spread.

(4) Q̓watlunta.

Various smaiusta are recorded in vol. I, chap. VI, and the second and third terms are really part of the first, although to the Bella Coola they are psychologically distinct. Q̓watlunta is the word used for both the birds or animals chosen as cloaks by the first settlers, and also for creatures with which the early people came in contact. The nearest interpretation appears to be, "Crest." When a Bella Coola whose first an- 424 cestor came to earth as a raven portrays that bird, it serves as 773 a visible mark of his intangible possession. In former days, 825 if a man carved on stone so that his work and his name would never be forgotten, it was a q̓watlnekam, a constant reminder 211 of his greatness to generations then unborn. A q̓watlunta, therefore, combines the concept of memorial with that of crest, so that Bella Coola speak of the white man's memorials as q̓watlunta. In brief, a man regards the form assumed by his ancestor when coming to this earth as an emblem of the ancient history and fame of his family. It is a matter connected with the past, a matter of the mind, a source of pride to him to have such a possession, but a matter that does not affect his daily life. 211 424 773

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

So far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola crests consist of the following birds and animals: raven, bald eagle, grizzly bear, black bear, wolf, whale, blackfish, merganser, loon, skāmtsk, possibly deer, and the mythical double-headed snake, susiutl. To these must be added the sun, because some of the original people came to earth in human form by sliding down his eye-lashes, the sun-beams; and nultnikta, the posts which stretched from earth to the land above, down which a number of the first ancestors of mankind swarmed in human form. The Bella Coola believe that these posts are particularly common memorials among the tribes of the outer coast. According to some accounts it was these posts which supported the first sky until it fell. 825 [776] * [772] [829] [772]

A crest is connected almost exclusively with the distant past. A Bella Coola whose ancestor came to earth as a raven pays no attention to the ravens of the present time. The matter was approached from every possible angle and not the slightest sign of respect toward living specimens of a man's crest could be noticed. A query as to whether or not a man refrained from eating his crest was regarded as highly humorous. Nor is there any trace of fellowship between unrelated families even if they happen to have the same crest. The subject was broached repeatedly, until at last one informant smiled broadly and said: 424 779 825

"I know now what you want to find out, I can tell you all about it."

He recounted how the Kitkatla are, in his opinion, stupid enough to regard as brothers all those who have the same animal story even if they are members of different tribes. He said that when he was a young man at Victoria, where Indians from all parts of the coast used to meet, a Kitkatla had once asked him what was his animal. He was puzzled, but as the [648]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 nearest answer to the question replied that his crest was the 779 Raven. The Kitkatla was a Raven man, too, and to the 825 narrator's surprise, treated him as a brother for the rest of his stay in Victoria. He shook with laughter as he recalled the experience, and added that though he was quite willing to accept favours of this kind he would never dream of returning them. It can be stated unhesitatingly that the Bella Coola have no totemic beliefs concerning their crests. There is not [582] the slightest trace of respect towards the animal, nor yet of exogamy.

211 Although crests are not objects of religious veneration, yet 424 they have some importance in the realm of social life. The ● 773 portrayal of one serves to indicate ownership of an ancestral myth describing that particular bird or animal. A wealthy 825 chief is proud to display his crest on a totem-pole, or as a painting on the front wall of his house. Anyone seeing such a [532] design is impressed with the glories of the family history of [556] the owner, to the latter's gratification. A living specimen of [304] the bird or animal is treated with no respect, but its delineation is a memento of family history. For that reason a man is often tattooed[22] with his crest, that derived from his father's first ancestor on the right breast, that from his mother, on the left; and the owner of a canoe often carves his crest on its bow. After the death of a chief a memorial-post is erected near his grave, decorated with a painting or carving of one or more crests to remind observers not only of the deceased, but of his 000 family history, his most treasured possession. It is said, half

[22] It is said that tattooing was formerly customary not only among all the coastal [171] tribes but also the Carriers. Both Bella Coola men and women decorated them-
[184] selves in this way, but the custom was not universal, and is said never to have been common. It is believed that Haida chiefs tattooed themselves in connection with potlatches; in Bella Coola this was not the case although the operation was performed within the back-room of the patient's house. Two methods were employed. The first was by puncturing the skin with a needle smeared with colouring material; the second and less common, by passing a string coated with the substance beneath [386] the skin. The dye was obtained from river stones which were baked for a long time and then ground into a powder. This keeps indefinitely and can be made ready for use by mixing with water. As far as could be learnt, any skilled craftsman might perform the operation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said, half jocularly, that a man grows to resemble his ancestral cloak; 424 if, for example, one man's is the eagle, his hair turns white 773 early, whereas that of another with raven crest long preserves its blackness. More definite, is the use as a signal for attack, of 825 a whistle imitating the cry of the leader's bird or animal. [726] Finally, when a man whose crest is the raven hears one of these birds calling, he cries out:

"Hello, q̣watlłntao [the vocative form], it is as you say."

This custom is probably due to a belief in the ability of ravens to bear news.

On the whole the attitude of the Bella Coola towards living examples of their crests does not differ from that of mingled respect and superiority with which they regard other birds and animals.

THE RAVEN

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning Raven differ so 773 fundamentally from those respecting other birds and animals, 776* that the subject must be treated separately. In the beginning 825 of time, when Ałquntām sent down the ancestors of the Bella Coola to this earth, he despatched Raven to be their guide and teacher. For this purpose Raven was given greater power than that granted to any other animal. He came to earth in avian form, then changed to a man, but his cloak did not float back to the land above as did those of the other first-comers. Instead, it remained in the world below where he could resume it at will. Ałquntām had instructed him to travel to all parts of the world, meaning the coast of British Columbia, in order to study the arts and crafts of the inhabitants and bring back to Bella Coola those which seemed desirable. On these explorations he used to assume raven form and set off in his canoe, Tobuxł, which travelled without visible motive power at phenomenal speed. Owing to the power that Ałquntām had given him, he could talk to the trees and the mountains, the birds, the animals, and the insects, as well as to the human beings he encountered on the coast.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

● 773 Raven, perhaps made conceited by this power, did not
* 776 always use it for good purposes. He learnt many new inven-
825 tions which he taught to the Bella Coola, but sometimes he [538] indulged in adventures of an obscene nature. In fact, he was often too "smart." The Bella Coola relate many tales concerning his exploits. These are all mere stories, such as can be told by anyone, and they fall into two classes. One comprises humorous anecdotes, describing how Raven tried to show off, to outwit other birds and animals, and his consequent discomfiture. These belong to the realm of mythology and are recorded in vol. II, chap. v. In addition, there are stories describing the inventions and boons obtained by Raven; these are given in detail here as the only satisfactory means of illustrating the attitude of the Bella Coola towards Raven.

The first Raven, to whom Ałquntām granted such power, is not regarded as a bird, but essentially as a superman, with the kindly characteristics of a human being, and the weakness of a conceited individual who is always trying to display his prowess. The ordinary word used for a raven is qwax, but [552] this first Raven is properly referred to by his titles as chief, Nowakila; Sānuximāxots, "The Light-Bringer"; Kitałxamxwis, "The Wise One"; Nu'oxwałłamnaix, "The Widener";[24] Qunqwinum uldidā sxem, "The Unlooser of Light";[25] Qax·āxwsila, Qwai·lils, and Qpwi. The Bella Coola do not explain what happened to this first Nowakila; he appears to have dropped out of existence, and his power has not been transmitted to his descendants, the ravens of today. They are regarded as birds, with but the slightest trace of their ancestor's greatness. The [829] Bella Coola know of the beliefs of the Kitkatla concerning Raven, and say that in the north he is esteemed only a little less than the supreme deity himself. But in Bella Coola the exploits of Raven are always considered to be due to the power given him by Ałquntām, whose assistant he was, although he delighted to show his own prowess by outwitting his maker.

[24] Because he is supposed to have widened rivers for several of the first settlers.
[25] Owing to the manner in which Raven is supposed to have unveiled the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 of a woman, Sekakmān·a, who dwelt with her mother, a Gull. After a 825 meal, Raven lied to his hostess by telling her of the countless herring that lived at Kimsquit, and how happy he could make some of her relatives by taking them home with him. Sekakmān·a doubted the story and told one of her brothers to investigate Raven's canoe because, if the fish were plentiful at his home, some of the scales would certainly be in his craft. The herring youth looked inside the canoe, and was deceived by Raven's subterfuge. On receiving a favourable report, Sekakmān·a willingly gave Raven a large box filled with herring. Elated at his victory, Raven set out for home and threw his spoil into the water as he neared the beach at Kimsquit. The Kimsquit people knew of Raven's search for herring, and did not at first believe him when he reported his success, but the fish increased so rapidly that his claim was vindicated.

The herring so obtained were the progenitors of all that now live in the waters adjacent to Kimsquit.

262 One of the foods regarded by the Bella Coola as a luxury
824 is a foam-like whip prepared by beating up dried buffalo berries 539 in water. Raven is given the credit for introducing this to Bella Coola.

Long, long ago, Sluxlekwaily, a mountain in the Carrier country above Burnt Ridge, was a chief, possessing human characteristics. Buffalo berries flourished on his slopes, and he wanted to keep these for food for his guests. On one occasion he invited all the animals and birds, including Raven, to a feast and dance. His house was the interior of the mountain, and when all had assembled he carefully closed every opening so that none of the berries could escape. Raven determined to obtain some of this food for the Bella Coola, and accordingly used his power to force one of the guests to go outside. As soon as a door was opened to let him out, Raven seized some of the whip and flew away, scattering drops of it in his flight. Berries grew wherever the drops fell, and since that time everybody has been able to make this luxury. Sluxlekwaily was very angry, but could do nothing.

●773 Though Alquntām created the world, he did not make it perfect nor equip it with many of the conveniences possessed by men of the present generation. Raven, endowed both with imagination and tremendous power, was always seeking ways of improving conditions. In the beginning of time there were no mirrors, and if a man wanted to paint his face, or decorate [778] himself for a dance, he was forced to rely on the assistance of [823]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

a friend. Raven determined to supply this want for the benefit of the Kimsquit people. Accordingly he used a natural stone depression near the village as his chamber-pot, and the liquid reflected faces clearly. Ever since, any liquid, even rain-water, placed in that depression acts as a reflector. The place is called Ânilxsaix, "Where People Go," and it has been used as a mirror by the Kimsquit people and their guests for many generations. In this way, the renown of Raven spread to foreigners visiting Kimsquit. Another survival of this construction is the name Nusqalät·a, "Chamber-Pot," commonly applied as a nickname to the small daughters of Kimsquit chiefs. 773 778 823 [551]

One of Raven's inventions was the making of nettle-fibre olachen nets, an art which he taught spiders as well as men. In the beginning of time, Raven told two men to make a net according to a pattern which he showed them, and gave them some fibre. It was not sufficient, and when the workers asked for more, Raven told them to draw it from their own intestines. This they did, and ever since spiders have had the same ability. Another story describes how Raven saw an olachen net being made in one of the distant villages which he visited during his travels, learnt the details of its manufacture, and taught the Bella Coola on his return home. 773 [227] [825]

Many of Raven's exploits are well known, although not embodied in elaborate myths. For example, it is believed that in the beginning of time the ocean was to the east of Bella Coola and the land to the west. Drownings were frequent, so Raven altered the relative positions of land and sea. Most ocean dwellers followed the sea to its new home, but a number of mussels remained near their human friends. They are still to be found in the upper valley of Bella Coola River. These shell-fish, which are probably freshwater mussels, are said to be identical with those of the ocean, and are called by the same name. This is always mentioned as proof of the former presence of salt water in the upper Bella Coola valley. The occurrence of the shell-fish may be the origin of this theory. It might also be mentioned that the Bella Coola believe that a few years 773 823 [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 ago the tide came further up the rivers than at present and did 823 not recede so far. This statement was made by an intelligent old man who said that the change had taken place during his own life-time.

773 One of Raven's most important alterations to Ālquntām's 833 intentions was with regard to the sexual act.

> In the beginning of time, the organs of women were on the forehead, those of men on the palm of the hand, and intercourse was effected by a man rubbing his hand across a woman's brow. Raven feared that children would not result from this practice and accordingly altered the organs of both sexes to their present positions. In order to teach mankind the sexual act he then chose a woman and held intercourse with her, telling her that if the practice were carried out secretly and vigorously a child would be born. And nine months later the woman gave birth to an infant. Raven told the first inhabitants of the world that he wished them to have issue; they consequently held intercourse frequently and begat many children until their descendants filled the Bella Coola valley.

The attitude of the Bella Coola towards this story is identical with their beliefs concerning Raven as the cause of death.

"Yes," they say, as they repeat the above story in answer to a question, "Raven taught our ancestors how to have children."

773 One side of their nature implicitly believes any story handed [183] down from the distant past, but few today are sufficiently naïve actually to credit it. The more sophisticated frankly disbelieve, or pretend to do so. Doubt also exists with regard to [829] Raven as originator of linguistic differences. The Bella Coola state that Ālquntām intended only one language for the whole world, but Raven thought that this would lead to trouble and used his power to teach the ancestors of every tribe their special speech.

Many inventions and beliefs are attributed to Raven without any accompanying myth. It is said that almost all geo-
[103] graphical names are those bestowed by him on places reached in his travels. It was Raven who taught men how to bait [226] hooks on long lines to catch black cod; it was Raven who first

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

instructed people about the significance of death omens; it was Raven who showed them the use of slings; and it was Raven who constructed secluded caves and ledges to serve as meeting-places for chiefs. 773 [622] [823]

In brief, the Bella Coola regard Raven as an explorer, teacher, and inventor, whose power, obtained from Ałquntām, enabled him to construct and outwit his maker, but not to create. Much of his work was for the good of mankind, but much was evil and malicious, an aspect which belongs to mythology. Essentially human, Raven could have been included among anthropomorphic, as well as among zoomorphic beings. He differs from most of the supernatural ones in belonging entirely to the past, as his descendants have none of the first Raven's power. It is doubtful whether he still exists, but in any case he has long since ceased to take any interest in the affairs of the Bella Coola, who consider him only as a figure of mythology and ancient history. 773 776 [825]

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS OF THE VEGETABLE AND MINERAL KINGDOMS

Bella Coola beliefs concerning anthropomorphic and zoomorphic beings are relatively clear and exact; their appearance is known, their powers and functions recognized. The supernatural attributes of trees and plants are less definite. Ałquntām created the former in the beginning of time, and they were consequently able to talk and act like human beings at that distant period. Owing to the degeneration of man, mortals are no longer able to converse with trees, although the latter can still understand our remarks. In a vague way, the Bella Coola continue to think of trees as having human personalities, but so little is known of their powers, and they enter so seldom into contact or conflict with mortals, that they are practically ignored. 776 824

In an equally vague manner, Nature is regarded as a Mother, giving birth to the trees and plants. One of the kusiut dances portrays this birth of the flowers every spring (II, p. 196). [535] [575]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

761 an owl, possibly one of those which normally roost on the tree
775 behind Nusmät·a. This element of a dead person occasionally 825 communicates with a living relative, as evidenced by the fol-[539] lowing story.
[827]

A number of years ago a party of men and women camped for the night beside one of the rivers flowing into South Bentinck Arm. After supper, as they were resting by their fire, an owl kept hooting from a neighbouring tree. One of the men turned to a friend who had been making obscene remarks and, half in jest, warned him to be careful in case one of his relatives was listening. The foolish fellow looked at the owl and asked:

"Are you a relative of mine?"

There was no answer, but when he had repeated the question four times, the owl spoke:

"I am so-and-so," he said, naming the deceased grandfather of his questioner.

Consequent upon the belief that the voice of a dead person enters an owl, the bird is treated with considerable respect. It is improper to make fun of one, or to ask who it was when alive. Should a person do so, the owl answers with the interrogator's own name and he soon dies.

761 On the whole, the life does not affect the daily existence of the Bella Coola as profoundly as does the spirit. When they stop to ponder on the reason for some event, they readily admit the importance of the life with its constituent elements, but they are not always considering its activities and seeking to strengthen it. It is essentially a religious attribute, of greater moment to a man of imaginative and suggestible temperament than to one who carries on the daily routine without asking why and wherefore.

THE TALLY POST

●773 In the beginning of time, when Älquntäm sent the first 777 people down to earth, he erected in Nusmät·a posts emblazoned with the bird or animal crest taken by each to serve as a memorial, or reminder, to him of the number of individuals existing

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

below. These are termed tally posts.[11] Each remained upright as long as the individual to whom it referred was alive, but fell at his death. Since that time, whenever Alquntăm lends to a mortal sininits, the undefined power that causes life, his supernatural artisans erect in the land above a tally post for the new-born infant, marked with the bird or animal used by an ancestor. As long as this remains upright and straight, firmly fixed to the ground, its owner continues to be strong and prosperous, and has success in all his undertakings; if it becomes loose, or is crooked, he ceases to succeed. Prosperity does not depend upon the activities of an individual, but upon his supernatural possessions, spirit, tally post, and a third to be described later. If the tally post tilts far from the perpendicular, its owner becomes ill, and can be cured only by straightening it. In some cases Alquntăm is kind enough to do this if placated by prayer and ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), and in olden days, shamans were occasionally able to penetrate to the land above for this purpose. Even when a post was reached, they were sometimes unable to set it upright, though they could always estimate the length of a man's life from its angle of inclination. In one of the kusiut dances, the performer pretends to have the ability to go aloft and the uninitiated are deceived by the erection of a tall ladder up which he climbs and disappears (II, p. 202). On his return, he reports the condition of the tally posts of various people. This performance serves to remind both members of the society and uninitiated of the existence of these supernatural elements, and of the dependence of individuals on them for success in life. In spite of this ritual, actual knowledge of the powers and functions of tally posts has been derived only from the first Bella Coola who, created in the land above, were acquainted with the mysteries of life and transmitted such lore to their descendants. One old man expressed the opinion [11] [illegible]. One of the names of Nusmq'a, Nusqmalnalsts, refers to these, meaning, "The Place of the Tally Posts." [illegible] and [illegible] are closely associated; sometimes the latter is pronounced [illegible], although this may be an error in recording.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 that tally posts have mentality, and suggested that it might 777 be these which attend the gathering of the supernatural beings at the winter solstice instead of an element from the human body itself.

One elderly Bella Coola, of philosophical temperament, described q̓watlnusta in terms far removed from the accounts of tally posts. According to him, every individual receives this supernatural possession at birth, and it remains with him, in close association with his body, throughout life. It stays in front of his face, invisible, yet having substance, and con-
[431] stantly shaking from side to side. If a man fails to receive a present at a potlatch, it is because his q̓watlnusta has ceased [828] to move. When stationary it is not transparent, and not only hides its owner from the donor's sight, but acts as a barrier to [756] his thoughts. The same man stated that this element can leave the body, can be seen by shamans, and that it is the one [775] which ascends at the winter solstice to Nusmät-a. At death it is believed to accompany the spirit and the life to the land above.

177 There seems no reason to doubt that the concept of tally
773 posts is an ancient belief. Nor does the application of the term q̓watlnusta to another immaterial possession of quite 777 another type destroy this probability. It must be remembered that within the last eighty years the Bella Coola have suffered not only from the tremendous upheaval caused by the coming of the white man, but have been reduced to a mere fraction of their former numerical strength by various epidemics. These factors have led to the partial forgetting of ancient beliefs, with consequent confusion. It is probable that the use of the same term for the tally post, intimately connected with an individual's life although situated in the land above, and for an invisible and intangible possession which goes in front of him, is due to this recent decay of ancient convictions. If this be true, it merely means that in former times the Bella Coola had yet another supernatural element to govern and influence their lives.

1:McIlwraith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuxlusta, wash-basin. In the land above, Alqantăm has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Alqantăm who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some state that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to listlessness of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Alqantăm, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed ăxlusam, a word connected with nuxlusta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.[a]

[a] This may be a mere rationalization.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 Shamans achieve much of their success through their ability 777 to put their wash-basins, both tangible (I, p. 560) and imma-
823 terial, in tune with Ālqantăm's in the land above. One method
956 of treating a patient is by washing, with the idea that the water [955] and vessel used have potency through association with those in the upper world. It is believed that in the distant past, shamans were even able to carry their patients to the land above and wash them in Ālqantăm's own basin. Such feats [551] are perpetuated in certain shamans' names, such as Ālpālqe-lestaix.

773 It may be said in conclusion that although the Bella Coola
777 have indefinite ideas concerning the exact form and functions of this last element, there is a firm belief that an individual's fortune in life depends upon the activity of spirit, tally post, and wash-basin. With regard to supernatural elements as a whole, it is clear that in spite of somewhat conflicting beliefs concerning the precise functions of each, they play an important part in the life of every Bella Coola.

Means of Propitiation

782 Some of the methods employed by the Bella Coola to gain the favour of the supernatural have already been mentioned, but the subject is sufficiently important to warrant a separate section. In view of the omnipresence of supernatural beings and powers, and their influence on the lives of mortals, it is not surprising that the propitiation of them is a vital factor in human life. The chief means are prayer, sacrifice, and the observance of ceremonial chastity.

PRAYER

[776] Prayers are regularly addressed to Ālqantăm who, in this connection, is known as Mănakaiz or Tăiă, both meaning, "Father." A wise man or woman desiring success in hunting, in love affairs, in the acquisition of wealth, or in any activity whatsoever, is accustomed to ask Mănakaiz to grant his desire. No ritual is required. The petitioner merely seeks a lonely

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the point between Labouchere Channel and Bentinck Arm, there is danger from treacherous currents, so, when a shaman passes either of these places, he lays some food on the water and puffs eagle down into the air as he asks for help. If no shaman is in the canoe, this is done by the captain. 782 [193] 502 756

The being to whom offerings are most commonly made is Thtcăplilăn-a, the supernatural woman who cures the sick and gives power to shamans. Whenever a hunter kills an edible animal in the forest, he cuts off four pieces of flesh and throws them into his fire to gain her goodwill. Long, long ago, Thtcăplilăn-a appeared to a hunter, seized some of his quarry, and told him of her wishes with regard to presents; these have since been obeyed by wise people. Similarly, the relatives of a man absent in the mountains or at sea throw scraps of food on the fire and ask the protection of Thtcăplilăn-a for the one in danger. In this case, it is clear that objects thrown into flames are received and appreciated by Thtcăplilăn-a. 796 [224] [773]

Mnakais, although usually propitiated by prayer, is also given presents. Frequently, when a man is praying, he accompanies his words by blowing up into the air small particles of eagle down. Prayers in connection with the departure of war or hunting expeditions have already been mentioned, but before starting on any journey by canoe, the captain is careful to pray and to throw upon the water four pieces of red, and four of yellow cedar-bark. The blowing upwards of eagle down is a common accompaniment to all kinds of prayers, but, if none is available, cedar-bark can be used equally satisfactorily. If possible, this is cast on the surface of water, otherwise into a fire, as a request is being made. The Bella Coola do not believe that such presents are actually used and considered valuable by Mnakais, but they emphasize and accompany the vocal prayer, and demonstrate the petitioner's sincerity. 776 [484] [824] [825]

Ghosts, on the other hand, depend almost entirely on presents given them by mortals, since food is not abundant in the land below. The relatives of a dead person always throw 775 782

b McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The kwiar dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Hyaxwiw is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the more force engendered in a man's body by lengthy absti-

In McDowell, E.-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

831 once was enough to kill an enemy, as if his spirit had been 785 driven from his body by a sudden start. Even in recent times it is said that individuals who have observed ceremonial chas-[993] tity have been able to perform miraculous feats. A few years [984] ago a Bella Bella man lost two sons and was trying to get enough money to buy a tombstone for them. With this in view, he observed chastity for almost a year. Then he went seal hunting, and had killed a large number of the animals when, standing up in his boat, the sail blew against him so that he was thrown overboard. But he was so strong that he simply walked on the surface of the water and re-entered his [984] boat, none the worse for his mishap. The men who cited this instance stated that a number of Bella Bella had seen the occurrence and could vouch for it.

Ceremonial chastity is not a matter about which the Bella [124] Coola are willing to talk. It concerns both their religious and family life, in neither of which are strangers welcome. But when an investigator becomes on friendly terms, and gains some understanding of the inner lives of the people, he begins to realize its importance. Ceremonial chastity is not only [985] potent in itself, but it is also the favourite means by which a man can cleanse himself of the impurities of human existence so that he finds favour with the supernatural.

1:McDerwith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

CHAPTER III

SOCIAL ORGANIZATION

Ancestral Family—The Village Community—The Family—Kinship Terms—Slaves

As in other communities, the social, religious, and economic aspects of Bella Coola life are interdependent, but there is an added complexity in the influence of mythological concepts. This not only complicates investigation in the field, but it also renders a logical description of their customs difficult. Some reference to practices recorded in detail in later chapters is unavoidable. 128 112

In many communities, ethnologists have been able to begin with the social organization of the people. Among the Bella Coola, this is impossible, since their religious beliefs colour every aspect of their life, and these must be understood by anyone who wishes to comprehend their culture as a whole. In this chapter, too, it is necessary to commence with a description of that aspect of mythology which serves as the cohesive bond to one of the social units, the ancestral family.

Ancestral Family

As recorded in the last chapter, it is believed that in the beginning of time Alquntám created the first men and women to be created in his house above and sent them down to populate the earth. They came in groups of two, three, four, or more, brothers and sisters, or more rarely men and wife, to different parts of the Bella Coola valley. They brought with them tools, houses, clothing, even sustenance in the shape of fish and animals. More important, from the point of view of social organization, they brought with them names and ceremonial prerogatives. In fact, the Bella Coola believe that their culture was created by Alquntám in the distant past, and has not been the result of slow growth. It is true that there 995 [124]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 829 have been many changes. Raven, the culture hero, taught the early settlers many useful arts, and they were themselves so powerful that they were able to create ceremonial and other prerogatives in a manner impossible to their descendants. Moreover, the people realize that they have been influenced by neighbouring tribes since that time, but in spite of these additions, they believe that their life is patterned on that of their earliest forbears.

[181] As a group, the Bella Coola are philosophers. They demand a reason for everything, though once a reason has been given, and accepted, they think no more about the matter. The elaboration of Bella Coola mythology may be due in part to their desire to explain their social organization; but without question these myths, now accepted as facts, have had a great influence on the lives of the people. In fact the social structure of the tribe has tended to conform to the myths.

621 773 It is believed that each group of first people formed a village community, and pre-empted hunting-grounds in the vicinity. These usually consisted of small valleys opening from the main [361] Bella Coola River, tracts which could thus be easily defined. [226] Each group also took possession of a suitable part of the river for a salmon-weir, or, if located on the coast, a convenient place for an ocean fish-trap. In course of time the first people married, of necessity with members of other villages. According [541] to mythology, and equally according to modern practice, the women usually moved to the villages of their husbands. When 773 a child was born, it naturally grew up to share in the hunting-grounds of its father's village. Moreover, the father was able to bestow on his child various ceremonial dances; the concepts of some he had brought with him from above, others he had formulated on this earth. It is assumed that all the first people were mighty chiefs, able to initiate rites in a way that few modern men have been able to equal. But the mothers of these children, the first born on this earth, did not surrender the privileges of their own villages at marriage. Consequently, their children were of almost as much interest to the brothers and other relatives of their mothers as to their fathers. It was taken as a matter of course that a child had full rights in the village of his mother, and from her, as from her relatives, he likewise received various prerogatives. Thus each child was a member of a bilateral social group. From actual residence in his father's village he tended to be more intimately associated with him and his brothers than with his mother's relatives, but this did not prevent him from visiting at the home of the latter, where he was received as a member of that village. Through the bestowal of prerogatives by his mother and the members of her family, his relationship with them was further emphasized. Such a child was, in fact, a full member of two groups. 773

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When the members of the second generation married and begot children, each of these could have been a member of four groups; that of his father's father, father's mother, mother's father, and mother's mother. The Bella Coola believe that there were approximately forty-five groups of first settlers, corresponding to the forty-five towns, and it is obvious that if the system of intermarriage had continued for a few generations, a man would have been a member of each of these first groups. They assume that their first ancestors came to this earth far more than a few generations ago, and yet at the present time no one claims to be a descendant of more than eight of these first groups, and most claim descent from only two or three. In part this can be explained by forgetfulness, though a Bella Coola would regard this statement as heresy. The residence of a man in the village of his father has tended to emphasize relationship with the ancestral group that first populated that village, and there is no doubt that actual relationship, through the mother, with the members of other groups must in many cases have been forgotten in the course of generations. The term ancestral family, mumuuts, is used in this monograph to designate those individuals who believe themselves to be descended from one of the first groups that populated this earth. [614] [611] [614] [104]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 773 A man may claim descent from as many as eight of these groups, that is, he may be a member of eight ancestral families. Some restrictive means must have been employed to limit the choice of marriage partners, otherwise a man's membership in ancestral families would have been far greater than it is. The explanation lies in the high regard with which the members of an ancestral family esteem the prerogatives they have received from their forbears. With the marriage of the first women, their brothers were called upon to share their rights, both practical in regard to hunting territory, and ceremonial with regard to dance prerogatives, with their sisters' children. Bella Coola mythology contains no references to unwillingness on the part of the first men to do this; in fact, their own children benefited equally from the marriages of their fathers with other women. But, say the Bella Coola, after these first marriages, necessarily exogamic, men realized that it would be foolish to allow their children to marry far afield and so diffuse valuable prerogatives. It was far wiser for a man to seek as future son-in-law a youth belonging to the same ancestral family as himself or his wife. Then any resultant children would come into this world provided by both parents with common relatives, so that the child would be, as they express it, "Held close and supported by a close circle of ancestors."

582 614 [773] Bella Coola logic does not explain how marriages could have been arranged in the early generations without violating the laws of incest. The endogamic principle displayed at that time, however, has been carried out until the present day, so that a man endeavours to arrange marriages for his children with members of the same ancestral family. One of the strongest Bella Coola desires is to "make good the path" for his offspring, and this can best be done when they are born amply provided with relatives of common ancestry. There is [769] no belief in the active participation of distant ancestors in the affairs of men, yet, though incapable of clear expression, the Bella Coola feel strongly that a child is born into the companionship of its deceased relatives back to the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This endogamic principle will be described in greater detail in vol. I, chap. VII, but mention of it here has been necessary to explain the composition of the ancestral family. 582 [614]

In recent years there has been a tendency for some men to marry foreign women in order that they, or their children, might obtain new prerogatives. Thus a trend towards exogamy has arisen from the same reason which is supposed to have caused endogamy. The offspring of such marriages cannot enjoy the feeling of strength and comfort that comes from the membership of both parents in the same ancestral family, but some individuals have felt that this was offset by the gain of highly desirable foreign prerogatives. It is said that this practice was initiated by a certain Potles, father of a man about sixty years old in 1923. White influence probably had nothing to do with this radical innovation, although its wide adoption has been made more easy by the establishment of peaceful conditions on the coast. [554] [177]

Strong as is the belief in a common ancestry, it is unlikely that this would have sufficed to hold together the members of the ancestral family, without some definite prerogatives. These are of two kinds: names and land. 614 554

NAMES

The fundamental principle governing Bella Coola nomenclature is that each name must have originated in connection with some event of comparative importance. It is unthinkable to apply a casual designation to a child. At a person's death his name, or names, may be transmitted to a relative, and it is proper that the owner of a name should know when, by whom, and for what reason, it was first created. Tradition affirms that, before coming to this earth, the first people were all given designations by Alquntăm; these have been carefully handed down and are still in use. One name cannot be given to two individuals; instances occur of two people having the same one, but in such cases they have different origins. One person may have several names of different kinds, each carrying 551 [768] [553] [773] [428]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

551 with it some definite prerogative of a dance or other function, 428 but all are transmissible, and at the owner's death these may fall to different relatives. A name may pass from man to woman, or vice versa, in some cases with a minor alteration. [756] The only non-inheritable appellations are those obtained by shamans as a result of their supernatural experiences.

551 Not only did each group of first settlers bring with them a 773 number of designations from above, but they also created a number on this earth and bestowed them on their children, 553 and on the children of their sisters or brothers, in whom they felt an almost parental interest. To mark the dignity of the names, all present at the ceremony of bestowal received gifts from the creator of the name, the person who called them together for the rite. The importance of the individual depended largely upon the value of the goods distributed with respect to his name, a concept which will be elaborated in the following chapter. The descendants of these first people likewise created new designations and established their dignity by distributing presents, a practice which still continues. It follows that any complete origin myth should include a large number of names, those brought down from the land above[1] and also those created by the powerful first people on this earth itself.[2] Both types of cognomen will be referred to henceforth as "ancestral names," no distinction being made between those actually brought from above and those made on earth. This is in accordance with Bella Coola usage.

553 Soon after the birth of a child his father, uncle, or other near relative,[3] either on the paternal or maternal side, calls the members of the village together to bestow a name on the infant. The one selected must be embodied in the origin myth of one or other of the parents, and must be one not then in use by any other member of the ancestral family. A relative may give the

[1] Such a name is a xnaxlic xlnaxlic, or "Petrified Name."
[2] Such a name is a xnamit-a xlnaxlic, or "Earth-Made Name."
[3] The most careful investigation failed to show that it was incumbent on any particular relative.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 553 [773] The ancestral family may, therefore, be defined as those whose ätsqtutl names are embodied in the same origin myth.

What is the stability of this group?

In consequence of the large number of names theoretically embodied in every myth, and of the necessity for validating the bestowal of any one of these by means of presents, it follows that there is always a large number of dormant names. The Bella Coola describe these as being, "In the burial ground." They are, in fact, dead. Any one of these may be resurrected by any member of the ancestral family. If a woman marries into a foreign tribe her relatives occasionally give her husband, outright, an ancestral name. In such a case that name is permanently alienated from the family to which it formerly belonged; this should happen only when the group is reduced to a few individuals, all of whom agree to the transaction. [583] But more often a woman takes as a wedding gift to her husband a name which it is understood cannot be transmitted to one of his relatives unless he has children. On the death of the childless husband, this designation reverts to his widow's ancestral family. If there are children, they cement the bond of friendship between the two families. The brother of a woman so married also bestows names on her children, as further mark of their incorporation into her ancestral family. [583] It is customary and proper, however, for the ancestral family into which a woman is married and bears children to reciprocate the compliment a few generations later, and by the marriage of one of their women to restore such names to the ancestral family to which they originally belonged. According to the Bella Coola, this practice of "return-marriage" has been the rule since the first exogamic marriages of the first people, with the result that names usually return to the patrilineal descendants of the first people to use them.

611 614 If a woman marries outside her ancestral family, her children will belong to at least two distinct ancestral groups. It is difficult to say how long an individual remembers the dif-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The converse of this process of loss is the assimilation to 553 an origin myth of names originally brought into the ancestral 178 family by a woman from abroad. Unless intercourse and 773 friendly relations were maintained by "return marriages," in a few generations no tradition would be remembered to account for the name, and this, if used at all, would be interwoven into the well-known ancestral myth. Hence a myth is not static with regard to the names embodied in it. These change from generation to generation; it is probable that elements of the story itself suffer like additions and alterations, even though the people do not consider this to be the case.

611 The Bella Coola regard the ancestral family as a social unit, 614 not only in terms of the present, but as stretching back to the first settlement of the earth. Viewed from this angle, it is in fact, though not admitted to be so by the Bella Coola, a unilateral grouping with patrilineal descent, which may, in both the most recent and most ancient generations, be marked by matrilineal descent instead. A man frequently uses prerogatives obtained through his mother, her mother, or even her mother's mother, but it is tacitly assumed that for many previous generations such rights passed in the patrilineal line. Sometimes this succession extended back to the beginning of time; in other cases, prerogatives were transmitted matrilineally for a considerable period after the settlement of the earth, before gradually becoming patrilineal.

614 It has been thus far assumed that the only prerogative 424 wrapped up in an ancestral name is a knowledge of the myth
551 in which it is embodied. But there are others. For example, several of the first inhabitants of the world are said to have erected totem-poles, each of which was displayed by its owner at the gathering when he took or himself a name. Thenceforth, the only person entitled to use that particular totem-
[532] pole design was the person with the legal right to the name in [535] question. The same principle governs all dance names; each entitles its owner to perform a certain ceremonial. Thus it is possible to enlarge the previous definition by saying that:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 extinct, are unusual; normally, the group is largely centred in one village, but with members scattered in other localities.
621. There is no central organization. It is generally recognized that such a unit belongs in the village where its first ancestors settled, and the leading chief of that village is, therefore, an important person in the family, though without status of [622] "head" of it. His advice may be appealed to in cases of dis-[553] putes concerning names, but he lacks judicial authority. Theoretically, the descendants of the elder of two first people are considered as "elder brothers and elder sisters" of those descended from a younger brother or sister; but this is nothing more than an accepted fact; it plays no part in the social life of the community.

552 In addition to human names, the origin myths include those 614 applied to dogs. The first ancestral group had dogs, and these animals had names, or were given them by their powerful 773 masters. Ever since that time their descendants can apply these designations to their own dogs. It is unnecessary to validate such names, but no two canines can be given the same one at the same time, according to the rule which governs the bestowal of human names. This matter was not investigated in detail, and the only dog's name collected was one for which [539] the origin myth is as follows:

> When Tāl·ie was first settled in the beginning of time, the houses were built in parallel rows, one above the other, up the side of a steep knoll. At the very top was a toilet-house, built over such a steep incline [514] that excrement rolled down the hillside. In consequence, one of the early chiefs living there gave to his dog the name, Nulīqumuil di munk', "Rolling excrement," which has since been preserved in the ancestral family of his descendants.

LAND

124 Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining information 423 about land tenure. The Bella Coola resent keenly the way in which their land has been occupied by white settlers without,
177 according to their standpoint, proper compensation. Questions on this subject always excited them, but every effort was made to verify the following statements.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with names, the easiest way to understand the rights of the ancestral family in land is by first considering the mythological explanation, which mirrors conditions as they existed at the coming of white men. On reaching this earth the first people are believed to have prospected for suitable settlement sites, places where salmon and olachen could be caught, and if possible, near side valleys where berries were abundant. Here they released the animals and plants which they had brought with them, on which they thenceforth subsisted, in accordance with the supreme deity's instructions. The members of the group pre-empted these areas for themselves. Waste land, far from any village was, and still is, free to anyone. A few years after the first settlements had been made, according to the myths, the supreme god sent down to Kimsquit a certain Ałquntām who allotted and marked the territory which was the property of each community; at that time a village consisted merely of a group of the first settlers. No similar myth was recounted for either Bella Coola or Tāl·io, although their concepts with regard to land are identical with those of the Kimsquit. This really gave a sacred sanction to the possession of land, an important matter to a people so religiously inclined as the Bella Coola.

The system of land tenure follows the same somewhat abstruse principles that govern the possession of names in an ancestral family. Hunting and collecting grounds appropriated by the first people, or by their immediate descendants, are the property of their offspring, the ancestral family. The Bella Coola term for such an area is sol'loam, also called, sxsnimsta, which means "Food Supply."

It will thus be seen that a hunting-area is not the property of any single individual, but belongs to a group of persons, most of whom live in a single town. The relatives of a man who intends to give a potlatch usually give him, temporarily, exclusive rights to the hunting-ground. As with names, there

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5

BB
BC
423
[622]

exactly what right the Bella Bella chief had to dispose of the land. The informant assumed that he must have been powerful enough to dictate to his followers, an unknown possibility in Bella Coola. However, the informant regards the case as typical of what would likely happen should a Bella Coola try to give away land. Out of generosity or gratitude old men have sometimes done so, but always they have forgotten someone, perhaps a mere infant, who on growing up lays claim to the sol'olam.

BC
423
614
[226]
[773]

Hunting-grounds are not the only valuable parts of the country. Even more important are stretches of river suitable for salmon-weirs. Of the same type are good places for olachen-nets, and rocks from which these fish can be caught with scoop-nets. Like hunting-grounds, these are said to have been pre-empted by the first people[1] and have passed into the ownership of the ancestral families descended from them. It is needless to repeat the gradual lapsing of rights to property of this kind in distant areas, since the principle is the same as that already described for land.

[773]
[226]

In one respect, salmon-weirs differ from hunting-areas, since the latter can be used by any number of individuals, whereas the number of salmon-traps possible at any one weir is limited. Again the mythological origin must be given to explain the customary usage. If, for example, a salmon-weir supposedly built by one of the first groups of people was fully manned in the third generation by ten individuals, it is as-

[1]Several Bella Coola myths describe how the first-comers brought with them from above stone hammers for the construction of fish-dams, and how others were provided with miniature dams which grew larger when placed in position. Mr. H. I. Smith kindly gave the writer the following account, received from an elderly Bella Coola:

Long, long ago a certain Tamakus lived with his father, the Sun, who decided to send his child to earth. He came down to Staxa, carrying a stone beneath his arm-pit, and accompanied by a Wolf. Tamakus made the stone into a pile-driver with a face sculptured upon it, and with this tool drove piles to make a fish-weir. After a while a number of human beings came paddling up the Bella Coola River. In course of time the Wolf returned above, but Tamakus remained on earth catching salmon, and teaching the people the method which was in use until the last few years.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

423 sumed that ten is the largest number of traps possible at that 614 weir. Those who have the right to that weir are the members of the ancestral family with the names of those first users. At [773] this point the logic of the Bella Coola fails to uphold the mytho-[226] logical pattern. No salmon-weir has remained in existence since the beginning of time; when one broke, owners were sometimes infants, and those who repaired the break became regarded as the rightful possessors. The system of ownership prevailing at the time of abandoning the weirs, was that indi- [428] viduals, not groups, had rights to certain sections of the weir which were willable like other personal property. In most [431] cases this right was transmitted with a name, marking the section of weir, which had to be duly validated by presents.
[428] In other cases, the intangible ownership was willed without any mark whatever.[1] Unless bequeathed in this way, disputes were frequent. Rights of this kind were never sold although [427] an owner often leased his section for a night, or longer period, receiving goods in return, and not forfeiting his ownership [431] thereby. This was particularly common when the renter was planning to give a potlatch. No case was heard of in which the right to a certain section of salmon-weir was given to a non-member of the ancestral family. Theoretically, this was possible, but practically it would be so inconvenient that it is most unlikely ever to have occurred, since the Bella Coola is [671] never such a slave to legal privileges that he fails to be guided by common sense.

226 Although individual ownership is thus recognised with [423] regard to sections of salmon-weirs and suitable places for olachen-nets, the owner is bound to share his haul. When he [577] catches a large number of fish, anyone, whether related to him [626] or not, can demand some. He cannot refuse, since to do so would brand him as selfish. The effective check on this system

[128] [1]Great difficulty was experienced in learning about the distribution of rights to sections of salmon-weirs. The evidence is conflicting, and though every effort was made to verify and check the above, there may be further regulations which were not learnt.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 621 is a more obvious social grouping than the ancestral family, though it is of the latter that a man is most proud. The member of a small, unimportant village often describes himself as a native of a neighbouring, larger one when at a distance from his home, simply as a matter of convenience.

Even before the coming of the white man, village sites were abandoned and people took up their residence with friends or relatives elsewhere. In fact, mythology contains instances of [973] such migrations at the very beginning of time. In cases of this [361] kind, memory of the earlier home has been preserved for many generations, and may perhaps be the explanation of the many villages which are described as two, and which have two names. In the early days immigrants seem always to have been welcome; they added to the numerical strength of the village, and the original inhabitants enjoyed boasting to the newcomers of their descent from the first settlers. Since any group forced to abandon their own homes naturally moved to those of relatives, there is no difficulty in understanding the process by [582] which they continued to intermarry with their new neighbours. Thus two, or even more ancestral families, inhabiting one village tended to form a closely inter-related stock. In rare instances, two unrelated ancestral families may have become inhabitants of the same village, which would unquestionably lead to intermarriage.

In most cases the endogamic tendencies already described cause the village community to be largely members of one ancestral family. In addition there are always other occu- [563] pants; strangers who have fled from their homes and sought [567] refuge among the Bella Coola; the offspring of illicit intercourse [554] with slaves; guests; foreigners, especially Carriers temporarily resident in Bella Coola; and finally slaves, without status in the community. The real inhabitants, those whose power is firmly planted in the village, are the reputed descendants of the first group of settlers, and accordingly a relative coming to [553] dwell in a village usually endeavours to obtain a name from the origin myth of the ancestral family occupying it, and thus

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

601 Coola social organization, and of the absence of standardized obligations based upon specific relationships.

Slaves

567 Since a slave was[11] without status in the Bella Coola community, it is perhaps incorrect to include a description of [554] slavery in a chapter on social organization; but as slaves lived in the Bella Coola villages, it seems reasonable to include them when dealing with the different units of the tribe. It was 162 impossible to obtain an accurate estimate of their number in 567 Bella Coola; slavery has been so long abandoned that the present natives could only hazard vague guesses. Judging from conversational remarks by elderly men, it seems probable that in the old days there was a considerable slave population in every Bella Coola village, comprising at times as much as thirty to forty per cent of the total population.

567 When a party raided a village most of the inhabitants were 727 slain, but some, especially children, young adults, or famous chiefs were captured. As far as could be learned, once a captive had reached Bella Coola he was in little danger, since torture or systematic slaying after the heat of battle had subsided was not a Bella Coola characteristic. The leader of the expedition retained many of the captives as his own slaves, and distributed others among his followers. Anyone, chief [422] or commoner, could own slaves in the same way that he could own any other type of goods.

567 Like any other commodity, slaves were bought and sold. 437 The Bella Coola were usually so well provided with salmon that they were able to exchange these fish with the members [622] of other tribes for slaves. Lack of strong chieftainship among 726 the Bella Coola hindered their success in war, so that most of [431] their slaves were obtained by trade. To the same category belong those obtained as presents at potlatches. If, however, 773 a member of one of the tribes on the lower Fraser River was [648] [11] One of the first effects of the white man's establishment in British Columbia was the freeing of all slaves. Consequently the past tense is used in this section.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

given as a slave to a Bella Coola, he was treated as a guest." 567 Slaves were bartered between Bella Coola individuals as a [437] matter of course. Their value depended on sex, ability, and [435] industriousness, as well as on supply and demand. When there was an over-supply, the value of a slave fell to twenty or thirty [437] salmon, but whenever an owner found that someone wished to purchase a particular slave he endeavoured to raise the price.
If a foreigner borrowed goods in Bella Coola he usually had to [426] leave a relative as pledge. Thus, not many years ago, a Xɑ́ɑsis Indian, from near Ootsa Lake, borrowed goods from a Kim-squit man and left his son as pledge. The goods were not returned, so the son was sold as a slave to the people of Kitimat.

It was not uncommon for a Bella Coola to lose his freedom 525 by gambling. At lekɑ́l especially, a player who had exhausted 567 his goods not infrequently wagered his children, or in extreme cases, himself. If he lost, his children, or himself, became the property of the winner. Unless speedily repurchased by some relative, such slaves were usually sold or given away at the first opportunity to a member of a foreign tribe, since it was considered improper for a man to hold a member of his own 567 tribe in servitude. The same course of action was taken on [628] those rare occasions when one Bella Coola village fought [727] against its neighbour and prisoners were taken.

To the Bella Coola, who still consider a man's "power" in the land as dependent to a considerable extent on his ancestral [554] myth, a slave's greatest misfortune lay in the fact that he had [773] no ancestral home, and hence no rights.

"No slaves came to earth with the first people," they say.

A slave was a stranger in a strange land, unsupported by a chain of ancestors reaching back to the beginning of time. On the whole, captives taken in war were better treated than other [727] slaves since it was felt that such a misfortune might occur to anyone at any time. They were frequently ransomed by their [773]

*This is said to be an ancient proverbial, due to the fact that several of the foundations of the Bella Coola came to earth in that region and were on friendly terms with the inhabitants. It is conceivable that this tradition may have reference to the breaking away of the Bella Coola from the main Salish stock.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

CHAPTER IV

RANK

Chieftainship—Sisaok Society—The Potlatch

Chieftainship

IN the previous chapter have been described the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the origin of names, and the attitude of pride with which they regard those embodied in ancestral myths, which carry with them prized prerogatives. But the unsystematic method by which ancestral names are inherited is sufficient to show that their possession, though valued for sentimental reasons, is not enough to make the owner a chief. On what, then, is Bella Coola chieftainship based? Expressed briefly, it depends on the number and value of presents distributed at any kind of ceremonial. To the Bella Coola, every rite, whether it be a marriage, the bestowal of a name, a dance, a type of funeral, or admission into a secret society, is a prerogative intimately associated with the myth by which the performance is authorized. Accordingly, the host is really displaying the glories of his ancestors before the eyes of guests present at the ceremony. To the Bella Coola it is unthinkable for such to be performed without the giving of presents to all; failure to do so would destroy the value of the prerogative. The potlatch is the ceremonial at which the most lavish generosity is displayed, but the principle of the acquisition of prestige by the giving of presents is the same for all other rites; the only difference is that at a potlatch a man is able to display his generosity to a larger number of recipients. In consequence, the aim of every ambitious man is to hold potlatches, since his status in the community virtually rests on his ability in this respect. The ritual of a potlatch will be given in detail in the latter part of this chapter, but its complications will be intelligible only after a description of the 622 556* 431

[424]
[778]
[554]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the writer was in Bella Coola, a non-ceremonial entertainment was given one evening at which several men sang and performed. The writer was asked to sing a Bella Coola song, which he did in the belief that it was not one that was incorporated in the ancestral myth of anyone. Unfortunately, his teacher had erred, and as soon as the song was completed an old woman arose and stated that it belonged to her ancestral family. She avoided the difficulty of its singing by immediately announcing that the singer was her "son." Thus the writer was adopted into a Bella Coola family, a circumstance which aided him considerably in collecting information. This did not alter the fact that a ceremonial song had been sung. Accordingly, the woman gave presents to the guests, thereby legalizing the adoption, and saving herself from the disgrace of having one of her songs used as if it were a matter of no consequence, free to anyone. 123 533 556* 424 [597]

SEATING

Presents are also a means of obtaining seats. Every Bella Coola has at least one name embodied in an ancient myth. A man who wishes to become a chief can do so only by giving lavish presents to make his designation "strong," "firm," or "bright," to use Bella Coola expressions. Such gifts increase the importance of the owner's name, and they obtain for him the right to a seat, more or less definitely located, in the house. Since all Bella Coola habitations are built on similar lines, a man can occupy his wonted position when summoned to a ceremony in any house. The validating of ancestral names and the acquisition of seats are among the important features which occur at potlatches. 554 556* [625] [424] [553]

In the beginning of time, when the first people were sent down to populate the earth, it is assumed that each who established a village, consisting of a single house, seated himself in the best spot within the dwelling, namely the central position behind the fire; his younger relatives ranged either beside him [773]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

554 or sat in two rows, facing one another, on opposite sides of the 556 central fire, parallel to the side walls of the house. When these first ancestors died, the name of each was passed on to some [773] descendant. The Bella Coola feel that he who bears the name of the first settler in a village should have his ancestor's seat.
[551] Comparison with the practices of other coastal tribes suggests [171] that formerly the Bella Coola must have had a definite series of seats in their houses, either according to the rank of the occupant, or according to the rank of the ancestor whose name he bore. The most careful investigation, however, failed to show such a system of ranked seating. The only indications that such may once have been customary, are found in the feeling today that the bearer of the first chief's name ought to occupy the central seat behind the fire, and in the expression, "He seats himself where his ancestor sat," when a youth is given his place in the house.

[551] A seat can be claimed and an ancestral name assumed at any age. Goods must be given away which are said to be "covering" for the young man, to have "flowed away," or to have "become nothing" for the name. These validate the official assumption of the designation. With it is given a place in the house. A seat is chosen at the side of the fire, and the goods mark that spot as his in conjunction with the name.
[424] The seat itself is not material, though the general location on which a person shall sit is indicated. His "seat" is the goods that have been expended. Several men may have positions at practically the same spot, but when all are seated they merely move slightly so that all have room. There is no thought of one person infringing on the location of another. A parent who gives ample wealth at successive potlatches may seek for his son a seat behind the fire. Such is entirely his own affair and if sufficient goods are distributed the son may seat himself in that place, but if the gifts are of little value the occupant is secretly held in derision, as having a seat that is unsound, or unfirm. In later years the man may expend large sums in strengthening his seat; by so doing he wins recognition from

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

present, and the fame of the initiate is thereby carried farther afield than would be possible if only Bella Coola were in attendance. Every individual duly secluded and given a sisaak name feels himself ceremonially allied to others who have had a similar experience, and they form a grouping which may be termed the sisaak secret society. 553 556 575

The close connection between this society and chiefs is obvious from the presence of names of each type in the same ancestral myths. None the less, every chief, that is a person with duly validated ancestral name and seat, is not a sisaak, unless he has validated a sisaak name for himself and undergone the period of seclusion. Conversely, a man may be a duly authorized member of the sisaak although lacking a seat and the other marks of chieftainship. The relationship is, however, so close that the Bella Coola think of the sisaak society as a society of chiefs. Sisaak dances take place at potlatches and funerals, and occasionally at gatherings of less importance. Difficulties arise at the death of a chief who has failed to use some of his goods for the acquisition of a sisaak name. Such a case took place at the death of an important Bella Coola in the summer of 1923. Theoretically, he was ignorant of sisaak rites, but after much discussion these were used on account of his importance as a sumitl chief, an instance of the manner in which a man's personal importance over-rules ceremonial dictates. 575 622 [553] [535] [766] [183]

The Bella Coola believe that only some of their sisaak name-prerogatives came to this earth at the beginning of time with their first ancestors, and that many more have been acquired later by supernatural experiences. These were especially common among their forbears as they ranged over this earth seeking places to settle in the beginning of time. No sisaak name can be assumed casually; each must have had a specific origin. There are few sisaak origin myths, though theoretically there should be one to account for every name. The explanation appears to lie in the undoubted fact that many sisaak prerogatives have been acquired comparatively recently 424 551 575 773 [177]

177 from the Bella Bella, a fact emphasized by all. It is not difficult to understand, therefore, why elaborate myths are lacking, even if such were possessed by the Bella Bella. The Bella Coola possessed certain similar rites to which the Bella Bella prerogatives were in the process of being grafted at the time of the coming of the white man. There has since been general decay of ceremonial life, with the result that the whole situation is in a state of flux presenting great difficulties to the investigator.

424 551 575 [773]

Acmil names are willed and inherited in the manner already described for other prerogatives. The type of dance, and the time of use, will be described in the following section of this chapter.

424 551 575

The Potlatch

556 128

It is unfortunate that an adequate treatment of Rank among the Bella Coola requires a description of the potlatch since this ceremony, or rather group of ceremonies, includes a number of features which, logically, should have been postponed until a later stage of this monograph. An effort has been made to insure reference to non-ritualistic features by the description, just given, of the basic concepts of chieftainship and the acmil society. Other ideas will require rather lengthy digressions, a method of presentation which seems preferable to the use of many foot-notes, its only alternative.

General Observations

104 556 [431]

In scientific and popular writings alike, the term "potlatch" has been applied both to the public giving of presents, and to the rites at which this occurs. But among the Bella Coola, such distribution of gifts is necessary at every ceremonial; accordingly, each is essentially a potlatch. There is one, however, which the inhabitants regard as the most important of all, the goal which every ambitious man aims to reach, the rite in which his ancestral myth can be displayed. In this monograph the term "potlatch" will be limited to this, the lem.

Every Bella Coola is, or should be, able to recount how, in the beginning of time, the supreme god, Alyemim, caused his ancestors to be created in his house in the land above, whence they were sent down to populate the earth. A creation legend of this type is a man's most treasured possession.[1] Most myths describe the adventures of these first people, how they prospered in the Bella Coola country until they were able to invite to their homes guests from far and near, to whom they showed what they had achieved, through the assistance of Alyemim, or of some other supernatural being. In so doing they were carrying out Alyemim's wishes. He told some of these first people that if they accumulated much wealth, in those days chiefly food, there was danger that the provisions for moral would rot, hence they should cut away the bottom of the pile and present it to other men and women. The Bella Coola term for "to cut out that which is rotten" is lêl, hence the origin, according to their belief, of the word lem, which thus has the significance of "a giving away of long accumulated goods which otherwise might rot."

By the splendour of his gifts each of the first people able to give a potlatch (lem), spread the knowledge of his name and fame to the towns whence his guests had assembled. Further, those who had received decorum from Alyemim were able to demonstrate them. In course of time those who had first given potlatches died, but on taking their fathers' names, the sons, or other descendants, endeavoured to uphold the parental tradition by inviting guests from afar and giving them valuable presents. At such a ceremony the family history, or family myth, was recounted, so that the donor of a potlatch not only increased his own prestige, he incorporated therewith the traditions of his parents. This is the essence of the potlatch as carried out today.[2]

---

[1] Examples of these are given in vol. 1, chap. vi.

[2] We have found occasions to use the present tense throughout, although the potlatch is not now carried out to the extent.

McDermott E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB DeDermott NEB

335
* 556 of one in his ancestral myth, he will do so; if not, it will suffice to decorate the old house; but in either case the tales connected with the construction must be altered. X gives to one man the work of making new houses; to another, the two front upright posts; to a third, the two rear upright posts; to another, the planks along one side of the house; to a skilled carpenter, the totem-pole bearing whatever design X has decided upon; to a painter, one of the designs for the back wall of the house; to another painter, another design near it; to still another, part of the painting of the front of the house; to another, more of the same; and so on until he has allotted work for every part of the edifice. In some cases there are peculiarities of house construction dependent upon their occurrence in the builder's ancestral myth, which are jealously guarded prerogatives. One man, for instance, enjoys the right to build five peaks above the front of his house. These represent the five peaks of Mount Nagaiate where his first ancestor received myth (see Plate 13). Another has a series of speak-or dish-like indentations in his upright posts (see Plate 14) to support the beams, a prerogative established by his ancestor Kyd in the beginning of time. Another chief's posts are carved to represent a mythical creature. Still another prerogative is that of building a sloping board, resembling a gang-plank, from the door of the house to the ground, with a representation of a mythological sea monster at the bottom. In that case the dance of the grandiloquent potlatch song is how chiefs are conducted to X's house, as canoes are invariably drawn to the sea monster.

342
424
* 556
[173]

Each of the above-mentioned prerogatives belongs to one family alone, whereas several have the right to build ceremonial houses. The ceremony concerns a rectangular hole, about six feet deep, equal in size to the central part of the dwelling. A platform is then erected round the sides of this, about three feet from the bottom. The walls of the house itself are raised sufficiently far back from the central pit to allow an unencumbered passageway, off which the bedrooms

583
596 *
575
[585]

capped by the mask. If the tuwinum represents Wasp* or Grizzly Bear, he does not make a circuit and a fierce sound explains that to do so would be unsafe owing to the ferocity of these animals. When the song is ended, the figure passes into the back-room. After a short interval it reappears, recrosses the house, and leaves by the front door, to the accompaniment of increased whistling.

A few myths unitedly two tuwinum. In this case, a second figure promptly enters and the same ritual is repeated for a second song. This usually differs, musically, from the first, being in three parts and with even more rapid time. More often, the second song is merely hummed out by the singers without the appearance of a tuwinum to supply an obvious source.

552 *
575

This is the normal, but not the only practice with regard to a tuwinum. In some cases the figure does not appear until after the singing of the first song, and the uninitiated are told that it has been attracted by the music. In this case it passes into the back-room, later to reappear and leave by the front door. An announcement is made that it has brought a strange power, that Y has become peculiar, and that his name is now, for example, Sunpuwcile. A herald bears this news through the village. A second song is then sung in due course.

The tuwinum is difficult to classify among Bella Coola supernatural beings. It appears in the form of an animal, but the sound do not seem to have taught the uninitiated to regard it as Y's actual familiar. It remains as a supernatural embodiment of his name, a materialisation of an element of family history, and a motive for the use by Y of a mask representing the apparition. The uninitiated do not ask further; they have seen a wonderful sight and are content.

[776]

[777]
776
[778]
[779]

*Some of the first people came to earth as Wasps, but several received so much help from their hosts that they are regarded as sons by the descendants of those whom they assisted.

Smith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in such a way that the contents dribble over the recipient; sometimes, though able to catch the dish, a herald may deliberately allow the sticky pulp to cover him. The humour of this is increased by the fact that guests at potlatches always receive their food in a ceremonious manner.

Though one of a herald's duties is to act as buffoon, his position is only very slightly derogatory. In the beginning of time, Raven himself did not hesitate to act in this capacity on many occasions. Ever since, the post has usually been occupied by relatives of chiefs, especially by those who are unable to give potlatches. In some cases the position is sought by ambitious young men, willing to endure the slight loss of dignity for the emoluments. Since the basic principle of every Bella Coola ceremony is that the donor must recompense those who have assisted him, heralds are always lavishly rewarded. At potlatches especially, chiefs remember their dependence upon the heralds, and shower presents upon them. One who has allowed himself to be spattered with liquid food to amuse the guests, is suitably compensated, but in any case he receives presents for summoning and seating the guests and for interrupting the speeches. The same principle holds good in all other ceremonies. An elderly informant related that once in his younger days he had been dancing a naxnox dance, when two heralds remarked that the ground on which he was dancing was dirty, meaning, that it had not been made clean by the distribution of sufficient presents to justify his dance. His mother once gave the heralds two muskets, valuable articles in those days, to clear her son's path. These belonged to the informant, who knew nothing about the transaction until it had been completed, but he accepted as a matter of course the necessity of giving presents to heralds. If the seat on which a chief is sitting should break, presents must be given to heralds, and if a tsaxiat should fall when a herald is watching, the latter receives gifts. At the marriage of a chief's son, a herald can claim and remove any of the clothing of the bridegroom or his associates. Above all other occasions, when a young chief is first established on his seat, he must reward the heralds lavishly for their remarks. 203 556 *

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with so many elements of culture, the Bella Coola ascribe the origin of heralds to the wish of Alquntăm as expressed to the first people in the beginning of time. Some groups of these early settlers brought with them heralds whose games had been created by the supreme deity himself in his house in the land above. Such a one was Ẋẋqâ'li who was a member of Xemcus's (I, p. 326) party at Kimsquit, another was Olḑimat who came with uyuyuyut (I, p. 329). These heralds functioned in the manner of their descendants of today; others of the first chiefs appointed certain of their relatives to perform this service, and by means of the power with which they were endowed, created names with respect to their functions. Besides his ordinary name every herald must have an ancestral appellation of some kind, as well as the probability of possessing kaoiut ones in addition to those of a professional nature. Either by bringing with them from above, or by creation on this earth, each group of first settlers became provided with a herald, whose name is embodied in the ancestral myth describing their experiences. As each of the first heralds died, his name was passed to a successor, and this practice has been carried out from generation to generation until the present. The Bella Coola state that no new names for heralds have been created since the time of the first people, and it is certain that none has been made for many years. Consequently, the number of heralds is strictly limited in accordance with mythological beliefs, and every man who owns one of the ancient designations embodied in an origin myth knows the name of the herald associated with his first namesake. 203 773 551 [428]

At the death of a herald his name becomes dormant. Since heralds function at all ceremonies, whether or not the donor belongs to the same ancestral family as themselves, the members of the group sustaining the loss are not deprived of their 203 553 556 * 614 424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Totem-Poles

A feature embodied in many ancestral myths is a description of the totem-pole[1] erected by a group of the first people, either according to a design given them by Alqunŭm, or in consequence of their experiences on this earth. It is the privilege of a chief descended from that group to erect such a pole, under the same restrictions as apply to the portrayal and use of other features belonging, not to him individually, but to the ancestral family as a whole. Totem-poles are also frequently erected to depict incidents connected with the ancestors of a chief, even if there is no mention of one in his ancestral myth. In either case, the setting-up is a source of pride to the chief, especially as it emphasizes the importance of his ancestors, and its display must be duly validated. Theoretically, this may be done at a gathering of less importance than a potlatch, but in practice it occurs at no other ceremony, since a chief wealthy enough to erect a pole naturally desires it to be seen by as many persons as possible.

Poverty limits the number of totem-poles, but is not sufficient to account for their relative rarity. It is a matter of pride for a chief in whose ancestral myth there is mention of a pole to erect one, but all myths do not include totem-poles. Consequently the absence of one before the door of the chief's house is not proof of the owner's poverty or lack of importance. This matter was investigated with great care, and all the older people reiterated that the number and size of their poles were never as great as among the northern tribes.

When a chief is preparing for a potlatch, he allots, among other carpentry tasks, the construction of a totem-pole, if he is sufficiently wealthy to reward the artisan and to validate the erection in the customary manner. If a special design is embodied in the ancestral myth containing the name which he is about to assume, or to make strong, he indicates that design to the carpenter. In the story of Ałtwi (I, p. 312), for

[1] Alkonst, "Outside Post."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

211 example, there is a description of his totem-pole with a ball 556 at the top, and beneath it an eagle's nest containing two fledg-798 lings towards which a grizzly bear is endeavouring to climb.
532 This is the only known instance of a pole on which the different figures stand in definite relationship to one another. No explanation is offered beyond the statement that this was the form used by Alkai in the beginning of time. Another ancient pole, used by one of the ancestral families of Sneel, consists of [178] a simple shaft surmounted by a sphere; this represents a mountain which enters into their ancestral myth as supporting the sky.

As with all features embodied in ancestral myths, a chief can use his own discretion in cases where he has a choice of design. A totem-pole with specific figures is a common pre-[431] sent from a chief to his son-in-law, and it is a mark of respect
[522] for the latter to use and validate this at the first opportunity, [606] in preference to one belonging to his own ancestral family. Since the pole erected at a potlatch may have no association with the ancestral name and myth of the donor, the underlying principle in all cases is that the value of the pole depends upon the quantity of gifts distributed to validate its erection. One man mentioned an instance in which he had become confused with regard to the proper design for the totem-pole connected with his ancestral myth, and had used one belonging to a second myth in association with a name from the first. Both were his property, the transaction was duly validated, and the matter passed off without question. It is possible that the [188] decay of custom which has followed the coming of the white man may have been partly responsible for this error, which was regarded as a somewhat stupid, though not improper mistake; yet it is clear that even when designs are remembered as portions of ancestral myths, they can be alienated from them and validated as isolated objects in the same manner as names and all other features of ancestral myths.

More often, the exact details of a pole are not included in the ancestral myth and a chief wishing to have one erected can use his own discretion as to the design. At the top he always places the bird or animal cloak in which his first ancestor, traced patrilineally, came to this earth. Beneath this is the cloak of his mother's first ancestor if it differs from his father's. There are no fixed rules for other representations. Sometimes a man wishes to display the cloaks of the first ancestors of his wife, or wives; more often, the designs are of creatures with which his own ancestors came in contact after reaching this earth.[1] One of the first settlers, Smaoow (I, p. 331), married a Bella Bella woman from whom he obtained a ceremony connected with a whale, an animal which has often been used on the totem-poles of his descendants. The lower figures on totem-poles often represent creatures from which a recent ancestor of the chief obtained supernatural assistance. Consequently, the number of designs which may be used is legion, and the order of portrayal is immaterial. Moreover, Bella Coola art is not sufficiently realistic for designs to be easily recognized, nor is there standard conventionalization of little used animals; so it follows that the designs on totem-poles are often unidentifiable.[2] This is of little consequence, since their value rests neither upon the artistic skill exhibited, nor even upon their significance in connection with the owner's ancestral myth, but upon the goods expended to validate the display.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

All Bella Coola totem-poles are carved from the trunks of large cedars, with the wood cut away so that the designs stand out in high relief. The carvers are allowed great latitude both in choice of form and colouring, hence there is wide variation

[1] Characteristic is the term applied to animals with which ancestors came in contact, other than their cloaks.

[2] This statement represents the layman's point of view, that is, of the Bella Coola who was not himself a competent sculptor. It is probable that an expert would have greater facility in recognizing the conventionalized forms used by his ancestors, although the whole pattern of Bella Coola culture was opposed to extreme conventionalization. Unfortunately, wood-carving, in fact art work of every kind, had degenerated to such an extent that only one man with any recognized skill in that respect was still living when this study was made. He was both speculative and uncooperative, so that it was impossible even to collect examples of his work, still less to record his interpretations of the designs of masks or other objects carved by his predecessors.

1:b6:Dwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bella coola NE6

of metal obtained from the white man, if not actually machine-made for trading purposes. They resemble the familiar shape found in all parts of the British Columbia coast and vary in length from about six inches to as much as three feet. There is considerable difference in thickness; some of the newer ones are thin plates, others are heavy and appear to be old. The early white traders realized the value placed by the Indians on their coppers and these were soon imitated and became important articles of barter. The Bella Coola state that many of the early Hudson's Bay Company's coppers were made of drawn wire, but this type seems to have passed out of existence, since all the specimens seen in Bella Coola consisted of flat metal plaques. 556* 177 439

The Bella Coola maintain that their ancestors have, ever since the beginning of time, used two kinds of coppers. One variety, known as ilila, resembled the plaques produced by white men. This is the term in common usage for all kinds of coppers at the present time. The other variety, taitaimy, is said to have been thicker and heavier and was made by heating the metal in a fire, beating it into the required shape. Long, long ago, coppers of this kind were sometimes found in the forest by hunters who were then rewarded for observance of ceremonial chastity, but most were obtained in trade from the northern tribes. One of these is said to be preserved at Kitamaat, but none is said to have been owned by a Bella Coola within the last few years. 556* [325] [439]

The Bella Coola believe that mimicry can only be manufactured in one district, far to the north, at the mouth of an unknown river. There, it is said, the chiefs range themselves along the river bank, each armed with a spear, and each with a number of slaves behind him. When the tide is highest, salmon of some peculiar kind appear on the surface of the water. If one salmon within reach of a spearman, he lunges at it, but invariably misses; then the chief drops his spear, seizes one of his slaves and kills him by cutting his throat. A small piece of 552* 773

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 flesh cut from the body is fastened to the point of the spear, 773 making it so potent that when next the chief lunges at a salmon he transfixes it and brings it ashore. He warms the fish at a fire and then pounds it on a stone until it becomes a copper.

No Bella Coola has visited this distant river for many generations and the belief concerning the manufacture of taitaimy appears to have been handed down from dim antiquity. Coppers of this kind are said to have been considered much more valuable than the usual łália, but were always uncommon. In addition to their ordinary uses, they had a certain curative value. If the owner of one was ill, he used to clean it [755] with a rough stone and water; then he would drink four cupfuls of the liquid which contained minute fragments of metal. In almost every case a speedy recovery followed. In all other respects łália or taitaimy could be used indiscriminately.

Łália are likewise said to have a supernatural origin. When found in the forest, they are due to the supernatural salmon-[776] like being, xsiatl, having changed itself into one. None has been found in recent years because the xsiatl have moved away owing to their dislike of the smell of human footsteps and the taint of smoke.

These stories serve to emphasize the complete ignorance of [325] the Bella Coola concerning the methods of manufacturing coppers. It is possible that long ago they were able to make their own by pounding the native metal, but if so it is surprising that some traditions to this effect were not preserved. On the other hand, there is little reason to doubt their use of [177] coppers, obtained from the northern tribes, antedating the coming of the whites. All informants agreed on this point, and the frequent references to coppers in mythology likewise point to considerable age. In many of the ancestral myths there are accounts of the obtaining of coppers by some of the [551] first people, and many ancestral names, both of men and women, are derived from them.

[237] The Bella Coola attribute the value of coppers to the fact

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of their occurrence in most ancestral myths.* There seems to be no mythological explanation for the casting of a copper into the fire after the passing of the representation of a deceased relative, but the desire of chiefs to use them at potlatches is the result of their use under similar circumstances by their ancestors. Some ancestral myths lack reference to coppers, but their use is common to all, whether or not embodied in such. It is said to be easier for a chief to acquire coppers if they had been used by his ancestors, but this is not essential. 556* 773 [769]

When arranging for the appearance of a dead relative, the donor of a potlatch is careful either to possess a copper, or to be able to borrow one at the right moment. As soon as the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up, breaks or bends his copper, and throws it into the fire "to make bone for the deceased." No matter how valuable a copper may have been, it is now worthless; its value has been expended on the purpose for which it has just been employed. It lies unheeded in the flames, a valueless article belonging to no one. 556* 969

At some convenient time, either hours or days later, any chief may remove the copper and give it to a poor man, only taking care to choose an individual who has not recently received one. It is said that the gift is "to patch his canoe." It is now the poor man's property, but it has no value, since no goods have been expended for it. The new owner straightens and repairs it, if necessary by riveting on the broken piece, thus making it ready for further use. The poor man may keep the copper for years, or it may be only a few weeks before some chief, preparing for a potlatch, offers, perhaps, $20, for it. In the old days, values were computed in slaves, canoes, salmon, and other commodities, but now in dollars. If two chiefs should happen to want it, the poor man may haggle about the price, [illegible] amicably rather than lower their dignity by seeming to be interested in a matter of money. It is to the advantage of a 556* [735] [825] 435 556* 437

* Whatever shells and nonprecious are treasured for the same reason, the former are mentioned in several origin myths, the latter in one or two. [237]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

424 as possible, a potlatch is the most suitable occasion. Goods 463 distributed for this purpose are not returnable; they have
* 556 "become nothing" in the acquisition. The value of presents so bestowed differs enormously; a man who is proud of his prerogative validates it lavishly until he is strong in his vocation, whereas another establishes himself on a lesser scale. The origin [773] of professional rights, like so many of other kinds, is lost in antiquity and ascribed to the wishes of Ilquaxiów as expressed to the first people. Some of the early settlers came to earth [551] with definite duties and vocations, each indicated by a special name; others, lacking these, created them through their own enormous power. At the death of one of these incumbents, 424 his name passed to one of his relatives who acted in the same 463 manner as his predecessor after duly validating the name in 553 question. Ever since that time, the owner of a confirmed pro-
* 556 fessional name has been able to perform the functions of the prerogative. This is never a man's sole designation, but merely [351] an addition to those of ancestral, tsaiat, nuxuk, and other types. Like them, professional names are usually willed by their owners, though if this is neglected, one can be revived by any member of the deceased's ancestral family. In such a case, the older people usually decide on a suitable incumbent and suggest the matter to him; if he does not accept, the opportunity is given to another. If a member of the group is eager to validate the name, it is unlikely that anyone would try to [784] forestall him. Ability in certain respects can also be obtained by magical means (I, p. 301), and a member of the ancestral family so endowed is the natural choice for the prerogative in question.

Prerogatives of this kind can be grouped according to the types of vocation included.

THE PROFESSION OF RIVER GUARDIAN

424
463
551 698
773

In the beginning of time, Ilquaxiów is said to have come down with Qoil, who landed on the mountain behind Qwaqa-o,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

a man, ut-nuaica, with the prerogative of enforcing obedience to river taboos. Ever since, the owner of this name, when it has been duly legalized, has had the right to perform this function. In some cases, such as carpenters and singers, the validation of a prerogative has not brought with it the necessary ability, so that the incumbent remains a properly ratified, but non-functioning, craftsman. No mechanical skill is required by a River Guardian, hence the owner of the name ut-nuaica has always been able to perform his duties.

From time immemorial certain restrictions have been enforced concerning the river: No refuse may be thrown in, otherwise the olachen would remain in the ocean. For the same reason, women at certain periods are not allowed to bathe lest a speck of blood should blind the fish and prevent them from seeing the route. Occasionally an olachen with red eyes is caught; this is caused by some heedless woman. When the fish are running in the river, women are not allowed on the bank, nor to repair the nets. At high tide, it is forbidden to drive stakes for olachen nets.

The number of prohibitions increases during the critical period of the salmon run. Thus no freshly hewn planks can be set afloat, and even a canoe which has just been completed must be kept for ten days before launching. No one whose husband or wife has died within the last year can embark at the village, but must proceed to a landing-place at the head of the fiord. Most important of all, refuse of salmon must be deposited in the woods; if thrown into the river, the fish would smell it and avoid the stream. Even accidents such as the upsetting of a canoe, or the spilling of olachen grease, are considered to be offences.

Disregard of any of these injunctions is displeasing to the salmon lord; it is the duty of the River Guardian to punish the offender, irrespective of his rank. In case of slight shortcomings, he beats the guilty person or throws him into the river. The guilty person usually scrambles out, but should he be swept away and drowned, no recompense can be claimed by

1:McGrath E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NE

his relatives. This punishment is customary in cases of he spearing of a canoe. Death is the penalty for throwing rubbish into the river, particularly during the summer, and until he coming of the white man the River Guardian exacted it without hesitation.

THE PROFESSION OF UTTERING A DRAMATIC CRY

As the appearance of masked figures representing supernatural beings, whether in sacred or secular dances, many of the women repeatedly utter a peculiar, high-pitched, drawing cry which adds considerably to the weirdness and impressiveness of the occasion. Ability to do this depends on an ancestral prerogative duly confirmed by the distribution of powers. Many ancestral myths describe how some of the first women were given by Alqanaxim, or acquired in other ways, the right to dance, and mention is made of the name used by each with respect to this prerogative. Unlike the one previously described, many of the first women possessed this privilege, which is accordingly common at the present time. A time of this type is usually confirmed in girlhood, sometimes even in infancy, and being of relatively slight importance can be validated at a ceremony of less dignity than a potlatch. One of these names is Nawaqmhlaiqas, which has relation to the blue-green shawl of some shadow-shell brought from the east by Raven in the beginning of time, as described in the ancestral myth in which this name is included. For many years there has been considerable laxity with regard to this prerogative, and women lacking it have even been kept to dance in order to add to the solemnity of the occasion or to increase the wonder of the uninitiated.

There is another similar prerogative, enabling the members to dance at mourning ceremonies. In the beginning of time, Swanas of Kimsquit married Tlitsmalit, the daughter of a Bella Bella chief, who had this right. It has since been transmitted from one of her descendants to another at Kimsquit.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE PROFESSION OF CARPENTER

As with singers, there are many carpenters who ply their trade without the advantage of an ancestral prerogative. They, also, may be expert and receive credit for their skill, but they can never achieve quite the distinction that comes to a man who has been made a carpenter by the distribution of presents. The latter may be so clumsy with tools that no one would ever trust him to make a canoe, or even a mask; but he is, socially, a carpenter, whereas a skilled artisan lacking a prerogative is admired for his ability but has no foundation of social esteem. In transmitting a professional carpenter's name, however, an effort is always made to give it to a youth with a bent in that direction.

The most esteemed carpenters are those who can make canoes, a trade which requires no special prerogative. In the beginning of time, Yaláimat was the canoe-maker par excellence; he assisted many of the first people, and no one can have a professional prerogative as carpenter unless this supernatural being appears in his ancestral myth. The Bella Coola ascribe the skill of the Bella Bella in carpentry to the fact that Yaláimat married a Bella Bella woman in the early period of the world and that many of that tribe are his descendants. In the old days, before the coming of the white men, carpenters were always respected as esteemed members of the community. Chiefs always cared for them, and they received abundant food at every ceremonial. None the less, they were not wealthy, and only in recent years, since the Bella Coola have realized the value put upon good craftsmanship by the white men, has it become customary to give valuable presents to carpenters. Ceremonially, they have considerable influence, since the carpenter who makes a mask usually decides who shall wear it and takes charge of the fitting and adjustment. He is also held responsible for any accident such as its falling when in use or for mechanical defects.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

177 of the a'alt came to an end when it was already waning in 535 importance. It was impossible to obtain as much detailed 575 information about the latter as was desired, and it is even 128 possible that some of the facts recorded in connection with nuxuk ceremonial really belong to a'alt rites.

The right to perform an a'alt dance depends upon a duly 424 validated ancestral prerogative of which the obvious mark is 535 an a'alt name. Some of the first people brought down such 575 designations and dances with them from above in the beginning of time, a few were acquired on this earth as gifts from super-
[773] natural beings. Those who have rights of this kind form a loose organization which may be termed the a'alt society. This is closely associated both with the nuxuk society and with chiefs, owing to the occurrence of these three types of names in the same ancestral myths. One member of an ancestral [554] family may use his goods to validate his ancestral name, another to make himself a nuxuk, a third to become an a'alt, and an important chief, endowed with ability and wealth, may be able to do all three.

A'alt dances are less spectacular than those of either the nuxuk or kwalat societies, nor are rattles or whistles used. The prerogatives of a member are limited to his name, the right to perform a certain dance, and the use of a song which commonly describes some feature of his ancestral myth. Four types of dances are considered to be a'alt; the methods of acquiring and using any one of these are similar, so it is unnecessary to describe the differences before the actual account of the performance of each.

554 If there is a dormant a'alt prerogative in the ancestral 575 family of the donor of a potlatch, he usually chooses to validate this as one of the features of his ceremony. He first consults his wife and other relatives to ensure that sufficient goods will be forthcoming, and if this matter can be arranged satisfactorily, he chooses some young relative as the recipient of the dormant right. It would be most unusual for the youth selected to decline the honour. Or some man, other than the presents to the singers and heralds who have rendered assistance. Instead of dispersing immediately, the guests may remain to gamble or wrestle. Since there is no solemnity attached to the affair, it is a time for indulgence in amusements of all kinds. These conclude the chief features of the a'alk dances. Probably they once played an important part in the lives of the Bella Coola, but with the increase in importance of the nuxuá, they have decayed into little more than a form of entertainment.

575 574 535 [533] [525] [524] [178]

A'alk origin myths

551 575 773

Theoretically, every Bella Coola a'alk should be able to record the myth in which his name is embodied, but few can do so. Of course if a man has been able to validate both ancestral and a'alk names from the same myth, that is his authorization for both. In many cases a myth is split, and the portion containing an a'alk appellation is given to some member of the ancestral family, other than the chief able to validate the most important ancestral name. In such a case, the a'alk can record little more than that his designation came down with a specified group of the first people. This, for example, is the explanation given by a Kimsquit waupul for his name Sosáiteie which came to earth with Smaxan (I, p. 331) in the beginning of time. Another Kimsquit a'alk, Thelyáhum, whose prerogative is to perform the dance of that name, states that it was brought down by Sinupel (I, p. 316), who assumed the designation of Thelyáhum after its performance. This early settler had the additional name of W'ináiae.

539

The two following origin myths were obtained in some detail:

Once,[1] long, long ago, Sqamáin came to the conclusion that it was not good for the inhabitants of the world to be afraid of supernatural beings. He decided that the best way to dispel this dread would be to arrange a marriage between his daughter, Smaxan, and a mortal; so he

[115] [171]

[1] Related by Mrs. Willie Mack. European elements have obviously been incorporated into the first part of this legend, though the narrator considered the whole tale to be ancient.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

CHAPTER VI

ORIGIN MYTHS

Introductory—Bella Coola Origin Myths—Origin Myths of Other Tribes—Early Traditions Having the Ceremonial Significance of Origin Myths—Sacred Origin Myths

Introductory

●973 128 EXAMPLES will be given here of the origin myths, which are believed to authorize so much of the ritual already described, and to which repeated reference has been made. [114] In 1898 Professor Boas published such an admirable collection of traditions of this type (pp. 50 ff.) that the present writer paid little attention to the subject. The Bella Coola, however, are so intensely proud of the deeds of their first forefathers [124] that several insisted on recounting them before they were willing to do other work; in consequence, a fair number of myths was collected through necessity. Since tales of this type were recounted almost entirely at potlatches, their significance has declined since the prohibition of this rite. Consequently, many legends are only remembered in part; the abbreviated and often pointless series of anecdotes here recorded can be no more than a small part of the rich field which must once have existed among the Bella Coola.[1]

424 773 As Professor Boas has clearly shown, origin myths relate how, in the beginning of time, the supreme god sent down to earth the first ancestors of the Bella Coola people, each usually

[1] On writing up this field material, it was my original intention to place all legends together in a separate section, or appendix, following a common anthropological practice. This, however, would have been contrary to Bella Coola thought since origin myths, for example, are regarded as entirely different from either more sacred, or from incidents connected with shamans,—to name two other groups of what are usually described as "legends." I recognize that the insertion of this chapter of origin myths interrupts the sequence of presenting Bella Coola culture, but I believe that it is the way which the Bella Coola themselves would regard as logical, and that it brings out the essential interactions of this type of myth upon their whole life.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

provided with means of sustenance, a house, and certain supernatural powers. The right to the names of these people, as well as to the type of ceremonial objects used by them, has been the privilege of their descendants. But these early Bella Coola, like their modern descendants, had several designations, each carrying with it a definite prerogative. In a single myth there may be embodied a dozen or more names and incidents which are quoted at the present day to authorize such different phases of culture as dances, rights to hunting-grounds, professions, names of dogs, or kusiut prerogatives.[1] Any myth which gives the initial use of a name, a dance, or any other prerogative, is termed a smaiusta. Each of these is, or was in the old days, remembered with great care and never recounted in full detail except to the members of the ancestral family whose names are embodied in it. Even at potlatches the full details of the myth are not laid bare. Indeed, if a young man is of a flighty, garrulous disposition, unlikely to preserve the dignity of his ancestral fame, the details are concealed from him. Even at the present time there is much resentment at any unauthorized use of a smaiusta, and in the old days this would inevitably have led to bloodshed.

Boas (p. 116) states that the terms smaiusta and sumsma are synonymous. The writer feels certain that this is an error. It was discussed repeatedly with various Bella Coola, all of whom agreed that a sumsma is a mere story which can be told by anyone, whereas a smaiusta is a myth possessed by the individual, or individuals, whose prerogatives are derived from it. To the Bella Coola the two are utterly different.

None the less, there is no doubt that records of the past change from one category to the other. A wealthy chief, eager to give a potlatch, but lacking the mythical authorization, must frequently have used a sumsma, claiming the hero as an ancestor. There would be veiled amusement at him for doing so, but the prestige of one who can give potlatches is so great that in time his claim would probably be accepted. The two

[1] The details of these will be described later.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

178 versions of the myth given (vol. I, pp. 313-19) is a case in point. The first was told as a smaiusta by a woman who claimed to
● 773 be a descendant of the people figuring in it; the second, as a story, sumsma, by a man. In view of the reliability of both informants, it seems highly probable that this is a story, partly converted to a myth. In other examples there are incidents resembling the supernatural tales given in vol. I, chap. IX, and here too it appears probable that sumsma have been assimilated into smaiusta. It is complimentary to the truthfulness
[577] of the Bella Coola, and to the respect they show for intangible [424] property, that none of the myths recorded were smaiusta owned by others. Repeatedly an informant would say that he knew one, but would not tell it since it belonged to some other family.

128 After collecting a few myths, in each of which it was stated
773 that the first settlers at village X were A, B, and C, with their sisters, P and Q, it seemed as if it would have been possible, before the culture of the Bella Coola had fallen into its present decay, to make a census of those whom they believe to have been first settlers of this earth, and that such a list would have had few contradictions. This was soon found to be false. Two myths may give different people as the first occupants of a certain village, nor does such contradiction trouble the Bella Coola. Each man, convinced of the authenticity of his own family account, is quite willing to believe that the one belonging [811] to someone else is equally correct. This characteristic lack of logical consistency has already been mentioned in other connections. Boas (p. 61) likewise gives an instance of uncertainty as to the first occupants of a village, though, on the whole, he found Bella Coola mythology to be more codified than the present writer has done. In view of their lack of systematization in other matters, it would have been surprising if they had evolved a census of their first ancestors, accepted by all as accurate.

Another matter to be considered at this point is the simi-[178] larity of detail in many myths. In part this can be explained

Lib McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)1945
NEA Bellacoola NEA

by the assumption that sinsma have been elevated into cmaiasta; in this case it would not be impossible for the same story to have been used by two or more families. A more common explanation is the splitting of myths. Although, theoretically, one can never be altered, and portions in the possession of other individuals are remembered as such, there must have been many cases in which the owner of a section told the whole as his own property. This would not be difficult in cases where he moved away from the other members of his family. In course of time, with the assimilation of elements in themselves not strictly mythological, two myths would evolve having a few incidents in common. If asked concerning this, the Bella Coola explain that the first people were quite as capable of doing the same things as two modern men. The occurrence of the same name, or names, in different myths does not, according to them, prove a connection, since many of the first people had the same names.

Finally, there have been included a number of myths dealing with the coming to earth of people in other localities. Probably these are, in origin, those of other tribes, more or less assimilated to the Bella Coola pattern. Each was said to have been obtained by the marriage of one of the descendants of the people described therein with a Bella Coola.

No further explanation is needed for the following myths which are arranged, as far as possible, according to the list already given of Bella Coola towns.

Bella Coola Origin Myths

Origin myth of Nuxalkin[1]

In the beginning of time, Sqamaitin, in his form of Sun, the Sun, sent down a man, Tqwalt'tsaut, to Mount Nuxmalkin (also called Sqamaitin, Sqamaitin, and Alkhamalkin), a mountain on the north side of the Bella Coola River about two miles from the sea, near the upper end of the Indian reserve. With him came Tsaxnaxnaxa, the Hummingbird, [1] Related by Mrs. Walkem.

[illegible] E-5 (1932-1934)948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bellacoola. NES

Other people had come down to earth at the same time as Kimtsa, and among them a man and his wife who had landed at the mouth of Gas Bay. They had two daughters who, walking one day at the head of the bay, were surprised to find a house. They looked in and saw a woman, so frightened, and laughed heartily to find her made of cotton wool. They looked over the figure and the head fell into the fire and was burnt. Then they seated themselves in her place, worked diligently at the blanket and ate a large amount of the food. Towards dusk they put the figure back in place and left themselves.

Soon Kimtsa returned. He embraced the figure, called her a good wife, and thanked her for weaving so diligently and for having eaten so much of the food. Then he saw that she had burnt her hand, and chided her, saying that she must take better care of herself. At this the two girls who were hiding burst out laughing and showed themselves. They suggested to Kimtsa that he choose one of them for his wife. He agreed, selected the older and married her. He built a house on a hillcap where they lived and to which he called people from far and near when he gave a potlatch.

Sacred Origin Myths

As already stated, many sacred names are believed to have come down from above with the first Bella Coola, or to have been created by them on this earth. In such cases, the sacred origin myth is the same as the secularized myth. Theoretically, names of the same type can also be received through visions in which a beholder is given his new designation by some supernatural being, or taken it from the apparition. In either case, of course, it must be duly validated by the giving of presents. Only three myths were obtained which deal solely with the acquisition of a sacred prerogative. No doubt this is chiefly to be explained by the fact that most sacred rites have been derived from the Bella Bella.

THE ORIGIN OF THE Sacred NAME, Spearpoint-swallower[*]

About 1840, a party of Kwakiutl Indians[] spent the winter in Bella Coola. Early in the spring one of them broke his leg on [] Related by Jackson Sheets.

[*] We were impossible to identify this tribe. According to the Bella Coola they are alike to the Cowichan, but have adopted the use of totem-poles, further distant

CHAPTER VII

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

It was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bafia Cocin women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white man seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bafia Cocin are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bafia Cocin, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the conditions to the first Mamaculiliwe acting on the behalf of Mpambu. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. These individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Mpambu has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the face of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled midwives can usually rectify a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

the most famous of all talismans, and, therefore, a powerful protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a defense against evil omens, but it is equally deadly to demons and other human beings with supernatural powers. In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola regard the married state as the normal condition of man. Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons found as free agents are elderly widows and widowers, and those crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed to use of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Men provide fish and game, build houses and canoes, while women collect berries, make baskets, cooks, and perform the multitudinous small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

S-00-Gerrish, B.-9 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

of the term is very different from its use among the northern tribes. 582 171

Having eliminated those girls who are too closely related, or who are unwanted on account of the poverty of their parents, the father and mother can concentrate on others of about the same age as their own. The most desirable is a member of the unrelated family of one of the parents. This obviates the dangers and difficulties of marriage with a stranger, and any children will be born into the close-knit circle of related ancestors stretching back to the beginning of time. They consider that such a child is fortunate, as if he were held close in the spiritual embrace of his powerful forefathers of antiquity. Each unrelated family is jealously proud of its ancient traditions and prerogatives, and as none of these are transmitted in marriage, it follows that a mating within its ranks is desirable from a business standpoint. Moreover, it is recognized that the husband obtains more presents than the wife on the wedding and that her relatives are more likely to be generous when their son-in-law is one to whom they are related. Indeed, some unrelated families are so "stingy," (to use the Bella Coola expression), that for generations they have habitually married endogamously. In such cases it is not unknown for the children of two cousins to marry, though this is usually regarded as not quite proper. The most common marriages are between the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of first cousins, or between the child and grandchild of a first cousin either of suitable age. According to mythology, unions have sometimes taken place between brother and sister in order to preserve the traditions within the family, and it appears highly probable that marriages have occasionally occurred between first cousins, although no specific instances of this could be learned. So long as the laws against incest are observed, any girl of appropriate age who is addressed as woman (I, p. 153) is a fit partner. Since unrelated families have usually become localized in certain villages, there is a strong leaning to local endogamy, though this is not compulsory. The restrictions

581

[578]

[572]

582

[778]

L:McDowell: E-1 (1911-1914) 1948
NBA Bellacoola NBA

[584] preliminary agreement may have been made while they were only seven or eight years old, though marriage seldom occurs before the age of seventeen or eighteen. More often the agreement is made when X and Y have passed the age of puberty, and they wait for about two years before marrying.

[583] Throughout this period, X's relatives are expected to give at [425] least one feast at which Y's relatives are the guests of honour, [533] and always receive presents. At one of these times X's father, [534] with the concurrence of his relatives, may mark his approval of the coming event by bestowing on Y's father, or one of her other relatives, an ancestral name from his family myth. This does not become the absolute property of Y's family, since the myth in which it is embodied does not belong to them, unless, of course, they are members of the same ancestral family. It is fitting that a name of this kind be bestowed by the recipient on one of Y's children, or returned to X's family a few generations later by a return marriage. If this is not done, in course of time the designation is apt to be regarded by Y's family as their own. If there are no children, Y's relatives should give back the name to X's
[227] family, but there are many instances of feuds caused by failure
[773] to do so. According to mythology, prerogatives may sometimes be given outright, without thought of their use by the resultant children, or of their being restored by return marriages. It is claimed that the people of the Kimsquit River
[541] have, through such a present, the inalienable title to use a certain spot in the Kitlope River for their sockeye weir, and likewise the Kitlope people have an irrevocable right to the Kimsquit name Sidhway. These two prerogatives were transferred at the beginning of time. At present, anyone bestowing outright his family prerogatives would be considered weak-[371] minded and the other members of the ancestral family would unanimously object. Considerations of this sort make it desirable to seek a wife within the ranks of the ancestral family.

During the period of engagement, Y's family may present a name, or names, to X's father, with the same conditions as those just described.

551 [553] with respect to their appearance or actions on this earth. As far as could be learned, the procedure of bestowal is identical with that just described. The following examples illustrate designations of this type:

Ăsĕkĕdĕmĕlaic, "The Resident Maker." In the beginning of time the wife of Tsĕsĕwala had twins so often that the village rapidly increased in population. Accordingly she took this name for herself when she relaughed herself from her husband. It was transmitted for generations in the ancestral family of Tsĕsĕwala's descendants until here about one hundred years ago. The recipients claimed it as their own and passed it to a certain Omqawĕlĕla, recently deceased, who gave it to her brother's daughter at the time of her marriage. Since this woman's husband has not yet given a potlatch the name is accordingly in a dormant condition at the present time (1915).

551 578 606 Ĕlĕqaiye, "I Am the Worthless One." The mother-in-law of this woman had been in the habit of insulting her daughter-in-law by saying, even when strangers were present:

"We have a worthless daughter-in-law."

On relaughing herself the woman adventured the rudeness of her husband's mother by throwing her words back in her teeth.

Nĕlĕlĕlĕla, "I Am the One Whose Eyes Are Hungry." The mother-in-law of this woman used to eat without offering food to her son's wife.

Nĕlĕlĕwĕnĕqĕla, "The One Whose Haunches Are Dusty." The mother-in-law did not give her a place to sit in the house so that she was forced to stay close to the fire in the ashes.

Ĕwĕlĕlĕla, "The One Who Sits Where There Is No Space." The mother-in-law objected to this woman sitting near her husband when he took his ceremonial seat, and insulted her with the above remark.

551 578 Nawaaw'ic, "The Stingy One." It was said that this woman restrained her husband's generosity until he gained an unpleasant reputation for penuriousness. She publicly shamed boat caught fire, his goods were destroyed, and he, himself, barely escaped. The Bella Coola report coincidences of this kind as confirmation of their beliefs. 963 825

As in the last instance, death does not always follow the hearing or seeing of an omen; it may simply presage some calamity. It is dangerous for a person to be addressed by a dog, although it is well known that dogs understand human speech and can talk if they desire. At the time of the writer's visit, it was a matter of general knowledge that a dog had spoken to a middle-aged Bella Coola woman a few years earlier. The animal was shot immediately, and the woman never revealed what it had said, but in spite of these precautions she became insane and has never fully recovered. [858]

The crow man, Tsyulmqi, near Kimsquit, who figures so prominently in Bella Coola mythology, is another death omen. In early times, all who passed his station used to call out to him, and it was thought that those whom he failed to answer would die within a year. In due case, the voice was welcome, but the speech of an owl is still regarded with dread. If one of these birds utters the name of a dead person, the individual hearing it will soon die. 963 [775] [825]

Besides these well-recognized omens, the Bella Coola believe that any peculiar visitation or hallucination is a probable precursor of disaster. In many cases these fears are unjustified, but there are always sufficient accidents and misfortunes to corroborate their belief. An old Kimsquit man told of the manner in which his son had once come rushing into the house saying that he had seen a strange, black-faced creature. His father feared that it might have been Dsalaman. 963 828

"Perhaps it was," continued the old man, "for my boy soon died."

Irrespective of the actual cause of death, about which the father is uncertain, he is convinced that he knew of its coming by his son's omen-apparition.

CAUSES OF DEATH

The Bella Coola know that sickness, accident, wilful murder, old age, and a host of other factors may at any time terminate a man's life, but they consider that any one of these direct causes is possible only in conjunction with an indirect cause of a religious or supernatural nature; in the last analysis they attribute death to supernatural, not to natural causes. As described in a previous chapter, an ancient myth attributes the origin of death to the stupidity of Raven, but this belief, even if its historical accuracy is accepted, belongs to the realm of philosophy and ancient history rather than to everyday life. When a canoe is capsized on the ocean and its occupants are drowned, — the Bella Coola do not consider a drowning a mere accident — it is because Sasquatsa was hungry and desired human flesh. This indirect cause is quite as important as the direct one. So, too, the death of a man beneath a falling tree or a land-slide is no accident; Sisiutl caused the tree to crash to earth or the slide to roll downwards. Many individuals believe that this supernatural being is responsible when an animal kills a hunter. He delights in death and always sits on a coffin before it is taken to the grave, although none but shamans can see him. Any supernatural being can cause death, but it must not be imagined that the Bella Coola go through life in a state of constant fear; death may vanquish them in the forests, but the probabilities are against it. Nor does sickness appear to them as a natural phenomenon. Its cause is either the intrusion of some foreign object into the body, or the weakness of one of the patient's supernatural elements. The only remedy in the latter case is an appeal to the supernatural, sometimes through the medium of a shaman, whereas a foreign object in the body can often be extracted by a skilled practitioner. A disease of this type is often brought on by the machinations of a sorcerer, and if death results it is attributed to the potency of his charms, not to a natural illness. Even illness are able to cause death. In war, one man may be able to kill an enemy, but his success is accredited to his super- 761 natural possessions which have given him skill as a warrior 726 rather than to his own ability.

NES Bellacoola NEA

It is felt that no ordinary explanation is sufficient to ac- 761 count for the death of a great chief. No matter what may have 622 been the actual cause, it is always said that the supernatural Carpenter, who in the beginning of time created mankind, [775] came down and "seized" or "called back" the deceased, thinking him too good for this world. It is believed that these beings are bone harpoons, and that Hamatsa allows them to pursue influential people. This sentiment is always expressed in [535] mourning songs for a dead chief, but although accepted as a matter of fact, it is little more than a formalized belief which serves to comfort the mourners. The infraction of a taboo is another reason frequently given for a chief's death.
It is said that there was a loud crash and the earth shook before the death of Pielac; he became ill immediately, and his stomach began to swell. The stricken chief said that Sway' itself had fallen upon him, but the common belief was that he had erred in some ritual act. At any rate, he died within a few hours.

[illegible]

News of a critical illness spreads rapidly through the village 963 and the house in which the sufferer is lying becomes a rendezvous for friends asking about his condition. Failure to do so would be considered suspicious, with the result that there is such a constant coming and going that rest is denied the sick person. Shamans are called upon to practise their powers in [956] a noisy manner, and female relatives weep and wail. The din is indescribable.

When the patient shows no further indication of life, the shamans cease, but the women redouble their cries. Relatives, friends, and sympathizers all crowd into the house and begin to weep, often adding verbal lamentations. The progress of the news from house to house can be traced by the wailings. Mour- 964 575 766 981 wish to emphasize the importance of this society, state that the deception was always apparent, and that even the hooks and ropes by which the figure was manipulated could be seen. Still others regard the ceremony as a symbolic means of portraying the manner in which a man's crest comes to carry away his spirit and life. It seems clear that different interpretations must always have been accepted by different members of the community. A young and ingenuous uninitiated, steeped in the atmosphere of the supernatural, may well have believed that he was gazing upon an actual supernatural being, as the senior xaxaid desired him to do; others must have recognized that a deception of some kind was being practised, but dramatization is such an important factor in Bella Coola life that individuals often disregard the difference between semblance and reality, and it is contrary to custom for a person to cast aspersions upon the prerogative of another. It is easy for such an one to accept the drama as a symbol or representation of the manner in which the crest carries off the intangible elements of the dead. This is certainly the attitude of the Bella Coola at the present time. Everyone realizes that the crest is of human manufacture and that the corpse itself is not carried away, but the rite is still performed and practised the survivors by giving them an opportunity to display their prerogative and the clock of the deceased's ancestor.

[184]

575 766 Perhaps because of its relatively recent introduction, details of the performance of this rite are not fully standardized. In some cases, the crest is made to appear at the same time as Mulukila, instead of at a subsequent ceremony. It is assumed that the origin of the rite is in some ancient myth in which the body was actually taken above by the crest, as not copied, with the aid of carpenters, by the descendants of the person to whom this occurred. There are no myths of this nature current in Bella Coola, although it is thought that such must have been common among the peoples of the outer coast to explain the prevalence of the practice in that area. One old man mentioned that an Owikl myth in which a

[424]

[993]

[424]

5:46:Gerrath E-5 (1921-1924)745
WEB Bellacoola NEA

body became eagle down and was wafted upwards in psychologically of the type which might serve as basis for a rite of this kind. If the descendants of the person to whom this had happened had dramatized the incident at subsequent deaths, a custom analogous to the one here described would have arisen.

575
766
824
[775]

DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

There is no fixed time for the disposal of a corpse. When possible, it takes place on the day following death, but as many as four days may elapse if delay is necessary for the performance of the rite just described. Another reason for postponement is the absence of some relatives; if they can be summoned within four or five days, the funeral may be delayed until their arrival. There is always endless discussion concerning the exact details; all relatives and members of the ancestral family take part, though the wishes of a son, brother, or other near kinsman are usually followed. In this, as in so many points of Bella Coola ritual, an influential chief often overrules the desires even of those who are more closely related to the deceased.

[764]

Shortly after the hour chosen,[1] usually about noon, and the people begin to assemble in the deceased's house, even strangers being welcome. Women wail dolefully, and another indication of the occasion is the bundles containing clothing, cooking utensils, and other articles belonging to the dead person. The lid of the coffin has been left open, but when everything is ready, an elderly man is asked to strike it, once, with a stone; then the lid is closed. Planks have been removed and a hole made in one of the front corners of the house, through which the men throw out the stone. The women embellish their lamentations as an old woman, previously asked to do so, lights a bundle of dried and undried cedar-bark and climbs through the opening carrying this. No request has been made for pall-bearers, but any strong man, especially [794] [354]

[215]
[609]

[1] This is done at present, even after the carrying away of the "body." In former times it was customary when the corpse was actually buried by the coast.

[770]

undertake the task and bring with them tools for the purpose. When the location has been chosen, they start their work without further instructions, taking care that the corpse shall face east. It is said that this is done because the sun rises in that quarter, a statement that is probably a mere rationalization. Graves are usually about five feet deep, so that the digging requires some little time, especially in winter when the ground is frozen. All the young men are willing to help and relieve one another at intervals. Meanwhile the women are squatting on the ground near the coffin, some of them throwing objects on the fire, and all wailing intermittently in a high-pitched, tuneless sob into which a mourner sometimes inserts words as if her agony had overcome her.

"Please return whence you came," moans one woman, while another sobs out:

"Perhaps you were unhappy with us and wanted something we could not give you on earth."

The sun sets down the people of Kaul and Gudi-ri, who accordingly report that being to their cost. Mourners of these villages, as well as other individuals to whom the sun stands in the same relationship, are accustomed to address him, saying:

"Please increase your light to guide the way. Our child returns to you."

One woman, whose relatives had been killed by jealous rivals owing to their success in giving potlatches, prayed:

"Come no more. Those for whom you gave light have gone; henceforth shine only whither they have departed."

In some cases such doleful lamentations are more lip service, but they often express very real grief at the loss of a friend or relative. It is also felt that such sympathy affords comfort to the mourning kindred.

As the grave grows deeper, the relatives keep measuring it and the coffin to insure a close fit and avoid unnecessary digging. As soon as it is ready, an elderly man who has been requested to perform the rite, steps to the north side of the grave carrying a spruce bough in his hand. He touches with it the edge where he is standing, then, in succession, the east, south, and west margins. This circuit is repeated four times and the branch tossed away to westward. This essential ceremony is based on a belief that the lives, or perhaps the spirits, of the grave-diggers have been drawn from their lives the grave and are in danger of being pressed down by the coffin. Should this occur, they would have short lives. The spruce branch enables the supernatural elements to leave the cavity and return to their owners who suffer no ill effects. Anyone, other than a grave-digger, can perform this rite.

The coffin is now lifted into the grave, care being taken that the corpse faces east. As already described, it is in a squatting position with knees almost on the ground. Boards have been prepared in advance, and with these the grave-diggers make a roof-like covering, placing at each corner a stone weighing from ten to fifteen pounds, to prevent the ghost from returning to trouble the survivors. Earth is thrown in on top of the boards, and as it falls the wailing breaks out dolorously in a final crescendo of mourning. If a child has been buried, his fellows sometimes sing a so-ko song. At this time it is proper for one or more chiefs to rise and speak. No one is required to do so, nor is there any rule as to the order in which they make their remarks. The first speaker is usually a prominent man related to the survivors, though neither a son, brother, or other near relative of the deceased. A speech is generally addressed in part to the spirit of the dead person, telling it where to go; in part, to the mourners. For a dead child, emphasis is laid on the fact that although he did not live long enough to be incorporated into his ancestral myths on earth, this will be done for him in his future home. In conclusion, an appeal is often made to Qlemintin, under the name of Paxalakla, to take pains that the spirit of the dead is given its rightful place in Paxalakla, in the section where its first forbears were created, and whither the spirits of its dead ancestors have returned since the beginning of time.

ring of time. The following speech was made by an elderly Bella Coola chief at the funeral of his great-granddaughter in June, 1900:

"Granddaughter!* Go with your grandmother* to the mountain above Tsimsit where my first [previous] ancestor came to earth. Go to the mountain across the river where [illegible]* descended; go to the north where your ancestor found a copper house with a raven inside; go to the Skeena where another of your early ancestors found a whale; go to all the places where your forefathers experienced the incidents recorded in our myths; go and be happy.* I do not wave them over mourning deaths in my family, but I am helpless. I hope that Sisiutlmaus will come hunting us."

Turning to the Coast Indians who were present, the old man continued: "Thank you for coming twice within two days to share our grief."

Turning back towards the grave, he went on:

"I have made ready the road for you.* Your grandfather* and I are grieved; our families became united when your parents married, and the bond was cemented by your birth. Now it is lost. When you were born, I rejoiced; now I am sorry. You are all right; you cannot fall because you are supported* by the names and fame of your father and mother, your grandfather and grandmother, your uncles and aunts, and your other ancestors who have passed away here to Sisiutlmaus. You can with them in your own village where to hand your power from the experiences of your forefathers.

---

* The term, chief, was used, although the child was only a great-granddaughter, the grandfather had been buried two days previously.

* One of the first people to reach the world.

* The place and people mentioned were all described in the myths of the dead which accompanied burials.

* A reference to grave furniture by the speaker is a commonly held a few days previously when it was certain that the child would soon die.

* The dead's mother's father.

* Apparently, figuratively, a word having the sense of physical support. The implication is that the deceased relatives are willing to aid a child with their influence if their bodies is enough to prevent any one of them, including the dead baby, from falling.

1:McDowalk E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

775 one of the several crests which it is believed he has become. The point does not appear important to the Bella Coola, corresponding to their indefinite ideas concerning whether the spirit and the life have become a single being, or several.

Knowledge of the life led in Nuxwái·a by the deceased, now in the form of his crest,* is most indefinite. In a general way it is felt that the actions of this being are similar to those carried on during life, but in a more advanced degree. A skilled carpenter is a better carpenter in the land above, a chief who has given many potlatches below can give more in Nuxwái·a. This [599] belief finds expression in mourning songs which frequently state how Alqaxáxw has called a good carpenter to work above, or how a chief has gone to exhibit his generosity in a new sphere. It is doubtful whether this sentiment plays any real part in Bella Coola thought. The spirit and the life of a dead person have gone too far away to affect the living; what little is known of their actions has been handed down from the distant past and is merely a matter of history. The only time that these 775 two merged elements come to this world is at a memorial pot- 769 latch, and formerly the uninitiated undoubtedly believed that 556 they were witnessing such a visit. Though the spectators were shown as a matter of course that the spirit and the life had become bird or animal, emphasis was laid on the fact that they had become the particular bird or animal crest of the donor's ancestral family. The effect of the memorial potlatch in former times, as at present, was, therefore, social rather than religious. Besides, the two parts portrayed have never been known 775 to affect a human being; they expect no offerings, grant no assistance, cause no injury, and are accordingly neglected.

In comparison with the above vague beliefs, Bella Coola information concerning ghosts is clear and exact. As already [775] *It is accepted that man was created as human beings, and only assumed bird or animal shapes in order to reach the earth, but there is no corresponding belief that the spirit and the life change back from man to human form on arrival above. Of course the performance of human activities by anthropomorphic creatures presents no difficulties in Bella Coola thought.

777 A visitation is not regarded as an inheritable right, but as a
• 787 tendency; for generations no member of a family may see one of these beasts, but the tradition is preserved, and when one [824] is seen it is recalled that such have been observed by ancestors of the fortunate one. Instances have occurred in which a person has obtained good luck without the tradition of this being in his family, but they are rare. On the other hand, a man may lose the advantage of his possession, even if he owns [785] a portion of a mitsqas or a sisiutl, through failure to observe communal charity.

776 Some of the Bella Coola believe that the mitsqas and the sisiutl are the same animal, which can assume these two forms; others that the two are distinct supernatural creatures. In any case the powers and characteristics ascribed to them are the same. Most families have a tradition regarding the appear-[773] ance of the one or the other to their ancestors, and the infor-[784] mation to be derived from them is always about that particular creature. Hence the details here described are probably not all known to any one individual.

• 787 The different types of appearances, and the different types 811 of taboos called forth, should be noted. These are due to 182 failure on the part of the Bella Coola to rationalize the manual of their concepts. Each man recounts what he believes to have happened to one of his ancestors or friends, irrespective of whether or not the methods used may be in direct contradiction to those employed by someone else on another occasion. A man who has heard of the mitsqas, for example, from his father and mother, may describe contradictory modes of dealing with the creature, and in each case may affirm that disaster would have followed if the method described had not been carried out. Such lack of co-ordination is typical of the Bella Coola.

According to an elderly Kimsquit man, the mitsqas was 777 brought down in the beginning of time by one of his own
• 787 ancestors, Gwgumhlike. It is to this fact that he attributes [773] his own near approach to one on two occasions. As it is fre-

1:56:Swanth E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

issues, a calamity unquestionably due to his recklessness in handling the earth where a supernatural one had trod.

This point illustrates the danger of near approach to a mitsyac, a theme well exemplified in the stories in the next chapter. Such perils must be counteracted in diverse ways according to the traditions of different ancestral families. One common method is to seek a lonely spot in the woods and there hollow out a shelter beneath an overhanging rock or fallen tree-trunk where the person who has been exposed to danger must remain for four days, eating nothing and at intervals scrubbing his body with branches of devil's club, spruce, and other rough plants. These protect him from the evil effects of the monster.

Similar in function to the mitsyac, and equally dangerous to the unwary, is the sciatl. The latter is supposed to have been created on this earth, at Bella Bella, in the beginning of time by Yalitimat. It was at first the canoe made by this carpenter, and then turned loose by him to range the mountains and fords, as it has ever since, equally at home on land and in water, and in various forms. The following is a typical description of the manner in which a sciatl appeared in the past.

Long ago a man was hunting in the mountains when he saw a salmon, which changed in an instant to a fish-like monstrosity with two hands but no tail. He hanged at it with his stick, and in so doing moved a slide which carried the salmon down the mountain. As this was taking place, the hunter said:

"Go down the mountain, salmon; I will get you at the bottom."

When he reached the foot of the new slide he saw the fish lying there on the stones. He cut it up and slung it on a snake-back rope. Now this salmon was a sciatl, the first that had ever been seen, and the hunter obtained unprecedented good luck from his experience. He also took the name of Sciatl, a designation which has been handed down until recently.

After this adventure many people hunted for the sciatl, and with fair success in early days, but now it cannot be found,

1:36:Dewalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

ever object was desired, and then set in a window of his house so that the sun could fall on one uncovered end. The owner firmly believes that this stone has brought him money on various occasions, and will do so again, though whether he expects the coins to be found inside of the wrapping, or merely to come to him in the course of trade is questionable. According to Bella Coola belief, they ought to appear beside the stone, but as this man attributes any good fortune to it, he never has any difficulty in proving its powers. 777 823

This stone is also used as a means of increasing the efficacy of prayer. When its owner washes ceremonially in the river before eating in the morning, he rubs it over his body as if it were soap and requests it to make him strong, make him well, grant him his desires, and so forth. [515] [789]

Shamanism

More important to the Bella Coola than any other manifestation of the supernatural is that power which makes an individual either an ástwula or an ástanlut. The former is a person who, owing to ability granted him by a supernatural being, is able to perform miraculous feats, especially in curing the sick; the latter is one with similar powers obtained from a ghost.[1] It is impossible to translate either of these terms accurately; the designation "shaman" is accordingly used in this monograph to describe both types of supernaturally endowed individuals. The most common and most important method of obtaining such power is from a living supernatural being; a person receiving the boon in this manner will be termed "shaman," and one empowered by a ghost will be known as "shaman from the dead." 104 756 * [787] * [788]

The Bella Coola believe that long ago men were so much more powerful than at present, and so close to the supernatural, that all were virtually shamans. The prowess and adventures 756 * 773 538

[1] Shamans are, of course, supernatural, but as the Bella Coola distinguish between shamans whose powers are derived from these two sources, it is necessary to follow their example.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 of these demi-gods of antiquity are favourite themes for stories.
538 The powers of the later shamans have been far less than those of their forefathers, and their exploits have been of a somewhat [173] different character. Hence it is possible to divide the subject into three sections:

(1) Shamanism in the distant past.
(2) Modern shamanism.
(3) Shamans from the dead.

SHAMANISM IN THE DISTANT PAST

Information on this phase is contained in stories and a few anecdotes which describe the achievements of ancient demi-gods, endowed with miraculous powers of various kinds. The tales are similar in type to those dealing with the granting of supernatural aid to the unfortunate, so that it is in many cases difficult to differentiate them. As might be expected these narratives are not exact. Frequently the teller does not know from what being the ancient shaman received his power, nor can he explain the abilities described, which are different from, and superior to, those with which he is familiar. In fact it is customary to describe any mythical hero as a shaman.

[424] Tales of this kind can be related by any one; they are not the personal property of a specific family. Many of them, that of Wanuel-i, for example, are well known and are told and retold constantly.

In addition to information obtained from stories, a few isolated facts are remembered regarding ancient shamans. It
* 756 is thought that various taboos connected with hunting were 223 learnt by them in the distant past. Such restrictions and in-[224] junctions were firmly believed in and strictly adhered to until a few years ago, and many of them are still observed. The usual method of hunting harlequin ducks is, or was until recently, from a canoe, with a sapling set up in the bow to hide the hunter, crouched with bow and arrow in readiness; several shamans, however, were able to kill the birds by merely [262] waving the butt-end of a paddle towards them. Such power

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

* 756 a boy who was dearly loved by his father. The latter, thinking that
* 787 Kasiyat was responsible for his son's death, killed her and was slain in 539 revenge. Because of the doubts thrown by the Bella Coola on Kasiyat's power and revelation her fame did not spread widely.

Power Localized in Certain Spots

778 To the Bella Coola every supernatural being is, or should [776] be, able to move, in fact many of them can travel with phe-
[773] nomenal rapidity. But, in the beginning of time, when Ałquntăm was populating the earth, he sent down certain creatures which were later turned to stone, thereby localizing their power. The term for a place where this happened is smā·tl, which can be translated with accuracy as, "A Locality Where Power has Become Petrified." It follows that anyone desirous of coming in contact with supernatural power of this type can do so by visiting the spot where it is situated. There [773] are not many of these places, nor do they figure prominently in Bella Coola mythology, and, as usual, there are many contradictions in the accounts. Apparently there is a tendency to ascribe the occurrence of peculiar experiences to localities where power is petrified. The following are the more important spots of this type, with a short account of the specific attributes of each.

773 (1) Smaiu·a, also called Sluxlukwaily: At the head of the 778 Clearwater, one of the sources of the Bella Coola River, and 539 the place from which comes the warm east wind.

Concerning the origin of the power in this spot the following tale, which is regarded as very ancient, was obtained.

Long, long ago, the ocean spread far to the east, covering the whole Bella Coola valley.[14] The shoreline of the ocean was at the village Sluxlukwaily, so called from a chief of that name living there. Mount Xłikwals, which is now several miles inland, was then a point around which surged dangerous [14] It is assumed that the world was unpopulated at that time, though mention is made of people who were living there. This does not strike the Bella Coola as a contradiction; the accuracy of an ancient story is never questioned; hence it is taken for granted that "people" in the modern sense, were not then in existence.

5:Mc:Dowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

currents, and where there was always much wind, making it 773 feared by mariners in those distant days. Tradition does not 778 state what being drove back the ocean to its present position; 539 it may have been Raven who made the Bella Coola valley habitable.

Once a war party from the north swooped down to attack Skutkwaily's town. Although the chief's herald, who was stationed a mile below the settlement, called out a warning, the raiders were successful and carried off a number of slaves. Skutkwaily could not bear to think of his people as captives and accordingly exerted his miraculous power to turn the whole place to stone. Houses, raiders, captives, canoes with their carvings, and paddles can still be seen there, all petrified. They have become snd al.

According to another account, Skutkwaily exerted his powers to petrify the canoes and the bodies of his enemies before they reached his village. He asked the paddlers whither they were bound, and when they told him he, or the mountain which he later became, for there is a confusion between the two, invited them to land. On so doing they were changed to stone, and in this form can still be seen, complete even to the paddles, a proof that the ocean once extended far to the east of its present limit. Many Bella Coola have heard of these canoes, and they are said to have been seen recently.

Since that time the power animating the place has frequently become visible in the form of an enormous snake. 778
There, too, are to be found countless smaller ones, a constant 539 menace to the unwary. The following incidents describe the [787] adventures of people passing near this spot:

The trail to the interior makes a detour to avoid Skutkwaily, but sometimes one of the reptiles, many of which are enormous, will be found lying across the track. If the traveller is bold and jumps over it, no harm will come to him, but if he should try to avoid it by going around, the single snake will increase to a multitude. Not only material objects, but the 159 in his sleep, and hopes that it will grant him specific supernatural power. He realizes that he could increase the prob-987 ability of obtaining this by ceremonial chastity, and believes [985] that it would come to him if he went alone to the woods and [997] lay fasting for some time. Another course would be to concentrate his thoughts upon the desired end, but X is too good a Christian to do so; he is in the unhappy position of knowing too much of two religions to be able to practise either conscientiously. Such experiences are not likely to occur to any but a man of high-strung, imaginative temperament, to whom dreams and mental excitements appear especially vivid. X is intensely religious, so that it is easy for him to interpret every phenomenon in terms of the supernatural. It will be noted that most of the dreams just described took place when he was sick, precisely the time when hallucinations are to be expected. They were more coherent than those of most Bella Coola, though the difference is one of degree rather than of kind.

987 Most dreams are comparatively simple, and the information received in them is intelligible. They come to all, irrespective of rank or prerogative. Nevertheless, it is believed [828] that an inheritable tendency runs in some families; this does not mean that all members of such a group dream constantly, [821] but they are more likely to do so than others. Those occurring at the winter solstice are more carefully observed than at other 773 times, since it is then that the supernatural beings decide events
[777] for the coming year and a man's spirit may be able to inform him of what has been decided. Consequently, as soon as [785] Alqantém enters Nuxmát-a, wise men separate from their wives and concentrate on dreaming, hoping to learn what is in store for them. For instance, if a man sees himself seated before a large pile of goods, he knows that he will have the good fortune to do this during the coming year; on the other hand, if he foresees ill luck, it means that he will be unfortunate. Another [821] time when dreams are especially desired is before the summer [224] solstice when hunters in particular observe ceremonial chas-[785] tity. This purification not only increases the likelihood of such

For Cold

Snuff dried urine such as is found around the rims of unemptied chamber pots. Kimai-ts taught the economists of the Bella Coola that this was good for colds.

For Sore Throat

Boil cottonwood buds in dog-fish oil and drink about a teaspoonful of the decoction at intervals until cured. Dog-fish oil, being a necessary ingredient in many medicines, is always kept on hand for emergencies.

For Coughing

Boil roots of false hellebore in water and drink the decoction freely. It is so poisonous that the patient usually falls to the ground, spitting blood. Coughing is one of the many ailments cured by this plant.

Another remedy is used for a person whose cough causes him to spit frequently. A friend collects some of the fresh expectoration, mixes it with salmon roe, and places it where ravens are accustomed to feed. This is done four times and the patient is cured if the birds devour the mixture.

For Whooping-Cough

Boil cottonwood buds in water with the fat of any animal and drink frequently.

For Sores and Boils

Warm dried urine and rub on the part affected. Like the remedy for colds, it was Kimai-ts who taught this to the ancestors of the Bella Coola. Gum or tobacco is sometimes added to the urine, and applied like a poultice.

For Boils (two means)

(1) Heat human excrement thoroughly and apply to the boil, tying it in position with cloth. At intervals, add more, without removing the bottom layer and leave in position for 757 dense is to through the smoke-room. He cuts the roots into thin slices which are boiled in water for four days. The patient drinks several cupfuls of the decoction which never fail to benefit him.

[774] [775] The basis of this medicine is the belief, already described, that when a wind swims through a pond it frequently sheds some of its scales which become water-lilies. They are, therefore, potent in themselves and are of greatest benefit to one who has practised ceremonial chastity. The patient must observe several taboos for forty days after treatment: He must hold no sexual intercourse; must eat neither salmon nor meat that has not been smoked; must eat nothing cooked either by a menstruating woman or by one who has lost her husband within a year; and must not approach a girl during the year following puberty. The breaking of one of these taboos causes [761] his death, and the man who has administered the medicine watches the conduct of his patient with great care.

755 For Debility (two means)

(1) Drink strong, stale urine, mixed with red rock-paint ground fine.

[424] Knowledge of this medicine has been handed down for generations in certain families. It is said to be most unpleasant to take.

(2) The following medicine, said to be the most potent known to the Bella Coola, is used for a person who has long been feeble, especially if he has been spitting blood. It is the [424] property of several ancestral families, and must be administered by an elderly male member of one of them.

The owner of the remedy obtains a dry, clean skull, places within it a little water which he brings to a boil with hot pebbles and adds a small quantity of mountain goat marrow. The patient is given a dry stick, about three feet in length, from which the pith has been extracted to make a tube. With this he sucks four times, swallowing a little of the decoction, while the practitioner says to the skull:

S: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

203, 192, 211, 773, 776

/For a Bella Coola-English vocabulary which includes place names, personal names, and names of spirits, gods, mythological characters and places, see category 114, pp. 573-630./

*575 [778] [425] [786] [778] [776] *575 [778] [776] *575 [728] [773] [178] [688]

corresponding word with the significance of "One who has suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository]." Some of these vaults are said to be dangerous to the uninitiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

According to Kimsquit belief, Ănĕ'ĭkwalaxa has a husband, Mănăqhaitĭlla, who dwells with her in every repository. If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls dead before the power emanating from Ănĕ'ĭkwalaxa. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the hamat society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

Turning now to the manner in which the hamatsa regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many hamatsa have, for example, Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a fact, that long ago the secondary of the hamatsa was often challenged by the a'alt and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

§ [i.e. a repository of supernatural power— ANALYST]

though the cost of exhibiting such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may be dormant for generations. Like other lowest prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently given every a hactsa cano-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new hactsa prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor.

(2) A Patron, omitsis. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his prodigi performs on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most hahamsis have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform.

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Ana'Ilwalaxis. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each.

Although the hahamsis are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time

*575 this unfortunately leads them to believe in the powers which 424 they claim. Each tsaxiat prerogative has had one of these *775 origins:
778 (a) It was brought down by the first people. Before [778] coming to this earth each of them saw in the land above his parent, who instructed him in a type of dance, and told him where his repository on this world would be. It is assumed that the earliest man were in contact with all the supernatural beings before coming to this earth, but it is believed that each was "blind" to the patrons of his fellows, and thus had only one.

[779] (b) It was derived from an experience with one of the supernatural beings of this world. In this case the repository was either at a spot indicated by the apparition, or at the actual scene of the vision.

(c) A powerful chief sometimes allowed an ancestral to a tsaxiat name. It is believed that this occurred comparatively frequently in ancient times when chiefs had semi-supernatural power. In such cases such followed his own inclination in the choice of a patron,[1] and usually made his own repository within his house, giving strength to it by killing and burying a slave there. Although several Bella Coola informants described [184] this, Kimsquit Indians denied that it could ever have taken place. They say that all repositories were long ago dug by Nanaqiyum, a male supernatural being sent down by Al- qanim at the beginning of time to prepare the habitations of Ewi'kiwalnis and her husband. After doing this, he returned to the land above where he has since resided.

It will thus be seen that the prerogative of a tsaxiat is always derived from some experience of an ancestor. In carrying out *575 the rite, the dancer feels that he is continuing the works of his 778 forbears, a factor which increases his desire that neither over nor carelessness on his part shall dim the prestige of the society before the uninitiated. And, further, a man who has spent

[1] The Bella Coola cite such actions as proof of the amazing abilities of their ancestors.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

[illegible] is that something strange has happened to the "mental." He intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, and towards nightfall goes around calling:

Hiwaq, hiwaq, kukusiut, "Cure, cure, ye members of the kusiut society, power has come to the son of the chief (or to the mental)."

The kukusiut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

In every village there are at least two kukusiut who have, embodied with their kusiut names, the professional prerogative of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own ever-present power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be transmitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kusiut and nanit. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Meanwhile beating sticks are distributed among most of the kukusiut who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 3). He waves this to and fro in his hands, then goes

[See category 116, p 84(c?)- ANALYST]

Bella Coola E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

and the person shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society. 575* 766

It is said that, in former times, the kukuxiut sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead kukuxiut, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch. 575* 769 533 177

The Ritual of Specific Dances

General Observations about the Dances

A detailed description of various kuxiut dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nuxqulwaista. Several kukuxiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kuxiut season. 575* 796* [424] [776]

The Dance of Noákqwim[14]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Noákqwim, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly 773 824 825

[14] Cf. Boas, p. 40.

[The Dance of Nooksimm]

[715] approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath [824] the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is [825] Smaiem-a, whence its captain hops to Nooqulemaiste to await the coming of Alqaaim. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the eight of nakaam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Nookkymm lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [715] times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[831] eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [797] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [626] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776] patron was Nookkymm, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Nookkymm is patron for several kukuxint, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river [575] the kuxint dances begin.
[796]

[184] It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, [424] as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [551] slight variations, if any. In Tsmoil the kuxint who has the prerogative of seeing Nookkymm is a certain Qwaldn-i,[*] in Kimsquit, Hauskinmaxam,[*] and in Sikhiul, Xemtsam. Although,

[115] [*]Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qwaldn-i, who intimated
[426] that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman [578] referred to the lending of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[*]Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his patron, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kuxint names have significances of this type.

[The Dance of Naakaiyo]

Although 575* 424 773

theoretically, every hataal should know the origin myth of his prerogative, these are rarely remembered, a state of affairs differing entirely from that with respect to ceremonial origin myths. An ancestor of Hashkeyneeni is supposed to have seen Naakaiyoo, decorated with the tails of two eagles stuck in his hair. The following myth was obtained of the origin of Xoomoon's prerogative: [534]

In the beginning there came down to Mount Nee-dooni, a small mountain on the south side of the Bella Coola River about three-quarters of a mile from the sea, Hillnewhitsain, his younger brother Gaqaashkida, and their sister. Ayooloo had given them a medal house, so small that it was portable, but which could enlarge to any size at their wish. It was called Hqaaiiaal, a name they bestowed also on their sister. They brought the sacred designation, Xoomoonin, with the right to perform a dance. The party, including Raven, who was like a son to Hillnewhitsain, came down from their mountain top looking for a place to settle. As people were already living at Qoogo-o and Hqaaiiaal, they chose Hokiat as their home.

From this place the three could hear the beating of drums, as the people of the adjacent villages performed their hataal dances and Raven determined that his companions should not lack the privileges which others enjoyed. Accordingly he flew down the fiord where he saw Naakaiyoo, whom he obtained as patron for Hillnewhitsain. This prerogative was embodied in the name Xoomoon, which is still in use."

The prerogative of seeing Naakaiyoo is known as dakdah-dlaie, "The Comer," or "The Ever-Comer." It will be convenient to refer to the person who has this power as X. As already described, if he had been initiated during the preceding ceremonial season, he is now obliged to dance. In later years, if he wishes to do so, he first consults the marshals, and if they consent he begins his preparations during the summer. Among other matters, X informs the singers of his intentions and they begin to compose songs. Occasionally they re-use one from a previous year, but to do this is to admit lack of creative ability. The usual practice is to compose new tunes and to adapt to them words bearing on the proper theme, sometimes including

575* 746* [424] [533]

*It will be noted that this myth is of the typical origin type, and furnishes an instance of the manner in which hataal prerogatives come in such. [534]

[The Dance of Nuakmim]

*575 *796 [533] [177] scratches from old songs. The Bella Bella are said to use the same compositions from year to year, and recently some of them, both tunes and foreign words, have been adopted by the Bella Coola. Long ago the marshals would have prohibited this custom even if the user had legitimately obtained the foreign prerogative by marriage.

[205] As the time drows near for Nuákymem to start his voyage, X anxiously consults any of the older ḥaḥuiat who may be calendrical experts as to the exact date. The system of reckoning time is not sufficiently exact to avoid errors, but the day ultimately arrives on which, after much discussion, it is agreed that Nuákymem is leaving. Word is passed around to the singers, who sleep that night in X's house, ready for their duties on the morrow.

Early in the morning X stands up, gazes fondly towards the west, and calls out:

[187] "Once more I see what I saw last year," or some other more or less specific claim to a vision.

It is believed that Nuákymem must round four points before [175] reaching Bella Coola; in fact, his journey beneath the sea is similar to that of a canoe pushing up one of the long fiords.

[203] Some of the marshals are always in readiness and one of them tells a herald to go to every house, repeating what X has said. This serves both to impress the uninitiated, and to notify the ḥaḥuiat of what is about to take place. The messenger does so, and when all have gathered, the singers, seated *575 *796 behind the fire, begin to beat out one of the songs composed 533 during the summer months. The theme is of X's phenomenal eye-sight, due to his patron having sent to him the super-[176] natural being, Nuákymem, at the moment of his departure. This being does not seem to possess corporeal form, but is rather a sight-producing medium. In the song he is often likened to a swift-flying bird; when the uninitiated hear of this they are suitably impressed with the remarkable ability of X at having such a creature sent to him. X, who has donned a [292] head-dress consisting of the white tails of two eagles, dances [illegible] salmon are properly looked after, in fact, he is practically the supernatural archetype of the River Guardian. Swimsmais, "The Mouse," is a supernatural child who crays with the Resident, and whose sole function appears to be the mooring of Nuikymm's craft. Dakdakdimum is sent by Smaisa, who in this connection appears to have human intelligence, to greet Nuikymm, and with him come Smaisa's son, Alalimdum,[illegible] to assist Nuikymm in poling his craft up the river. All these beings are patrons for different kakaciut. The Resident is also known as Smaisis.

The kakaciut assemble in X's house as on the previous occasions; according to some informants two songs are used on this day, others say only one. The people proceed in the usual manner to the lowest house, and make their way upstream. When about half through the village, however, X shrieks out that Nawaitlaw has brought a call to him. The woman and the heralds cry out loudly, X hastily returns to his own house, from which the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the kacia whistles sound from within. Nawaitlaw is one of the supernatural beings who has travelled with Nuikymm for the sole purpose of bringing a call to X. If the calendrical experts have been successful in their reckonings, the November moon will first be visible on the night of this day. Several of the older men admitted that errors were common, and that sometimes four days more had to elapse, in which it was said that Nuikymm was poling up the river. As he passes, his dancers in the different villages receive their calls on successive nights. It is assumed that he can go by several adjacent settlements on the same night, but the kacia season is two or three days shorter in Smaisa and the upper villages than in Sumpa-a. Exact information on this point was unavailable. As already described, Nuikymm travels to Smaisa-a, whence he leaps to Nuqulwaiste and places his pole within the house. All the supernatural beings crowd in after him to wait for Alqunitim, but as soon as the latter enters, Nuikymm seizes his [illegible] Some informants state that there are four of these beings.

Smithsonian E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

pole and starts his journey downstream. 575*

Now that X has received his call, the ceremonial continues 796* for four days more, in a manner typical of kuxiut dances. Only variations from the pattern about to be described will be given [773] in later dance rituals.

X spends the rest of this day on which the call has come 575* to him, the twenty-fourth of the whole rite, within his house.
In the evening a herald summons the kukusiut, this being the 796* night of instémem. In Stuie the call used is: 184

Shinap Stuieas, "Cure, ye Stuie people," because it is 203 believed that a call almost kills a Stuie person. This is probably true for the people of the other villages of the upper valley, but elsewhere this cry is used only when a novice receives his first call. In the lower valley and at Kimsquit the cry is:

Snuperaldimut kukusiut, "Bring light, ye kukusiut."

Care is always taken to use the right expression with refer- 575*
ence to the locality of the dancer's repository, irrespective of where he may happen to be living. 796*

All the kukusiut are expected to attend, in fact, they are 533 glad to do so, but attendance is compulsory for novices only.
When all have assembled, one of the leading singers takes command. The coming of his call is supposed to have made [787] X light-headed, and he must be cured by a frenzied beating of sticks four times repeated. During this X himself remains quiescent. The singers now group themselves into a close circle to compose a song describing the supernatural beings seen by X during the day. As a rule, each man has one or more tunes in his mind which he hums to his associates as he softly beats time. Then another does the same, and this is repeated until unanimity of opinion is reached concerning the most suitable. The leader of the choir fits the proper words to this, assisted by his comrades and perhaps by X himself, or someone well acquainted with his prerogative.[31] As soon as the singers have finished their work they widen their circle and sing the song loudly so that it can be heard and learnt by all,

[31]This song, like the ones used earlier, is sometimes prepared in advance.

Boas/Swanton B-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

attend every kusiut dance. Usually all kukusiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every qutlem he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

575* 796* [302] 292 774 [834] [688]

Alqunsiów enters Nuxqulwuistu at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kukusiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Noákynum seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaiów-a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Noákynum empties a large number of olachen into the river.[10] X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukusiut.

575* 796* 787 773 825

It sometimes happens that no kusiut of whom Noákynum is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Noákynum when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kusiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed Imálundjutqulsun, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

575* 796* 787

[10] Noákynum is accordingly often called Nutlulmum.

[776]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 431 424 [773]

tive. Hence compensation must be given. Payment for wounds inflicted is really parallel to payments to witnesses of any other prerogative; without their assistance X would not have been able to display his right. Long ago Cannibals are said to have had teeth of such sharpness that they were able to take pieces from the bodies of their victims with ease and quickness. In more recent years, it has been customary for a person about to be bitten to cut himself with a knife so that, when the Cannibal seizes him, a simple sucking at the chosen part will bring forth blood. In view of the honour attached to being bitten, no person to whom such a proposal is made would think of refusing. As previously mentioned, Cannibals do not bite other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts, otherwise their victims may comprise any kukusiut.[11] Presents received by those bitten are called "Bandages." At the time of such payment gifts are usually given to all kukusiut, with additional compensation for the sufferers.

*575 *796

Now that X has eaten ordinary food it is supposed that he is again normal, although special precautions must be taken for the rest of the winter since he is subject to returning fits of frenzy. Consequently, he is never allowed to be alone, but is always followed by a number of kukusiut whose function appears to the uninitiated to be to guard them from the Cannibal. The sight of strangers suffices to rouse him, so that when a canoe from Tāl-ja or Kimsquit approaches, a herald bids the uninitiated conceal themselves. On their arrival X rushes to the beach, apparently in spite of his guardians' restraint, and honours several of the strangers by biting them, as he did before he was able to eat ordinary food. On such occasions he then visits every house, attended by his escort, before returning to his own. Inside each dwelling he growls, cries out xwa-, xwa-, xwa-, and sometimes shakes or tears off the [752]

[11] Every effort is made to convince the uninitiated of the severity of the wounds inflicted. For example, if a kusiut woman is suffering from some malady of the breast which requires an operation, a Cannibal bites her there and non-members are told that the incisions, made about the same time, was caused by his teeth.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

described for Kimsquit are the lack of the cannibalistic incubus and the presence of the sqiels. It must be emphasized that these are differences of individual prerogative alone; many Kimsquit Cannibals perform with sqiels, many Bella Coola with incubus. 575* 796* 787 184 424

Although every effort was used to obtain not only the general principles of the rite, but also confirmation of details, it must be remembered that many of these were omitted at the performances observed, so that reliance had to be placed upon the accounts of participants. It is probable that errors of omission have been committed in consequence; these may account for some of the discrepancies, but the most potent factors are undoubtedly lack of uniformity in individual prerogatives, and failure to enforce absolute rigidity in ritual. The two accounts just given by no means illustrate all the variations possible in this dance; others will become evident in descriptions of the rites of Cannibals other than those who can bite the living.

The following is an account of the ritual of a Dog-eating Cannibal, Olxăn·i, of Sunxl. Long, long ago one of the ancestors of this man saw a pack of wolves devouring some dogs. In some mysterious way, which even the Bella Coola do not profess to be able to understand, the power of a wolf entered the beholder so that he was impelled to eat dogs. He was then carried away to the mysterious land above where he saw and was assisted by several supernatural beings. The first Olxăn·i was able to transmit to one of his relatives his ability to eat dogs, and the prerogative has since been carried out by his descendants. Should the holder of the name fail to tell his destined heir the details of the experiences which are to be embodied in his songs, his successor can obtain these from the singers who, of course, are familiar with the themes used on previous occasions. The repository of the name, Olxăn·i, is beneath a huge boulder not far from some carved rocks behind the village of Sunxl (see Plate 6).[3] It is said that many years ago some reckless uninitiated placed poles as levers beneath 575* 796* 787 773 [424] 575* 796* [778]

[3] [see category 116; p 84(F) - ANALYST]

575 type of rivalry can be carried out only during the ceremonial season.

[567] After killing and eating a human being, a Cannibal must [578] conceal himself for a considerable period, sometimes as long as four years. The uninitiated are told that the great power within him has taken him so far into the upper regions that one or more years must elapse before his return. During this time he can be seen only by kukusiut. The writer was told of one unfortunate corpse-eating Cannibal, Xekalus, who was virtually secluded for eight years, since a stone was cast at his feet every time he reappeared, thus forcing him to kill and eat. [123] This name had been dormant for a number of years until conferred on the writer, who failed to uphold the prerogative.

575 One other type of Cannibal prerogative remains to be described, namely, that of biting oneself. This is even less common than that of corpse-eating, being enjoyed only by two individuals, Qelliaohmq of Stmx and Smmq of the Kimsquit River. The following account of the origin of the latter's prerogative was obtained:

> Many years ago, soon after the first people came to this world, the ritual of the kusiut dances was much more exacting than it is at present. At that time the inhabitants of the earth were still endowed with such semi-supernatural powers that they were able to perform rites that people of the present day can represent only with the aid of carpenters' devices. There was then living in one of the villages on the Kimsquit River a certain Smmq who had the prerogative of biting himself. He once went hunting on one of the mountains, and when he failed to return the people were convinced that he had eaten so heartily of his own flesh that he had died. Although search was made for his body, it was not until the following year that a professional hunter found the skeleton. From the position of the bones it was judged that their conclusion was correct: he had killed himself by eating too much of his own flesh. The chiefs and other influential kukusiut held a meeting at which it was decided that henceforth kusiut dances would only be acted, not carried out in reality. The following winter the name and prerogative were transmitted to the son of the dead man, who bit himself, but not sufficiently deeply to cause serious injury.

[The Breaker Dance]

*575 strate their own superiority; they had paid those who had wit-
*796 nessed their prerogative, whereas the Bella Bella Breaker had 648 merely cast a stone without solemnity. Speeches were made,
688 and it was decided that henceforth instead of waging true war
[921] in case of an error in ritual, it would be sufficient if the Breakers exacted punishment by destroying property. That is the explanation offered by this man as to why foreign war-parties have not more frequently upheld the law by raiding. As before stated, the writer is uncertain whether such beliefs are generally held by the Bella Coola and of course the historical accuracy of the information is still more doubtful.

THE Kusiotem DANCES

*575 More awe-inspiring, though less terrifying, than the Can-*796 nibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances, are the kusiotem dances.
424 In these the dancer undergoes mutilation and death, but his [975] supernatural power enables him to return to life—at least so it appears to the credulous non-members. The five dances known as kusiotem are:

The Stomach-Cutting Dance;
The Beheading Dance;
The Drowning Dance;
The Burning Dance; and
The Swallowing of Hot Stones Dance.

Each of these comprises a distinct ceremonial of great complexity, but only one prerogative is required. That is, a man who has the kusiotem right may allow his stomach to be cut one year, and when he next performs will choose to display his ability to swallow hot stones. In this respect, it differs from all other kusiut ceremonies. Although a kusiotem dancer is entitled to exercise his privilege as often as he wishes, provided his marshals consent, the rite is so difficult that it is rarely carried out.

[973] As far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola of today have no elaborate myths dealing with the origin of the kusiotem dances. They believe that they are performed by the supernatural beings in the land above, and that long, long ago Älquntäm and his associates held a meeting at which it was decided to send them down to mortals. They chose as recipient a certain Owirwaltcua of Kimsquit, and the prerogative of giving kusiotem dances has since been possessed by the owner of that name.* The following accounts are of the dances performed by a certain Owirwaltcua whom it will be convenient to call X. He has six repositories, one for each section of his dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with all other kusiut prerogatives, the impetus to dance can come only on receipt of a call from a supernatural patron, the being Kulsläkmidjut in the case of all kusiotem dancers. The uninitiated are told that a call "falls" on the recipient, and moreover that for kusiotem dances it can take place only when the supernatural beings are rushing out of the house above on the entry of the sun at the winter solstice. Thus kusiotem dances should take place after the winter solstice, although this requirement has not been enforced in recent years.

The Stomach-Cutting Dance

In the early summer X decides to exercise his prerogative the following winter. He informs one of the marshals of his wish, and the latter summons his associates to the secret meeting-place where the matter is debated at length. Danger of exposure of details to the uninitiated is so great that the marshals refuse permission for the performance unless the would-be dancer is a man of proved reliability. Once this consent has been obtained, X quietly proceeds with his preparations, laying in supplies of food and asking his kusiut friends for their assistance. When the dances begin, X attends as do all other kukusiut, though his secret mental excitement increases as the time draws near for him to perform. The exact time of starting is discussed with the marshals, and a prelimi-

*There are other kusiotem dancers in Bella Coola.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 land of the salmon early in January, and it is owing to his *796 successful raid that there is a plentiful supply of fish the fol-776 lowing year. The fact that the Bella Coola attribute the same 825 function to Noäkynum provides no difficulties to native philo-184 sophers.

824 "Different individuals have different stories," they say, and the fact that the two are contradictory is a matter of no consequence.

●773 The incidents described in the following myth are always 824 spoken of as having taken place long ago, and yet the coming 825 of Winwina is an annual event, a confusion disconcerting to 539 the investigator though not to the Bella Coola themselves.

Winwina[a] once led a raiding party against the salmon, whose home is far to the west, and against the berries who live in a flat and warm country beyond even the land of salmon. His crew consisted of birds who are spoken of in the myth by unusual designations, said to be either their supernatural or their kusiut names. One informant spoke of these beings as individuals, and only added that they were birds as an afterthought, while another emphasized their avian rather than their human characteristics. This is not surprising, considering that the story belongs to the distant past when birds and human beings were not as clearly differentiated as they now are. Winwina's crew consisted of:

The Bald Eagle, Tcäkwak;

The Hawk (?) species, Änukiqaksaix;

The Raven, 'Łuxwagsälaix, "He Who Talks at Dawn and Wakens Everyone";

The Water Ouzel, Ťlikmaxotälika, "The Walking One";

The Great Blue Heron, Masaxilian, "Long Neck";

The Hermaphrodite, Ala'yao;

The Cormorant, Kwakwäk'la, who joined the expedition at Bella Bella as a passenger;

Four lazy supernatural beings, Kämälälkl.

The expedition was under the especial protection of Kolxeta, a female supernatural shaman, who guided the canoe in which the raiders travelled by the force of her intellect as if it had been a compass. After a lengthy journey, the party reached the land of the salmon where the clouds obligingly drifted low in the heavens so that the fish could not see their [192] [a] A word etymologically connected with wina, the Bella Coola term for raid.

[The Dance of Winwina]

foes. Each of the crew captured a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 773

The Bald Eagle captured the spring salmon, Ollolldimut, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk captured the sockeye salmon, Nunutskentinim, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers." 539

The Raven captured the hump-back salmon, Ănukpimaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers."

The Water Ouzel captured the dog salmon, Sgaieltwa, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the calm weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron captured the cohoe salmon, Kpapstustusailaix, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant captured a variety of dog salmon, Osipax, for the Bella Bella.

The Hermaphrodite was also successful and filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of berry captives.

As soon as the raiders had achieved their purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their booty; since that time there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and released the dog salmon there; that is why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola kukusiut have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reasons given for the use of Winwina as patron likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Ălquntăm placed the name Nunuskumai in a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Qo, near Stuix. He had two reasons for so doing: he did not wish it to be defiled by passersby brushing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the name to be the first to see the return of Winwina. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have purified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nunuskumai has had the kusiut prerogative of seeing Winwina. 424 773 778 [776]

[The Dance of Winwina]

424 Another kusiut derived the prerogative of having Winwina ●773 as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 43). After 776 Raven had seen Noākynum and obtained him for Āllikmnā-losaix, he flew down the fiord once more, observed Winwina, and made him patron for Omqomkilika.

*575 The ritual of the dance of Winwina does not vary, irre-
*796 spective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

[778] This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository [424] is actually in the ocean a few yards from shore.

Winwina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the [184] January moon is full;[97] accordingly X consults the marshals and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a raised enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most kusiut dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the kukusiut happen to be present on the evening of this day, X mounts to the enclosure and sits there, looking westward for the return of Winwina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X [292] wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail feathers, but his face is not blackened.

For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the west, and meanwhile no uninitiated dare even to pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the kukusiut who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning, [805] [97]Owing to faulty calendrical observations the exact date is seldom found.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 kukusiut send back X's call in the usual manner. Then, two
* 796 by two, the masks are cast on to the fire and the ceremonial is over.

THE DANCE OF THE TALLY POSTS

[773] As previously described, a tally post is erected in the land [777] above for every Bella Coola at birth. As long as this memorial [753] is upright and firm, the individual to whom it refers enjoys health and prosperity, but if it becomes crooked he falls ill.
[424] The uninitiated believe that several kukusiut have the prerogative of climbing to the land above during the ceremonial season and straightening leaning tally posts. This is such a
[178] useful ability that it must have exercised great influence on the uninitiated in early days, but the rite has not been properly
[164] carried out since the smallpox epidemic in the last century. The following account was obtained from two old men [115] who remembered the manner in which a certain Onikoil of Tsmoil performed a year or two before "The Great Sickness." Neither of the informants was a kusiut at the time, but they were able to supplement their recollections of the dance with what they afterwards learnt when initiated, so the following account is probably accurate in outline though deficient in detail. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X, and describe the ceremony in the present tense. It was also performed at Kimsquit many years ago.

The rite resembles kusiotem dances in many respects. X must obtain the consent of the marshals during the preceding summer, and their permission is refused unless the prospective dancer is a man of proved discretion. If they agree, X asks a [283] number of kukusiut women to help him by making a very long and strong rope of nettle fibre. At intervals the work-women gather for the purpose in the back-room of X's house, taking [688] care that no uninitiated see what they are doing. Every effort is made to ensure that there is no flaw in the rope as a break would be a serious matter, punishable by death.

Near the winter solstice the marshals choose a suitable time

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 natural, any of them can act in this capacity, though it is *796 usually added that the animal in question is the one resident 776 in the land above. One patron of this type is the ordinary 825 river bull-head. It is said that long ago this fish wanted to follow his friends, the salmon, to the ocean, but was persuaded [773] to remain in the river to act as nurse to their children in his house, the river bottom. Early in the world's history he objected to people exposing his dwelling, that is, pulling up the stones from the river-bed where he was wont to lie, and showed [821] his resentment by sending a very cold wind. Ever since that [226] time boys are not allowed to fish for bull-heads in winter. As far as could be learnt, this dance has no special features.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL HERRING-HEAD

One of the supernatural beings living in the land above who is patron for a certain kusiut is the head of a female herring. Little is known of this being, even her appearance is subject to [532] doubt. For the nebusam of her protégé, a number of masks representing herring, as well as human-like beings, are prepared. When the uninitiated are present, one of the disguised figures calls to his fellows to bring their nets and capture the fish.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL DOG SALMON

Another fish dwelling in the land above is Dakdakänus, the supernatural dog salmon. He is patron of some kusiut but the ritual of the dance, known as esnäxmunaix, was not obtained. The similarity between Dakdakänus and Dakdakänmem, those who await Nedkynim, appears merely to be an accidental re-[192] semblance in terminology, dependent upon a stem meaning "to come," or "coming." The significance of this in connection with the supernatural dog salmon could not be ascertained.

THE DANCE OF Almoqltaikila

*575
*796 776
184
[755]

In Kimsquit it is believed that Ano'likwolsaix has a husband, Almoqltaikila, who is patron for several kusiut dancers. His function is to restore to life any uninitiated who chance to

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(c) An incident in the dancer's ancestral myth; one of his forefathers succeeded in shaming a rival chief. 533*

(d) Many origin myths describe houses, provided by Ālquntām for the first settlers, which expanded of their own accord to accommodate guests at potlatches. The reference is to one of these, although it was impossible to record the myth itself. [773]

Song Used for Qowi of Kimsquit(a)

A Pālxsollaix Rouse yourselves for it,	stā'ābsaolt ye residents!	Skikiyukipdai See which is my supernatural being(b).	aiyadisiyutalis

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Nexliwakxtuksdax At the bottom(c)	dukläliyimsdax the first-comer(d)	skānuamstāxis seated himself	was·walxtāmilais of our provided food(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 8b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. Qowi was his mother's brother.
(b) The dancer's associates are invited to gather to witness his performance.
(c) That is: The mouth.
(d) Referring to one of the dancer's earliest ancestors.
(e) The reference is to the Kimsquit River which teems with salmon; the dancer describes the fish as the fare provided for his ancestral family by Ālquntām.

Song Used for Qowi of Kimsquit (a)

A or B(b) Litwāmaxollaix Go out and see,	ye·stā'ābsaolt ye residents!	Tutwinamisandai It is apparent(c) diyālxolsai what travels everywhere(d);	diqwnutsituts·a what brings our food(e)	dunultsāmāthmlo from its home(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Diymaqolsn That is	distālimsdax the chief	Łixlixkilko(g) Łixlixkilkka;	ditsqwaqwakmis he carries a heavy burden(h)	[776] [424]
wānupāsdai in his canoe	lonoltsāmāthmlo from his land.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 8a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Only two of the three parts are remembered.
(c) The actual meaning of tutwinam is: What is Apparent. Its use in this case is, therefore, an untranslatable pun.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (d) A somewhat boastful reference to the power of the dancer's tutwinam.
[776] (e) Another arrogant reference to the tutwinam.
(f) In Bella Bella.
[424] (g) This is a Bella Bella being of whom little is known by the Bella Coola. The right to use him as tutwinam came from a remote ancestor.
(h) Presumably, the dancer's right to perform.

Fragment of a Song Used for Ḳaqaix, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Alḳusmaswin	wastixwnimunp	Sâkxnnsnâmâsu
Protect your faces,	you quiet people!	Is always shooting arrows

kwalhntaiyadslaix
my crest(b).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C have been forgotten.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Aqtwainu	kâsḳlmaxwamdinitl
Don't do that,	they will cover us with valuables(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to be an extremely ancient one, used by some of the earliest settlers; the tune is said to be entirely different from any recent nusak compositions.

[424] (b) The dancer's crest was the wasp, an insect which is believed to sting by the discharge of invisible, minute arrows. This admonition to the guests to hide their [825] faces was, of course, a boasting reference to the goods which would be distributed at the approaching potlatch. None of the first settlers was sent down to earth
[773] as a wasp, but several, including Nedkila, were guided and assisted by those insects to such an extent that they have been regarded as crests.

[558] (c) It is customary, when quoting this song, to add this final remark. It is related that, many years ago, a Kimsquit man used his wasp prerogative, but was shamed [424] at the potlatch by being inundated with goods from a rival. Since that time, none of his descendants has dared to use the right and the admonition against doing so has become almost proverbial.

Fragment of a Song Used for Nuqwihmlaix of Kimsquit(a)

A Qaxsdjilkwas	skalḳolmildai	Diḳwpalydusdai	wastupâsâls
We all go	to see(b).	He(c) informs us	of what he carries.

B and C No more of this song is remembered, though it was used at a potlatch about 1910.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 59b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
(b) Meaning: To gaze upon something supernatural.
(c) An unnamed supernatural being.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

ḳmusmālixmenuyet	aiyuwasoyo·nxwals
he circled and returned	Sonyᵂ.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 39a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) A sign of victory, eagerly watched for when a war-party is returning. [727]
(c) A reference to Wiwat, one of Sinuyetl's first ancestors in the beginning of time. He made a journey to the Skeena, returning from there with canoe and paddles decorated with sun designs. The exploits of his descendant are compared with those of his pattern, that is, his first forbear. Such references to family history are sources of pride to the chief being honoured. [773]
(d) That is: From whom I am descended.

Fragment of a Xe·tla Song(a) Used by Qwoyusditxas of Kimsquit(b)

A Kaiyumsāmālian	di stāhaiāmydai	kaiiḳainuxits
Presently he will be ashamed	that chief	if I get aiyadilāliālsdai my copper.

(a) Both tune and theme are said to be of Kwakiutl origin. [177]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 34b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

Fragment of a Xe·tla Song Used by Sinuyetl of Kimsquit(a)

A Sānusiḳqomosīsundai	yao (b) diḳxetcaiyailtumdai	Oldiḳaxlāmitlīsundai
They are smiling,	greetings to the out-stretched glass!	They drink

sewas qemcuadja
the food of white men(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C have been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 41b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Literally: Hello!
(c) This song was used at a potlatch where the fare provided was whisky. The tune is said to be very ancient although new words were composed for the occasion. [556] [279]

A'alk Songs

A'alk songs somewhat resemble sisaok ones and, like them, are difficult to collect completely. Parts of many are remem- [575] [796]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 bered, but the rites in which they were used have been practically discontinued for several years so that unabridged versions are almost impossible to obtain. A'alk themes vary according to the ceremonies in which they are used. For potlatches, they consist of incidents from ancestral myths; whereas for non-ceremonial occasions following the kusiut season, they deal with current events. The following examples are divided into these two classes.

[575]
[790]

THEMES DRAWN FROM ANCESTRAL MYTHS

Qi'aqa Song Used for Nuximastlaix, a Man of Kimsquit(a)

A Yeyutsamatstolaix	dislimilsudai	dusqwunlaixdsuldai
They give valuable counsel,	my goods(b);	they formulate their own opinion

oldiqemastsdulsdai | aiyaskst-aiamkilsdai | oldiamtsinutilsdai concerning to whom of those seated in my house I shall give presents(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ka'alaiyusdjmalsandja	skakilqimodjmils	Wastlwinmodjdumant'
I speak loftily	of everything(d).	Through them(e)

silqualstlimodsnals	ithmsteamdidslls	aiyanamanskstalsals
I become elevated,	my power to give potlatches (is)	my male relatives(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Kanunukanmidzmals	dusnut'qanals-kidax	dununulqanmtskidax
Presently I shall stand	within the box	at the corner door(g), sualsaldimutdamkis	dusnushmnals-kidax	lmalasdimutsudax

where flowed to all(h)	the moose-skins(i)	of Twalasdimut(j)(k).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 31a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The goods which I am about to distribute advise me. This statement is not to be taken literally.

(c) It was impossible to obtain a translation of each subdivision.

(d) Refers to the dancer's many prerogatives.

(e) Refers to his male relatives.

[424] (f) The dancer had obtained several prerogatives from ancestors, traced patrilineally.

[773] (g) A reference to the dancer's origin myth (I, p. 329). The house of his first forefather, uyuyayut, had its door in a back corner instead of the centre front.

(h) That is: Whence were distributed at potlatches.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 B Yayuinmuiqudukidux — He agreed | xhālālimdux — to being dropped(c), | ninilitsqududux — he spoke the eagle language cheerfully.

Aiyaxmcuxudux
Xemcus(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The last part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 32a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) That is: Which my forefathers displayed.
(c) It is said that some of the first settlers were unwilling to be sent down to earth.
[773] (d) Xemcus, one of the dancer's first ancestors, came to earth in eagle form and accordingly spoke the language of these birds.

Fragment of a Tlaiyakam Song Used for Sinuqal of Kimsquit

Nuxlimaktuksing — It is ready; | dak'lalimdux — his . . . . . .(a) that was sent down | xhanuamai'xis — has taken its stand | nanuxl — at Dean River(b).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

[424] (a) The term signifies any object, whether tangible or intangible, sent down from above in the beginning of time. In this case it refers to the dancer's Hatyakam prerogative.
(b) A reference to the coming to earth of Smaum. See vol. I, p. 332.

THEMES DRAWN FROM CURRENT EVENTS

Nuxqual Song Used for Nuqaqémis, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Tcālyaxhmdux — Let us stop | xhālixwilituxip — elevating(b) him(c); | nmkāxtualālis — he uses without authority

xwixwaistadimuxs a chief's name(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Qastirwakdukhm — Is feeble | yao dilāmnuyāmlals — the dancer(e); | squlipump — let him accept from me | ali'alim-idals — what he likes(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Alaisdudux — He was likewise(g) | dizisālaxlāmts — my first forefather(h); | squlalikudals — I summon guests

alyamaiwamalals for what I am about to display(i).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (a) Recorded as song VII D 9c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
[776] (b) Presumably a reference to Neäkṡmm, the dancer's kusiut patron(?).
[192] (c) The meaning of this word is not known; it is considered to be quite distinct from the identical term in Chinook jargon for "deer."
(d) The meaning of the whole song is extremely obscure.

Marriage Songs

*533 As marriage songs, two distinct classes may be considered:
585 A. Those used at weddings;
[586] B. Shaming songs used in connection with divorce rites.
[578] The former are said to have been handed down from the distant past and consist of a few almost meaningless words. The latter are composed whenever required, and consist of foul allusions to the person being ridiculed.

WEDDING SONGS

Stuux Marriage Song(a)

Nunuṡqwäldimutqwanitl	yao ixläqwlaiyulao	ältusaḳwnainuqis
Danced for joy	Qwlaiyu(b)	when they brought al'ailminanaodax	yao dutqasyr-msudax
the girl	from the place of light(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 3b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

[773] (b) Qwlaiyu came down with uyuyuyut in the beginning of time, and brought,
[424] as a gift from Alquntäm, the prerogative of dancing at weddings. He landed at Kimsquit, and no explanation is given by the Bella Coola for the use of this song by the people of Stuux.

[773] (c) A reference to a marriage among the first people on earth. One of Qwlaiyu's associates married a woman whose relatives had brought light with them from above.

Kimsquit Marriage Song(a)

Sä'lälälimqwsudukt	yao daxomtnlalaoals	wastäqel'ynasdomdax
They sent down	Xomtsla(b)	with his relative yao ixläqwläyulaoals
Qwlaiyu (c)(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 2b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(b) Xemtsla came down from above with uyuyuyut in the beginning of time; he had the prerogative of dancing at weddings. 533*

(c) Qulaiyu likewise came down with uyuyuyut, bringing the same prerogative as Xemtsla. 585

(d) The rest of this song has been forgotten. [773] [424]

Fragmentary and short as are these songs, they are more elaborate than many used at weddings. These frequently contain no words, merely an ancient tune accompanied by humming and meaningless choral interjections.[4]

SHAMING SONGS

533*
586
578
[585]

Songs of this type are sung by the singers while the principal performer dances; in this respect, they resemble susaok compositions and differ entirely from the abbreviated and individualistic wedding songs. Though used primarily to shame a runaway husband or wife, one is sometimes employed on other occasions.

Song Used for Nełwma(a), a Kimsquit Woman(b)

A Yelakeig	dalima	Mustlos	sālnaixtus	dāmnalicaiya'a
Has too much	looted	Mustlos(c)	further,	he has taken with her tcakwadkustumal	dāmnālicaiya'a

my child, Tcakwadkus(d),	he has taken with her(e).

[103]

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sānołłoldimut	sawāstāhmmtsalis	ikāt-ākānutsaixts
Be brave,	mothers(f),	when I speak of your ugliness(g);

olāshdjāstlimanep	wanusłwdsātsahmyalis
you have had much trouble,	your breasts have become long and pendant.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) This word means "The one (feminine) with the very hairy pudenda." The woman in question had run away from her husband and the nickname was conferred at this shaming Hlaiyākam rite. [551] [553]

[4] Two examples of such wordless songs were collected. They are song VII D 2a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard, and song VII D 3a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

sisłiyuktemisandax	Tłaowika'lis	Tinłqlnmainandax
all, everywhere, know of	Tłaowika'lis(e).	They(f) crossed repeatedly yao oldutcawutsudax to Tcawat(ff).

(a) The first four parts of this song were recorded as song VII D 7a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It is said to have been composed about 1870 for a chief whose son had been drowned. It was later used for a nephew of Łowi, and will henceforth be employed only by members of that family. [424]

(b) That is: Why has my son died?

(c) It was impossible to obtain translations of each subdivision.

(d) Referring to the dead son.

(e) That is: The supernatural being, the chief, has taken him. The reference is to the deceased's crest animal, a common rhetorical device in songs.

(f) An ancestor of the deceased and one of the first settlers of the world. He came down to Rivers Inlet.

(g) Tłakwakila is said to have widened, or even to have made, the principal river at Rivers Inlet. [773]

(h) Tłakwakila came in the form of a raven.

(i) Referring to Łwinas.

(j) It was impossible to obtain translations of these two subdivisions. Łwinas, now dead, will be irremovably connected with the scenes of his first ancestor.

(k) Meaning Raven.

(l) The mother of Łwinas who had died several years earlier.

(m) The theme now changes as if Łowi were addressing Łwinas.

(n) Referring to Łwinas.

(o) Refers to the supernatural beings who rouse the sun and moon and thus cause their light to shine on earth. Mention is made of these in Łwinas's origin myth. [776]

(p) The theme changes again from direct address to Łwinas to a description of what he will be doing owing to his ancestral history. [821]

(q) That is: He will be in the form of one of the guardians of light when his life descends, at a memorial potlatch, to Rivers Inlet.

(r) That is: That was what Wałku brought. Wałku, another of Łwinas's first ancestors, could not find a suitable place to settle in the beginning of time. After fruitless wandering, a whale emerged, vomited violently, and was changed to stone. The animal thus became Goose Island, and its vomit the rugged rocks at one end. Wałku settled on that island. [773] [823]

(s) This song has three third parts.

(t) That is: The first people, with their shaman-like power, had just appeared.

(u) Referring to ur-wałaisa, another of Łwinas's first ancestors, who also came to earth at Rivers Inlet.

(v) At that time the routes between different settlements had not been discovered.

(w) More specifically, the coarse, long breast feathers.

(x) ur-wałaisa used a supernatural canoe which frequently changed to eagle feathers. [773]

(y) Refers to Sea-lion Island where he and his descendants used to hunt.

(z) Refers to the Bella Bella; several of Łwinas's relatives had married members of that tribe.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(h) That is: I incorporate myself into.

(i) The reference is to another of Sinaqut's myths dealing with the coming to earth of Hamat near Kimsquit. Nunuḡmals was the name of his house. 533*

(j) Referring to Goose Island once more.

(k) That is: Goose Island where our relatives, the Bella Bella, get their food, had just emerged and become visible. It was impossible to obtain a separate translation of these two subdivisions.

(l) Referring again to Goose Island. This small piece of land is shaped like a whale, and, as already described, it was originally one. Alqanstam bade the animal come to the surface to be changed to stone; then Wałks settled there as soon as the water had dried from what had been its back. [773] [823]

(m) The literal translation of each subsection may be inaccurate.

Song Used for Yełałs of Kimsquit(a)

A Yenaqłandax	uałnałndał	sałnaixlnndai	disenq"udai
It is good(b);	our(c)!	has lifted	the sky(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Qaqmaxqwłsandai(e)	disiałsdai	sałaiyałdumdai
He was Raven(f),	the supernatural one	when he descended dinałnaiktłsdai

the post(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Snuqułaxłnndai	disłłhmydai	yeyłłesdai	sałiłłisdai
He is bright(h),	the chief	Yełałs;	he carries sałsrułłłklaixs	dałałłłsudai

a unique	copper(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 47a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been composed over one hundred years ago and since used repeatedly.

(b) With the significance of: It is highly satisfactory.

(c) The meaning of this word is obscure. It refers to the crest of Yełałs with the added implication of a memorial. It applies to the memorial rite being given. [765]

(d) When a chief dies, it is said that the people in their grief feel as if the sky were pressing them down. A memorial rite lessens their sorrow and lifts the burden. [152]

(e) When this word was being sung for the phonograph, the singer erred and replaced it by part of the first word of the third part.

(f) That is: He was in the form of a raven. The reference is to one of the first ancestors of Yełałs.

(g) Meaning one of the posts which stretched between earth and sky in the beginning of time. [773]

(h) This refers to Yełałs. He was formerly weighed down with grief, but by giving a memorial rite he is like the sun as it shines out brilliantly from behind the clouds.

(i) A reference to a special kind of copper mentioned in the chief's origin myth.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) Recorded as song VII D 55, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tsi-is Charlie and Steamboat Annie. 533*

(b) So many of Yaaka's ancestors had been drowned that he considered such a fate to be an inheritable tendency and mourned accordingly. This song was composed for a memorial potlatch held after the drowning of three of his sons. [761] [827]

(c) Xem means, literally, the successive rising of the sun from day to day; it has therefore, the significance of: The span of life is shortening. [195]

(d) This wail replaces the usual wordless chorus.

(e) Raven. This is one of his rarely used chief's names.

(f) The reference is to an incident retated about Raven in the beginning of time. He made, and gave life to a son who was his chief joy and delight. Alquntam wondered what the creature might be and sent down one of his eagle-like supernatural birds to seize him. Raven, ignorant of the reason for his son's loss and with no idea that he was being carefully guarded, was absolutely disconsolate. The myth is recorded in vol. I, p. 83. [773]

Shaman Songs

In contrast to the carefully prepared and logically worded mourning songs, many of those used by shamans are extremely incoherent. This is natural in view of the belief, already described, that the words and tune are given to a sick person at the time that he is cured. Those who recover from an illness are convinced that they must have received a supernatural visitation, and at once begin to ponder on the song brought to them at that time. A person of imaginative temperament easily persuades himself that the words which begin to form in his mind were actually brought by an agent, and, having thus deluded himself, it is easy for him to convince others. The coherence of the text thus depends upon the ability of the patient, a factor which explains the extreme lack of skill in many compositions. The examples here given are, perhaps, unusually complete. 533* 756 [753]

Song Used by Nisitsamlaix(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Wax-ulwalhsmqmda	ahtsinisitsamlaixs
In the beginning(c)	the life-giving power(d) was made;
yao dial'a'yaitsal	ahtsalsimsadai
that is what we have given	within them(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (f)

*533 (i) A reference to the leading supernatural beings.
(j) That is: Unable to participate in the meeting at which it was decided to send the dance down to Smnkhā'hs.

Third Song Used for Smnkhā'hs, a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(a)

A Satlamhdjuā'ldumilmlu	djiisiqsustamqulcuāl;	sinukuhcmāl;
All(b) have failed,	they(c) have decided	to send it(d) down sumuklumstantlamlı to mortals(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Wasmisthlum-alnkdai	dalāl-skumdai	yao dislqumlaichmdai
No one soils	what we see(f);	it warms us(g), alamastlatlo

hail, Sumstlatlo(h)!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Smmqsinmmalitsdai	yao dimisiljmaltumdai	dihallpsdjudimtmhalidai
I heard the growling of a smmq(i)		as they(j) were preparing matters(k), smusaik-alsinmqwal;

the skeleton(l) was as a bed to it(m).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 24a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, composed by Kimsquit Alec, was used during the hamatsa season of 1923-4.
(b) Referring to the supernatural beings.
(c) Referring to the supernatural beings.
(d) Referring to the Fungus dance.
(e) The significance is that the supernatural beings, having failed to raise the Fungus, have sent it down for human beings to try. The words used imply that it has been sent as a patient to a doctor. This boastful phrasing is to impress the uninitiated.
(f) That is: What we see, the Fungus, is bright, shining, and unsullied.
(g) The meaning is obscure, perhaps that the sight of the supernatural object strengthens the beholders.
(h) No reason could be learnt for this reference to Sumstlatlo.
(i) The composer assumed that the dancer's patron was a smmq. It was impossible to obtain an individual translation of these two subdivisions.
(j) Referring to the supernatural beings.
(k) That is: As they were discussing the sending down of the Fungus.
[773] (l) This refers to a skeleton, belonging to Alpuntsin, which remains in the rear part of Nuxmalkin. It is frequently mentioned in song but no detailed information about it could be obtained.
(m) That is: The Fungus was resting upon the skeleton. Such references, not fully understood even by the hamatsa, increase the awe and wonder of the uninitiated.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(d) This is addressed to the uninitiated, one of whom has guessed correctly. 533*
(e) The assumption is that this has been done with the aid of Anuqwatnikmas.
(f) Referring to the supernatural beings above.
(g) That is: To utter her supernatural droning cry.
(h) The reference is to Sne'olnlt: Alqunism, the dancer's patron. The meaning of the whole passage is obscure but seems to be as follows: Sne'olnlt: Alqunism was perturbed at the coming of the call to his protégé and, to help their fellow, the other supernatural beings called upon Snitmaw-a to drone. This sound has a healing effect and would, therefore, enable human beings to solve the mystery. The phraseology is intentionally obscure. [776]

Song Used for Willie Johnston(a), a Bella Coola Thunder Dancer(b)

A Skumalnstwinmatnals	didundukw-ildai	sipiyaxtam-allmandai
I have just heard	it(c) coming down;	it changes its voice

alnalalilals above our heads(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Stirwutsamlimililika	dikuxistitsnasnals	yas skaskimanldisdai
They asked plainly	the kusiut(e)	to lead the frenzied beating of sticks(f)

sewaqalwailals
at the gathering of the supernatural beings in the land above.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Saalikmanlumililika	wakalalwalalimats	dizwuilit'limisandai
Too many to be seen	are those called(g);	when they increased diwuiyumalidimaldumdai

the water(h).

(a) The Bella Coola name of the dancer was unfortunately omitted.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 57, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, announcer and prompter, assisted by Tal-io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(c) Referring to the call.
(d) It is doubtful whether this statement is more than a rhetorical device to impress the uninitiated.
(e) Referring to Thunder.
(f) Thunder, one of the most powerful of the supernatural kukusiut, has the prerogative of leading the orchestra of stick beaters to "cure" a fellow-dancer. The song states that his fellows requested him to perform this function. [776]
(g) That is: So many are in attendance that they cannot be recognized. The reference is to Thunder's dance in the lead above, for which the supernatural kukusiut assemble from all directions. [773]
(h) The allusion is to the rain which follows Thunder's dance. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Used for Xelitmai, Combined with Mourning for Yäkotlas(a)

*533 A Alsiyalsilulsla | wasilliyulsm-idjutalis | sinisayenilisiandja
I kept talking to myself as if I were crazy when I was near(b) alnuskäsiutsta

the repository(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Yao ka'änänuskkisqudax | tsiayäkotlaiyas-udax | lostäxälämamtomdax
Presently, now, | Yäkotlas(d) | will do as yao tatitilitskidax

the eagle-voiced one(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Qänimbalimqulandax | yao xwäskimsitäm-is-kidax | yao alisksolitstomdax
They(f) give him | the covering(g); | hail to the provided food

aiaxemcuasudax | däsialkiqalocimdax | yao tätutwinmix^{w}dax
of Xemcua(h); | the smoking(i) | is visible(j).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 18a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The exact relationship between Xelitmai and Yäkotlas could not be learnt.

(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

(c) This first part of the song follows the usual kusiut pattern; the words are arranged as if the neophyte were addressing the uninitiated.

(d) The dead man who is being mourned. The theme is now of the usual mourning type.

[773] (e) A reference to Xemcua, one of the first settlers of the earth and an ancestor of Yäkotlas. As described (I, p. 326), Xemcua came to earth in eagle form and remained calling for food. This is an onomatopoeic word.

(f) Presumably referring to the supernatural beings.

(g) That is: The form of an eagle. The theme continues as a mourning song, describing the fate of the deceased.

(h) That is: The food brought down by Xemcua as a gift from Älqustäm. Olachen was the provender supplied to him.

(i) A reference to Mount Swaky, from which flames are said to have burst forth within the last century and a half.

(j) Swaky, being the road of Xemcua, is delighted to welcome one of his descendants and shows his pleasure by blazing merrily.

Song Used for Älokänam, Combined with Mourning for Yäkotlas(a)

A Älmat-ällimaqo | yao nuskäsiutsta | skänuyälrwolstumlandai
They(b) measure | the repository; | it is opened allomälämthoali to its extreme bottom(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

B Istewixwenukuäls | wałwatlłuntsialaoals | sawa'aminälosdisdax
It is so(d); | the two(e) crests | had seated himself between yeakotlaiosudax | dänuxtmmdimutlsndax | äldiskwatstsiämlidals

Yäkotlas(f); | he binds them together(g) | and the name likewise(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Was·amłwatlłmmqwdudai | umätakstłominilsdai | diälisaiyäk'limdai | Älquntäm was the first creator in the beginning of time; we still profit from dislquntämaotskials | Dinmłwatlłnosamdai | disuxsuxłälaixgaoals

his works(i). | As my memorial (?) is | Suxsuxłälaix(j).

(a) The exact relationship between Älokänam and Yäkotlas could not be ascertained. The first twelve subdivisions of this song were recorded as song VII D 52, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Täl·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie.

(b) Presumably referring to the supernatural beings.

(c) This part of the song is worded as if the neophyte were addressing the uninitiated; the meaning is intentionally obscure, though obviously boastful.

(d) That is: It is true.

(e) Referring to two crests owned by the deceased; the song has changed to a mourning theme.

(f) That is: Yäkotlas has seated himself midway between the two crests.

(g) By incorporating himself into both.

(h) The whole song was extremely difficult to translate and this reference to a name was absolutely unintelligible.

(i) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions; in fact, even the free translation may be inaccurate.

(j) Suxsuxłälaix appears in the dancer's ancestral myth, but no real explanation could be obtained for mentioning him at this point.

Song Used for Łulul'nimut, Combined with Mourning for Yäkotlas(a)

A Skalł'makxomälitsdax | dänusumsmaiyudjalisdja | oldotlnänulitsdax
He(b) meets a supernatural being who gives him the words of a mourning song

skulnkänmutsmilsdax | ciälämänäkänalts | oldälkawamsmisdax for his father; then he proceeds to the land above(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Solipahmalsndax | yaiyakotlaiosudax | skanuamtsialhisdax
Wants the best | Yäkotlas(d); | he sits down within dutäkwähilleodax | dukwalxwalulitdax | kämätseyo·ngwskidax

he expansible house(e); | they lengthen | Kämätseyow.

[773]

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*593 C Ka'asqwmälosqwinndax | Ťlakwakilasudax | ałałäliasudax
Is like a fire | Ťlakwakila(g) | the copper of(h);

ski·kpältomqwinndax | ydukukpiyasudax | aiałnukiadjidax
has carried him round(i) | his grandfather | Nukiadji(j).

(a) Recorded as songs VII D 5 and VII D 6a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. VII D 5 is a two-minute record, and as the song was too long, the last part of it was concluded on VII D 6. This resembles an ordinary mourning song, and is said to have been used formerly as one at Kimsquit. During the season of 1923-4, however, it was used at a kusiut dance given by Łułul'nimut, son of the deceased Yäkotles.

(b) Referring to the dead Yäkotles.

(c) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these six subdivisions, and even the free interpretation may be inaccurate.

(d) That is: Yäkotles wants the best. The meaning is that the dead man is seeking out the finest elements in his ancestral myths.

[773] (e) Referring to a house at Nusqałst used by his first forefathers; it had the power of expanding so as to provide room for all who came to potlatches.

(f) The name of the house.

[551] (g) A Bella Bella name owned by Yäkotles.

(h) That is: The copper of Yäkotles is bright and gleaming like a fire. The reference is to a copper mentioned in the deceased's ancestral myth; the article furbished itself in delight at the sight of one of its first owner's ancestors. Such boasting remarks are frequent in mourning songs.

(i) In the sense of: Around the places where his first forefathers ranged.

(j) That is: His grandfather, Nukiadji, carried him around the scenes of the experiences of his first forefathers. Nukiadji was a Kwakiutl chief.

Song Used for Siyman·a, Combined with Mourning for Yäkotles(a)

A Sumqqwmidjutailaitsłłuł | a'liqayawidjuthłi | dasälpälolqłts
I was careful, I watched myself, when I felt strange(b); I rose above the ground(c) when I reached(d) ałnuskäiutsła the repository(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

[551] B Skämälqukainuhmqw' | yesänuximäxotsdax | yeixwuhdimuhłnandax
As soon as he saw | Sänuximäxots(f), | the lordly mountain(g)

yao dialkpälosximdax illuminated itself(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Nuyälpkimmqwłnanitł | aiałn·xłm'nuitł | xudutsu·łmisłiki
Rejoiced | Qakms(i); | she welcomed him(j)

łutstcäkwałotłskilax to the expansible house(k).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) Recorded as song VII D 19a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4; the exact relationship of Sigman·a to Yākotles could not be learnt. 533*

(b) Sigman·a was being initiated into the kusiut society and this part of the song describes, for the benefit of those who were not members, her experiences when she discovered her repository. The theme states that she felt peculiar when she reached its neighbourhood.

(c) An expression inserted to impress the uninitiated.

(d) Individual translations for these three subdivisions could not be obtained.

(e) When this song was being recorded on the phonograph, the performer erred and substituted for this subdivision the following:

ālāmuntaiasuals where I went.

(f) One of the names of Yākotles. The theme here changes to the usual mourning type, describing the experiences of the deceased. [551]

(g) Referring to Mount Swakg near Kimsquit.

(h) This mountain is said to have been an active volcano within the last century and a half. The first ancestors of Yākotles landed upon its slopes, hence the mountain became wrapped up with their fortunes and showed its delight at welcoming one of their descendants.

(i) That is: Ḷāxmɔ rejoiced. She was one of his first ancestresses.

(j) That is: Ḷāxmɔ welcomed Yākotles.

(k) A house which figures in the origin myth of Yākotles. It had the ability of expanding to accommodate as many guests as assembled. [773]

Song Used for . . . . . (a), Combined with Mourning for Ḷomānakwala(b)

A Tlā'anslāmaadja | ālāslainulitsdai | diqsultimutlsandai
I(c) was in trouble, I was in fear, when I saw illuminate itself(d) dismātlakilasudai

the place of petrified power(e). [773]

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Kānulnustimutqwlsandai | Ḷomānakwalasudax | ikān·exliwan·uxim
Is now established(f) | Ḷomānakwala(g) | at the place of aldiskwatstaāmlisdax his established name(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (i)

C Kanuyālrikimmqwlsandax | yes·ānuximāxotsdāx | skāi·kpātltoyuqwlsandax
Welcomed him(j) | Sānuximāxots(k) | and guided him around ālāpwalhuntalāmlisdax

the places of his crests(l).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (a) A female infant whose name was not known by the singers from whom this song was obtained.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 53, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tāl·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Tāl·io Charlie, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of an infant great-granddaughter of Ḷomānakwala.

(c) Referring to the neophyte. This part of the song is worded for the benefit of the uninitiated.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

[773] (e) This might apply to any mountain where a group of the first settlers landed, but is said to refer to Nūsḳalst, the home of the dead man's ancestral family. The implication of the theme is that the mountain erupted; Mount Nusḳalst is not regarded as a volcano, and it is possible that the composer confused the origin myth of the dead man with that recorded in the preceding four songs in which there are references to the illumination of Mount Swaḳz at Kimsquit. Such a mistake would not be impossible in view of the decadence of Bella Coola culture.

(f) In the sense of: Has rejoined his ancestral crest.

(g) That is: Ḷomānakwala has rejoined his ancestral crest.

(h) That is: At the place where the first to possess his name came to earth.

(i) An unusually long wordless chorus separates the second from the third part.

(j) That is: Ḷomānakwala.

(k) That is: Sānuximāxets welcomed Ḷomānakwala. The former was one of the latter's first ancestors.

(l) A reference to the localities where his first forefathers came to earth.

[776] Song Used for Lilitwumlaix(a), Combined with Mourning for Ḷomānakwala(b)

A Aiyailaixdimutkisandai | tapuxpuxqumlaixḳodax | sawasālnimuhmistax |
All is ready, proceed | thou "Opener"(c) | who brings what puts yao ditcaitcaiyutslaixao an end to all our grief(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ālticiakumlimilnka | dastālkmqayakesldax
He(e) is waiting with outstretched hand | for the chief(f);

skānuilum·ilxwisdax | yutcākwaākaiyustudai
now he stands upon | Tcākwaākis(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

[773] C Skānuamtalālsisqwdax | sawaicākwālal·dadax | skāsnunlkals·minqwisandax
Sits down within | the expansible house(h) | Snunlkals(i) xusānulkmdimutsudai on Sānulkmdimut(j).

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) "The Beautifier." This is one of the appellations of the infant's patron, the otter, so-called because people adorn themselves whenever an Otter dance is given. 533*

(b) Recorded as song VII D 16a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of Lilitwumlaix, a female infant distantly related to Ḷomānakwala. [776]

(c) A reference to Otter, the neophyte's patron. The significance is that chiefs have an opportunity to display, "open," their generosity by lavish giving at every Otter dance. [556]

(d) The elaborate ritual of an Otter dance dispels grief. It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions.

(e) Referring to one of the dead man's ancestors. The theme changes, and is henceforth of the usual mourning pattern.

(f) Referring to the dead Ḷomānakwala.

(g) "The Loftiest." This is one of the many designations for Nusḍalst, one of the dead man's crests.

(h) A reference to the expanding house described in the dead man's origin myth. [773]

(i) One of Ḷomānakwala's names.

(j) This is another name for Nusḍalst. The meaning of the whole part is: Ḷomānakwala sits down within the expansible house on Mount Nusḍalst. There is the added implication that he seats himself as does his supernatural namesake in the land above.

Non-Ceremonial Songs

The Bella Coola are not an intensely musical people. Singing in unison is an essential feature of every ceremonial rite, but, when alone, an individual seldom bursts into melody from sheer joie de vivre. They have, however, a certain number of non-ceremonial songs, shorter and more diverse in theme than any of those previously recorded. The people themselves do not attempt to classify them, though they can conveniently be grouped in accordance with their themes. Some deal with love, others are sung jocularly at sight of certain birds or mammals, while a third class can only be described as miscellaneous. Still others accompany stories and games; these are included in vol. II, chap. V, and appendix B. [796]* [825]

Love Songs

Men sometimes compose songs which they sing, unaccompanied, to their lady loves. Occasionally, too, the maker of a popular one will teach it to his friends who will serenade the 533* 832 424

[See cat. 116, pp. 543 to 567 - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

524 Pass left middle finger distal to radial ring finger string and take up radial little finger string from proximal side.

Pass left index finger distal to radial middle finger string and take up radial ring finger string from proximal side.

With left thumb take up radial index finger string and radial middle finger string from proximal side, keeping the former distal.

With left index finger take up distal radial thumb string from proximal side.

Pass left middle finger distal to distal ulnar index finger string and take up proximal radial thumb string from proximal side.

Pass left ring finger distal to distal ulnar middle finger string and take up distal ulnar index finger string from proximal side.

Pass left little finger distal to distal ulnar ring finger string and take up distal ulnar middle finger string from proximal side.

Release thumb, at the same time pulling with the right hand and the figure disappears. There appears to be no story attached to this figure.

II. THE FASTENINGS OF RAVEN'S PLUMAGE[11]

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb with long, pendant loops hanging down on palmar aspect of left hand.

Pass right thumb and index finger from distal side into left thumb loop, at the same time hooking down the two pendant strings with right middle, ring, and little fingers.

Separate right thumb and index finger; turn right hand upwards, and clockwise, without releasing strings hooked down by right fingers. The left radial thumb string should now run straight across to ulnar side of right thumb, and thence across its dorsal aspect to radial side of thumb, from where it is hooked down by the three fingers of the right hand. The left ulnar thumb string should run straight across to ulnar side of right index finger, from where it is hooked down by the three fingers of the right hand. The distance between the hands should be about three inches; this must be maintained throughout the figure by allowing more string to pass through the hooked-down fingers of the right hand, as required.

[773] [825] [11]As already described, in the beginning of time many of the first-comers to earth floated down from above as ravens. It is assumed that the plumage of these birds must have been attached to the wearers in some way, the "fastenings" illustrated in this figure. On reaching earth, these coverings were taken off without difficulty, an action represented in this design by the facile loosening of the complicated meshwork of strings. This figure was collected from a man whose first ancestor came to earth as a raven; his descendant consequently stated that the pattern represented the specific fastenings of his own forefather's plumage.

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B 825 757 by some old Bellacoola men to be good for sores, but my informant did not believe it.

C 825 Among the Ulkatcho it is numerous, but was not used, not even as a medicine.

B 825 A bumble-bee, identified as Bombus appositus Cresson, by Dr. H. J. Franklin, among the Bellacoola, was called Tikquanats or the large Skotl, Skotl being the name of three kinds of insects, a bumble-bee, a yellow jacket, and a hornet. It was not taken nor used, and was said to do no harm to people. My informant did not know whether it had a house or not. Neither did he know that it made honey until told so by white men. They say the bee took one of the prickers of the swamp gooseberry for a stinger, but my informant said he did not believe this. He thought it had a sting in its mouth, not in its tail, until I showed him. The Bellacoola have a story that a being considered by a little girl to be a man, but by an elder sister to be a bumble-bee, was once seen coming from the noonday sun. The little girl became blind, B [773] but her eyes appeared to be all right. Many thought she was made blind by too much sunlight when she looked at the man who was a bumble-bee.

C 825 226 Among the Ulkatcho, this bumble-bee was called Whultocho, Whulto being the name of a yellow jacket, and cho meaning large. Whus or Whis means pricker. The bumble-bee was not used as fish bait.

B 825 An insect, probably the hornet, is called Slow lowstl, by the Bellacoola, who say it has a little white on the tail and makes a small nest in a tree in July.

The yellow jacket among the Bellacoola was called Quolalaits (Clolaclaylaits) (Clolaclaylaits skotl) while all three kinds of insects, the bumble-bee, the yellow jacket and the hornet, were called Skotl. The yellow jacket was known to make a nest. The nest was used in sympathetic magic or witchcraft as follows: When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow up to B be a quarrelsome person, the nest of the yellow-jacket was burned [754] and the ashes rubbed on the child. When the child grew up he or she would fight with everyone.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tribes. The crest is represented in paintings on the house-front and on dancing implements. 614

The gens Tōk·oā'is has a killer-whale (Delphinus orca) painted on the house-front (fig. 1). The tradition says that the ancestor of this gens 614 532 342 773

FIG. 3.—Crest of the gens Smō'EN, showing the mountain SuwĀ'KHH, with two clouds near its summit; above a mackerel sky.

one day, when hunting in the mountains, found a house on which a killer was painted. The chief who lived in the house invited him and presented him with his crest for himself and for his descendants. The crest consists of the killer-whale, eagle, swan, and heron.

The crests of all gentes were obtained in like manner.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The gens Spatsā'tlt have breakers painted on the house-front, and use 532 in dances the mask of a large kind of whale (k·'ents), of the crow, and of the black bear.

342 The gens Tumqoā'akyas use the mask of Ōnestsitō'ma (=the sleeper) and the eagle.

The gens Tl'ak·aumō'ot of the Nusk·'ē'lstemh use the moon (fig. 2).

The gens Ialo'stimōt of the Tālio'mh use the raven, robin (aiin'a'qonē), eagle, whale, the bird t'ēntlala (genus?), and s'atlsā'ots, the flood-tide. They have sun, moon, and stars painted on the house-front, and the nusqē'mta suspended from the beams of the roof (see p. 420).

The highest gens of Nūtl'e'l has the name Smō'en (=the north wind). He has the mountain Suwā'khh surmounted by a mackerel sky, and with clouds on its sides, painted on his house-front (fig. 3). Another object belonging to his crest represents waves.

614 The children belong to the gens of either father or mother, the deci-851 sion being left to the choice of the parents.

Secret Societies and the Potlatch.

171 The social organisation, festivals, and secret societies of the Bilqula 575 are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the Sisau'kh, and the Kū'siūt. The Sisau'kh corresponds to the Tlōola'qa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the Kū'siūt to the Ts'ētsā'ēk·a. The 556 Bilqula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine
● 773 brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Qē'mtslōa, to whose care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful 776 Fig. 4.—Mask representing Qē'mtslōa.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Qēmqēmalā'otla.

[532]
[575]

house in the far east, and cries ō! ō! every morning when the sun rises. He has to take care that the sun rises properly. The first six of these deities

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the Kū'siūt these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks which I have copied. Qē'mtsīoa and Qēmqēmalā'otla wear the design of the full moon, indicated in the mask Qē'mtsīoa (fig. 4) by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Qēmqēmalā'otla has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin (fig. 5). Aiumkī'likya (fig. 6) and Aiumalā'otla (fig. 7) wear the design of the crescent, drawn

556
773
776
532
575
776

FIG. 6.—Mask representing Aiumkī'likya.

FIG. 7.—Mask representing Aiumalā'otla.

in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second. The fifth, K'ōmk'ōmkī'likya, and K'ō'mtsīoa have designs representing stars (fig. 8), both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is K'ula'qawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmonberry bush (fig. 9). The next in order, Kulē'lias (=who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue (fig. 10). The ninth, At'amā'k wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a birdskin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called Tl'ōtsā'aplētlāna (=the eater), the sister of all the others. Her face is painted with a bladder filled with grease (fig. 11). She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

The Sisau'kH, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of gentes, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the Sisau'kH, and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned he asked the people to clean their houses, and to strew them with clean sand, before he consented to enter. Then he danced the Sisau'kH, and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with

575
773
776
796

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on,
773 returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Sisau'kH.
776 Besides this it is stated that the Raven gave each gens its secrets.
796

FIG. 8.—Mask representing K'ōmk'ōmkl'likya.

FIG. 9.—Mask representing K'ula'qawa.

532
575
776

614 Each gens has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the Sisau'kH 532 only, and are otherwise kept a deep secret, i.e., they are the sacred posses-422

FIG. 10.—Mask representing Kulē'lias.

FIG. 11.—Mask representing Tl'ētsā'aplētlāna.

575
776

534 sions of each gens. All gentes, however, wear the beautiful carved 292 headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

represent. Every time the sacred objects of a gens are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various gentes, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual. That is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the gens to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, could not become Sisau'kH. A person cannot take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'E-lu'sta, to whom I owe my information regarding the gentes, and who is a member of the gens Ialo'stimôt of the Talio'mH, stated that he had received the raven when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the eagle. He hopes that his mother will give him the whale at his next potlatch, and will at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a Kû'siût name, which remains the same throughout life; and a Qē'mtsloa name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'slu'sta'a (which is his Kû'siût name) present Qē'mtsloa name is Atl'itlEmnE'lus'aiH, but at his next potlatch he intends to take the name of Kaliä'kis. These names are also the property of the various gentes, each gens having its own names. In the list of gentes given above, the names enumerated are the Kû'siût names of the ancestors. In two cases only the Qē'mtsloa names have been ascertained (see p. 409). When a man possesses several Sisau'kH secrets he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their Sisau'kH secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of the gens. When a person gets to be old he gives away all his Sisau'kH secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the Sisau'kH carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular gens.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper-plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so he had to name the price which he was going to pay to the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The Kû'siût is presided over by a female spirit, called Ansûlikûtsai'H. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Ansûlikûtsai'H invited her into her cave and taught

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 her the secrets of the Kû'siût. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair 776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kû'siût. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kû'siût.'

575 Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Kû'siût. When a man has 776 seen Anaûlikûtsai'ʜ sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a Kû'siût. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kû'siût lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kû'siût are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted 614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the Sisau'kʜ dances (see above), but belong to the 424 members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed [426] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower
575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kû'siût is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kû'siût name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kû'siût names,
[428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pô'pô until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Tl'akô'otl. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[556] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisau'kʜ, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kû'siût have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] ʟlaqô'tla (the Hâ'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ô'lɛq (the Nû'tlmatl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dâ'tia (the Nô'ntsistatl of the Hê'iltsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kû'siût novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the ʟlaqô'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, 785 and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held 787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be
[266] killed, in order to serve as food for the ʟlaqô'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ʟlaqô'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, 575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [823] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected againt the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or olachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the bones of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 what cause this divergence is due. Mythology and religion are so closely [171] connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Snq, the sun-god (compare sōnq, sun).
773 The rays of the sun are his eyelashes. When prayed to he is called Tāat'au. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the fol-776 lowing formulas: Atlkuu itlō'tlsuq, Tāat'au, 'Look on us where we are [782] going, Tāat'au;' and Tāat'au, atlkualtnomdō'tlq, 'Take care of us, Tāat'au.'
[539] Snq is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with the actions and thoughts of men. These are given by Masmasalā'niq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Masmasalā'niq, Yula'timot, Matlapē'eqoek, and Itl'itlu'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been expanded between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Masmasalā'niq, and found there a beautiful prairie country in which all the birds lived. Masmasalā'niq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his arts. The raven was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the nusqē'mta (nu-ta=place of, sqēm=the day is dawning). The nusqē'mta was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously, and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pond from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pond, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the nusqē'mta. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Masmasalā'niq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Matlapē'eqoek and Itl'itlu'lak tried likewise to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Yula'timot carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Masmasalā'niq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that man should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by man.

The Bilqula believe that Masmasalā'niq and his brothers still continue [176] to give new ideas to man. They say that any new design of painting or carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Masmasalā'niq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

774 The soul is believed to dwell in the nape. It is similar in shape to a [826] bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies [761] away its owner must die. Shamans are able to see and to recover souls.
[756]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

lished some remarks on the religious life of the Bella Coola in 1886,[1] which, however, contain so many misconceptions that they cannot be used to advantage. At the same time I published a brief description of the tribe, based on information received from a small group of members of the tribe who were travelling in Germany. In this description also there are a number of misconceptions. The Indians were shown a collection of masks from Vancouver Island with which they were not familiar. They gave, however, explanations of these masks, judging by the similarity to masks of their own tribe; consequently the explanations given there are not correct.[2] In 1890 I fell in with a number of Bella Coola who were fishing for salmon in Fraser River. The information obtained from them was published in the reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1891.[3] A. Jacobsen published a description of their ceremonies in 1891.[4] Fillip Jacobsen described some of their traditions and customs in 1894 and 1895.[5] I published a collection of traditions in 1894 and 1895.[6] 114

III.

All the collections which have been made heretofore do not bring out clearly the principal characteristic of the mythology of the Bella Coola. The tribes of the North Pacific coast consider the Sun as the most important deity, but at the same time they believe in a great many beings of supernatural power. For this reason their whole mythology is very unsystematic. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, have developed a peculiar mythology, in which a number of supernatural beings have been co-ordinated. A system has been evolved which justifies our terming the supernatural beings "deities." The general features of this system are as follows:— 114 773 776

The Bella Coola believe that there are five worlds, one above another. The middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are spanned two heavens, while below it there are two underworlds. In the upper heaven resides the supreme deity, a woman who interferes comparatively little with the fates of mankind. In the centre of the lower heaven, that is in the zenith, stands the house of the gods, in which reside the Sun and all the other deities. Our own earth is an island swimming in the ocean. The underworld is inhabited by the ghosts, who are at liberty to return to heaven, whence they may be sent down again to our earth. The ghosts 772 [776] [775]

[1] Original-Mittheilungen aus dem königlichen Museum für Völkerkunde, Berlin, 1886, pp. 183-186.
[2] Ibid., pp. 177-182.
[3] Seventh Report of the Committee on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, pp. 2-12; Report of the 61st Meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, held at Cardiff, 1891, pp. 405-440.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, pp. 383-391.
[5] Ymer, Tidskrift utgifven af Svenska Sällskapet för Antropologi och Geografi, 1894, pp. 187-202; 1895, pp. 1-13.
[6] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, pp. 291-300; 1895, pp. 189-195. [113]

772 who die a second death sink to the lowest world, from which there is no
[775] return.

The upper heaven is called Atsa'axl, or Snutx·lok·'a'ls ti Sönx· t'aix·, or Sönxaut. Omq'o'mkilik·a. The deity ruling there is a woman who is called [774] Qama'its, or Tsi sisnaaxti. ("our woman"), or Ek·!yak·tmtöla'ti. ("afraid of nothing").

772 This heaven is described as a prairie without any trees. It is said that 776 in order to reach it one must go up the river from the house of the gods in the lower heaven. In another tradition it is said that in travelling from the lower heaven to the upper heaven one has to pass the rent in the sky which is called Tsi.na'lotas ti Sönx· t'aix·. The house of the supreme deity stands in the far east, and a gale is continually blowing over the open country, driving every thing towards the entrance of her house. Near the house, however, it is calm. In front of the house stands a post in the shape of a large winged monster, and its mouth is the entrance to the house. In front of the house-door there is gravel of three colors,—blue, black, and white. Behind the house is a salt-water pond in which the goddess bathes. In this pond lives the si'siut. or xtsaltsalö'xem. This being sometimes descends to our world. Wherever it moves, the rocks burst, and slide down the sides of the mountains. It is described as a snake or a fish (see pp. 44, 66).

773 In the beginning of the world the mountains were of great height.
823 They were human beings who made the world uninhabitable. Qama'its made war upon the mountains. She vanquished them, and made them smaller than they used to be. During this fight she broke off the nose of the mountain Yalyula'mt., which is situated near Nul!a'l. Its face may be recognized even now; and the Indians say that when its name is called, it answers. There are two mountains near the head-waters of Bella Coola River. The one is called Slex·lêkoai'l.; the other one, Na'axl. The former had a fire, called Snutai'k·nmsta, burning in his house. This fire warned him of the approach of enemies. When Qama'its made war upon the mountains, the fire warned its master. Qama'its was coming down the river in her canoe, which is named "T!kun." When she approached, he broke her canoe, and she returned to heaven. The canoe has been transformed into stone, and may be seen to this day at the foot of the mountain Slex·lêkoai'l. It is said that Qama'its visits the earth every now and then. Her visits cause sickness and death. She is described as a great warrior.

772 In the centre of the lower heaven, which is called Sönx·, stands the 776 house of the gods. This house is named Nusmn'ta (the House of Myths), or Nusk!oalinai'x·sta ("where man was created"), or Nusk·lalsa'mata ("the house from which people come down"), or Nusqilxoai'x·sta ("the house to which people go"). In front of the house stands a post called Nultnê'k·ta. It is painted with representations of all kinds of birds. A 776 the House of Myths, but who has given up his place in favor of SEEX and ALK'UNTA'M. These two might be called the rulers of mankind. In most traditions they are described as trying to destroy man, notwithstanding the fact that they are considered the creators of mankind. This peculiar charac-

773 teristic of these deities is clearly brought out in the traditions recorded on 776 pp. 78 ff. In one legend which I collected in 1890, ALK'UNTA'M's mother, NAUMTOMIK-EEQMNE'M, is described as a Cannibal, who inserts her long snout in the ears of man, and sucks out his brain. Eventually she was transformed into the mosquito.[1] I did not hear her mentioned as one of the deities residing in the House of Myths. According to the same tradition, the salmon were obtained by a man who gambled with ALK'UNTA'M, the stake being the salmon. ALK'UNTA'M lost, and the man took the salmon down
[528] from heaven. Another legend of the origin of the salmon is recorded on p. 38, where it is told how the birds obtained the salmon. According to still another tradition (p. 94), the Raven obtained the salmon by marrying a salmon girl. In the tradition quoted above, ALK'UNTA'M also gives to man the power to cure [755] disease by means of the water of life, which the shaman sprinkles on the sick person.

A number of inferior deities live in the House of Myths. They might 776 be called the assistants of the principal deities. In order to understand their [774] functions, it is necessary to state that the deities residing in the House of Myths have particular charge of the religious winter ceremonial of the [516] Bella Coola which is called KO'SIUT, and which corresponds to the TS'ETSA'EQA
[515] of the Kwakiutl. I have described this ceremonial, and its importance in the social life of the Kwakiutl, in another paper.[2] The KO'SIUT is of equal importance to an understanding of the social life and mythology of the Bella Coola. It is sufficient to say at this place that the ceremonials performed during the KO'SIUT are mostly dramatic representations of myths [532] referring to the various deities, particularly to those of the House of Myths: therefore masks representing these deities are used in the ceremonials. Plates VII to XII[3] show a series of these masks. Figs. 1, 2, and 4 (Plate VII) are SEEX, ALK'UNTA'M, and SNOLK'ALX-A'LA. The functions of many of the 575 inferior deities seem to refer solely to the KO'SIUT. These deities and their 776 functions are as follows: SIX-SEK-TLAI'X (Plate VII, Fig. 6) ordains the death of man and animals. According to one statement that I received, there are four deities of this name in the House of Myths. It is his particular duty to kill those who transgress the laws of the KO'SIUT. This deity is mentioned by Jacobsen, who calls him SEK-SEIK KALLAI.[4] NUMT'EEQ'ALS (Plate VII, Fig. 7), or the SNEMT'EQ of the House of Myths, sits by himself in one

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1892, p. 793.
[2] Report of the U. S. National Museum, 1895, pp. 311-738.
[3] Drawings by Mr. Rudolph Weber.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1892, p. 788.

paint. They taught him the methods of hunting, and, according to some, they made the fish. The Bella Coola say, when carving a design, that Mas- 776 massalá'nix gives them the idea which they are working out.

Sunx has a daughter named Sp'ax-p'ik-nx'm, who invented the art of working cedar-bark. Her figure is also used in the kā'sint ceremonial, in [575] which the invention of the preparation of cedar-bark is represented. This deity has an assistant called Omatónć'k', who supports the stick over the edge of which she is breaking the bark. When first breaking bark, she shouts, "Alétx sitya'lxau ti Omatónć'k'stix" ("Bring to me Omatónć'k'"). [539]
After he has been given to her, she shouts, "Alétx sitya'lxau ta tqunk'ula" ("Bring me the board on which to break the bark"). After receiving this, she demands the cedar-bark breaker, saying, "Alétx sunkpanlai'ts ti sp'e'k'tats." Finally she asks for cedar-bark, saying, "Alétx k'lolilizmx'laix ti sp'e'k'etstex'." Then she begins to work, singing,—

[539]

"Ełxa ałk'a'oowe'i ła.'ełnał.'i'mata la łna'a Ełxa sisunć'ła tai Sp'ax-p'ik-nx'm ałxa Sunxałi'ołła."

("Behold me, ye who are not initiated!
I am the Cedar-bark Breaker of Sunxałi'ołła.")

It seems that most of the Bella Coola maintain that the Raven also 776 lives in the House of Myths, but this point of their mythology is somewhat obscure and contradictory. According to the tradition of a number of families, the Raven was one of the beings sent down by Sunx to our world to become the ancestor of man, but at the same time it is told that he invented certain arts. It is stated that he made the first salmon-trap (ałk'a'l), which is used in connection with the salmon-weir.

It is also said that Massanałá'nix attempted to make the whistles for the winter ceremonial, that he was unsuccessful, and that the Raven succeeded in making them; also that the Raven came down to give the world its present shape. He instituted the festivals of the Bella Coola, and then returned to the House of Myths.

Besides all these deities, there are nine brothers and their sister particu- 776 larly concerned with the observations of the kā'sint ceremonial (Plate IX, Figs. 1–9). The names of the brothers are, Xémxémałá'ołła, Xá'mtsiwa, Omq'ómkt'lik'a, Q'ó'mtsiwa, Aimałá'ołła, Al'umki'lik'a, K'ic'lias, Q'ałaxá'wa, A'i'mak'; and of their sister, L'ełxá'aplełłana. These deities are painted with 776 certain designs. Xémxémałá'ołła and Xá'mtsiwa are painted with the de- 532 signs of the full moon (the former carries a staff wound with red and white cedar-bark); Omq'ómkt'lik'a and Q'ó'mtsiwa, with the design of the half-moon; Aimałá'ołła and Al'umki'lik'a, with the design representing the stars; K'ic'lias, with the design of the rainbow; Q'ałaxá'wa, with the de-

776 532 ciga of the salmon-berry blossom; A'Y'mik' has the shape of a kingfisher; and L'tsa'qelc.tsa is painted with the design of a sea-lion bladder filled with grease. She wears rings of red and white cedar-bark. The carving representing the kingfisher has the wings attached to the sides of the head, while the tail rises over the forehead. Xemsemala'o.La is said to carry a small woman in his arms. Her name is Nuspe'sta. When the brothers and their sister threaten to do harm to man, she entreats them to desist. In some traditions these deities are described as the children of Ala'usta'm.[1] 776 773 In one tradition L'tsa'qelc.tsa[2] is described as visiting houses and stealing provisions. She is then pursued by the person whom she has wronged, and returns to the House of Myths. The deities are unable to cure her; but the person who wounded her is called in, and withdraws his arrow, whereupon she recovers.[1] Formerly I had the impression that these ten deities were particularly concerned with the sisau'k' ceremonial,[2] but this [114] [575] impression has not been substantiated by the information I received during the past year. The ten deities appear much rather as deities of the ka'siat.

575 773 776 [772] In the rear of the House of Myths there is a room named L.lo'sta, in which the son of the deities lives. His name is Ba'xxo.La or Sonpaxxo.a'k. When Sonx and Ala'usta'm desire to destroy their visitors, they send them past the door of Ba'xxo.la's room. The latter then rushes out of his room and devours the visitors. He also initiates the Cannibal. According to the tradition of the tribe Sa'xxLemx, they acquired membership in the Cannibal Society in the following manner: Ba'xxo.La came down to the mountain Sqsu., where he met with the son of Sonxalo'L.ela, the first of the tribe. He conducted him up to the House of Myths. He took him into his room, and gave him the name Qualaio'tsimut. He put a snake into his body, which enabled him to pass through the water. When the youth applied his mouth to the body of a person, the snake tore pieces of flesh from the body, and devoured it. Then Ba'xxo.La took the youth to the upper heaven, past the rest in the sky, and to the house of the supreme deity, Qoma'ts. The two approached the house, being blown towards it by the strong gale prevailing in the open country of the upper heaven. They found Qoma'ts sitting in front of her house; and she said to Ba'xxo.La, "Why don't you come in? You wish that your friend should obtain great supernatural power. Bring him to my house, and I will give him what you desire. Stay for a short while where you are, and I will show you what I am doing. Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." After a little while the post closed its eyes. It grew dark at once, and the two visitors fainted, but soon they recovered. When the post opened its eyes again, it grew light. The visitors remained sitting on the ground, and

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 765.
[2] Seventh Report on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, p. 8.

suddenly a strong wind began to blow, which rolled them over the prairie until they reached the door of the house. Then suddenly the wind calmed down. They remained sitting on the ground near the doorway; and Qama'its said, "Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." They were sitting opposite each other, watching the post; and when it closed its eyes, they were transformed into two stones, but they soon regained human shape. Then Qama'its asked them to enter. Now the woman took the youth's blanket, and gave him another one made of bear-skin set with fringes of red cedar-bark. She told him that this blanket was to keep him warm, and that it would direct his course. Next she fetched some water from the salt-water pond behind her house. She sprinkled it over the faces of her visitors, and told the youth to sing about his experiences in the upper heaven when performing the Cannibal dance. If she had not sprinkled the faces of her visitors with water, they would have died. She said to the youth, "Your country is not far away. Do not be afraid of the dangerous road that you have to pass. Later on there shall be many Cannibals like you. Do not be afraid to touch the food that another Cannibal may offer to you. You are strong because you have seen me." Then Qama'its sent him back to the lower sky. Here the gods placed him on the back of a bird (Sq'aaxn), which carried him down to the sea. As soon as the bird reached the water, it uttered its cry, and at the same time the young man uttered the cry of the Cannibal. The people heard it, and said to one another, "That must be the boy whom we lost some time ago." They connected many canoes by means of planks, and paddled out to the place where the bird was swimming about. They covered the canoes with red cedar-bark and eagle-down, and tried to capture the youth; but when they approached, the bird swam towards the village. They surrounded it with their canoes; but the bird flew up, and disappeared in the sky, and at the same time the youth flew towards the village. When the people landed, he attacked them, taking hold of their arms; and the snake, which was still in his body, tore pieces of flesh out of their arms. The people sang and beat time in order to appease him.

575 773 776

In a second room in the rear of the House of Myths, next to that of the Cannibal, lives Koko'ulaxm, another son of the deities. His room is called Nus'o'lxnx. He initiates the Ots-dancer (see Chap. VI).

776 575

The path of the Sun is guarded by a number of deities. At sunrise is stationed the Bear of Heaven, Snaxi's ti Snax t'aix (Plate X, Fig. 1). He is described as a fierce warrior, who protects the Sun against the attacks of his enemies, and he is the cause of the warlike spirit of man. His hair is tied up in a knot on top of his head. His mask is used in the sinax'a

[772] [821]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 their kū'siut. It is just below the burial-place of each village. The dancing-
775 house is very large and long. It has four fires. The women stay on the floor of the house, while the men sit on an elevated platform. The houses have doors, but the ghosts who first reach the lower world enter the house through the smoke-hole. A rope ladder placed in the smoke-hole facilitates their entrance. Two men stand at the foot of the ladder. They are called Anōet.'axoat.ai'x'. For a person who has once entered the dancing-house there is no return to our earth. The souls are at liberty to return to the lower heaven, which they reach by ascending the rope ladder. Those who return to the lower heaven are sent back to our earth by the deities, to be born as children in the same family to which they belonged. Those who enjoy life in the country of the ghosts, and who do not return to heaven, die a second death, and then sink to the second lower world, from which there is no return.

I received another description from an old man. He stated that he reached the country in his canoe. He saw two trails,—one the trail of the living, one that of the dead. He followed the trail of the dead, and reached a village in which there was a dancing-house. The language of the ghosts differed from that of the living (see p. 42).

773 The Bella Coola believe that in the far west is situated the land of the 825 salmon, which is called Mia'lma. The salmon leave this country early in the spring every year, and ascend the rivers. They are believed to return [828] to their own country in the fall. The following tradition is of importance, explaining the manner in which the salmon were first brought from their country to the rivers of our world:—

Once upon a time a man named Winwī'na lived at Q'ō'mqōtis. One day he was sitting in front of his house, looking at the river. He thought, "I wish fish would ascend this river." At that time not a single salmon visited Bella Coola River. Winwī'na entered his house and lay down, thinking about the salmon. One night while he was asleep he dreamt that with the help of all the animals he had made war upon the salmon, that he had vanquished them, and that since that time the salmon had ascended Bella Coola River. When he awoke he invited all the animals to his house, and told them about his dream. They all came, and when they had entered he shut the door. Then he spoke: "My brothers, I have invited you to my house that you may hear what I wish to do. You shall help me to obtain what I desire." The Mink asked him in what they were to assist him; and he replied, "I want to go to Mia'lma. There is not a single fish in our river, and I dreamt that with your help I vanquished the fish. Let us make war upon them. I shall certainly take some slaves, and we will place them in this river." Mink retorted, "I am glad that you are speaking, in regard to this matter. I asked my father the Sun (see Chap. V) to give us salmon, and I think he gave you the dream which you told us."

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773
825

All the birds agreed, and they resolved to start as soon as possible. Then Winwī'na asked Masmasala'nix to build a canoe. The latter complied with his request, and made a self-moving canoe, to which he gave the names "Winaiōtstuī.s" and "Kunkunu'qōstuī.s." In the third moon after the winter solstice the canoe was completed, and Winwī'na started, accompanied by the clouds, the birds, and by all the animals. The Hermaphrodite was sitting in the stern of the canoe. They went down the fiord; and when they passed the village of Bella Bella, they saw the Cormorant sitting on the beach, who asked to be taken along as a passenger. They travelled westward for a long time, and finally they reached the country of the Salmon. They saw that there were no trees. The country was a vast prairie. A large sun was shining in the sky. Soon they descried the village of the Salmon. They sent out the Raven as a spy. When he returned, he told them that in the evening the Salmon were in the habit of playing on the beach. Mink suggested that this would be the best time for carrying some of them away. Then the Crane (according to another version, the Hawk) said, "I shall carry away the Sockeye Salmon." The Wren said, "I shall carry away the Humpback Salmon." The Kingfisher (according to another version, the Crane) said, "I shall carry away the Dog Salmon." The Raven said, "I shall carry away the Silver Salmon." The Fish-Hawk said, "I shall carry away the Olachen and the Salmon Trout." The Cloud said, "I shall carry away the Spring Salmon." Finally the Cormorant said, "I am only a passenger, and I will take whatever I can get." The Mink remarked, "I will not say what I am going to carry away: I only want to tell you that you must each take one male and one female. Now start. You are invisible to the Salmon. When you approach them, they will not be able to see you, just as we cannot see the ghosts, even when they are walking by our side." They left Winwī'na to guard the canoe. Then all the birds and the Mink took each one male and one female child of the various kinds of fish. When they carried them off, the children fainted, as though their souls had been taken away. Their bodies remained at the place where they had been playing. The Salmon did not see their captors, and did not know why the children were fainting. The birds returned to the canoe, carrying the fish. Then Winwī'na said, "Let us go on and see what is beyond the country of the Salmon." Soon they arrived at a place called Qualc'nia (this name is not quite certain), in which vast numbers of berries were growing. Here the Hermaphrodite went ashore, and picked all kinds of berries, which she carried into the canoe. Then they returned home. For seven months they had staid in the country of the Salmon. They reached the coast shortly after the winter solstice (?). When they passed Bella Bella, the Cormorant

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 825 said, "This is my home. I will go ashore here." He went, and took along the Salmon which he had captured. Ever since that time there are salmon at Bella Bella. The others travelled on, and came to the mouth of Bella Coola River. Then they threw all the various kinds of fish into the water. The Salmon jumped, and began to ascend the river. Then Winwi'na arose in his canoe and told each at what season he was to arrive. He scattered the berries over the mountains and through the valleys, and told them at what season to ripen. After he had done so, he invited his companions into his house, and gave them a feast.

773 825 192 In this tradition the birds and animals are not called by their ordinary names, but by mythical names. These names are as follows:—

ENGLISH.	ORDINARY NAME.	MYTHICAL NAME.
Spring salmon	ɔmɪ.	t'ôh'ô'lx·timôt
Sockeye salmon	sâmɪ.	nanɪtak·anêɛxɪtɛna'm ("very long")
Humpback salmon	k·ap'al'	anuk'pɛmai'x'.
Dog salmon	tlli	siaia'ltoa ("fair weather.")
Silver salmon	wa'ls	k'ɪpstôstôsa'hlv ("making himself beautiful")
Salmon (sp.?)	——	ô'sip'âq
Cloud	sk·l'ê'noas	tsa'koak· ("long hand")
Hawk (?)	stsix·ta'ɛx	anuk·'h·iqtsaix· ("looking down into water")
Wren	mozat'a'laqa	t.'lk·ma'lstaix· ("jumper")
Crane	xɔq'â'ns	masaxê'lɛn
Raven	qoo'x	t.xoa'xoaqtai'laix· ("rising early")
Cormorant	t.'ô'pana	k'oɔ k'oog·ila
Hermaphrodite	sx·ints	st.a'ya'ô

773 According to the belief of the Bella Coola, Winwi'na's canoe arrives from the country of the Salmon every year. It stays in the country of the Bella Coola for nine months, and then returns to the country of the Salmon. At the moment when it leaves, another canoe, which is named "No'ak·nɛm" or "Nunuk·au'tanɛm," which brings the kô'siut ceremonial, arrives from the country S'anôk'pia'ltua. The canoe reaches a distant point of land before the departure of the canoe of the Salmon. After four days it reaches a nearer point of land. Four days more, and it is seen at the point of land nearest to the mouth of Bella Coola River. Another four days, and it reaches the mouth of the river. The Indians believe that there is a house named Snô'amɪ.ɪxnank· at this place. A post is standing in the water in front of the house. It is called Snutexoalaaxtstɛna'nk·. In the house live three men who are named Naapsɪ.laaxai'x', A'mɪ.tag·ilis, and Tix·ti·k·'a'nɛmem. The canoe is tied up in front of this house. As soon as it arrives, the kô'siut ceremonial begins. At the head-waters of Bella Coola River, forming the watershed between Bute Inlet and Bentinck Arm, is a mountain called

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Smaya'na, that is considered a human being. It is said that his children make the canoe go up Bella Coola River with the rising tide, A'nxumk·ila. The canoe travels the distance from the mouth of the river to the mountain Smaya'na in a single tide. The canoe "Nó'ak·nem" stays for four months. Then the canoe "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns from the country of the Salmon, while "Nó'ak·nem" leaves again. It is said that all the gods of the House of Myths come to the villages of the Bella Coola in the canoe "Nó'ak·nem." 773 [776]

The arrival and the departure of these canoes are strictly regulated according to the calendar of the Bella Coola, which for this reason should be explained in connection with their beliefs. The Bella Coola divide the year into two parts, which are separated by the winter and summer solstices. The solstices are periods of indefinite length, between which five months are counted. Each solstice is reckoned, therefore, as approximately six weeks. The names of the months are as follows:— 773 805 821

Sex'mt (winter solstice)	Sex'mt (summer solstice)
Sxólr mx·nem	Si·lxum
A'nxumkmá	Sexexé'mnt
Siaq'u'm	Sinulá'lsemtnem
Sipió'ls·	Tsi sitak'á'ns tsem Anaólikuts'ai'x·
Sinó'moak·	lemulé'm

The canoe "Nó'ak·nem" arrives, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" leaves, in the month Sinulá'lsemtnem. The canoe "Nó'ak·nem" leaves, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns, in the month Sxólr'mx·nem.

At the moment when the canoe "Nó'ak·nem" arrives, a deity called Anaólikuts'ai'x· (Plate XII, Figs. 1 and 2), who is believed to live in a cave, opens the door of her abode. There is one deity of this name to each village. Her cave is called Nuskésin'tsta. It is said that one Anaólikuts'ai'x· lives on the mountain Sqtsi. Her house is described as a large hollow bowlder suspended from the top of the mountain by means of a rope. Each Anaólikuts'ai'x· has an older sister who is called Nutsé'xenem. When the canoe "Nó'ak·nem" appears, and she opens her door, she steps outside and stands in front of her house, dancing, with trembling hands. When a person sees her, he faints. His soul is taken into her house, and is initiated into the secrets of the ka'siut. 773 776 [575]

A particular Nuskésin'tsta is believed to be at the foot of the creek Anó'nk·, on the northern side of North Bentinck Arm, near the mouth of Bella Coola River. A woman called Nustsxoaxlo'stxut. lives there. She is described as emaciated, of black skin, and as wearing a black blanket. A certain chief who lived long ago was the first to see her. He was initiated by her, and after his return he performed a dance, and told what he had seen. Then he died.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They had hit a stone, and their points were broken. He staid there some time, and when it was nearly dark he returned home. Before he reached his house, he cut his own belly and took out some of the fat from his intestines. He cut it in five pieces, and replaced his intestines. He put the fat into his quiver. When he reached his house, he hung the quiver up outside, and entered. He imitated everything the Lynx had done. When it grew dark, he told his wife to fetch his quiver. She brought it, and he told her to open it and to feed his children. She took the fat out, placed it on a stick, and put it near the fire; and as soon as it grew warm, the Raven cried, "Tttt! Don't put it so near the fire. I feel sick when you do so." He jumped up, took hold of the fat, and put it back in his belly. The Lynx said, "Formerly I fed your children, but you were the first not to treat me properly. You did not give any food to my children." Then the Lynx took some fat, and flung one piece to each of the Raven's children. He cut some meat and gave it to them also. Then the Raven said, "I will give you one of my children, that it may grow up in company with yours." 539 776

It is said that the former spirit Toa'lal'it was killed at one time by an Indian who took his place. This tale is recorded in Chap. IV. It belongs to the tribe of the village Nuxe'q!. A similar tradition is told of Astas,[1] by which name the Carriers call the Raven, their principal culture hero. Many traditions referring to Astas are common to the Carriers, the Bella Coola, and the Awi'k'enox of Rivers Inlet. 773 776 [171]

The Bella Coola believe that a being called K"tsos is the father of all mountain-goats. When a hunter meets him, he thinks he sees a kid. Then he should close his eyes and open them again. If the animal is K"tsos, it will appear in its real shape as a buck of enormous size. The hunter should then ascend the mountain. If he should descend, he would fall and die. 776 825

The thunder-storm is produced by the Thunder-bird, who lives on the mountains, in the company of a number of spirits, who are considered his particular friends. The Thunder-bird himself is represented by a black mask with red nostrils. The nose is strongly curved, the forehead bulges forward, and the chin protrudes almost as far forward as the nose (Plate XI, Fig. 1). His herald is called ALxula'tEnum (Plate XI, Fig. 2). His face is painted with orange and blue stripes, and he carries a speaker's staff, which is painted with spirals of the same color. He watches the door of the Thunder-bird's house. In his house live the Rabbit (Plate XI, Fig. 3); the Owl, who is considered the rival of the Thunder-bird (Plate XI, Fig. 4); the Mountain, LE'qats (Plate XI, Fig. 5); the Raindrop (Plate XI, Fig. 6). 776 [821] [532] [575]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 390.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 The Thunder-bird and his companions appear in the kn'siut ceremonial.
575 When they enter the house, a dancer appears who carries an instrument in the shape of a bird-rattle (Plate XI, Fig. 7), which is provided with holes [534] in its lower side, and has a loose back. This implement is filled with cedar-bark and eagle-down, and is shaken by the dancer. The eagle-down is thus made to fly about in the house, symbolizing the wealth and power of the Thunder-bird.

IV.

184 In the preceding pages I have summarized the principal features of 773 Bella Coola mythology, which are characteristic of the traditions of the whole tribe. Besides these, there are other groups of traditions which are very conflicting. One reason for the existence of numerous contradictory traditions must be looked for in the peculiar social organization of the Bella Coola. In former times, when the tribe was populous, the Bella Coola inhabited a great many villages. The inhabitants of each village are considered the descendants of a number of mythical ancestors who were sent down by SEMX. Each of these village communities has traditions of its own, which are its property, and which are not well known to the rest of the tribe. Many of these traditions refer to the origin of our world, and for this reason a number of the most important myths differ in various villages. Indications of such conflicting ideas may be found in the traditions recorded in the preceding pages. To make this subject clear, it is necessary to describe somewhat fully the traditions belonging to a number of village communities. Before recording these traditions I shall enumerate the villages of the tribe.
103 The following list is the result of repeated inquiries. In it the names and 361 locations of the villages are given in consecutive order from the mouth of Bentinck Arm upward along Bella Coola River, and the names of the 773 mythical ancestors of the village communities have been added where these have been ascertained.

VILLAGE.	LOCATION.	ANCESTORS.
1. Q'oa'LAA	At the bay of this name.
2. Sx'LIA	At the entrance of South Bentinck Arm.	Tôtoô'nx.
3. Nusxê'q!	On North Bentinck Arm.	Sxmsiutâ'k'as, Nusqoa'-xlanê, Sx'ints, and their sister E'nL'alana.
4. Pu'lxzla	At the entrance of the valley opening on the north side of the mouth of Bella Coola River.	Sxâ'homx, Yuyô'lk", Mxntai't, Sisiô'L.
5. ALqla'xL	The present division at the north side of Bella Coola River, near its mouth.	Isyô'yôL, Xêmxê'mix-nxm, Souxnala'ls, and their sister Lugal'tsta.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

103
361
773

Village.	Location.	Ancestors.
6. Ōmax mik'ē'tp	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 5.
7. Tx'e'ix tskunē	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 6.
8. Selkn'ta	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 7.
9. Sa'qta	North side, at mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 8.
10. Stsk'ē'it.	South side, near mouth of Bella Coola River.	Q'ē'ē'l.
11. Q'ō'mqōtls	South side, near mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 10.	Xe'mlaix, O'mq'ōmkilik a, and their sister Sxemā'na.
	(Nos. 4-11 jointly are called Nuxa'lk'!.)
12. Sēnxi.	About one mile above Nuxa'lk'!.	Yuyō'lkumai, Anuxe'mlaix, Sōnxōb'ōtla, and their sister Nuskī'mnat.
13. Tsomō'ōt.	On Bella Coola River, above No. 12.	Nō'akila, Tsxēmimmakai'x, and their sister Soutk'ana'ls.
14. Sōū't'xle	On Bella Coola River, above No. 13.	Lūk lai's'.
15. Nūk'ī'ts	On Bella Coola River, above No. 14.	Lxumōme'ōn.
16. Nusā'tsxm	At junction of Nusā'tsxm and Bella Coola Rivers.	Qxōxuk ma'nē.
17. Asx'nanē	On Bella Coola River, above No. 15.	E'mask in or Atq'ēexa'.
18. Nuqā'axmats	On Bella Coola River, above No. 17.	Anutapak ōmalai'x, Iōyā'yot, one more man, and their sister.
19. Tsxōaxqā'nē	On Bella Coola River, above No. 18.
20. Nōsq!x'lōt	On Bella Coola River, at foot of Mount Nōsq!x'lst, above No. 19.	Totō'sk'ma.
21. Nullē'ix	On Bella Coola River, above No. 20.	Sxumxomlai'x, Sō'nxmai, Sinoxī'at, and their sister Qanāatsla'qs.
22. Stū'ix'	28 miles above mouth of Bella Coola River, above No. 21.	Atlix'inōt sis li Sōnx Uaix', Sexē'm, Xe'mtsion Anuxe'm, Kēsmi'n, Nutscqō'ax, and their sister Kēmiowa'ma.
23. Sōū't'xlat.	On Bella Coola River, above No. 22.
24. Slā'axt.	On Bella Coola River, above No. 23.
25. Q'nā'qx	At head of South Bentinck Arm.
26. Nā'ik.	" " " "
27. Asē'ix	" " " "
	(Nos. 25-27. jointly are called Tā'lio.)
28. Sōāsi.	At mouth of Salmon River, Dean Inlet.
29. Sāteq	Dean Inlet.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

361 773 It is very remarkable, that, besides the ancestors of the villages enumerated here, the Bella Coola state that the Sun created a number of men whom he sent down to a mountain on Skeena River, and that they became the ancestors of a part of the Tsimshian. Another group of men was sent down to Bute Inlet, and later on migrated to Bella Coola River. The names of these villages and men are as follows: —

[103]

Village.	Ancestors.
Nusqa'pts (Skeena River)	Teqo'mnôt, A'usê, Sxô'ya, and their sister K'imlqd'n.
Na'as (Bute Inlet)	Nanatskuit, Anoxêma'axôts, Spâ'napatthaix, O'mezik'as.

The full traditions referring to them will be found at the end of this chapter. Each of these ancestors, when sent down to our world, received a salmon-weir, which was placed across the river at the locality where they built their village. I shall now relate a number of traditions of the various villages.

Tradition of Se'lia.

600 In the beginning our world was dark. At that time Tôtosô'nx descended from heaven, and reached our world on a mountain near the river Wa'kitemqi (Fraser River). Here he built a house, in which he lived in the company of the Raven. The latter had a black canoe which was called "Raven." The two resolved to travel in order to find people. They descended the river until they came to the sea. After some time they reached a house which was covered inside and outside with abelone shells. The totem-post of the house was also covered with shells. It shone like the sun. They saw a canoe on the beach, and this too was completely covered with abelone shells. A chief, whose name was Pqlxanê'mx· ("abelone man"), invited them to enter his house. As soon as Tôtosô'nx reached this place, the sun rose. If he had not found the place of the abelone chief, there would be no sun. Tôtosô'nx did not wish to stay. He looked at the house, and saw something turning about on top of it. When they came nearer, he saw that it was a Mink, which was running about on the roof. Many people were inside the house. When Tôtosô'nx approached and saw the beautiful canoe, he wished to have it. He offered the chief their canoe in exchange. This offer was accepted, and Tôtosô'nx travelled on with the abelone canoe. The Raven staid with the abelone chief. Tôtosô'nx continued his travels, following the course of the sun. First he travelled southward, and came to the post which stands in the west of our world. From here he travelled on, and reached the copper country, which is situated follow either father or mother, but that it had not the right to use the property of both parents. It seems to my mind that the former method was more likely to develop under the existing social conditions, and that to this reason we must ascribe the development of an endogamic system among the Bella Coola. The occurrence of endogamic marriage among this tribe is quite isolated on the Pacific coast. All the other tribes have exogamic institutions, and by this means preserve their property rights. It is interesting to note that the southern Kwakiutl, who originally seem to have been organized in village communities, have adopted exogamic institutions; but there is a notable difference, in the organization of the village community, between the Bella Coola and the Kwakiutl. Among the Bella Coola we generally find four ancestors to each village,—usually three men and one woman. It is true that these are generally called brothers and sister, but they were created independently by SEnx, and are therefore not necessarily considered as blood relations. Among the Kwakiutl the village community are considered the descendants of one single being; consequently, among the latter tribe they are all relatives, who are forbidden to intermarry; while among the Bella Coola they are not relatives, and may intermarry.

[pp. 51-113 not processed]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

My inference is, therefore, that the curious social system of the Bella Coola developed through the influence of the customs of the Coast tribes upon the loose social unit of the Salish village community. The possession of clan traditions was felt as a great advantage, and consequently the desire developed to possess clan traditions. These were acquired partly by intermarriage with the Coast tribes, as is shown by the fact that many of these traditions are borrowed from these tribes, partly by independent invention. The desire to guard the traditions which were once acquired led to the development of endogamic institutions, in order to prevent the spread of the traditions over the whole tribe.

The jealousy with which the traditions are guarded has had the effect of making each family try to prevent other families from knowing its own clan tradition. For this reason the clan traditions of the whole tribe are remarkably inconsistent. We find, for instance, that the well-known raven legend of the northern Coast tribes has been utilized by many families as a family tradition. But while one family uses one part of the tradition, other families use other parts of the same tradition. Thus it happens that among the Bella Coola we find the most contradictory myths in regard to important events in the world's history. Some families maintain that the Raven liberated the sun, while, according to another one, the Mink was essential in bringing about the present state of affairs. Still others say that Tsonoʼnx, during his travels, caused the sun to appear. The discrepancies in the traditions referring to the visit of the Mink and Wasp to their father, the Sun, are also very remarkable. Although a considerable amount of 174 contradiction is inherent in all the mythologies of the North Pacific coast, 424 they nowhere reach such a degree as among the Bella Coola; and I presume 614 the fact that the traditions are kept secret by the various families accounts for this curious condition.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 . NE6 Bellacoola NE6

171 The prayers of the Bella Coola directed to SEnx or Ta'ata bear a 782 remarkable resemblance to the prayers of the Tsimshian addressed to Laxha, the sky. In both tribes we find the idea that when the Sun wipes his face it will be clear weather, and man will be happy; consequently the prayer to [821] the deity "to wipe his face" occurs quite often.

One of the most important customs that the Bella Coola borrowed from 177 the Coast tribes is the kn'siut ceremonial, with which are connected the various secret societies, particularly the custom of ceremonial cannibalism.
575 The ceremonies and the paraphernalia used by the Bella Coola and by the 773 Kwakiutl are practically identical. I told above (p. 34) the legend explaining the origin of cannibalism. Among the Bella Bella and Kwakiutl, another 796 tradition is told to explain the origin of this custom. The tradition tells of a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsl'waē, who lives in the forest, and who initiates the members of the Cannibal Society. The series of traditions clustering around this being differ fundamentally from those referring to the Cannibal Society of the Bella Coola. The custom has also spread to the Tsimshian, who say that the secret societies were introduced by a hunter who was taken into the inside of a cliff by a white bear. Inside he saw a house, in which the various societies were performing their ceremonies. It appears, therefore, that the same ritual which is practised by three distinct tribes is explained by three fundamentally distinct myths; and we must conclude that in this case the ritual is older than the myth,—that the latter has been invented in order to explain customs that were borrowed from foreign tribes, so that the ritual is the primary phenomenon, while the myth is secondary.[1]

These considerations explain some of the psychological motives for the 174 development of certain traditions and myths, as well as the curious incon-773 sistency of the clan traditions of the Bella Coola. They do not, however, explain the most fundamental characteristic of the traditions of the tribe. I pointed out in the third chapter of this paper, that, notwithstanding the numerous contradictions contained in family legends, the conception of the word and the functions of the various deities are so well defined that we must consider the mythology of this tribe vastly superior to that of the neighboring tribes. While the latter believe in a great many spirits which are not co-ordinated, we have here a system of deities. The existence of a systematic mythology among the Bella Coola proves that under favorable conditions the advance from the lower forms of beliefs to higher forms may be a very rapid one.

[1] See Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 660 ff.

[113]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Our analysis shows that this system cannot be considered as an importation, but that it probably developed among the Bella Coola themselves. After they removed to their new home, a mass of foreign ideas had come into their possession through contact with their new neighbors. While these new ideas were being remodelled and assimilated, they stimulated the minds of the people, or of a few members of the tribe, who were thus led to the formation of an elaborate concept of the world. The concept which they have developed agrees in all its main features with those created by men of other zones and of other races. The mind of the Bella Coola philosopher, operating with the class of knowledge common to the earlier strata of culture, has reached conclusions similar to those that have been formed by man the world over, when operating with the same class of knowledge. On the other hand, the Bella Coola has also adopted ready-made the thoughts of his neighbors, and has adapted them to his environment. These two results of our inquiry emphasize the close relation between the comparative and the historic methods of ethnology, which are so often held to be antagonistic. Each is a check upon rash conclusions that might be attained by the application of one alone. It is just as uncritical to see, in an analogy of a single trait of culture that occurs in two distinct regions, undoubted proof of early historical connection as to reject the possibility of such connection, because sometimes the same ideas develop independently in the human mind. Ethnology is rapidly outgrowing the tendency to accept imperfect evidence as proof of historical connection; but the comparative ethnologist is hardly beginning to see that he has no right to scoff at the historical method. Our inquiry shows that safe conclusions can be derived only by a careful analysis of the whole culture. The growth of the myths of the Bella Coola can be understood only when we consider the culture of the tribe as a whole. And so it is with other phenomena. All traits of culture can be fully understood only in connection with the whole culture of a tribe. When we confine ourselves to comparing isolated traits of culture, we open the door to misinterpretations without number.

If, then, the demand is made for a more critical method in the comparative study of ethnology than it has generally been accorded, it does not imply a deprecation of the results of the method. When the human mind evolves an idea, or when it borrows the same idea, we may assume that it has been evolved or accepted because it conforms with the organization of the human mind; else it would not be evolved or accepted. The wider the distribution of an idea, original or borrowed, the closer must be its conformity with the laws governing the activities of the human mind. Historical analysis will furnish the data referring to the growth of ideas among different people; and comparisons of the processes of their growth will give us knowledge of the laws which govern the evolution and selection of ideas.

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One of them must wash his body, one must wash his head, and the two others hold him. In return they receive one or two blankets each. During this ceremony the quqq'ē'lEñ, who are described as wild men, dance around the novice. They have ropes tied around their waists, and are held by other members of the society by these ropes. Then the xEnxanī'tEl lead the novice into the woods, where he remains for a long time, until he meets the spirit that initiates him. It seems that during this time he is secretly led to the house in which the xEnxanī'tEl continue to celebrate festivals at the expense of the novice's father, and there he is taught the secrets of the society. During this time, until the return of the novice from the woods, the house is tabooed. A watchman is stationed at the entrance, who keeps out uninitiated persons. During the absence of the novice, his mother prepares cedar bark ornaments and weaves mountain goat blankets for his use. One afternoon he returns, and then his father gives a feast to let the people know that his child has returned. The latter performs his first dance, in which he uses masks and cedar bark ornaments. This dance is called nuxnEē'mEñ. On this day the father must distribute a great number of blankets among the xEnxanī'tEl. The initiated are permitted to take part in the feast, and sit on one side of the house. The new member spends all his nights in the woods, where he bathes. In the spring the new member, if a man, is thrown into the sea, and after that is free from all regulations attending the initiation. One of the principal regulations regarding novices of the xEnxanī'tEl is that they must return from the woods in the direction in which the sun is moving, starting so that the sun is at their backs. Therefore they must sometimes go in roundabout ways. They must go backward through doors, which are sLā'lEqam (supernatural) against them. Frequently the siō'ua (a female shaman) is called to bespeak the door in their behalf before they pass through it. Before their dance the siō'ua must also address the earth, as it is supposed that else it might open and swallow up the dancer. It is also sLā'lEqam against the novice. The expression used is that the earth would "open its eyes" (k'u'nalaaEn); that means, swallow the novice. In order to avert this danger, the siō'ua must "give a name to the earth," and strew red paint and feathers over the place where the novice is to dance.

THE BI'LXULA.

The social organization, festivals, and secret societies of the Bi'lxula are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the sisau'k·, and the kū'siut. The sisau'k· corresponds to the Laō'laxa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the kū'siut to the ta'ē'ta'aōqa. The Bi'lxula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Xē'mtaioa, to whose care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful house in the far east, and cries "ō, ō,"

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

every morning when the sun rises. He takes care that he rises properly. The first six of these deities are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the kū'siut these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks. Xē'mtsioa and Xēmxēmalâ'oLa wear the design of the full moon, indicated on the mask of Xē'mtsioa by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Xēmxēmalâ'oLa has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Aiumkī'lik·a and Aiumalâ'oLa wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second masks. The fifth Q'ōmq'ōmkī'lik·a and Q'ō'mtsioa have designs representing stars, both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Qula'xawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The next in order, Kulē'lias (who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, Aē'amâ'k, wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called L'ōtsā'aplēLāna (the eater), the sister of the others. Her face is painted with the design of a bladder filled with grease. She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

556
773
776
532
575
776

The sisau'k·, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of the clans, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the sisau'k· and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned, he asked the people to clean their houses and to strew them with clean sand before he consented to enter. Then he danced the sisau'k· and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bī'lxula dance the sisau'k·. Besides this, it is stated that the raven gave each clan its secrets. Each clan has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the sisau'k· only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are the sacred possessions of each clan. All clans, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent. Every time the sacred objects of a clan are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various clans, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual—that is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the clan to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisau'k·. A person can not take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'ēlu'sta, the Indian, to whom I

575
773
776 796
614 424
532
[692]
[534]
424
532
556
614
[567] [848]
[115]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 owe my information regarding the clans, and who is a member of the 532 gens Ialô'stimôt of the Taliô'mx·, stated that he had received the raven 614 when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received [115] the eagle. He hoped that his mother would give him the whale at his [556] next potlatch, and would at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his own children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new 424 secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a kû'siut 551 name, which remains through life, and a Xô'mtsioa name, which is 556 changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'ɛlu'sta's (which is his kû'siut 575 name) Xô'mtsioa name was AL'ILEMNE'lus'aix·, but at his next pot-
614 latch he intended to take the name of Kaliâ'kis. These names are also the property of the various clans, each clan having its own names. When a man possesses several sisan'k· secrets, he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their sisan'k· secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of her clan. When a person grows old, he gives away all his sisan'k· secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more.
[426] The crest and the sisau'k· carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular clan.

426 The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl.
556 The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die, the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die, his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so, he had to name the price which he was going to pay the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

575 The kû'siut is presided over by a female spirit, called Anañlikuta'- ● 773 al'x·. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from 776 February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to 535 have been the first to find her. Anañlikuta'al'x· invited her into her cave and taught her the secrets of the kû'siut. She wore ornaments of red cedar bark around her head, waist, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair strewn with eagle down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kū'siut. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kū'siut." 575 773 776 535

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the kū'siut. When a man has seen Anaūlikuts'ai'x· sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kū'siut. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kū'siut lasts three days. 575 776 535

The various dances performed by members of the kū'siut are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisau'k· dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kū'siut is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kū'siut name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'akō'oL. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisau'k·, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kū'siut have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the ELaxō'LA (the hā'mata'a of the Kwakiutl), the ō'lEx (the nū'LmaL of the Kwakiutl), and the dā'tia (the nō'ntsistalaL of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kū'siut novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation. 535 575 [426] [551] [428] [556] [171] [554]

When the ELaxō'LA is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the ELaxō'LA. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ELaxō'LA order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears 575 785 787 [266]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

easy for Sxaiaxwax to gain control over them, and the sleeper wakes to find that he has been bleeding profusely and death is inevitable. This occurred to a man whose experiences are described in vol. I, chap. IX. 776* [761]

Although Sxaiaxwax is usually a curse to mortals, he can also do good. Occasionally he makes a man a shaman, and in many cases he helps a woman in childbirth. Such beneficent acts are not sufficient to counterbalance his evil deeds, and he remains one of the most dreaded of Bella Coola supernatural beings, a monster whose machinations make camping in a strange place a dangerous undertaking, and who is as likely to strike down rich or poor, young or old. [756] [844] [484]

Less feared than Sxaiaxwax, because he appears less frequently, is Allät·iaitl. The Bella Coola speak of this being with trepidation, but little definite information could be obtained concerning him. He has human form and sometimes comes at dusk to cause death by carrying away a man's spirit.[11] The home of this creature appears to be beneath the earth rather than in Nusmät·a. [761] [774]

A third dreaded being who, like the two preceding, usually lives on this earth and only visits in Nusmät·a, is Sä·lma, "The Death Dealer." He, too, appears in human form and can be distinguished by the nose-ring which he always wears. Sudden death in the forest is always attributed to "The Death Dealer." If a man is engulfed by a slide, or killed by a falling tree, it is because this malevolent being has entered the slide or tree. Some Bella Coola say that he is responsible for animals who kill hunters. He rarely carries out his designs with the aid of sickness, nor is death by drowning often attributed to him, but for all other fatal disasters he must take the blame. While a corpse is resting in a coffin awaiting burial, Sä·lma invariably sits on the cover, though none can see him. Instances are known in which even this monster has acted in a kindly manner. 776* 761

The supernatural beings thus far described are usually 776*

[11] See vol. I, pp. 96-7.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and leapt away apparently uninjured. The Bella Coola say that yearling goats have very strong spirits (I, p. 94) which make possible such actions.

Though generally callous with regard to the sufferings of animals, the Bella Coola are usually careful not to kill more than they need; and knowledge of the supernatural power possessed by animals sometimes leads men to treat them with great consideration. For example, if a bull-head is caught in an olachen net in the river, the fisherman throws it back into the water, saying:

"I have saved you; please do the same for me."

The following incident, believed without question by the Bella Coola, shows the manner in which bull-heads help those who have often befriended them. About 1880 a Kimsquit fisherman, Ăltakān·i, fell into a rapids where he was in great danger of drowning. A bull-head, seeing his plight and mindful of former help, increased his size and shoved Ăltakān·i ashore with its nose.

"I have saved you, mortal," said the bull-head, as he did so.

The ability to increase in size is not restricted to fish, but is shared by small mammals and reptiles. Lizards, for instance, four feet in length, are said to live permanently in a pond about seven miles below Kimsquit; they are termed qwalās.

Toads, too, can aid mortals. If a man see a snake devouring one of them he will, if he is wise, kill the snake and say to the toad:

"Please help me when I am in difficulties."

A toad never forgets its obligations and if that man should fall into a river when the toad is near, the latter will grow large enough to drag him forth.

Snakes are regarded with aversion and disgust. This may be in part due to the belief that they cook for Ăltăt·iaiał (I, p. 49), but more because these reptiles enter the stomachs of human beings. The Bella Coola believe that snakes are the offspring of a supernatural Mother of Snakes, a mythical being of dread powers. The following story illustrates their beliefs

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

concerning the danger of near approach to this creature: 539

Ḱwilais was a man of mixed lineage, Kimsquit and Pes, near Newitte. With several companions he was gathering berries when he stepped into a hole and felt numerous tiny creatures crawling over his legs. Looking down, he saw that they were small snakes, that had just been hatched from a Mother of Snakes. He fled, terrified, pursued by the reptiles, which he managed to keep off to some extent by brushing behind him a branch of spiny swamp gooseberry, a known deterrent. When he had out-distanced the snakes he called his companions, told them of his adventure, and returned home. There he repeated the tale. Though Ḱwilais did not know it, many of the snakes had succeeded in entering his stomach. Presently he began to swell; his body became larger and larger until he was in danger of bursting. The reptiles within were breeding rapidly. Luckily, one of his fellow villagers knew the proper remedy. A raised bed was made for the sufferer about five feet from the ground where Ḱwilais stretched himself on a number of thorny branches, while his friends built a fire of devil's club and swamp gooseberry twigs so that he was fumigated in the smoke. Then, to give greater potency, they cast on the flames soiled clothing and pounded cedar-bark pads stained with menstrual blood; even this was of no avail, so finally a woman squeezed out into a vessel some of her menstrual blood which Ḱwilais drank. This killed the snakes. The patient began to vomit, emitting a mass of wriggling serpents, and at once began to grow thinner, soon regaining his normal condition. Had he not been able to eject the reptiles, he would have died. 776 * 825 755 [789] [753] [841]

Ḱwilais was not the only one to have this unpleasant experience. Many others have suffered in the same way, but in no case has anyone been able to feel the snakes at the actual place or time of entry.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the power possessed by animals are clearly shown by their attitude with regard to killing them. Man is immortal, so are animals. Ałqantłm decreed that beasts and birds should serve as food for mankind, but it is only their clothing, their worthless "blanket of flesh," as the Bella Coola express it, which they give to hunters. In the autumn leaves appear to die, but every spring they are reborn. Similarly, when an animal is slain, it merely discards its visible self while its spirit[a] ascends 825 775 224 [774]

[a] Kamstamx, see vol. I, p. 94.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[775] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to [774] earth again to reanimate a new body.* Consequently, the success of a hunter does not indicate his mastery over an [785] animal so much as the latter's good-will in allowing itself to be slain by one who has pleased him by ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked soot, so a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of ashes across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use [411] owl-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon neatly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter reverses the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

[789] "Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, skinless, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

[262] Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves

[185] *There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express disbelief in the immortality of animals.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Raven, blinded by his grief, did not believe him, and responded angrily: 539 796*

"No, youare not my son. Why do you lie to me? Get out of this house." 761

Disgusted at this reception, O-mistimai obeyed. Just as he was passing through the doorway, Raven noticed the tattoo marks on his legs, and realized that, in spite of the change in his appearance, the visitor was really his son. He called on him to return, but O-mistimai paid no attention to his father's entreaties and sped far away. Raven's grief was beyond expression, but he could do nothing to repair the damage he had done. If it had not been for Raven's mistake, all mortals would return to life four days after death. [304]

The above myth is widely known among the Bella Coola, and is supposed to be historically accurate. At the same time, few people allow it to influence their thoughts with regard to death or its causes. It is a fact, but one that belongs to the realm of ancient history rather than to everyday experience. When a Bella Coola dies, his relatives, though they know that his death is due to the folly of Raven, tacitly overlook this, and do not feel bitterly towards Raven. Bella Coola beliefs and theology are not systematized, hence it is quite possible for a person to realize a certain fact, such as the cause of death, and yet disregard it entirely. Considering that absolute contradictions can be believed simultaneously, it is not difficult to picture the mental attitude of people who believe, and at the same time disregard their belief. 771 761 796*

One of Raven's spectacular, and at the same time, beneficial exploits was the bringing of sockeye salmon to the Bella Coola River." 539 825

In the beginning of time, no sockeye salmon inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to supply them. First he tried making wooden fish and throwing them into the water, but though he could animate them, they always died after jumping a few times. The reason for his failure, though he did not know it, was because he had omitted the small bone [774]

"This is an example of conflicting beliefs. In addition to assuming that salmon were sent down by Alquantam to furnish food for mankind, and that Raven supplied them in the beginning of time, the Bella Coola also believe that they are brought each year back by Nuhlymoo and Wiwaiwa. [771]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
825
774
772

at the back of the neck; this is called sulkhlnie by the Bella Coola and it is thought to be especially important since the spirit (I, p. 94) is located there. Somewhat discouraged by his lack of success, Raven sat holding his head in his hands, pondering. Finally, he decided that he would have to visit Mlkhlwa, the land of the salmon far beyond the western ocean.

His self-propelling canoe, Tahahl, was soon made ready and Raven invited Mouse, a young woman, to accompany him. The two travelled without incident till they came to the flat land where the salmon had their homes. On the beach were myriads of canoes, each in reality the skin of a sockeye salmon. Raven had instructed Mouse to remain in his canoe, so when the sockeye salmon chief invited the two to his house only Raven accepted, though Mouse was urged most courteously to accompany him. Raven was conducted to the house, where his host threw his own daughter into the river. She changed into a sockeye salmon and swam to the beach; some of her father's servants cut her up and brought her to the house where she was cooked. The meal was set before the guest whom the chief instructed not to eat any of the bones. As he ate, Raven examined the salmon very carefully to see what had been lacking in his model, and soon discovered it to be the thin bone, shaped like a maple leaf, at the back of the neck. Seizing an opportunity when no one was looking, Raven secreted this bone against the palate of his mouth. When the meal was over and the guest had tied what was left of the food into a mat, someone collected all the bones and threw them into the river. Forthwith they became a sockeye salmon, which swam towards the shore. But after an instant, the fish began to behave peculiarly, swimming around madly in circles, and jumping in an aimless manner. Everyone agreed that a bone must have been lost, and they searched the house for it without success. They also examined Raven. Finally, one man thought of investigating the guest's mouth where they found the missing bone.

"Oh," said Raven, lying: "I did not know it was there."

As soon as the bone was thrown into the river the sockeye salmon became normal and swam quietly to the beach where it changed into the chief's daughter once more.

When the time came to leave, Raven asked the chief to tell his daughter to take his bundle of food to his canoe for him. Meanwhile Mouse had carried out Raven's instructions, which were to gnaw a hole in each of the sockeye salmon canoes. Raven entered Tahahl before taking the parcel from the girl, and as he stepped in, the canoe was forced a little distance from the land so that she waded into the water to hand it to him. As she did so, he backed his canoe further out until

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 539

his left cheek until the blood flows, takes also a mouthful of his own urine, and spits out the mixture. 776 823

The following instance of this belief was recorded. [789]

A Bella Coola chief and a number of followers were once at Kwatna where they had been gambling for stakes of mountain goat grease. Two of the men had lost their supply, so they went into the mountains between Kwatna and Restoration Bay to replenish it. They saw two goats, killed them, and at once two more appeared in the same place; these they also slew. When a fifth and sixth goat appeared and were likewise dispatched, one of the hunters tried to restrain his comrade, saying that such phenomenal success must be due to supernatural power which they should not abuse. They stopped firing, cut the grease from their quarry, and started on the return journey. Presently the mountain began to tilt upwards before their feet. They had no ropes, and almost in despair concealed themselves in a small rock shelter. Their dogs too felt the movement and barked in terror. Fortunately, the mountain did not rise more than a few feet and soon subsided, so that the men escaped. [525]

The attitude of the Bella Coola to supernatural powers of all kinds may be termed a doctrine of Opportunism. Supernatural beings abound and constantly play a part in the affairs of mortals. An alert and bold man can take advantage of these opportunities and obtain assistance, but he who hesitates is indeed lost. Certain types of assistance are most commonly granted to orphans and other unfortunates; accounts of these belong to the realm of mythology and will be described in a later chapter. On the whole the supernatural ones do not show discrimination in conferring boons, and the man who is quick to take advantage of them is the one to whom success comes. 776 [736]

Supernatural Elements in Human Beings

The Bella Coola believe that in the human body itself there are certain supernatural elements. Neither sticks nor stones can move, because they lack these attributes possessed by men and animals. Considering the firm belief of the Bella Coola in the omnipresence of the supernatural, it is not surprising that they should ascribe the phenomena of health and sickness, 774

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

774 of thought, of success and failure and of life itself, to powers of another sphere. Their ideas are not clearly crystallized on this subject, but in the following section an attempt has been made to give a fair picture, gleaned from many informants, of the supernatural parts of the human body.

THE SPIRIT

The most important part of the human body is the xixmänoäs, spirit. This is small, but of great power, since it belongs to the world of the supernatural; in fact, the spirit of a man is not mortal, but siut. Everyone, man or woman, rich or poor, chief or slave, has one; without it, life would be impossible. When a child is born, his parents supply him with food and care, and Älquntäm provides the even more necessary invisible elements, including the spirit. It resides in the back of the neck and resembles a thin bone shaped like a maple-leaf. Salmon have similar ones, but with them the bone is visible, [756] whereas only shamans can see it in human beings. The spirit in a new-born infant is weak and powerless, but it increases in strength with the body. If a man prospers in his ventures and has success in life, it is due, not to his own efforts, but to the activity of his spirit. When a man acquires wealth with little [556] labour, he knows that his spirit has been constantly trembling at the back of his neck; when he is unfortunate, that it has [787] become inert or sluggish. It is the cause of dreams, which are desired as means of foretelling the future. Some Bella Coola believe that in sleep it leaves the body and travels, unrestrained by any barrier, to the scene of the dreams; others, that it causes the images to appear. During waking hours the spirit [828] formulates every thought, no matter how trifling. When a man remembers that he left his fire with insufficient fuel and hurries home to rectify the omission, it is this element which has brought the need to his mind; when he thinks of a distant place, his spirit is responsible for the thought and some men even believe that it has travelled there. Sometimes an active one can give warning, as in the following instance. A few years ago a chief, when hunting, sat down to rest. While he 774

I: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sat a slide plunged down the mountain-side and swept away the ground where he would have been if he had not stopped. The Bella Coola know that such a fortunate escape is no accident, as foolish white men believe, but is the result of an active spirit. Sometimes it can convey only symbolic hints of what is to happen. An old Kimsquit man told how his lower eyelids once became sore and his stomach began to heave. This [827] occurs with sobbing, so he knew that ill-fortune was before [787] him and was not surprised at the death of his son. A thoughtful person pays great attention to indications such as these, knowing that his spirit is always striving to pierce the future and obtain information for him, however indefinite. The importance of the supernatural to the Bella Coola can be judged from the fact that they attribute every action and thought to an element of this nature.

Mentality, sulk, though caused by the spirit, is somewhat 774 vaguely regarded as a separate entity. It comprises two parts, 828
one constantly urging to good deeds, particularly to activity in ritual matters, the other to evil. No one knows the appearance, if any, of human mentality. Some of the thoughtful older men hazard the opinion that every tree has mentality, whereas others say that it has a spirit. In former times especially, as one was falling, the cutters could occasionally see a dark object somewhat resembling an otter flash away and disappear. Not until then was the tree actually dead. Even the old people do not profess to know anything definite about mentality, which is important only as an attribute of the spirit. In indefinite 774 association with it, too, is breath, sininits, provided by Ałquntäm [761] for everyone at birth. The word signifies more than [827] the material act of breathing, it denotes the actual physical state of being alive, a condition "lent" by Ałquntäm to mortals. The connection of these two elements with the spirit is unequivocal, though their exact relationship is indefinite.

If the spirit moves far from its proper position at the back [753] of the neck, the owner falls ill; if it leaves him, his condition [755]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

774 becomes critical. Only a shaman (I, p. 539) can return one, and 755 if he fails death always results. In some cases a spirit leaves [753] its owner without apparent reason; he becomes insane, tries to eat dirt, and his relatives realize at once what is the matter.
[756] They summon a shaman who takes off his cape, hangs it like a pouch on his stick, and points it in all directions as he sings his shaman's song. Finally he locates what is missing, and traps it in his cloak, which he places around the sick man. This restores the element and the sufferer recovers immediately. Another method is for the shaman to press the back of the patient's neck, and by blowing and spitting cause the wandering spirit to return. Either cure must be performed by a shaman because of the supernatural power required.

774 Spirits can be extracted in various ways. Shamans can draw one forth by sucking at the back of the neck between their cupped hands; in former times, some were so powerful that they could extract them by their mere presence. During 774 kusiut dances (II, chap. 1), the uninitiated are told that if they 575 enter the house where a ceremony is taking place, or even pass
[535] on the sidewalk outside the door, their spirits will be drawn from them by the power within and attracted to the dancer or to the sacred platform on which he is concealed. Many [178] stories are told of this, which were firmly believed by the uninitiated until the last few years. Members of the society claim that their great power acts as a magnet to the spirits of all but their associates, except children in arms; the latter can be taken by their mothers into the house, because their supernatural elements have not developed sufficient strength to 774 leave their bodies. A person may also lose his spirit through a sudden shock. If two people meet unexpectedly in the forest and one of them shouts loudly at the other, even if only in fun, the spasmodic contraction of the muscles is enough to expel it.
[761] The person to whom this happens falls down as if dead, and [756] though he soon recovers, his spirit has left him, and if it is not brought back by a shaman he dies a lingering death.

775 At death, the spirit permanently leaves the body. In some cases it tarries near the corpse for four days, or it may start at once on its travels. Distance means nothing to it, nor does time; once disembodied it goes back on the path of its late owner's ancestors from generation to generation, until it reaches the spot where his first forefather came to this earth. Here it assumes the bird or animal form used on that occasion and goes up to Nusmät·a. It is uncertain whether or not the spirit can take on, simultaneously, the different shapes used by various ancestors of the deceased. Its existence in the land above is similar to that on earth, but in an advanced degree. A good carpenter, for example, is a better carpenter after death; a chief is a greater chief; and one of the explanations for death is that Älquntäm has called a man to continue his work in another sphere. Nusmät·a is so huge that it is never crowded, though the spirits are immortal. They can see what is taking place on earth and sometimes return in bird or animal form to visit and comfort their grieving relatives. Powerful chiefs delight to display this, by means of a masked figure, as the central feature of a potlatch. Apart from this ceremonial usage, disembodied spirits play no part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They take no interest in human beings and accordingly are neither supplicated nor feared. 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE LIFE

Closely associated with the spirit is the sxuxmänoäs lkt', life.[20] As in the previous case, Älquntäm provides every human being and every animal with this at birth. It is an ethereal substance, having the form of the body which it animates; without it there can be neither strength nor growth; without life the body is an inert mass of flesh. As a person becomes older, so does this element grow, always taking the exact shape and form of the body. Alone, it can neither move nor think, its motive power being the spirit. It is the life that suffers 761 [774]

[20]Interpretations have been employed whenever possible to lessen the use of confusing native terms. Life is not an accurate translation of this Bella Coola word, but it is hoped that the reader will grasp its real significance from the description in this section. [114]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is the life that suffers
761 whenever the skin is broken. Any wound may prove dan-
[752] gerous, but particularly one that cuts either of the invisible
[827] lines along which vitality flows from the little finger to the little toe. An injury to one of these channels spreads rapidly and is in many cases fatal.

761 It is generally considered that a person dies if his life leaves
774 his body. In contradiction to this, though the discrepancy seems of slight importance to the Bella Coola, is the belief that it ascends at the winter solstice to the gathering of the supernatural beings in Nusmät·a to greet Ałquntäm. It is common knowledge that some part of the human body does this, but there is diversity of opinion regarding which it may be. Some say it is the spirit, but the consensus of opinion is that it is the life. If it is successful and receives presents in the land above, its owner will prosper on earth; if it is unfortunate, he will be the same; if it falls in the crush as the guests hurry forth to escape the heat of Ałquntäm's entry, he will die. By dreams
761 a man learns the fortune of his supernatural representative,
787 and from them he can judge what is in store for him during the coming year and receive intimations concerning birth and death, secret society matters and, in fact, every phase of human activity, since all are decided at the meeting of Ałquntäm and his associates. Dreams are considered to be especially important at this season of the year (I, p. 608) and information obtained from them may, perhaps, be the origin of the present firm conviction that some portion of the body actually ascends.
[182] Bella Coola beliefs have so broken down in recent years that lack of unanimity concerning the specific part is not surprising, nor does it alter the importance of this conviction. No attempt is made to explain how an individual can remain alive during the annual absence of his life.

761 Although the life is so ethereal, it really consists of four intangible elements which unite to form the immaterial whole. One of these parts, including the voice, is located in the throat, another in the trunk, a third in the legs, and a fourth in the feet; the body is thus divided into four quarters. The connection of these with one another and with the spirit, the mental director of the life, is a matter of advanced Bella Coola theology on which opinions differ. Only men of philosophical temperament even hazard an opinion on such matters, which are beyond the realm of daily routine. 761

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When a man dies, his life leaves his body and the useless flesh begins to decay. At the same time the life is freed to travel as an intangible wraith, having the form and appearance of its dead owner. It visits all the places where he had been in the habit of going during life, irrespective of their distance from the scene of death. Sometimes it journeys to the locality where, in a dream, the mother of the deceased received her first intimation of pregnancy (I, p. 615). It wants to see former friends and sometimes makes its presence known to them by whistling. A person who hears this sound is saddened by the realization that one of his associates has passed away in some distant place. At other times, a man merely senses its presence and feels frightened without hearing or seeing anything to account for it. Very rarely, a dead person's life speaks to a dearly loved friend to inform him of his loss. During the existence of the body, spirit and life are closely associated, and the former sometimes accompanies the latter on its round of farewell visits before ascending to Nusmät·a. 761 775 [774]

After four days the life descends to the land below where it lives forever as a ghost. Some believe that it is the shadow which assumes this form, but the seeming contradiction is relatively unimportant since the life is essentially shadow-like. Ghosts have already been described in connection with supernatural bodies, and further information will be found in vol. I, chap. VIII.

At death, when the life as a whole becomes a ghost, its constituent parts likewise undergo transformation. The one situated in the feet remains with the corpse and disintegrates; that located in the legs enters a wolf and nothing more is known of its fate; no one knows what happens to the one situated in the body. The part in the throat, including the voice, enters [827] [825] [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The kusiut dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Älquntärn is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the mere force engendered in a man's body by lengthy abstin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

843 be avoided. If she walks on a beaver dam, or dips her head 825 into a pool made by this animal, the birth of her infant will be blocked in the same way that the dam restrains a stream. This difficulty can be obviated, however, by dipping up the water with her hands instead of bending her head to the surface to drink. As far as possible, she must avoid being startled by [774] small animals or reptiles; even if the excitement so caused is too slight to expel her own spirit, it may be sufficient to damage that of the foetus. Such dangers can be countered by means of magical rites (I, p. 720). Her husband is also subject to certain injunctions and prohibitions. If he eats beaver meat his wife's delivery will be difficult. He must preserve a small piece of the skin or an eye of every animal that he kills; a few [846] days after birth the child is steeped in the smoke of a fire on which these articles have been thrown. This prevents injury from the father's quarry.[1]

A pregnant woman continues to reside in her own house, where her condition is a source of interest to her friends and relatives. There are no midwives with inheritable professional 844 prerogatives, but as the time for delivery draws near, arrange-[424] ments are made for the mother or some other experienced female relative to be in attendance. It is quite proper for the husband to attend to this point, though it is customary for elderly female relations to do so, sometimes those of the wife, sometimes those of her husband. A woman who, having herself borne children, has assisted at many births with success, is often requested to be present, and it is taken as a matter of course that she will be rewarded for her services.

When the pains of labour begin, the patient leaves the house with her assistant or assistants. In summer the party goes to some lonely spot in the woods where a rude wind-break may have been erected; in winter, to a sheltered spot beneath a [171] house. No man can be present, a point in which the Bella Coola state that their culture differs from that of the Kwakiutl. The midwife manipulates the infant so that the birth is made

[1] This rite is described in detail later (I, p. 720).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 grave carrying a spruce bough in his hand. He touches with it the edge where he is standing, then, in sunwise order, the east, south, and west margins. This circuit is repeated four times and the branch tossed away to westward. This essential [774] ceremony is based on a belief that the lives, or perhaps the spirits, of the grave-diggers have been drawn from them into the grave and are in danger of being pressed down by the coffin. Should this occur, they would have short lives. The spruce branch enables the supernatural elements to leave the cavity and return to their owners who suffer no ill effects. Anyone, other than a grave-digger, can perform this rite.

The coffin is now lifted into the grave, care being taken that the corpse faces east. As already described, it is in a squatting position with haunches almost on the ground. Boards have been prepared in advance, and with these the grave-diggers make a roof-like covering, placing at each corner [775] a stone weighing from ten to fifteen pounds, to prevent the ghost from returning to trouble the survivors. Earth is thrown in on top of the boards, and as it falls the wailing breaks out dolorously in a final crescendo of mourning. [766] If a chief has been buried, his fellows sometimes sing a xe·tla [533] song. At this time it is proper for one or more chiefs to rise and speak. No one is required to do so, nor is there any rule 537 as to the order in which they make their remarks. The first 764 speaker is usually a prominent man related to the survivors, though seldom a son, brother, or other near relative of the deceased. A speech is generally addressed in part to the spirit of the dead person, telling it where to go; in part, to the mourners. For a dead child, emphasis is laid on the fact that although he did not live long enough to be incorporated into his ancestral myths on earth, this will be done for him in his future home. In conclusion, an appeal is often made to [775] Alquntäm, under the name of Smaialotla, to take pains that [773] the spirit of the dead is given its rightful place in Nusmät·a, in the section where its first forbears were created, and whither the spirits of its dead ancestors have returned since the beginning of time.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The explanation of these manifestations of the supernormal, 787* for such they are considered to be, lies in the conviction that 811 every activity of the mind is due to supernatural causation, [828] the functioning of the spirit. In the round of daily life there [774] are always good and bad incidents; the person who wakes expecting to meet one or other before nightfall recognizes the fulfilment of his premonition in some small occurrence, and narrates it to his fellows as proof of what he had told them in the morning. In case of some major event, such as death or disaster, the Bella Coola assume that some previous indication must have been given. Looking back after the event, a man easily persuades himself that he "felt" a warning, and is more [774] than ever convinced that his spirit, the cause of his thoughts, has supernatural ability.

Conviction in the near presence of the supernatural has had 177 somewhat surprising results with regard to Christian Bella 787* Coola. A man converted in middle life carries all the fervour and realism of the old religion with him to the new, and feels 781 thoroughly familiar with the atmosphere of the Old Testament. 797 Visitations, such as therein described, are similar to those experienced by his fathers and himself, and he scorns the white man who questions their literal accuracy. He continues to hear the voices of supernatural beings, and to interpret mental [828] pictures as visions, but he ascribes them to the beings of the white man's religion. The following is a rather striking illustration of this point:

A number of years ago a devout Christian, who may be 159 designated X, was a patient in the hospital at Bella Bella. In 177 the same ward was a young Bella Bella lad whose sickness refused to yield to treatment. X, becoming interested in his 787* neighbour, began to ponder about his condition, until presently 781 he felt convinced that the sufferer would be better by seven o'clock the following morning, and told him so. A marked 797 improvement was noticeable by the time predicted, but the white doctor foolishly (according to X) gave his patient some

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

though they may be to the white man. It is hoped that the preceding illustrations, drawn from recent times, will explain the mental attitude of the Bella Coola better than incidents from folk-lore of the distant past. 787 *

Disregarding thoughts which, since they are caused by the spiritual elements of the human body, are ever present, relations with the supernatural may be divided into the following categories: [828] [774]

(1) Appearance of supernatural beings from which neither good nor bad results follow. Strictly speaking, every fleeting sight of a supernatural being belongs to this category, but it will be convenient to describe only experiences of a peculiar kind, such as the Bella Coola call ułn-abālawadjutlaix. Usually manifestations of the supernatural have certain effects; consequently, there are relatively few incidents of this kind recorded.

(2) Supernatural aid vouchsafed to a man or a woman in distress. There are many tales illustrating this, which are told and retold to the children. In most cases the assistance is given to one who has undeservedly, according to Bella Coola concepts, fallen into misfortune.

(3) Supernatural good luck. This may be obtained by anyone, and consists of the acquisition of a supernatural object to attract, not only fish and animals, as if it were a potent bait, but money and goods as well. [777] [224] [226]

(4) Acquisition of shamanistic power, with or without the ability to cure the sick. This may be received from one of two sources: [756]

(a) Ṫlitcāplilān-a or some other supernatural being.

(b) Ghosts, which are likewise supernatural. [775]

(5) Obtaining prophetic powers direct from the supreme god. There are few instances of this, and none that is ascribed to a remote period. It is possible that all examples of this kind can be attributed to indirect Christian influence. [177]

(6) Obtaining power from a supernatural being localized in a particular spot. This usually takes the form of succour when [756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 the rock shelter half a mile away. Here he must lie alone, without food, for four days. If he is in a pure condition from 755 the observance of chastity, he then feels the earth shake and * [787] hears a sound like a mighty landslide, though it is inaudible to those waiting in the cave. If the patient is frightened and tries to flee, he will die, but if he lies still he will be able to spit out the dead frog, or it will become so soft that it can drip from his nose. He then washes in the stream that flows through the ice-cavern, thus completing the cure. The malady [785] will return unless chastity is practised for one year.

756 Finally, in dreams a man is sometimes carried away to one or other of these curing places, or to several of them, and is * 787 there made a shaman. It will be noted that this method of acquiring the ability differs from those previously described, but his functions are the same as those whose power has been obtained in one of the usual ways.

Dreams

* 787 The last type of contact with the supernatural is by means of dreams. Psychologically, these are akin to visions; indeed, it is often impossible to learn whether the experiences described in an ancient story occurred during sleep or when awake. The [774] Bella Coola believe that dreams are caused by the spirit of the individual; they are, therefore, supernatural and worthy of attention, but in spite of this, it was difficult to obtain detailed accounts. The reason seems to lie in the intangibility of the experiences themselves. Unless one is sufficiently striking, it passes into oblivion as a fruitless manifestation of the workings of the spirit. Many of the visions seen in ancient times by those who had fasted or otherwise reached an emotional state, must have been dreams, but they have ceased to be recognized as such in the course of generations. The Bella Coola of today [159] state emphatically that they receive warning of future events during sleep, but the only individual from whom it was possible to obtain coherent descriptions was the elderly man previously described as X (I, p. 515).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Kill a squirrel, clean it, wash the entrails carefully and leave them hanging in the sun to dry for four days, then tie them around the child's stomach for four days more. It is important that the infant should not break the string. On the fourth day, remove them and hang them in the doorway of the house. On this same day, another squirrel must be killed, treated as before, and its viscera allowed to dry for four days. The child wears these in the same way for four days, when they too are hung in the doorway. A third squirrel, and finally a fourth, is killed and made use of in precisely the same manner. When the final set of entrails has been hung up, the four are left suspended for four days, till the twenty-eighth after the killing of the first animal, when the father takes them to the forest and deposits them beneath some projecting rock where no water can penetrate and where they will dry and keep indefinitely. 825 789 856

This causes the child to grow up endowed, like the squirrel, with agility so that he can scale even precipitous mountains. This medicine is frequently used in conjunction with one for hunting ability.

To Cause Easy Delivery [843]

Place the foetus of a porcupine against the back of a girl's neck and allow it to drop to the ground. Pick it up, replace it, and let it fall again. This is repeated four times while the person says:

"Please, may she be like you and have no trouble in giving birth."

This medicine can be used at any time before puberty.

To Cause Bravery (four means)

(1) When a grizzly bear has been shot, a lad who wishes to make himself brave approaches it and thrusts his arm down the dying animal's throat. This kills it by choking. Then he rubs his hand over his heart and the back of his neck, the seat [774]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

825 of the spirit, which imparts to himself the courage and strength 789 of the animal he has just slain.

856 (2) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, the [774] bloody pelt is wrapped around a lad whose parents wish him to be brave. He is lashed in securely and the bundle, attached to a long rope, is thrown into the rapids. After a few minutes, it is drawn ashore, but immediately thrown in again. This is repeated four times. This medicine causes the child to have the courage of a grizzly bear. It is said that the first youth to whom this was applied rescued his mother from slavery among the Tsimshian.

This treatment is usually applied to boys of from three to five years of age.

(3) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, two lads, whose parents wish them to be brave, are called. They are told to crouch on their hands and knees and while in this position the pelt is thrown over their backs. They crawl to and fro for a few minutes while dogs are encouraged to bark and growl at the "animal." The skin is then removed and the two sent to wash in the river. They are called back and the whole rite repeated a second time, followed by a third and a fourth application, with washing in every case. This gives them the bravery of grizzly bears.

This medicine can be used at any time before the holding of sexual intercourse.

(4) When an octopus has been killed, a lad is placed within the freshly removed skin. Those present say:

"Please, may he be like you, afraid of nothing."

The skin is removed and the lad sent to wash in the river. The rite is repeated four times which gives him the bravery of an octopus. Like the last, this medicine is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse.

To Cause Ability in River Work

Fasten a boy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw the bundle into the river. Lift it out when it has gone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Preventive and Curative Medicines

Medicines of Infancy and Childhood

789 To Counteract Dangers Incurred During Pregnancy (two means)

774 (1) As already described (I, p. 96), there is always danger of a person losing his spirit through a sudden start, causing involuntary contraction of the muscles, but pregnant women are especially liable to peril of this kind. Moreover, the unexpected appearance of a toad, rat, or mouse, though insufficient to harm an expectant mother, may suffice to startle the unborn child, or even to destroy his spirit. A woman carefully remembers all experiences of this kind and treats the injury while her infant is crying immediately after birth. If a toad has caused it, she catches one, decorates it with dyed cedar-bark, and places it on the child's stomach, then guides it so that it jumps up the chest to the neck. This is repeated four times. She then sets it down, unharmed on the ground, saying:

843 825

"You are the cause of the trouble, please go."

The same rite is carried out for all small mammals, reptiles, and even with birds which have startled a mother by their peculiar behaviour. In some families it is customary to postpone the application of this medicine until four days after birth. There is considerable difference of opinion concerning the specific injury; some allege that the spirit of the creature enters the body and, if not counteracted, causes the child to be born sick and feeble.

[846]

843 (2) During his wife's pregnancy, a husband must preserve a small portion of the skin of every animal killed. Four days after birth, as the infant lies in its cradle, a small fire is built beneath and the pieces thrown thereon so that the child is steeped in the smoke. If this is neglected, the boy or girl will die during infancy, though the means by which the slain animals accomplish this is not fully understood. Possibly, as in the last instance, their spirits have entered the body. Some hunters preserve an eye from every carcass instead of a piece

825 789 [846] [761] [774]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 754 except an infant daughter. She grew up, married, and was the mother of the old Bella Coola, about seventy years of age in 1923, who is so loathed as a sorcerer. It is he who has the collection of spittle, and it is believed that, like his grandfather, he is the owner of a skinned and stuffed left hand with which he can kill a man as surely as with a rifle.

THE DISCOVERY OF TWO SORCERERS

Many years ago there lived at Stuk two young men who were constant companions; they always hunted and travelled together, and were determined to share each other's fortune, no matter what it might be. One day they agreed to go up the valley to visit some friends, but decided to postpone their departure until dusk. One of the two went out for a short walk and failed to return by the time appointed; his comrade sought him everywhere and finally hurried off up the trail, thinking that his friend must have started before him. He soon heard sounds of laboured breathing as if people were carrying a heavy burden, and could just distinguish two men carrying a coffin on poles between them. He realized that they must be sorcerers and that their inability to turn around would give him an advantage. Stealing up behind them, he pushed the rear man, not only causing him to stumble, but the one in front as well, since their burden was resting between them. Neither could turn around to see who had discovered them, and they became more and more terrified as the brave youth first pushed, and then pulled the one in the rear. [774] Suddenly he called out, wa-, so loudly in their ears that the sudden start expelled their spirits and they fell to earth as if dead. The lad watched their gradual recovery, feeling confident that his partner must be within ear-shot and would come hurrying back to his assistance if necessary. As soon as the sorcerers had revived, one of them said angrily to the boy:

"You will die presently."

"No," he answered. "It is you who are in grave peril."

At this point he called loudly for his companion who was so far ahead that he could barely hear the other's voice; he answered the shout and began to run back. The sorcerers, trying to make the best of a bad situation, mocked him by advising him to call again and to bring more helpers if he wanted to escape death. When his friend had come so close that he could see what was taking place, the youth called out to him:

"Partner! They say that I am in danger."

"No," the other answered. "It is they who will die."

When he joined the group the four began to discuss what was to be done. The sorcerers begged their discoverers not to expose their mis-

Z:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tense throughout this chapter, and to assume the presence of a number of young men and women ignorant of the significance of the rites. Formerly, the kukusiut often had difficulty in impressing the uninitiated with their prowess, and feuds with the a'alk were common.

Although membership in the kusiut society depends on an ancestral prerogative, it is essentially a democratic institution. A certain amount of wealth is necessary to validate a kusiut prerogative, but nothing comparable to that required for a potlatch; in fact, poor men are often persons of great importance within the ranks of the society. Nor are the prerogatives considered to be as valuable as ancestral rights, so that slaves are often admitted as kukusiut by their masters. An important kusiut is not esteemed by the community in the same way as the donor of many potlatches; in short, membership in the society brings limited ceremonial and semi-religious advantage, not social prestige of a public nature.

Powers and Functions of the Society

Any secret society can be viewed from the standpoints of a member, and of a non-member. The scope of the kusiut organization can be most clearly outlined by describing first what an uninitiated person knows about it. From his infancy, parents impress upon a child the supernatural powers of the kukusiut and the dangers attached to their rites. Such instruction is perhaps strongest where one, or both, is not a member. They then voice their own fears, and do not merely deceive for the good of the society. Steeped as every child is in a firm belief of the near presence of the supernatural, he readily believes what he is told. He learns, for example, that if, without special invitation, he dares enter the house where a kusiut dance is taking place—at any time during the four days or more that it lasts—his spirit will be drawn from him. This is sufficient to deter him from prying too closely into the rites. Strangely enough, there seem always to have been differences in teaching with respect to this deception. It is believed that if a non-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

It is believed that if a non-
*575 initiate pass between the central fire and the raised platform 774 behind it, where the dancer is usually concealed, his spirit will 755 be attracted to this material object. Even though the performer is in another house at the time, he at once senses what [784 has happened and asks who has lost his spirit. The guilty 62] person, believing that he will die unless it is returned to him, always admits what he has done. The dancer, accompanied by several attendant tukuciut, proceeds to the raised platform, presses his cupped hands four times against it, and by sucking with his mouth pretends to draw forth the spirit. But since the dancer has a direct call (II, p. 6) from his supernatural patron (II, p. 6), he cannot come in contact with the uninitiated without danger to the latter, so he transfers the supernatural element to the leg of another tuciut, who is not dancing at the time, by pressing four times. This assistant then returns it to the owner by kneading it four times into the back of his neck.
[62] The reckless uninitiated person suffers no harm, but is more careful in future.

[784 Another belief is that if a non-member even walks close to 62] the doorway of the house during the four days, or more, that a dance is taking place, his spirit is attracted to the dancer, wherever he may be at the moment. Consequently the uninitiated use the beach path instead of the sidewalk. Accounts
[998] differ as to what results from the transgression. According to one, the dancer falls down as if dead, due to the contact between something non-sacred and the power with which he is imbued. It is at once recognized what has happened and any tuciut can draw forth the spirit by placing his two hands, shaped like a cup, against the dancer and sucking violently. While so doing he calls hoip loudly and any tukuciut present beat time furiously. As soon as the alien spirit has been removed, the dancer recovers. Still holding his hands cupped together, the extractor now proceeds to the house of the non-member and returns the latter's spirit by kneading it into the back of his neck. If this were not done, the loser would soon [784 become mad, try to eat dirt, and die. According to another

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukuxiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kuxiut which he inserts into the loser's neck. 575* 774 755 [784]

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect for the kukuxiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims. 575* 774 626

Another source of strength claimed by the kukuxiut is ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural beings held in Nuxmalit-a prior to the entry of Alquanim. As already described, it is believed that a supernatural element from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging to kukuxiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nuxmalit-a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Alquanim enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kuxiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened. 575* 787 776 796 777 761

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

through the motion of throwing it to his partner; the crystal disappears! It has been palmed out of sight at the instant of throwing, but the presumption is that it has entered the other siki who falls to the floor as if stricken down by the powerful object given to him. Now one of the kakaxiut, who has been primed for the duty, strikes the recumbent man on the back, restoring him to consciousness. Slowly he pulls himself together, rising at intervals as if crushed beneath a heavy weight, and writhes until he finally produces a rock crystal from his stomach, as if it had been thrown to him. In reality it is his own which he has carried concealed from the beginning of the ceremony. He pretends to throw this to X, often so realistically that the novice blinks, expecting some object to strike him. All this time a kaxiut, it does not matter who, has been drinking water at intervals and spitting it out over the face of X, "to strengthen him." When X has received the stone, the beating on the floor-boards, stilled during the transference of the crystal, breaks out again with full din. After a short interval the first siki stops the noise, goes through the same contortions and produces, apparently from his stomach, another rock crystal, which as before he throws across to his partner who falls down, and later passes it to X. Again the beating on the floor is started. The same ritual is carried out until four, or sometimes only two, rock crystals have been given to X. Then the procedure is reversed. The second siki goes to the novice and after much contortion draws from his stomach one of the crystals, which he pretends to throw back to his partner. As the latter makes the motion of catching it, he produces his own crystal which he, so it seems, forces into his own body. This is done for all the crystals (see Plate 4). At this juncture the uninitiated are told to leave.

One of the siki now knowds the back of X's neck and goes through the motions of pulling something from it. The frightened youth realizes that his spirit is being drawn from him and his terror, great in any case, is not lessened by the siki taking it in his cupped hands to the fire where he scoops up

[see category 116, p84(b) - ANALYST]

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 991 796 [774] [781] some ashes which he puts into his mouth and chews. Of course he masticates only the ashes but X, unaware of this, is concerned for the fate of his spirit. At last it is restored to him and he is told that the siki has altered it from that of an uninitiated person to that of a kusiut.* The psychological effect of this act on the mind of a young man who has not had time to adjust himself to his new knowledge and who is firmly convinced of the powers of the siki is tremendous.

The first siki now instructs two kukusiut sitting on either side of X to lie down to serve as a seat for him. They do so, irrespective of who they may be. If the novice is still ignorant of the full mysteries of the society, the siki announces that he is going to get a call for X. He walks around the house, peering here and there as if seeking something, and then pounces as if he had caught an object between his hands. A whistle [534] is heard, such as the novice knows accompanies the coming of every call; but he does not know that the noise is made by compressing a goat or bear bladder-whistle between two sticks held beneath the armpit. This is the "mystery" of the strange noises.

*575 991 796 "Do you know what makes that noise?" ask the two kukusiut on whom X is sitting.

If X denies all knowledge, the mystery is explained to him, [488] and he is warned that he will be killed if he communicates the information to uninitiated persons. If he answers that he knows the cause, he is asked who has told him. Perhaps some lad has been peeking and has told X of what he has seen; in that case the over-inquisitive youth is at once initiated to prevent further leakage of information. As soon as X has learnt the great secret he moves to one side and the singers take their positions behind the fire. His father, or whoever it [425] may be from whom he is to obtain his name, then stands up [553] and unfolds its origin, telling which supernatural being is his patron, and the locality of his repository. X sometimes re-[178] *This part of the rite has been omitted for so many years that many of the middle-aged kukusiut have forgotten it.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

attend every kusiut dance. Usually all kukusiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every qotlim he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer. 575* 796* [302] [292] [774] [834] [688]

Alqantäm enters Nusqulxwaista at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kukusiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Noäkxnim seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaien·a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Noäkxnim empties a large number of olachen into the river.[*] X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukusiut. 575* 796* 787 773 825

It sometimes happens that no kusiut of whom Noäkxnim is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Noäkxnim when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kusiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed [mältindjutqwlsan, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs. 575* 796* 787

[*]Noäkxnim is accordingly often called Nathlimm.

[776]

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ʒlaqō'tla dances clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large headring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red and white cedar-bark. Some ʒlaqō'tla do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon, or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The ʒlaqō'tla has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house. 575 [774] [756] [292] [301]

The Ō'lɛq (= the laugher) and the Dā'tia (= the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'lɛq 'makes fun of everything' and scratches people with his nails. The Dā'tia carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ōlɛq and the Dā'tia must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses. [785]

If a person transgresses the laws of the Kū'siūt, for instance when the ʒlaqō'tla gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any farther. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the Kū'siūt are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Atlqulā'tɛnum, who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qō'mtsica and his brothers and his sister (see p. 412), Masmasalā'niq and his fellows, the raven and the Nusqā'mta, and many others. 575 688 575 532 796 [776]

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house and resorts to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by pro- 844

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 what cause this divergence is due. Mythology and religion are so closely [171] connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Snq, the sun-god (compare sōnq, sun).
773 The rays of the sun are his eyelashes. When prayed to he is called Tāat'au. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the fol-
776 lowing formulas: Atlkun ŭtlŏ'tlsuq, Tāat'au, 'Look on us where we are [782] going, Tāat'au;' and Tāat'au, atlkualinomdŏ'tlq, 'Take care of us, Tāat'au.'
[539] Snq is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with the actions and thoughts of men. These are given by Masmasalā'niq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Masmasalā'niq, Yula'timot, Matlapē'eqoek, and Itl'itlu'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been expanded between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Masmasalā'niq, and found there a beautiful prairie country in which all the birds lived. Masmasalā'niq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his arts. The raven was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the nusqē'mta (nu-ta=place of, sqēm=the day is dawning). The nusqē'mta was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously, and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pond from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pond, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the nusqē'mta. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Masmasalā'niq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Matlapē'eqoek and Itl'itlu'lak tried likewise to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Yula'timot carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Masmasalā'niq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that man should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by man.

The Bilqula believe that Masmasalā'niq and his brothers still continue [176] to give new ideas to man. They say that any new design of painting or carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Masmasalā'niq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

774 The soul is believed to dwell in the nape. It is similar in shape to a [826] bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies away its owner must die. Shamans are able to see and to recover souls.
[761]
[756]

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swoons it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy. 774 756 [828] [753] [828]

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Snq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Snq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself. 756 [776]

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awiky'ö'noq wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Ma'tom) who will initiate him. No Bilquła can obtain the art in such a way.' [171]

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ek'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called snak. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms. 753 755 754 [825]

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die. 682 754 [825]

I add here a few current beliefs:— 827

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry. [777]

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die. 825

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky. 763 777

WARS.

When a war party was organised the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their 726 714

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze
[152] blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [774] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his [756] own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [292] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [301] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ELAXŌ'LA dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark. Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the S'Ā'LPSTA (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of BaxbakuālanuXsī'wasē of the Kwakiutl. Some ELAXŌ'LA do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and [266] devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The ELAXŌ'LA has to observe a number of regulations.
[525] For four years after his initiation he must not [834] gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 200.
MASK OF THE S'Ā'LPSTA.
Bilxula.
Col. No. 19828, U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The Ō'LEX (the laugher) and the DĀ'TIA (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'LEX "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The DĀ'TIA carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ō'LEX and the DĀ'TIA, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the KŌ'SIUT, for instance, when 688 the ELAXŌ'LA gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a [692] mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty 575 of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 688 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the substitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted 754 to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-756 ease into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sun attached to another land above the one of which our sky 772 is the underside. Boas (p. 28) has described this upper land [821] in some detail. A number of Bella Coola were questioned on 772 this subject, but for some time no one could be found with knowledge of its existence. At length one of the older people 184 remembered that a man who had died some thirty years ago had a personal story connected with it, and later a Kimsquit man was able to furnish definite information. He explained that in his family there was a myth dealing with this matter; [424] others might have heard this myth, but since it was not their property, of course they would not be able to impart the facts contained in it, nor would they necessarily believe it. Consequently, an upper land, superimposed above that which is immediately over the earth, cannot be described as a Bella Coola belief; it is shared, so far as could be ascertained, by only two families.

The chief feature of this uppermost world is its distance 772 and unapproachableness. To the supernatural beings living in the intermediate land it is a far-off place; in fact, their attitude towards it corresponds to that with which mortals regard the land above their own. The supernatural ones can, when they wish, visit this upper world, which is called Nuqwliāls. A sun shines there, but it is a different kind of sun from [821] that known to mortals. On the whole it appears that this upper sky-land does not differ materially from either the earth or the land immediately above. No human being has ever [773] reached this distant land, so what little is known about it was brought down in the beginning of time by the first people.

In addition to these two upper worlds, the Bella Coola know of one, or perhaps two, below. One of these is inhabited [775] by ghosts.[1] It somewhat resembles the earth, but is unsubstantial and ethereal. It is considered to be immediately

[1]At the present time the Bella Coola are in a state of transition between the old beliefs and the new. This concept is held only by the older people, so it might be more accurate to describe it as one which they, the tribe as a whole, used to know. It has been thought advisable to use the present tense throughout in recording customs and beliefs which are now rapidly passing away. [178]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

beneath the Bella Coola valley, and the land of the living forms a dome over it corresponding to that of the sky over this world. But everything is reversed. A river flows in the land of ghosts, but it rises in the west instead of the east; when it is warm on this earth it is cold in the land below; when it is sunrise here, it is sunset there. Shamans are believed to have penetrated frequently to this land, and on information from them the Bella Coola base their beliefs.

There is another land beneath the ocean. In this live the fish and sea mammals in human form, as well as other beings to be described in the next section of this chapter. Like all other worlds it has a sun above it,[2] and conditions are said to be similar to those existing on this earth. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether this undersea world is at the same level as the land of ghosts, and whether or not it extends beneath the rivers.

Although Bella Coola concepts regarding the sun and other heavenly bodies will require further consideration, it will be convenient at this point to describe them in outline. The sun is regarded as a heat-radiating ball of such intensity that a human being cannot approach it. Its path, as it crosses the land above, varies from day to day until it reaches its limits at the solstices. As it travels, it is accompanied by the droning of two Aiiilāxa, supernatural feminine beings who remain continually, one in the east and one in the west. According to most informants, the ends of the sun's course, though fixed and invariable from year to year, are not marked by any visible means. Others state that at each limit there is the mouth of a snmq, a mythological animal of enormous size.

The moon is thought likewise to travel[1] each day but is said to be very cold. Few stories are current concerning it, although the Bella Coola say that long ago a man tried to reach it, only to be driven back by the intense cold. A shaman who died not many years ago claimed to have received power

[1]One informant stated that our sun served that purpose.
[2]The Aiiilāxa drone as it travels, as they do for the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 hanging a number of bird and animal cloaks, representing ravens, eagles, whales, grizzly bears, black bears, and a few others. Ālquntäm asked each individual which of these cloaks he preferred to wear. One selected a raven, another an eagle, and so on. Each donned his choice from the wall and immediately became the bird or animal chosen. Ālquntäm gave each man or woman one or more names, and some food in compressed form; then sent him down in avian or mammal form. Even the animals could travel through the air like birds, and each landed on the peak of a mountain in the Bella Coola country, took off his cloak, and reassumed human form. The discarded coverings floated back up to Nusmät·a. A few individuals, instead of coming to earth in animal form, swarmed down posts which stretched between the worlds.

177 773 This myth is fervently believed by the Bella Coola. Even Christian Indians, though they readily admit the biblical creation as applied to the white race, remain convinced of the manner in which their own ancestors came into being. At the present time, though most ancient beliefs are rapidly passing away, few, if any, Bella Coola doubt this account of the creation of their forefathers. Their conviction rests not only on the religious aspect of their life, but on the sociological. A man's [551 424] most treasured possessions are the name brought down from above by his ancestor in the beginning of time, the knowledge of the form taken by that ancestor, and information about the place where he landed. A collection of myths of this kind is given in vol. I, chap. VI. Lacking knowledge of his first an- [622] cestor's form, a Bella Coola has slight chance of becoming a [554 567] chief; such lore is the birthright of every descendant of one of these first people, and those without it are almost certain to be the offspring of slaves. The social aspects of creation myths will be described later; at this point a broad outline must suffice. Nusmät·a, "The House of Myths," is the place in which these myths were made, and are now stored, two reasons for its importance in the eyes of the Bella Coola.

[775] Nusmät·a is not only connected with the history of an indi-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

vidual's ancestors; it enters into his own future as well. When a Bella Coola dies, his spirit (I, p. 94) travels back on the path of his ancestors from generation to generation until it reaches the spot where the first one came to earth; there it assumes the bird or animal cloak used on that occasion and floats aloft to Nusmät·a to live forever. Small wonder, therefore, that this house figures prominently in the thoughts of the Bella Coola, and that they cling tenaciously to a belief in it. 177 773 775

Knowledge of Nusmät·a has been inherited almost entirely from the first ancestors of the Bella Coola, and only a few items of information could be gleaned concerning it. Most men think of it as an enormous replica of their own houses, but one individual, of philosophic temperament, expressed the opinion that it was without any inner partitions. His belief was based on the following incident: 772

Some years ago a young man died without apparent reason. His sorrowing father kept wondering: 772 787

"Why has my son died? Can he have committed some crime or made some mistake?"

Despondent and grief-stricken, for a whole year the man did not wash, ate little, and slept on the floor. At last he wandered away, alone, into the mountains. Night overtook him and he lay down to sleep without food. His son came to him in a dream, telling him not to lament, that he was in a better place than this world, for Äłqunïdm had recalled him to Nusmät·a to use his voice, which was unusually powerful, as a means of conveying his wishes to the other occupants of the house. Thus comforted, the father returned home in the morning, washed, and again behaved normally. My informant suggested that cross walls would be a bar to the strongest voice, and that Nusmät·a must consequently be partitionless.

Nusmät·a contains not only the spirits of all deceased Bella Coola, it is also the home of most of the supernatural beings. These frequently descend to visit the earth, but always return to the house above. So far as could be learnt, the only being irremovably located there is an old woman, Snuiqulqäls. The most prominent article of furniture in Nusmät·a is Äłqunïdm's seat, in the central position behind the fire. Over it is laid 772 776 * [775]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 the top. He concluded that this must be the home of the woman. Before the door of her house, wherever it may be, there are miniature totem-poles which open their painted mouths and speak in the voice of the animal or bird portrayed. The writer did not hear that her home was in the land above [114] Nusmāt·a, as Boas (p. 28) states. At the present time knowledge of Kāmai·ts is so scanty that failure to confirm the previous observation is not surprising.

One or two passing remarks of elderly informants imply that Kāmai·ts may once have been more important to Bella Coola belief than she is now. One old man, already in his ● [775] dotage, stated that long ago the dead used to dwell in her house. Another declared that long ago prayers were addressed [782] to her, which is never done now. The word kāmai·ts is commonly used by the Bella Coola in a manner difficult to trans- [192] late. It serves as equivalent for "please" or "thank you," but has an underlying significance of a supernatural benison or appeal. It is not a word to be used in casual conversation; it is reserved for important occasions or times of emotional stress. The comparative unimportance of Kāmai·ts probably rests on the fact that she belongs merely to the realm of ancient history and has no sociological significance, even as the patron of a kusiut dancer.

772 Another supernatural being so far removed from this world that he enters but little into the lives of the Bella Coola is * 776 Sninia. He is the male being whom Ālqantām sent down from above in the beginning of time to hold the earth in position, and who has since performed this duty. He lives among the ice of the far north, and has not been seen by mortals for many generations. He holds a rope fastened to the earth; when he is afraid that it has slipped slightly he takes a new grip and pulls the rope taut, pressing the world against the soles of his feet as he sits with legs extended, as a man would do to hold tight a kicking salmon. It is the tightening of the rope which [823] causes an earthquake. If Sninia should lose his grip entirely 575 the earth would capsize. He is patron for several kusiut * 776 dancers.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of the ocean, one of the members is awakened by the rhythmical beat of the paddles of the War-Party of the Tide. If he is wise he at once calls out, "Hi...." This serves to keep the War-Party at a distance, and to waken the rest of the party who hastily throw on the fire objects which have been in contact with the human body. 776* 789

Many stories are told by the Bella Coola of the appearance of the War-Party of the Tide. The following can be regarded as typical. 539 776*

A few years ago, a hunter named Onikotl, and his wife, Ànuqwiàls, were encamped on Labouchere Channel at the point known as Nusqwl, near the Hot Springs. They were discussing a private matter when, to the amazement of both, their dog, who was with them, joined in the conversation. This unnatural behaviour should have warned them of approaching danger and they ought to have killed the animal, as indeed the woman desired to do. But Onikotl foolishly refused and presently they lay down to sleep. In some mysterious manner the dog was able to summon the War-Party of the Tide, which carried the two away. When they awoke they were in the dread canoe, and the poison from Sxlo·xl' was spreading over them. They were powerless and could only lie still as the canoe travelled up South Bentinck Arm, circled the island near Tàl·io at its head, and three other islands on the return journey. The two were put ashore at their camp, apparently unharmed, but they knew the danger to which they had been exposed and fled next day to Kimsquit. The woman told a shaman what had happened and accepted his somewhat drastic treatments. Consequently, though she showed signs of insanity, she was cured. The headstrong Onikotl, on the other hand, refused to pay attention to the danger; within a few weeks he became crazy, and then died.

Quite another category of Bella Coola supernatural beings consists of ghosts. These beings, once human, have passed by death into the ranks of the supernatural. Their home is the land below the earth, where they live like mortals except that everything is strange and ethereal. In form they resemble human beings, but their faces are green and weird. They can visit the land of the living at will, and make their presence known by whistling, which is their language. Their actions are the reverse of those of humans; for example, they often 775 ●

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 walk backwards, or on their heads. Mortals sometimes see ghosts, but the apparition seals their lips so that they cannot [761] recount their experiences. Death invariably follows. Shamans [756] and other mortals endowed with great powers have been able to penetrate to the realm below, and the knowledge of conditions there has been derived from their accounts. Food is scarce in that land and ghosts are often driven up to earth to 264 search for it. Even a small morsel is enough to satisfy their hunger, so that mortals throw fragments on the fire for the 775 benefit of their dead relatives. If a person drop a crumb it is because a ghost has hooked it away from his hand; no wise Bella Coola ever picks up such a morsel, knowing that to do so would offend the hungry spectre. Deceased beings are 775 generally feared, although instances are known in which they have shown kindness, particularly to their relatives. Like so [575] many supernatural beings, they figure most prominently as patrons of kusiut dancers (see vol. II, chap. 1). Further information concerning them is contained in the description of life after death.

* 776 Not even a complete list of beings would exhaust the 177 beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural, since any unexpected visitation is attributed by them to this source. For example, when Mackenzie appeared, the first white man with whom the Bella Coola had come in contact, they thought that he must be from another world. Some thought him a dead man returned to life, and others considered him a supernatural visitor from above who had fallen down to earth, as did their first ancestors. The latter view prevailed, and it was ultimately decided that he must be Qomcus, a supernatural being resident aloft of whom little was known. This name was applied to him, and it has since been given to all white men.[18]

[18]Although it was in 1793 that Mackenzie passed down the Bella Coola valley, a number of stories of that event were still remembered in 1922. What most impressed the Bella Coola was his ability to make fire quickly. One man, now living, stated that he had heard from his mother that her father had spoken with him. Traditions of this type are valuable as reflecting the interests of a people, but their historical accuracy may well be doubted. One Kimsquit man, for example,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

concerning the danger of near approach to this creature: 539

Ḱwilais was a man of mixed lineage, Kimsquit and Pas, near Newitte. With several companions he was gathering berries when he stepped into a hole and felt numerous tiny creatures crawling over his legs. Looking down, he saw that they were small snakes, that had just been hatched from a Mother of Snakes. He fled, terrified, pursued by the reptiles, which he managed to keep off to some extent by brushing behind him a branch of spiny swamp gooseberry, a known deterrent. When he had out-distanced the snakes he called his companions, told them of his adventure, and returned home. There he repeated the tale. Though Ḱwilais did not know it, many of the snakes had succeeded in entering his stomach. Presently he began to swell; his body became larger and larger until he was in danger of bursting. The reptiles within were breeding rapidly. Luckily, one of his fellow villagers knew the proper remedy. A raised bed was made for the sufferer about five feet from the ground where Ḱwilais stretched himself on a number of thorny branches, while his friends built a fire of devil's club and swamp gooseberry twigs so that he was fumigated in the smoke. Then, to give greater potency, they cast on the flames soiled clothing and pounded cedar-bark pads stained with menstrual blood; even this was of no avail, so finally a woman squeezed out into a vessel some of her menstrual blood which Ḱwilais drank. This killed the snakes. The patient began to vomit, emitting a mass of wriggling serpents, and at once began to grow thinner, soon regaining his normal condition. Had he not been able to eject the reptiles, he would have died.

776 * 825 755 [789] [753] [841]

Ḱwilais was not the only one to have this unpleasant experience. Many others have suffered in the same way, but in no case has anyone been able to feel the snakes at the actual place or time of entry.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the power possessed by animals are clearly shown by their attitude with regard to killing them. Man is immortal, so are animals. Alquntám decreed that beasts and birds should serve as food for mankind, but it is only their clothing, their worthless "blanket of flesh," as the Bella Coola express it, which they give to hunters. In the autumn leaves appear to die, but every spring they are reborn. Similarly, when an animal is slain, it merely discards its visible self while its spirit[a] ascends

825 775 224 [774]

[a] Tsumkwanlo, see vol. I, p. 94.

1:McIlwraith E-S (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[775] [774] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to earth again to reanimate a new body.* Consequently, the success of a hunter does not indicate his mastery over an animal so much as the latter's good-will in allowing itself to [785] be slain by one who has pleased him by ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked soot, so a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of ashes across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use [411] owl-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon neatly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter reverses the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

[789] "Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, skinless, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

[262] Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves and eagles whom he invites to devour it. In so doing, he does not address them by their usual names, but calls Wolf, Ālkn-i-gasnum, "The Devourer of Meat Which He Does Not Kill," that is, "The Biting Scavenger"; and Eagle, Asaikaiyuts-maxnum, "The Constant Eater," that is, "The One Who Eats before He Is Hungry." Next morning the flesh has been devoured and the hunter believes his guests have eaten it. Animals and birds, being supernatural, can hear the words of mortals and read their thoughts. The significance of these actions is that animals have the power to conceal themselves, so a hunter must gain their favour before he can hope to succeed. Belief in the efficacy of such customs as these is rapidly falling into decay and bear meat is now often eaten, but the skull is carefully placed in an evergreen tree near where the animal is slain, so that it may come back to life.

[185] *There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express disbelief in the immortality of animals.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Fish, likewise, are immortal. In autumn the streams are choked with dead and dying salmon, but the Bella Coola know that they are not really dead, they have merely shed their worthless blankets in accordance with Ālqustēm's decrees. At that season of the year he causes the rivers to rise so that they will sweep away these useless and outworn cloaks.

Although the salmon, from the kindness of their hearts, allow human beings to feast on their blankets, yet they have certain likes and dislikes which are carefully observed. From the time the first spring salmon appear (I, pp. 759-762) until the rising of the July moon, women are not allowed to eat them or to go near the river. Men may eat the flesh, but instead of throwing the bones to dogs, they carefully return them to the river saying:

"Please come back tomorrow."

If this is inconvenient, bones can be thrown into the woods with impunity.

Salmon, like men and animals, live a human-like existence in their homes far beneath the surface of the ocean. They lack and desire earthly objects, especially pounded cedar-bark (see Appendix A) to use as sponges for their children, so the Bella Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

774 becomes critical. Only a shaman (I, p. 539) can return one, and 755 if he fails death always results. In some cases a spirit leaves [753] its owner without apparent reason; he becomes insane, tries to eat dirt, and his relatives realize at once what is the matter.
[756] They summon a shaman who takes off his cape, hangs it like a pouch on his stick, and points it in all directions as he sings his shaman's song. Finally he locates what is missing, and traps it in his cloak, which he places around the sick man. This restores the element and the sufferer recovers immediately. Another method is for the shaman to press the back of the patient's neck, and by blowing and spitting cause the wandering spirit to return. Either cure must be performed by a shaman because of the supernatural power required.

774 Spirits can be extracted in various ways. Shamans can draw one forth by sucking at the back of the neck between their cupped hands; in former times, some were so powerful that they could extract them by their mere presence. During 774 kwisut dances (II, chap. 1), the uninitiated are told that if they 575 enter the house where a ceremony is taking place, or even pass
[535] on the sidewalk outside the door, their spirits will be drawn from them by the power within and attracted to the dancer or to the sacred platform on which he is concealed. Many [178] stories are told of this, which were firmly believed by the uninitiated until the last few years. Members of the society claim that their great power acts as a magnet to the spirits of all but their associates, except children in arms; the latter can be taken by their mothers into the house, because their supernatural elements have not developed sufficient strength to 774 leave their bodies. A person may also lose his spirit through a sudden shock. If two people meet unexpectedly in the forest and one of them shouts loudly at the other, even if only in fun, the spasmodic contraction of the muscles is enough to expel it.
[761] The person to whom this happens falls down as if dead, and [756] though he soon recovers, his spirit has left him, and if it is not brought back by a shaman he dies a lingering death.

775 At death, the spirit permanently leaves the body. In some

Ritchie-Dwelle R-5 (1922-1924)1948
NRS Bellacoola NRS

cause it turns near the corpse for four days, or it may start at once on its travels. Distance means nothing to it, nor does time; once disembodied it goes back on the path of its late owner's ancestors from generation to generation, until it reaches the spot where his first forefather came to this earth. Here it assumes the bird or animal form used on that occasion and goes up to Nuxmit-a. It is uncertain whether or not the spirit can take on, simultaneously, the different shapes used by various ancestors of the deceased. Its existence in the land above is similar to that on earth, but in an advanced degree. A good carpenter, for example, is a better carpenter after death; a chief is a greater chief; and one of the explanations for death is that Alquntam has called a man to continue his work in another sphere. Nuxmit-a is so huge that it is never crowded, though the spirits are immortal. They can see what is taking place on earth and sometimes return in bird or animal form to visit and comfort their grieving relatives. Powerful chiefs delight to display this, by means of a masked figure, as the central feature of a potlatch. Apart from this ceremonial usage, disembodied spirits play no part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They take no interest in human beings and accordingly are neither supplicated nor feared. 975

THE LIFE

Closely associated with the spirit is the xnumkmk "life." As in the previous case, Alquntam provides every human being and every animal with this at birth. It is an ethereal substance, having the form of the body which it animates; without it there can be neither strength nor growth; without life the body is an inert mass of flesh. As a person becomes older, so does this element grow, always taking the exact shape and form of the body. Alone, it can neither move nor think, its motive power being the spirit. It is the life that suffers 961 [774]

[114]

[illegible] have been employed whenever possible to lessen the use of [illegible] terms. Life is still an unsatisfactory translation of this Bella Coola word, but it is hoped that the reader will grasp the real significance from the discussion in this section.

1:Mc:Dowelth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

union of these with one another and with the spirit, the mental director of the life, is a matter of advanced Bella Coola theology on which opinions differ. Only men of philosophical temperament even hazard an opinion on such matters, which are beyond the realm of daily routine. 961

When a man dies, his life leaves his body and the useless flesh begins to decay. At the same time the life is freed to travel as an intangible wraith, having the form and appearance of its dead owner. It visits all the places where he had been in the habit of going during life, irrespective of their distance from the scene of death. Sometimes it journeys to the locality where, in a dream, the mother of the deceased received her first intimation of pregnancy (I, p. 615). It wants to see former friends and sometimes makes its presence known to them by whistling. A person who hears this sound is saddened by the realization that one of his associates has passed away in some distant place. At other times, a man merely senses its presence and feels frightened without hearing or seeing anything to account for it. Very rarely, a dead person's life speaks to a dearly loved friend to inform him of his loss. During the existence of the body, spirit and life are closely associated, and the former sometimes accompanies the latter on its round of farewell visits before ascending to Nacudi-a. 961 1915 [974]

After four days the life descends to the land below where it lives forever as a ghost. Some believe that it is the shadow which assumes this form, but the seeming contradiction is relatively unimportant since the life is essentially shadow-like. Ghosts have already been described in connection with supernatural bodies, and further information will be found in vol. I, chap. VIII.

At death, when the life as a whole becomes a ghost, its constituent parts likewise undergo transformation. The one situated in the feet remains with the corpse and disintegrates; that located in the legs assumes a wolf and nothing more is known of its fate; no one knows what happens to the one situated in the body. The part in the throat, including the voice, assumes 526 [526] [530]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

961 an owl, possibly one of those which normally roost on the tree
● 775 behind Nacmidi-a. This element of a dead person occasionally 135 communicates with a living relative, as evidenced by the fol-[539] lowing story.
[127]

A number of years ago a party of men and women camped for the night beside one of the rivers flowing into South Bentinck Arm. After supper, as they were resting by their fire, an owl kept hooting from a neighbouring tree. One of the men turned to a friend who had been making obscene remarks and, half in jest, warned him to be careful in case one of his relatives was listening. The foolish fellow looked at the owl and asked:

"Are you a relative of mine?"

There was no answer, but when he had repeated the question four times, the owl spoke:

"I am m-ami-m," he said, naming the deceased grandfather of his questioner.

Consequent upon the belief that the voice of a dead person enters an owl, the bird is treated with considerable respect. It is improper to make fun of one, or to ask who it was when alive. Should a person do so, the owl answers with the interrogator's own name and he soon dies.

961 On the whole, the life does not affect the daily existence of the Bella Coola as profoundly as does the spirit. When they stop to ponder on the reason for some event, they readily admit the importance of the life with its constituent elements, but they are not always considering its activities and seeking to strengthen it. It is essentially a religious attribute, of greater moment to a man of imaginative and suggestible temperament than to one who carries on the daily routine without asking why and wherefore.

THE TALLY POST

773 In the beginning of time, when Sqamtsin sent the first 777 people down to earth, he erected in Nacmidi-a posts embellished with the bird or animal crest taken by each to serve as a memorial, or reminder, to him of the number of individuals existing that tally posts have mentality, and suggested that it might be those which attend the gathering of the supernatural beings at the winter solstice instead of an element from the human body itself.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

One elderly Bella Coola, of philosophical temperament, described qualtwacta in terms far removed from the accounts of tally posts. According to him, every individual receives this supernatural possession at birth, and it remains with him, in close association with his body, throughout life. It stays in front of his face, invisible, yet having substance, and constantly shaking from side to side. If a man fails to receive a present at a potlatch, it is because his qualtwacta has ceased to move. When stationary it is not transparent, and not only hides its owner from the donor's sight, but acts as a barrier to his thoughts. The same man stated that this element can leave the body, can be seen by shamans, and that it is the one which ascends at the winter solstice to Nacmaitx. At death it is believed to accompany the spirit and the life to the land above.

There seems no reason to doubt that the concept of tally posts is an ancient belief. Nor does the application of the term qualtwacta to another immaterial possession of quite another type destroy this probability. It must be remembered that within the last eighty years the Bella Coola have suffered not only from the tremendous upheaval caused by the coming of the white man, but have been reduced to a mere fraction of their former numerical strength by various epidemics. These factors have led to the partial forgetting of ancient beliefs, with consequent confusion. It is probable that the use of the same term for the tally post, intimately connected with an individual's life although situated in the land above, and for an invisible and intangible possession which goes in front of him, is due to this recent decay of ancient convictions. If this be true, it merely means that in former times the Bella Coola had yet another supernatural element to govern and influence their lives.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the point between Labouchere Channel and Bentinck Arm, 782 there is danger from treacherous currents, so, when a shaman [133] passes either of these places, he lays some food on the water [502] and puffs eagle down into the air as he asks for help. If no [756] shaman is in the canoe, this is done by the captain.

The being to whom offerings are most commonly made is [776] Tlitcāplilān-a, the supernatural woman who cures the sick and gives power to shamans. Whenever a hunter kills an edible [224] animal in the forest, he cuts off four pieces of flesh and throws them into his fire to gain her goodwill. Long, long ago, [773] Tlitcāplilān-a appeared to a hunter, seized some of his quarry, and told him of her wishes with regard to presents; these have since been obeyed by wise people. Similarly, the relatives of a man absent in the mountains or at sea throw scraps of food on the fire and ask the protection of Tlitcāplilān-a for the one in danger. In this case, it is clear that objects thrown into flames are received and appreciated by Tlitcāplilān-a.

Mesakais, although usually propitiated by prayer, is also [776] given presents. Frequently, when a man is praying, he accompanies his words by blowing up into the air small particles of eagle down. Prayer in connection with the departure of war or hunting expeditions have already been mentioned, but before starting on a journey by canoe, the captain is careful [484] to pray and to throw upon the water four pieces of red, and [824] four of yellow cedar-bark. The blowing upwards of eagle [825] down is a common accompaniment to all kinds of prayers, but, if none is available, cedar-bark can be used equally satisfactorily. If possible, this is cast on the surface of water, otherwise into a fire, as a request is being made. The Bella Coola do not believe that such presents are actually used and considered valuable by Alqantēn, but they emphasize and accompany the vocal prayer, and demonstrate the petitioner's sincerity.

Ghosts, on the other hand, depend almost entirely on pre- 795 sents given them by mortals, since food is not abundant in the 782 land below. The relatives of a dead person always throw

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 small particles of food on a fire; these become large when they 782 reach the land below and nourish the ghosts. An individual making an offering of this kind says:

"Anuklldimat kuskas," "This is to make straight your road, beloved one."

[756] The needs and desires of ghosts have been made known to mortals through visits paid by shamans to the land below, and by the coming of ghosts to this world. It is, therefore, realized that food placed on the ground does not reach the [372] land below, but that morsels thrown on a fire sink through into the abode of ghosts. Offerings to the dead are not made [753] with the hope of receiving favours from them, but rather to provide beloved relatives with necessary food and to prevent them from showing displeasure by causing stomach-aches and other ailments.

782 Other instances, both of prayer and of sacrifice, will be recorded in connection with various myths. The salient feature is that the Bella Coola are able to gain, by such means, the favour of supernatural beings, a factor which plays an important part in their daily life. In addition, they have a [919] large number of practices based on sympathetic magic. No absolutely rigid boundary line can be drawn between the latter and religion proper, but there is a fairly clear division between rites such as those just described, in which propitiation is the important element, and others in which the desired end follows the mere performance of a certain act. Customs of this last type will be reserved for later consideration (vol. I, chap. xi).

THE OBSERVANCE OF CEREMONIAL CHASTITY

921, In addition to prayer and sacrifice, the Bella Coola have 785 yet another means of obtaining the goodwill of supernatural beings, and at the same time of strengthening their own supernatural attributes so that good fortune is likely to occur. This is by the practice of xxxxte, ceremonial chastity, of which the basis is that a man must not hold intercourse except after certain periods of continence. To understand this, it is neces-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

TERM	DIRECT ADDRESS	INDIRECT ADDRESS
601 Mother's sister's husband.....	Same as father's sister's husband.
Brother's son's wife...	Same as son's wife.	Same as son's wife, or tsi gnaz di ennis, "Wife of my ennis."
or Sister's son's wife.....	" "
Brother's daughter's husband.....	Same as daughter's husband.	Same as daughter's husband, or di tsuamnis di ennis, "Husband of my ennis."
or Sister's daughter's husband.....	" " "

[597] In case of adoption, the same kinship terms are used as if the adopted person were a member of the family by birth. A more complicated situation arises when a child who is regarded as the reincarnation (I, p. 616) of a recently deceased elderly relative, is given the latter's name. In such a case the child is addressed by the kinship terms applicable to his namesake. In recent years, at any rate, this application is without social significance, and, as far as could be learned, this has always been the case. Bella Coola sentiment is that it is fitting for a child to receive the name of one of its ancestors. When a parent sees the child, and thinks of his name, he thinks of the late deceased, hence it is natural to use kinship terms accordingly. This is more obvious when the child is regarded as a reincarnation, though even in such a case he does not receive any of the marks of respect paid to his namesake; the reincarnation is physical, not social. In course of time this is forgotten and the child takes his place among others of his own generation, though it may be remembered in rhetorical speeches on ceremonial occasions.

601 553 775

The kinship terminology of the Bella Coola combines features of the family and classificatory systems. The reciprocal terms for parents- and children-in-law, brothers- and sisters-in-law, lack of sex differentiation for brothers and sisters, and the importance of age in the designations applied to persons of the same generation, are all features of the classificatory system. On the other hand, bilateralism, failure to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 622 the time the earth was settled, ought to be chief of that village. If he has been able to give the necessary potlatches to weight his possession of that name, the fact that he is the legal descendant of the first chief will add a certain amount to his prestige, but unless he has been able to do this his influence will be slight.

* 556 622 766 [795] Thirdly, potlatches smooth the way for the giver after death. Before the corpse of a chief is removed from the house where he has died, a speaker always announces the number of potlatches he has given and the total value of goods distributed at them. These gifts in a vague way are felt to make easy the deceased's path in the next world as they have done in the present. The feature of the potlatch, though firmly believed by some of the older people, plays a less important part in the life of the Bella Coola than might be expected.

* 556 What are the requisites for giving a potlatch?

[424] (1) Possession of an ancient myth, containing a name or names. Probably every Bella Coola has this requirement. A man's family may not be the proud owners of one of the ancestral myths dealing with the first settlement of this earth, but they will at least own some ancient myth which they can elevate by giving a potlatch. As has been said, the owner of one of the most ancient names in many cases chooses to elevate one of lesser antiquity, a course which must, perforce, be done by one who lacks an origin myth. The slight feeling of defer-
[554] ence with which those are regarded who hold the names of the first inhabitants of the earth, the mighty chiefs of old, is subordinate to the very real feeling of respect in which is held the successful giver of potlatches. The descendant of one of the first people has the potential right to chieftainship, but unless he can give potlatches he will fail to gain that eminence.

* 556 769 (2) An occasion for giving a potlatch is never lacking. It consists of a number of closely associated rites, any one of which will serve as a reason for the ceremony. The most important feature, the return of a dead ancestor or ancestors to visit the living, is available to anyone at any time. The Bella

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

CAUSES OF DEATH

961 The Bella Coola know that sickness, accident, wilful murder, old age, and a host of other factors may at any time terminate a man's life, but they consider that any one of these direct causes is possible only in conjunction with an indirect reason of a religious or supernatural nature; in the last analysis they attribute death to supernatural, not to natural causes. [773] As described in a previous chapter, an ancient myth attributes the origin of death to the stupidity of Raven, but this belief, even if its historical accuracy is accepted, belongs to the realm of philosophy and ancient history rather than to everyday life. 961 When a canoe is capsized on the ocean and its occupants are drowned, —the Bella Coola do not consider a drowning a mere 776 accident—it is because Xmoqwa was hungry and desired human flesh. This indirect reason is quite as important as the direct one. So, too, the death of a man beneath a falling tree or a land-slide is no accident; Sâ ôma caused the tree to crush to earth or the slide to roll downwards. Most individuals believe that this supernatural being is responsible when an animal kills a hunter. He delights in death and always sits on [756] a coffin before it is taken to the grave, although none but shamans ever see him. Any supernatural being can cause death, but it must not be imagined that the Bella Coola go through life in a state of constant fear; death may vanquish them in the forests, but the probabilities are against it. Nor does 753 sickness appear to them as a natural phenomenon. Its cause is either the intrusion of some foreign object into the body, or the weakness of one of the patient's supernatural elements. The only remedy in the latter case is an appeal to the super- [755] natural, sometimes through the medium of a shaman, whereas a foreign object in the body can often be extracted by a skilled [754] practitioner. A disease of this type is often brought on by the machinations of a sorcerer, and if death results it is attributed 761 to the potency of his charms, not to a natural ailment. Even [775] ghosts are able to cause death. In war, one man may be able [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 while the relatives are preparing he body for disposal. For a child, these services are perfomed by the parents; for a married man whose parents are ded, by his brothers and other kindred; for a married woman, by ier husband or the members of her own family. If she has borne no children, it is customary for her relatives to carry out the fneral rites, especially if she has been many times rebought fron her husband. If such repayment has not been made, it is considered correct for a husband to bury his wife, although it is a point of honour for her relatives to reimburse him later for his expenditure. On the other hand, when children have been born and financial assistance mutually given and rceived several times, it is proper for the husband to perform the funeral rites, although he may receive assistance from hs wife's kinsmen. There is no rigid ruling on the point, butbickerings seldom occur in connection with disposal of the ded. Members of the ancestral family are ready to assist in every case, both on account [614] [556] of the disgrace that would follow niggardly funeral, and also as a means of displaying their weith.

The first essential is to wash tle body, a rite performed by men for a man, by women for a wman. It is immaterial who does this though some of the elatives usually volunteer. Neither husband nor wife touche a dead consort, though it [159] is said that long ago a man would hold intercourse with a deceased wife to indicate his xcessive grief. The most influential member of the immediite family takes the lead in the various necessary acts, although there is always endless discussion and advice from members of the ancestral family and others interested. A nose-ring is placed in the septum [301] [175] of the corpse; if this is omitted, the body will not be able to dissolve into its elements but will range the earth as a walking phantom, causing injury to anyone who observes it. [525] If the deceased has just eaten some of the first run of spring salmon or olachen, a shaman washes out his mouth with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark which he throws into the river. The essence of the salmon is thus extracted from the body; if this rite is neglected no more salmon will come to the river. No precautions are necessary after the food has been digested. 764 [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Many men prepare their coffins before death. If this has not been done, a large, wooden box is provided by a kinsman of the deceased. The body is dressed in good clothing and bound into a squatting position, head between knees, hands clasped around shins, and the haunches just above the level of the soles of the feet. In this posture it is thrust into the coffin. Particularly if the corpse has been brought from some distance and rigor mortis has set in, it may be necessary to break the back-bone and even to crush the skull before the box can be closed. A stone is placed on the back of the neck, within the coffin, to prevent the ghost from returning to haunt the survivors. A little choice food is placed beside the body of a dearly loved child for nourishment during the journey to the next world. [763] [602] [775]

From this point onwards, the funeral rites differ according to the rank of the deceased. On the death of an influential ssaak, the senior members of that society meet as soon as possible to arrange the dramatization of the coming of Mulakila. A ssaak son, brother, or other near relative is always present even if he has little importance in the affairs of the society. If the death has taken place during the night, the conference is held the following morning and the rites begin at noon. There may be delay until all have gathered, but about the middle of the first possible day two ssaak are sent up one of the mountains behind the village. They carry large, cone-shaped whistles which they blow twice. The sound is plainly audible in the village and all, whether or not members of the ssaak society, recognize that a supernatural being is drawing near. After a short interval, another whistle is blown by a ssaak concealed on the roof of the house in which the corpse is lying, and after another pause the same sound comes from within, beside the body itself. Most of the uninitiated know that this is the voice of Mulakila (also called Sixsisputsam), 575 766 [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 grave carrying a spruce bough in his hand. He touches with it the edge where he is standing, then, in sunwise order, the east, south, and west margins. This circuit is repeated four times and the branch tossed away to westward. This essential [774] ceremony is based on a belief that the lives, or perhaps the spirits, of the grave-diggers have been drawn from them into the grave and are in danger of being pressed down by the coffin. Should this occur, they would have short lives. The spruce branch enables the supernatural elements to leave the cavity and return to their owners who suffer no ill effects. Anyone, other than a grave-digger, can perform this rite.

The coffin is now lifted into the grave, care being taken that the corpse faces east. As already described, it is in a squatting position with haunches almost on the ground. Boards have been prepared in advance, and with these the grave-diggers make a roof-like covering, placing at each corner [775] a stone weighing from ten to fifteen pounds, to prevent the ghost from returning to trouble the survivors. Earth is thrown in on top of the boards, and as it falls the wailing breaks out dolorously in a final crescendo of mourning. [766] If a chief has been buried, his fellows sometimes sing a ne-ala [533] song. At this time it is proper for one or more chiefs to rise and speak. No one is required to do so, nor is there any rule 537 as to the order in which they make their remarks. The first 764 speaker is usually a prominent man related to the survivors, though seldom a son, brother, or other near relative of the deceased. A speech is generally addressed in part to the spirit of the dead person, telling it where to go; in part, to the mourners. For a dead child, emphasis is laid on the fact that although he did not live long enough to be incorporated into his ancestral myths on earth, this will be done for him in his future home. In conclusion, an appeal is often made to [775] Alqwastim, under the name of Smaiahsla, to take pains that [773] the spirit of the dead is given its rightful place in Nuxalk-a, in the section where its first forbears were created, and whither the spirits of its dead ancestors have returned since the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

put his granddaughter into the ground beside her grandmother but it may all be for the best."[14] 764 537

There is no doubt that condolences of this nature assist the mourning relatives to bear up under their grief. This fact was emphasized by several Bella Coola, and in addition the writer was able to observe it on several occasions. They readily respond to suggestions of any kind and undoubtedly derive comfort from the laudatory comments of influential chiefs.

Speeches of this general nature are always delivered as the grave is being filled in. Sometimes this work is finished before all who wish to do so have expressed themselves, sometimes the remarks are so short that they are ended before all the earth has been thrown back. When the hole has been filled to ground level, it is stamped down and the surplus earth scattered out of sight among the bushes, no mound being thrown up. 764

Great care is always taken to prevent the return of the ghost. In addition to the weighting with stones already described, other methods are used before the funeral party leaves the cemetery. Heavy boards are usually laid flat over the grave and rocks piled on these bar the way up from below. A further precaution is the setting upright of four stakes, one at each corner of the hole, and fastening ropes of cedar-bark between them along the east and west sides of the grave. The significance of this is not fully understood, except that the ghost cannot pass the strands. Four spruce saplings are cut and placed either between the grave and the village, or one on each side of the hole; their sharp needles form an effective barrier. 764 995 [524]

While these precautions are being taken, any clothing and utensils brought to the grave and not already consumed are thrown on the fire and allowed to blaze brightly. The ashes 764

[14] It was impossible to record these speeches verbatim at the time of their delivery. The writer was able to make notes, which were amplified by each speaker later telling him what he had said. Although lacking literal accuracy, the above may be considered essentially correct. [26]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

thrown on it. One rather philosophic old man suggested that in this way the soul could easily return to Nuxmāt-a. It is possible that this means of disposal was carried out in former times, but no informant had actually seen it practised. The Bella Coola state that cremation is carried out by the Kitlobe* and the Carriers. On the morning after a burning, young men of the former tribe rush to the spot and smear their faces with the semi-charred bones, amid much shouting. The Carriers are said to stand with their bodies inclined over the burning corpse and to smear on their faces any grease exuded from it. The accuracy of these statements is very doubtful, and can have no bearing on the reputed practice of cremation among the Bella Coola. 764 764 829

The bodies of rich or poor, chiefs, commoners, or slaves, all are buried in a similar manner though with differences in the complexity of ritual. Nor is any different method practised for criminals, murdered people, or those committing suicide. It is believed that in case of self-destruction the body cannot separate into its elements and reach Nuxmāt-a; that part which becomes the ghost is able to go to the land below, but neither spirit nor life can ascend. According to one man, who may, however, have been affected by Christian influence, this is because Alqunūm decrees the length of life and any willful shortening is insulting to him. Suicide is rare among the Bella Coola and four cases only were heard of. One woman killed herself in shame at having accidentally set fire to a village, another because her husband was unduly jealous, and two men through bladder stricture. 766 762 [775]

On the whole, Bella Coola methods for disposal of the dead have altered but little since the coming of the white man. The change from sub-aerial exposure to interment was probably not due to foreign influence although the introduction of metal shovels has facilitated the digging of graves and probably hastened the movement. A change in posture has, however, taken place. In former times, a corpse was always buried 777 764

*Not as present, at least within the memory of elderly people.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

177 964 squatting, now it is customary to use the extended position. It is impossible to state whether this is the direct result of white teaching, or whether the ease with which large boxes can now be made has led to interment at full length.

RITES FOLLOWING DISPOSAL OF THE BODY

968 Interment of the corpse does not end the ceremonial necessitated by a death in the community. As already described, some of the clothing and utensils of the dead person are burned during the funeral, but all are not destroyed at that time. The proportion kept for future treatment is immaterial, nor is there any established usage concerning the type of object reserved. During the days following the funeral, relatives of the deceased carefully gather his clothing, cooking utensils, rifles, and all other articles which have been his personal property or used exclusively by him. On the fourth day, these are taken to the cemetery by his immediate family, accompanied by as many of their friends as wish to show their sympathy. A fire is kindled near the grave and on it is deposited whatever can be burnt; other objects are either cast into the flames or piled near at hand (see Plate 17). It is most important that every article belonging to the deceased should be disposed of in this way. There are two reasons for this. First, it is considered indecent to use the possessions of a dead person; they would have the effect of poison on anyone doing so. Secondly, the ghost of the deceased receives goods that are burnt or deposited on the grave four days after the funeral. If deprived of what belongs to him, a ghost punishes the offenders by causing sickness. Occasionally a new rifle, or some other treasured possession, is kept by a relative or friend; this is contrary to the established custom, but is justified by considering the article to be a gift from the deceased or a memento of him. No one would accept such a legacy unless he felt sure that the dead man entertained such kindly sentiments towards him that he would be glad to have his friend receive it.

[995] [753] 178 968

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In recent years the number of incombustible objects has increased enormously with the introduction of metal utensils, gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully placed near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not resent an open transfer; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undoubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange is a rare event and would cause animosity if carried out by anyone except a near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected over his grave, a common Bella Bella custom. This is built immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The sorrowing relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no other mark for the grave is put up until a memorial potlatch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-parsnips, which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave; they are food belonging to the dead person. The white man has taught the Bella Coola how to plant apple-trees and these are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath. The Bella Bella are said formerly to have replaced at intervals the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bella Coola practice. Indeed, a grave is never

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"She was my daughter, I have a right to do as I like." 968

Samuel King and the others accepted the exchange as a matter of course and made no comments. Captain Schooner took no part in the burning of his daughter's goods, this being the task of those with whom she had been living, and who accordingly knew which were hers. The fire was kindled by a married daughter of Reuben Schooner, though it could have been done equally well by any woman. On the following 783
morning, July 1, Samuel King went with a friend to the forest 964 and passed four times through a small spruce sapling bent into an arch. This was the last incident in the funeral rites.

Fate of the Dead

Life of the Dead

Little need be added to the account given in vol. I, chap. 975
11 of the fate of those parts of a man which go at death to Nuxmit-a. The spirit and the life travel back the path of the deceased's ancestors from generation to generation until they reach the place where his first forefather came to earth and where his cloak, if he had worn one, floated back after his alteration to human form. When the spirit and the life of a descendant reach the spot, they change into a being having the form of the cloak, and so return to Nuxmit-a. The spirit and the life of one who is a member of several ancestral families visit the localities where the transformations to human shape of all his ancestors occurred. The Bella Coola believe that these two elements can assume many crest forms, but they do not know whether this entails the simultaneous assumption of many shapes to comprise a composite figure; or whether the spirit and the life, which become a single entity in the case of a member of one ancestral family, become multiple for one who is a member of several. When lamenting a dead person, mention is always made of the various scenes which he will have visited, and the forms he will have assumed. At a memorial potlatch, the deceased may return as a hybrid, or as

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

995 one of the several crests which it is believed he has become. The point does not appear important to the Bella Coola, corresponding to their indefinite ideas concerning whether the spirit and the life have become a single being, or several.

Knowledge of the life led in Nuxmáit-a by the deceased, now in the form of his crest,* is most indefinite. In a general way it is felt that the actions of this being are similar to those carried on during life, but in a more advanced degree. A skilled carpenter is a better carpenter in the land above, a chief who has given many potlatches below can give more in Nuxmáit-a. This [593] belief finds expression in mourning songs which frequently state how Alquntáw has called a good carpenter to work above, or how a chief has gone to exhibit his generosity in a new sphere. It is doubtful whether this sentiment plays any real part in Bella Coola thought. The spirit and the life of a dead person have gone too far away to affect the living; what little is known of their actions has been handed down from the distant past and is merely a matter of history. The only time that these 995 two merged elements come to this world is at a memorial pot- 969 latch, and formerly the uninitiated undoubtedly believed that 556 they were witnessing such a visit. Though the spectators were shown as a matter of course that the spirit and the life had become bird or animal, emphasis was laid on the fact that they had become the particular bird or animal crest of the donor's ancestral family. The effect of the memorial potlatch in former times, as at present, was, therefore, social rather than religious. Besides, the two parts portrayed have never been known 995 to affect a human being; they expect no offerings, grant no assistance, cause no injury, and are accordingly neglected.

In comparison with the above vague beliefs, Bella Coola information concerning ghosts is clear and exact. As already [993] *It is accepted that men were created as human beings, and only assumed bird or animal shapes in order to watch the earth, but there is no corresponding belief that the spirit and the life change back from crest to human form on arrival above. Of course the performance of human activities by anthropomorphic creatures presents no difficulties to Bella Coola thought.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)3948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

described, at death the shadow, the body, and a portion of the life, descend to the land below where existence is continued as a ghost. These wraiths are usually termed, Kulu'lmq, "The Earthy Ones," though they prefer the name Ainuinem, "They Who Have Become Supernatural." They enter into the lives and actions of the Bella Coola in a way entirely different from that of the elements which go aloft at death. 775

The land of ghosts, immediately beneath the earth, is similar to it. There are trees and bushes, stones, grass, everything as on the surface of the world. There is a river, too, but it rises in the west and flows eastward, contrary to the course of the Bella Coola. The sun that shines below is green and unnatural, giving an ethereal light like that of the moon which, indeed, it is sometimes said to be. The seasons are the reverse of those on earth; when mortals are in midsummer, it is wintertime for ghosts. The fluff which human beings see falling from cottonwood trees reaches the land of ghosts as snow. All earthly springs rise from the river in the land below; they never freeze in winter because they come from a warm region, and the coldness of spring water in summer is the result of coming from a land where it is winter. With the exception of the peculiar light, the only essential difference between the land of ghosts and this world is that food is very scarce in the former; berries grow below, and it is supposed that there must be fish and animals there, but it is common knowledge that residents there are always hungry. 772 775 [525]

The life led by ghosts is similar to that of human beings. They occupy the same type of house as before death, dwell in the same kind of villages on the river bank, wear similar clothes, have similar likes and dislikes, require similar food, and even enjoy the same kind of dances. One old Bella Coola even stated that the ghosts are able to summon supernatural beings from Nanaitia to their Ituiat rites. It is generally believed that no work is done below, although several of the older people denied this. According to these individuals, a ghost can perform more rapidly and easily whatever tasks he had been 775 accustomed to do when alive; but the workmanship is shadowy and unsubstantial, sometimes even transparent. Ghosts do not act like human beings, but usually walk backwards, sometimes even on their heads, and spend much of their time playing a game resembling football with large, globular objects made of some light substance. They communicate with one another both by whistling and in a language which resembles the attempts at speech made by a tongueless person. Some individuals believe that there is a supreme chief in the land of ghosts, Ałłăt-iaiał, sent down like Pluto to preside over the shades. He figures in certain stories describing descents to the lower world; but many Bella Coola know nothing of his existence below, although it furnishes a plausible explanation for his coming by night to molest human beings. Like Sxaiamax he causes blood to rush forth from the mouth and genitalia of anyone whom he seizes; death follows, and a new victim has been acquired for his kingdom. The more common belief is that the villages of ghosts have chiefs like those of human beings. It is thought, indefinitely, that after a long period of time the ghosts die, and some of them may then return to this world as infants. A child born with dimples in its ears, which are regarded as indications of previous borings for rings, is welcomed as the reincarnation of some unknown ancestor.

At death, the ghost does not immediately appear in the land below, but remains for four days within the back-room of a house corresponding in style to an ordinary Bella Coola dwelling. It is believed that one of these large houses is beneath every village* and that the dead pass straight down through the earth into it. Meanwhile the goods, burnt at the grave during the funeral, as well as those deposited beside it, have fallen through the ground and notified the ghosts that a newcomer has arrived. The wraiths assemble from all directions and fight over the articles, none of which are obtained by the one who owned them during life. On the fourth

*There may be one huge house, extending beneath the world like Nałmăł-a above; it was impossible to obtain definite information on this point.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

day after the funeral, the relatives of the dead person burn the 775 remainder of his property, which passes through the earth to the ghost for whom it is intended. Ghost-singers have taken [768] their places and begin to beat out music, and presently the recently deceased appears, stepping backwards from the backroom in time to the beating of sticks. He is at once surrounded by his fellows, each anxious to learn the latest news of relatives still alive. This dance is really to welcome the new arrival, and takes place irrespective of his rank. After it has been held, it is hopeless to attempt to rescue a dead person, although that has been done several times during the four days immediately succeeding death.

Only shamans are able to peer down into the land of the [756] dead, though stories are told of inadvertent visits to it in relatively recent times. Human beings are prevented from visiting their dead relatives, but the latter, being supernatural, can come to the earth at will. They are always dreaded, and anyone who hears their whistling or their tongueless chatter cowers in his house, and hopes they will pass by. Shamans [756] can understand their speech and to them the dead explain their mission. If the relations of a dead person have failed to burn [768] all his personal possessions, he returns to earth to inform them, through a shaman, of the omission. The house is scoured for anything left and it is burnt at once near the grave, though no one knows how a ghost would punish failure to give him his property. Thoughtful people, remembering the scarcity of [264] food in the land below, frequently give presents to their dead relatives by casting small morsels of food on the side of the [772]
central fire nearest the front door, beneath which is a passage to the lower regions. The food becomes magnified as it falls down this, so that even small fragments are sufficient to feed many hungry ghosts. Since the introduction of metal stoves, it has become customary to throw food into a fire kindled for [177]
the purpose in the cemetery; the most suitable time is at dusk, although people are always afraid that spectres may be prowling around at that hour. If sufficient presents are not given [756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

775 to a ghost, he informs a shaman of the fact and the latter [754] notifies the relatives of the deceased. If no shaman is convenient, the shade does not hesitate to help himself. Invisible, 264 and armed with a barbed hook, he approaches a person who is 775 eating and pulls away a crumb which falls to the earth. Should the eater stoop to pick this up, the ghost, robbed of his booty, 753 beats the offender with his hook, causing toothache or sometimes a sharp pain in the head or stomach. Other ailments are caused by the ghosts hitting with invisible stones those who have offended them. Consequently, no one picks up a crumb which has fallen, since it is impossible to know whether it has
[827] been an accident or a seizure. Another indication of a ghost's [782] hunger is loss of a tooth. The loser should throw it on a fire with an invitation to the dead to accept his offering.

775 The barrier between ghosts and human beings is considered to be little more than a wall of smoke, just too dense for ordinary eyes to penetrate. In early times intercommunication between the denizens of the two worlds was so easy that a doting mother was once allowed to send her dead child on earth. Unfortunately, the woman's mother one day insisted on holding her grandchild, unaware that he was a ghost. Shocked at his appearance, the old woman dropped the child, much to the anger of the dead people.* Ever since that time it has been impossible for human beings to see and talk with [538] their deceased kinsmen. Like so many Bella Coola stories, it is doubtful whether this one is regarded as more than an item of ancient history; it is considered to be a fact, but it is not one that enters into the daily thoughts of the people.

[125] Ghosts frequently come to their old homes at night where dogs can see them. If one of these animals begins to bark and gazes fixedly at a spot where nothing is to be seen, it is because a wraith is standing there and the dog's owner hopes that it will remain invisible. It is true that some individuals have [754] received shamanistic power from a ghost, but more often a visitation is disastrous and to be avoided. A dead person often

*This story is recorded in detail later (I, p. 373).

Lib:Dorsett E-5 (1912-1914)148
NEA Reflecords NEA

tries to speak to living relatives, but his whistling language is unintelligible and frightens the hearer. Ghosts dislike urine, and the only means known to keep them away from a house is to sprinkle this liquid outside the door, a common Belle Coole custom. There is no actual danger in hearing a ghost, and little even in seeing one, provided the observer does not relain his equanimity, but should he try to do so, something happens to his mouth as if an invisible hand had been clamped over it to prevent his words issuing forth. He can neither eat nor drink and soon dies.* It is possible that other beings are responsible for this same affliction, but as no sufferer has ever been able to explain the cause of his ailment, no one knows. The most dangerous ghost is that of a person who, buried without a mourning, is unable to disintegrate into his elements. The sight of such an apparition causes almost immediate death through contraction and closing of the mouth.

An unpleasant habit of ghosts is the throwing of stones at the living. This is done partly from a love of mischief, and partly to remind their relatives of their needs. An old Kitsequit man described how, when encamped on King Island, he had almost been struck by a stone which seemed to fall from a tree. He realized that it must have been thrown by a ghost, and his opinion was confirmed when he found he could not speak. He instantly built a fire and cast on it both food and clothing as offerings to the dead, which had the effect of loosening his mouth. Pondering on the reason, he remembered that one of his relatives had died not far away, and that he had failed to give him any crumbs for a long time. In this case, as in many others, the stone was visible, though the thrower remained invisible.

Even near approach to ghosts is sometimes dangerous. The same man related how, when hunting, he heard what he thought was the noise of a water ouzel, and passed by heedlessly. In a few minutes he thought he heard the cackling of geese, but the sound, instead of continuing to come from a pond a few hun-dead yards away, rapidly drew near the hunter along the trail. He raised his musket and stepped aside, but though the sound went past him down the path, he could see nothing. Terrified, he realized that he had been near two ghosts, and rushed back to the village. A shaman was called who informed him that he had met his dead father's sister and another relative, both of whom were hungry. The hunter, too weak from fright to help himself, watched the shaman light a fire and throw on it a considerable amount of food and goods. Finally, he ripped the hunter's skin from his back and threw it into the flames. Consequently, no harm resulted from this experience.

*The disease attributed to the actions of ghosts may be hiccough.

Ghosts, like all other supernatural beings, can, of course, control their powers so that their appearance does not injure a beholder. A few years before 1922 a certain Qwalin-i, whose ancestral name was Ze-qme-i, was encamped at Sachmamen on the Labouchere Channel side of King Island. At dusk a woman came to his fire and proceeded to warm her caps. He recognized from her green face that she must be a ghost and boldly asked her what she wanted.

"I have been searching for mussels," she replied, "but without success."

In an instant she vanished and Qwalin-i experienced neither good nor evil from this apparition. The Bella Coola say that this being may not have been a ghost as he had thought, but was perhaps one of the under-sea dwellers who have somewhat the same appearance.

Since ghosts, like other supernatural beings, are believed to possess both wisdom and power, it might be thought that they would be invoked frequently. Instead, death has altered their character to such an extent that they are avoided and kept at a distance. The only time that an appeal is made to a ghost is when a young person dies without apparent reason and the survivors wish to leave the house. The body is buried with a long cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark projecting from its mouth and stretching to the surface. The relative desiring information summons to his house several shamans whose powers have been obtained from ghosts, and for four days feels then lovably. On the 5th morning they proceed to the grave, accompanied by kinsmen of the deceased, and pound on the ground with sticks, asking the dead person whether or not he had been murdered, and if so, the name of the murderer. It is said that in former times the voice of the deceased could always be plainly heard giving the desired information. This ceremony has not been carried out for many years, and exact details are not known by any of the living Bella Coola. It seems clear that ventriloquism must have been employed, requiring active deception on the part of the shamans. [98]

L.M.Dorwith B-5 (1921-1924)948
RES Bellacoola NES

It was difficult to ascertain to what extent shamans believed in their own powers to understand the speech of ghosts. There is no doubt that the Bella Coola are easily influenced by suggestion, and if an individual is told that he has received help from a ghost, it is not difficult for him to believe that such has been the case. Further, his fellows are convinced of his powers, a circumstance which does not fail to affect him. It may be stated definitely that in many cases shamans have some confidence in their own powers, although they do not hesitate to use deception to increase their prestige. This point will be considered in greater detail in the following chapter.

SOURCES OF KNOWLEDGE WITH GHOSTS

Much of the information concerning ghosts is contained in stories which have been handed down for generations and which are regarded as historical records. Some of these must be deferred to the chapters on folk-lore and shamanism, but the following are sufficient to explain the source of many Bella Coola beliefs on this subject.*

A Scene from Home

Long, long ago, there lived a little girl who used to cry incessantly. One evening when she was disturbing the whole household by weeping, her father said angrily to her:

*These stories have been included at this point as specific illustrations of the type of legend upon which generalized beliefs depend.

B:Mb:Geoghth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

584
775

"Keep quiet or the ghosts will come and carry you off."

Even this threat did not silence her; later on, all her companions went to bed, leaving her alone, crying, in the central part of the house. After a time her father carried the child's sobs had grown fainter, though she seemed to be weeping in the same manner as before. He went out to investigate, found her place vacant, and, listening intently, realized that the sound came from below; the ghosts had come for her. He roused the household and called in all the men of the village to dig for the girl with sharpened spruce branches. Her crying was still audible and the diggers were directed by it; sometimes they seemed to be on the point of overtaking her, but always her ghost-captor eluded his pursuers by moving sideways through the ground instead of continuing his direct descent. At length the men gave up their task in despair, leaving the mourning father and mother to lament the former's rash remark which had brought the ghosts.

The parents of the girl consulted all the village shamans, one of whom formulated a scheme to rescue the victim. He told her relatives to remove shamanic boards from the roof of the house, and to place on each remaining one a vessel filled with urine. He stationed a helper beside each vessel, ready to upset it when he gave the signal, and requested everyone else to leave the house. When these arrangements had been carried out, the shaman went alone to the cemetery, passed through the earth to the land of ghosts, and invited the wraiths to assemble in the house for a feast. They gladly accepted, and the hidden assistants watched them enter, one or two at a time, as if they had been human beings hidden to a ceremony. At last all had arrived except the principal chief, who was to sit in the central seat behind the fire. The feast could not proceed without him, so the ghosts sent a special messenger down below to summon him. It was this chief who had stolen the child, and the excitement of the watchers became intense as he entered, carrying concealed beneath his cloak the girl whose cries betrayed her presence to the hidden relatives. When all had taken their places, the shaman gave the previously arranged signal and his accomplices tipped the urine over the hidden heads. Wild confusion followed. The ghosts dashed to and fro, showing their anger and resentment by furious whistling and inconsequent gurgling. At last they rushed from the house, abandoning the child. They could still be heard in the vicinity of the village, so the shaman directed the people to scatter urine all around the house, which drove away the unwelcome visitors. The use of this deterrent was first learned on this occasion.

The parents of the stolen child were overjoyed at her rescue, but it was soon apparent that their daughter had changed. She would not eat; in fact, she acted as if she could not see food placed before her. The next morning she rose early and was seen to eat the ashes of fish that had been burnt as torches; this proved conclusively that she was really dead. Thereafterwards, instead of being given food in the usual way, her meals were thrown into the fire, from the ashes of which she received her nourishment. Ever since that time, the Bella Coola have recognized that food for the dead must be thrown on a fire.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

534
775

An Attempt to Rescue a Dead Wife

Two or three hundred years after the first settlement of the earth, a brave Kimsquit man, Ne-chakkoway, set out with his three sons to hunt seals. His wife was in an advanced state of pregnancy at the time, but her delivery was not expected for several weeks and her husband had no hesitation in leaving her. The hunters were absent for three full days and nights, and returned home soon after dusk on the fourth day, having had great success. When they landed at the beach they were surprised to see no lights in any of the houses except their own. Leaving two of his sons in the canoe, Ne-chakkoway and the other lad cautiously approached the dwelling. As they drew near, they realized that the light which shone forth was green and unearthly, and that the smoke, too, was greenish instead of white. Looking through the door, Ne-chakkoway saw his wife standing with bowed head dangling an infant in a cradle suspended from a cord. This is a common method of soothing a child, but Ne-chakkoway was horrified to see that the cradle had been fastened to the cord upside down so that the infant was hanging head downwards, with no visible fastening to prevent it from falling to the floor.

"Look out! The child will fall and be killed," Ne-chakkoway called to his wife, but she did not seem to hear him.

The husband entered the house and touched her, but she crumbled to bones as he did so. The watching son cried out in fear and horror. Ne-chakkoway hastily left the house and the two returned to the canoe, after ascertaining that no living people were in the village.

The four hunters slept that night in their canoe, and next morning Ne-chakkoway prowled around until he found the villagers hiding in the forest not far away. They explained that, two days after his departure, his wife had given birth to a child, but the after-birth had not come away and she had died. It was the first time that this had ever happened and the people had fled from the village in fear.

Ne-chakkoway knew that the ghosts would dance to welcome his wife on the fourth day after her death, and he determined to attempt to rescue her at that time. On the evening of the second day, the fourth after her death, he and his three sons hurled in the vicinity of their house. Pre-

1:34:Dwyatth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

534
775

sently they heard the sound of drums, which they knew must herald the approach of ghosts, so they hid themselves on the roof of their own house in such positions that they could peer down within. In some unknown way the four had been granted the power to see ghosts, for they observed the entry of what looked like ordinary human beings, though in reality they were wraiths. These took their places like spectators at a ceremony, while several with hunting sticks seated themselves behind the fire as singers. As they struck their batons on the floor, one of the ghosts began to dance in time to the music, and Sk-ukkiowy's wife came to life and watched. Two ghosts who were directing the ceremony called out, "U.....e.....i.....e....," which are words in the language of the dead and serve to invite some supernatural being from above to one of their ceremonies. In answer to the call, there came a thump on the roof, marking the descent of the visitor. This gave the dead woman power to move and she began to dance around the fire. She had completed one circuit and was on her second when one of the ghosts called out:

"Take care! I feel as if living people were watching us."

Some of the ghosts at once left the house and searched the bushes near it.

"No," they said on their return, "We are in vain."

Sk-ukkiowy's wife continued her dance, and as she was circling the fire for the third time, her husband whispered to his sons:

"As she goes round the fourth time we must jump down, catch her, and fly to our canoe."

When the woman was midway in her fourth circuit, the four leaped into the house and Sk-ukkiowy clutched his wife in his arms, but she crumbled to bones at his touch and the ghosts rushed away, whistling angrily, leaving the four alone, Sk-ukkiowy holding the skeleton of his wife. Then they went and joined the other inhabitants of the village in their hiding-place. Everyone was anxious to hear the outcome of the attempt, though some did not believe the story. Sk-ukkiowy made no further effort to rescue his wife, knowing that it would be hopeless after the fourth day when the ghosts had welcomed her as one of themselves.

An Inadvertent Visit to the Land of Ghosts

A few years after the first settlement of the earth, four Kimsquit men went into the mountains to hunt game. The first night of their absence, before they had killed any game, they lay down to sleep in a cave. Nothing disturbed their rest, but when they awoke in the morning they were amazed to find themselves in a strange country. They were near a wooded valley through which flowed a river resembling the Dean, but instead of

Lidell Dorothy E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellaire NEA

534
975

the sun, there was shining in the sky a sphere that gave forth a green, sickly light. Unknown to them, the cave in which they had been sleeping had turned over on itself and projected them into the land of ghosts. The four brothers descended into the valley and walked up the bank of the river until they saw a large village on the other bank. It seemed to contain countless inhabitants who were amusing themselves by rolling to and fro with their feet a large, round object like a football. This led the four travellers to think they must be in the land of ghosts, though they were puzzled to know how they had reached it. They called across to the players, but though the river was narrow and though they shouted loudly and repeatedly, they received no answer. The reason for this, as they have discovered, was that the language of ghosts differs from that of human beings, and neither can hear the speech of the other. After a considerable interval, the third brother, who was sleepy, happened to yawn noisily; all the ghosts heard this sound and stopped their play to see whence it had come. They saw the four at once and called to them that they would send a canoe to bring them across the river. Two of the ghosts manned a large, dark canoe and poled it across, but as the bow touched the bank where they were standing, the elder brother pointed out to his fellows that it was transparent. They all looked down into it and could see sticks and stones on the bottom of the river through the floor of the craft. They were somewhat nervous about trusting themselves in such a canoe, but the elder shut his eyes and jumped aboard without wishing, followed by the other three. They were landed on the bank in front of the village, but before any one of the four could set foot on the ground the ghosts who had come crowding around picked them up in their arms. Each was passed by his bearer to another further inland, and in this way they were quickly thrown from hand to hand until deposited within the house of the chief, without using their feet and without a single ghost having had to move from the spot where he had been standing.

The four human beings found themselves in a large house crowded with what seemed to be people, but when they looked more be ghosts. At that distant period, men were wiser than they are today, and the brothers realized that the chief must be Allah-tala-himself. Ghost-females brought food to the four strangers, but they concealed it beneath their tapa instead of eating it, remembering what they had heard at Kumapit that a person who sets the food of the dead can never leave their home. The chief was kind to them and somewhat facetiously told them that they would come to harm if they stayed in a country where the people played as much as they did in life. He added that they could return to earth by the same route by which they had come, and advised them to b:McDerwith R-5 (1922-1924) 1948

MBA: McDerwith MBA

534 heavy luck. After so short a visit as they thought polite, they asked to 775 be ferried back across the river and returned their steps to the cave where they had slept the previous night. It was dark by this time and they lay down to sleep. During the night the cave returned on itself once more, and in the morning they were delighted to find themselves in the mountains above the Dean River.

This was the first time that anyone had penetrated to the land of ghosts, and the friends of the four brothers were intensely interested in the account of their experiences. It was October at the time, but they explained that it was late winter in the land below. No one knows why or how the four brothers had received the power to pass into the land of ghosts, although it is assumed that Sqamtin must have granted them the boon.

A Kitlala Story of a Descent to the Land of Ghosts

177 The following story was related by an elderly man who had 534 heard it about ten years previously from three Christian 775 Kitlala who had been his fellow-passengers on a steamship between Vancouver and Bella Coola. It is not a Bella Coola story, although it has been circulated among members of the tribe as an interesting tale. The facts recorded in it do not agree entirely with their beliefs, but that is a matter of no [128] consequence to the Bella Coola who, having their own knowledge, consider it quite natural that the other tribes should have other concepts.

534 About ten years before the story was told, a Kitlala woman had died, 775 leaving her husband and one grown-up daughter to mourn her. The husband refused to be comforted, and used to fall into a paroxysm of weeping whenever he saw any of his wife's clothing or goods. About a week after her funeral he took her clothing to the cemetery intending to burn it, but instead sat down on the ground to weep. Presently he noticed a passage beside him, down which he crawled until he came to a fine, rich land more prosperous than this world, where he wandered along aimlessly till he heard the sound of singing and hid himself behind a clump of bushes. There seemed to be five or six groups of people in different sections of the country, and the song was taken up in succession by each group. When he had wandered in his hiding-place for some time, two people in new, white clothes passed so close to him that he could hear the rustling of their garments. He recognized one of the

S.Mc.Dowell. E-5 (922-1924)948
NEB Bellacoola NE6

539
775

pin were for an his wife, and the other an a fellow villager who had died some time previously. Somewhat perturbed at finding his wife apparently on friendly terms with a male ghost, the husband decided to return home and ponder before taking any rash steps.

He crawled back along the passage to the cemetery and at once heard his wife's clothing. When he reached home his daughter, who had been worried at his long absence, saw that her father had been weeping and tried to console him. He told her mother promptly set to arranging, and, while eating, recounted what he had seen that day, ending his determination to return to the morning and bring back his dead wife. His daughter begged him not to do so, reminding him that her mother had died of her own volition and that it would be dangerous to bring her back to earth, but the grieving father put no attention to her appeal.

Next morning the men went again to the cemetery where he found the passage still open. He went down, hid in the same thicket, and heard the same singing taken up by group after group. As on the previous day, after a considerable period of waiting, his wife passed by in company with the same male ghost. The husband rushed forth, seized her and showed every her companion, who vanished disappointed. The woman offered no resistance, and her husband wished that he was going to take her back home again. The two returned to the passage, the men guided his dead wife through it to the cemetery and thence they set out for their home.

Meanwhile the daughter, dreading what might happen, had remained within. As her father opened the door, she crawled at the side of the house and saw that his hand was held out as if he were leading someone, though only one figure was visible to her. Her fear increased when she heard lighter footsteps accompanying his, as the rustling of clothing. She heard her father call his wife, which is addressed by name, then he would leave her in the main part of the house for a moment while he arranged the bedroom, he set about this, as though the daughter eagerly looked for her mother, she was invisible. When the father returned, he led his wife to the bedroom, her elder daughter it seemed as if he had put out his arm to guide nothing was visible than air. The frightened girl could hear her father utter questions and giving answers as if in conversation, but her mother's voice was inaudible. The daughter heard her father call his wife here she like the head below and, judging from his tone, concluded that she had said it was preferable to the land of the living except for the search of food. The mother must have added that the this same ghosts via the houses of

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

534 human beings, knock crumbs to the ground with minute hooks, and
● 995 punish by beating with the same barbs anyone who offends them by picking up such morsels. The girl heard her father say that in future he would be more careful to throw fragments of food on the fire, since he now knew that these were not only desired by the dead, but were necessary to them. Her mother must have asked whether they had eaten all the dried salmon, for her father answered:

"No. We have been so grief-stricken at your death that we have eaten hardly anything."

After a pause the girl heard her father say "All right," and judged that her mother had said she would go to get some. In a moment the door opened, though no one appeared, and the thoroughly awed girl heard the sound of light footsteps. She saw the rope with which the box was bound unfastened without visible agency, and the salmon piled in a neat heap on the floor, then the bundle seemed to rise of its own accord and pass out through the front-door without human aid. After an interval the father appeared and asked his daughter where her mother had gone. The frightened girl told what she had seen, and both were amazed and puzzled. At last it dawned on the grieving husband that his wife must have ended the food for the benefit of her friends below and had returned to her new home.

The husband, now twice bereaved, was filled with woe as this second loss, which was unexpected as his wife had said nothing of her intention of leaving. After deliberating for several days, he descended again to the land of ghosts, heedless of his daughter's appeals. He concealed himself in the same spot as before, and soon heard singing; but this time the words and tune were different and he listened intently. To his horror, the theme was of the ingenuity of a dead woman who had revisited her home, deceived her husband, and brought away a supply of dried salmon for the use of the ghosts. He recognized that the song went refer to his own wife and, grieved and humiliated, he returned home forthwith. He warned his daughter to say nothing of what had occurred and she obeyed his instructions, not wishing their shame to become known. A few days later, however, a number of friends gathered to console the husband; he became intoxicated, told the guests his adventure, and taught them the songs used by the dead.

A Carrier Story of an Ascent to the Land of the Dead

177 The following, like the last, is not a Bella Coola story. It 534 is one known to a number of Kitwancool and deserves inclusion

L McDewitt E-5 (1922-1924)1943
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Carrier NEA

among Bella Coola tales if only for the reason that stories of foreign origin, when told sufficiently often, tend to be considered indigenous and the facts recorded in them accepted and incorporated into Bella Coola belief. This factor is undoubtedly responsible for many conflicting elements in their theology. The following story has every indication of Christian influence but is not less interesting on that account, as illustrating the process of assimilating new ideas into mythology.

B
177 534
B
C 534
795

About 1870, Mimmiye,* a Tsimsi Indian from Gosse Lake, and his brother were trapping beaver in one of the lakes of the interior. They were both good hunters and every morning killed at least one of the animals. Mimmiye was a strong, apparently healthy man, but one morning he fell dead. His grief-stricken brother was puzzled to know what to do with the body. It was winter, and the heavy snow and frozen earth made interment impossible, while lack of fire-wood made cremation out of the question, so he merely tied up the corpse to await better weather. Meanwhile Mimmiye had gone aloft, where he saw a large house containing many rooms. He went to the door of these, where a man was sitting with a huge book before him.

"What do you want?" asked the man.

Mimmiye did not answer and his questioner continued:

"Your name is not here. Why did you come?"

This happened in one room after another, for Mimmiye tried them all. Finally, at the end of the house, he came to the seat of the chief, who said to him:

"You have made a mistake. The time for you has not yet come. If you want to stay, you can do so by drinking this."

He showed Mimmiye a glass containing a green liquid.

"If not," continued the chief, "you must drink this," and he showed him another glass filled with a white liquid.

Throughout this speech Mimmiye had heard a strange rumbling and wondered what could be its cause. Happening to glance out through a window at the rear of the house, he saw a huge, metal ball, constantly revolving and giving forth the rumbling sound as it did so. From within

*This story was related by Jim Pelkmit, an elderly Kimsquit, who stated that as a young man he had known Mimmiye, who was about fifty years older than he. This tale is interesting as showing the manner in which a miraculous account can become accepted as fact within a short space of time. Mimmiye must have been a man of imaginative temperament who was mentioned that he had experienced hallucinations told to him by some white men.

Schoolcraft K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Carrier NE7

B
C 534
775

cause wailing voices and at intervals an agonized face appeared at one of the many small openings in the surface of the sphere. The supreme being, for the chief was none other, told him that those within the ball were evil persons, those who had committed theft or murder during life. Mimaniye, though innocent of these crimes, decided that he would be safer on earth and asked for the glass with the white liquid, which he hastily drained. The supreme deity inquired what present he would like as token of the visit, and he requested a beaver-arm, that is, one with a crooked handle such as beaver use.*

At the moment when Mimaniye drank the white liquid, his brother saw his body move very slightly. He hastily warmed some mountain goat grease and with this rubbed his face and mouth. At first he was unable to speak, owing to his muscles having become rigid from the cold, but they loosened gradually so that he was able to recount his experiences. Mimaniye's arm, being of supernatural origin, was invisible to all human beings, but this did not affect its potency, and from that time onwards the owner could catch beaver as easily as other men could catch salmon.

B
177 534
775

The information contained in this story does not correspond at all with Bella Coola beliefs concerning the fate of the dead. They tell it, and assume that such experiences are normal for dead Kwain, though unknown to their own people.

[826]

*The Bella Coola know that beaver must have some of this kind to accomplish their work, although white people, deceived by the invisibility of them, believe the animals use their teeth. Mimaniye received as one of this type.

L:McDowell R-5 (2522-2524)948
NEA Bellaire-ole NEA

though they may be to the white man. It is hoped that the preceding illustrations, drawn from recent times, will explain the natural attitude of the Bella Coola better than instances from folk-lore of the distant past.

Disregarding thoughts which, since they are caused by the spiritual elements of the human body, are ever present, relations with the supernatural may be divided into the following categories:

(a) Appearance of supernatural beings from which neither good nor bad results follow. Strictly speaking, every fleeting sight of a supernatural being belongs to this category, but it will be convenient to describe only experiences of a peculiar kind, such as the Bella Coola call qoo-ahlowaqhalsis. Usually manifestations of the supernatural have certain effects; consequently, there are relatively few incidents of this kind recorded.

(b) Supernatural aid vouchsafed to a man or a woman in distress. There are many tales illustrating this, which are told and retold to the children. In most cases the assistance is given to one who has unknowingly, according to Bella Coola concepts, fallen into misfortune.

(c) Supernatural good luck. This may be obtained by anyone, and consists of the acquisition of a supernatural object to attract, not only fish and animals, as if it were a potent lure, but money and goods as well.

(d) Acquisition of shamanistic power, with or without the ability to cure the sick. This may be received from one of two sources:

(a) Tlesqelitse-a or some other supernatural being.

(b) Ghosts, which are likewise supernatural.

(e) Obtaining prophetic powers direct from the supernatural. There are few instances of this, and none that is ascribed to a remote period. It is possible that all examples of this kind can be attributed to indirect Christian influence.

(f) Obtaining power from a supernatural being localized in a particular spot. This usually takes the form of succour when

Library of Congress Copyright Office
Not to be republished bitterly regretted his own conversion, for the wonderful cures stopped, whereas, had he accepted the supernatural gases, he would have been able to perform them.

SHAMANS VIEW THE DEAD

There remain to be described shamans from the dead, whose abilities and prerogatives are almost identical with those already described. They obtain their power either from the visitation of a ghost in this world, or by a journey to the land of shades below. The following incident explains why shamans alone can hold converse with ghosts.

Once, long ago, the lover of a young girl died. She was so heart-broken that in her agony, four days after his burial, she lay down on his grave to weep. The dead man was able to visit her and to due time she gave birth to a child, who, like its father, was a ghost, with drawn face and glaring eyes. The perturbed woman sended it to the forest, her love overcoming a feeling of repulsion, and when she returned to her home she endeavoured to persuade her own mother handling the infant, knowing that she would be horrified. The grandmother insisted, but as soon as she saw the ghostly appearance of the child she dropped it to leave, and the infant vanished.

Since then there has been a barrier, resembling a wall of smoke, between mortals and the dead. If the old woman had not dropped her grandchild, the living would still be able to converse with their deceased friends and relatives.

Nowadays, shamans alone are able to lift the barrier and discourse with the ghosts of those who have departed. These are quite common visitors to the land of the living, but only a shaman can understand their languages, of which one is a series of whistles, and the other resembles the strangest speech made by a tongueless individual. Shamans can learn what the dead require and so transmit the knowledge to the relatives of the deceased. So, long ago, shamans whose powers were derived from animals were able to teach mortals the proper methods of hunting, and the taboos enjoined, as a shaman from the dead once visited the land of ghosts and learnt their needs. They informed him that food and clothing thrown on the ground did not reach them, and that in order to do so it must be cast on the fire. Instead of journeying to the land of the dead some shamans receive their powers from ghosts who ascend to this earth, as the following account describes.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Within the lifetime of an elderly Bella Coola informant, a certain woman, Sîtsalwâsîs by name, left her house one evening for a few minutes. When she came back she was crazy. Her face was green, her mouth and face distorted and twisted, she could only whistle when she tried to talk, and kept endeavouring to walk on her hands. Taking her blankets, she went through the motions of washing them, but instead of using water, she dragged them to and fro through the ashes of the central fire, until, utterly exhausted, she lay down. By these symptoms it was recognized that a ghost had stricken her with madness, and several shamans of the dead were called upon for help. For a long time their efforts were fruitless. Then one of them obtained some stained cedar-wood pads. While another conducted the frenetic beating of sticks, the leading practitioner waved one of the pads through the smoke of the central fire and laid it, with hemlock bark and dyed cedar-bark, on the patient's face. After having it there a few moments, he took it off and, while the beating of sticks was stilled, threw it out the door. When this had been done four times the woman was restored to sanity. Later on she said she had seen the ghost of a certain Tsîtsmal, a man recently deceased. Emerging from her trance she found herself in her house surrounded by numerous people and the shamans working over her. If he had not been able to cure her, she would have died; in fact, it was impossible to discover whether the Bella Coola regarded this woman as having been cured of an illness, or as having been restored from the dead.

Sîtsalwâsîs called for the singers to whom she sang four songs, relating what she had seen. They described how she stood by a fire in the land below, where the sun travelled from west to east, and where everything differed from this earth, though reminiscent of it. The singers learnt the songs, and it was to their music that the woman danced on later occasions. She was able ever afterwards not only to cure maladies caused by ghosts but to talk with them. For this purpose she was in the habit of lying down at night in the graveyard, looking down into the land of the dead which was open to her, and conversing with the inhabitants in a strange whistling language which the living could hear, but could not understand. She was also able to pass downwards at the edge of the central fire nearest to the door. 756*

1:b4c:Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

775

Awuttikkwatz, an old shaman from the dead who died not long ago, obtained his power by chancing to visit their land. The themes of his songs were of the land of the dead where, he said, there were many people; where those who had been rich on earth were rich, but where those who had been poor were still poor; where those who had been blind could see, and those who had been maimed were whole. He told of Palwitl, a legless creature who lives in the land below, but can travel with amazing speed. In fact this shaman stated that it was he who was sent when the ghosts wished to communicate with the living, a statement contradicted by others. He told further of Kawwitudzin-a, a supernatural woman resident there, who is able to pick berries with phenomenal rapidity. But this talent avails her little, since her basket is full of the teeth of dead men who devour the fruit as fast as she picks them. It was Awuttikkwatz who described how in the land below there were only two enormous trees of the kind known to the Bella Coola as kiji, under the shade of which the ghosts played a game resembling football with huge, light balls. [787] [534] [776] [776]

A dead person usually chooses one of his own relatives as the proper person on whom to bestow the power of a shaman, but their actions in this respect can neither be coerced nor cajoled. Ceremonial chastity is of assistance, and power can usually be obtained by anyone who lies four days and four nights, face downwards, on a new grave. Nor does every sight of a deceased person bring with it this faculty; in fact, ghosts are greatly dreaded since they usually cause harm to the beholder. On one occasion the mother of an elderly Bella Coola woman left the house one evening, to return shortly with her face screwed up into a ghastly smile, green in colour, and with saliva dribbling from her mouth. She was quite mad. A shaman from the dead succeeded in curing her, or it may have been in restoring her to life, and she was able to tell how she had seen what she took to be a man with face averted. She 756* 775 787

b34:Howitt K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 756 called out to him, and then remembered no more. It was
● 775 obvious that she had seen a ghost.

[187] It is over diseases caused by ghosts that a shaman from the 753 dead has power. If a person picks up and eats any morsels
* 756 which he has dropped he will usually suffer, because, though 775 he thinks the crumbs have fallen, they have really been pulled [264] from his hands by a hungry ghost, who thus showed his desire for food. By picking up and eating the fragments, the man thwarts a dead person who retaliates by forcing some sickness into him. Ghosts may visit this land of the living and ask their relatives for food or clothing, but mortals, unable to hear the speech of the dead, are unaware of the requests of their deceased relatives, and so do not answer them. The irritated ghosts respond by causing sickness. In such cases a shaman 755 from the dead is able to seek out the cause of the ill, and some-
* 752 times to display it as a bone, twig, or other small object and at the same time to tell the sufferer what it was that his relatives desired. Like ordinary shamans, a shaman from the dead uses his own discretion whether or not to employ the violent beating of sticks, and like his fellow-practitioner re-[465] ceives payment from those whom he has helped. There are no fixed charges, but a successful shaman is always wealthy.

* 756 The intimate contact of ghosts with shamans has already 787 been mentioned in connection with the ability of the latter to 694 learn from the ghost of a murdered person whom he believes to be his slayer.

There is one method of sacrificial curing practised by 755 shamans from the dead alone. If the sickness refuses to yield
* 756 to ordinary methods, the practitioner makes ten cedar-bark 782 vessels, fills these with grease and places them near the fire, one between it and the door, one on the inner side, and four on either side of it, parallel to the side walls of the house. By each vessel are placed two small wooden figures, roughly carved to represent men, and decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark. After endeavouring to seek forth the disease, with or without the assistance of the frenzied beating of sticks, the

b)McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

shaman pours the grease on the central fire, and throws on it also the figures and some dried salmon. Thus propitiated, it is believed that the dead will be more likely to allow the sickness to be sucked forth.

Shamans from the dead perform conjuring feats and dramatic performances of the same type as ordinary shamans. Until he gives his first dance a newly created shaman is known as a ina, the same word that is used for a kaxiut initiate, and during this period he wears the shaman's collar of intertwined dyed and undyed cedar-bark. If he is wealthy and influential, a shaman will repeat his dance every fourth year. Such a performance can be held at any season, although the usual time is after the kaxiut ceremonies. The dramatic representations are of scenes witnessed in the land below, though sometimes they are done in a reverse manner, following the practice of the dead in doing things strangely. Thus one shaman reported that the ghosts wore very long blankets, but when he danced he wore one that came only to his hips. The method of singing is the same as that employed by ordinary shamans, but one whose power is derived from the dead dances with head bent downwards, his free hand pointing to the ground with first finger extended. Also his cry of "swai, swai, swai," uttered at intervals with a deep cadence, differs from that used by ordinary shamans. A dance always terminates with the distribution of food to validate the ceremony.

Like ordinary shamans, those from the dead cannot transmit their power. At death their songs too are lost, unless they choose to give them to a friend who is also a shaman from the dead. This is obviously contrary to the theoretical belief that all songs have been obtained during revelations, but is not at all contrary to the Bella Coola practice of having the singers assist the visionaries in "remembering" their visions.

The following tale, although drawn from the distant past, is a typical illustration of one of the many ways in which shamanistic power is received from the dead.[6]

[6] Few stories of similar type have been included in vol. I, chap. vm to explain the life of the dead, and others are grouped together in the next chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
956
995

The Lads Who Visited the Home of the Dead

Long ago there was a Bella Coola man who had two sons. His wife died, and presently he remarried, becoming in time the father of an infant daughter. The second wife abused her step-sons, their father neglected them, and the two were poor and miserable, their best friend a faithful dog. When the people were invited to a feast, the lads were frequently overlooked as being of no importance, and their step-mother used to upbraid them for lacking the spirit to resent this insult. They could not answer, but merely bided their time. The two used to sleep on a raised platform behind the fire in hope of receiving supernatural assistance, and always left the house by a hole in the floor rather than through the door, thus observing one of the essentials for those who wish to obtain aid.

One day the two set out on an expedition into the mountains, carrying skin with which to make moccasins. As they were sitting at this work, the dog, which had followed its masters as usual, rushed off barking furiously. The brothers hurriedly finished the shoes and followed the animal in time to see it disappear into an opening after a porcupine. The elder leading, the two entered the cave which grew wider; on and on they went until finally they could see light in the distance. Guided by the barking of the dog ahead of them, they finally emerged into daylight, to find themselves in a new world, a land in which there was a large river and a sky resembling that above the earth, but different. The dog was waiting for them and had stopped barking.

The brothers set off up the river bank and presently saw on the other side a large town in which many people were moving about. The younger brother could see it plainly, but to the elder it was vague and indistinct. They called out to the people:

"Hi! Please send a canoe for us."

Though they called repeatedly, no one paid the slightest attention; the people seemed to be deaf, unaware of their presence. The two brothers remained all day opposite the village, calling out at intervals without result, and all the time becoming more hungry and disgusted. Towards dusk one of them yawned noisily. To their surprise there was a commotion in the town; the yawn had been heard although their cries had not. They could hear the people on the other side of the river discussing the noise.

"Let us send a canoe to fetch whoever may be over there" was the gist of their remarks.

Presently a canoe was poled out from the farther shore, and held in position by the ferryman beneath the bank on which the brothers stood, necessitating a jump of two or three feet to reach it. As the elder prepared to leap into it, he glanced down and saw that the stones on the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
756*
775

river floor were visible through the canoe as if it had no bottom at all. He drew back in fear. Though he knew it not, they had come to the land of the dead, where bottomless canoes and other phenomena were to be expected. The younger brother, to whom the village had been plainly visible, had no fear, but leapt down bravely, and was poled across to the farther shore, where he soon disappeared from his brother's sight among the throng of villagers.

The elder youth, left alone with the dog, sat down and wept, thinking that he had indeed lost his brother. After a time he continued his journey up the river-bank where presently he saw a bridge. He eagerly went over, intending to turn back towards the village where his brother had gone, but as soon as he had crossed he lost all thought of his original purpose and continued his journey upstream instead. Presently he heard the sound of adze strokes, and drew near, cautiously, until he could see the man who was using the tool.

"Why have you come here?" the woodcutter asked.

"Oh, for no special reason," the boy replied. "I should like to see your chief."

The woodcutter guided him to the house and when near called out, "The stranger wants to see our chief."

People came rushing out of the houses and the lad realized that he had come to the land of the wolves. His guide directed him to the chief's house which he entered through a doorway cut in a totem-pole. Within, the chief greeted him in a kindly fashion, saying:

"Please sit down for a little while until I can bring some friends to play with you."

He went outside, but presently returned and led him through the door to some moose-skins which he had spread on the ground under the totem-pole. Then he called the friends, who were four wolves. They came leaping out of the house and devoured the young man; but though his body was in four pieces inside the stomachs of the four animals, he was still conscious. After eating him, the beasts devoured the dog. Presently the wolves vomited into a dish, whereupon the chief re-formed what had been voided into a human being, and the lad was as before he had been eaten. Then the same was done to his dog.

The chief now beat once upon a drum as a signal for the people to adorn themselves for a dance; again he beat, and they assembled. Apparently all was ready, but the boy realized that the leader of the orchestra was absent. Again and again the chief beat on the drum, until at last the missing man drew near. He entered singing:

"A lad went out with his younger brother and his dog. A porcupine caused the mountains to open for him."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

539
756
775

As he sang, smoke could be seen rising from behind the house; the youth could see that it came from Porcupine's fire, but the song explained that it was eagle down for their mortal guest. The singer repeated his song; more smoke ascended from another place, which the lad saw was Mountain Goat's fire. The song was sung again and again, and at each repetition new smoke could be seen, from the fires of Deer, Black Bear, Whistler, Marten, Beaver, Wolverine, in fact from all animals except Grizzly Bear. The chief explained to his guest that whenever he wanted meat he could go hunting and would be able to see the smoke rising from the fires of various animals.[1]

"Tomorrow you will return home," he continued. "Your brothers (meaning the four wolves that had eaten him) will go with you to carry some presents."

Next morning [it was really a year later] the wolves tied up gifts of smoked meat in blankets woven of goat wool and sewn blankets of whistler, black bear, and marten. The meat, though a large quantity, was reduced to so small a compass that the four animals carried it without difficulty. The five travelled back to the spot where the two brothers had sat down to make their moccasins, and at that point the wolves returned to their home.

Now for the first time the lad remembered his brother, and began to weep bitterly, thinking that he must be dead. But presently he heard the sound of footsteps inside the cave through which the porcupine had guided him; they grew nearer, until the younger boy emerged. The elder was overjoyed, but his delight was turned to dismay when he saw that his brother's face was green and haggard, with a strange expression; that he had lost all the flesh from his body, and that his clothes, the same that he had worn when they parted company, were torn to tatters. His brother's appearance affected him so much that he fell down dead. The younger lad, however, had been made a shaman by the dead, so he quickly restored his brother. They exchanged experiences; the younger saying that the dead had given him the name Kipdzz. His appearance was vastly improved when he clad himself in a black bear blanket and two whistler cloaks brought by the other from the village of the wolves. The two returned home, entering the house secretly and lying down at once

[825] [224]

[1] To understand this the reader must remember the firm Bella Coola belief that all animals can assume different forms. To the ordinary person they appear as beasts, but in reality they lead lives resembling those of humans, having houses, fires, blankets, and other comforts. An individual who is able to see the smoke of their fires will have no difficulty in finding the homes of the animals and hence will have great success in hunting. The only one, this lad was to avoid was Grizzly Bear, who was so fierce that pursuing him would be dangerous.

Lib: Dwyatt: E-3 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

534
T56
T95

on their old bed on the raised platform behind the fire. No one knew of their arrival.

Although neither the father nor the step-mother of the lads had shown them any affection when they were at home, as soon as they were lost both had been overwhelmed with grief. They lost all energy and, sunk in misery and self-recrimination, would sometimes lie for days on opposite sides of the house, not even keeping a fire alight. The other inhabitants of the village considered them beneath contempt, and often at night they would relieve themselves in the house of the sorrowing couple. The only person with any energy in the household was their daughter, now a child about five years old. On the day of her half-brothers' return she happened to throw some rubbish on the fire and, as it flared up, she saw long hair hanging down from the raised bed. She called out to her mother:

"Perhaps my brothers have come home. I see the hair hanging down."

But the mother answered: "Be quiet. Your brothers have been away for a year, we do not even know how they died."

The little girl was not satisfied. She threw more rubbish on the fire and again she saw the long pendent hair. When she told her mother the woman cried out angrily:

"Be quiet, you little liar!"

The two brothers had been listening to this dialogue, and the elder now took a mountain goat bladder filled with grease which he lowered so that it swung to and fro beneath the platform. When the little girl again threw rubbish on the fire her eye was attracted by the swinging object which she took and carried to her mother with the remark:

"My brothers must certainly have come home, see what they have brought."

Now the woman believed, and carried the bladder to her husband on the other side of the house, telling him the glad news. Together they went to the raised platform where the elder brother greeted them, but lied, saying:

"I am alone, I do not know what has happened to my younger brother."

In his delight at the return of one of his sons the father became sufficiently energetic to cut some firewood, such an unusual undertaking that some of his neighbours came to ascertain the meaning of it. He told them the news, which was passed around until the whole village knew, and all assembled in the house except those who, having polluted it, were now frightened to appear. The two brothers did not come down, and only the elder spoke to those gathered below. One malicious person tried

In McGeveth E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

539
756
1115

to injure him by throwing on to the roof not far from his head a pail stained with menstrual blood, but Ełpulu, by means of his magical power, knew that it was there, and whispered to his brother, who passed the information to his father, so that the old man was able to remove the pail before either of his sons was injured. The elder brother told the people where he had left large supplies of meat. This they brought in with great rejoicing the next day.

Although the two brothers remained constantly crowded, rumours began to circulate that the elder was not alone. After a time it became generally known that the supposition was correct, and that the younger brother had received a shaman's power from the dead. A malicious chief made the statement that he did not believe this and cast insinuations as to why a shaman should succeed himself. Ełpulu used his power to inject sickness into the man and after a few days he died, though no one knew the cause.

Then the elder lad said, "My younger brother has told me that you should not bury the dead man too quickly. Let him try to restore him."

Some of the deceased's relatives were willing, others were not, but at last they agreed to give Ełpulu an opportunity to show his skill, and he revived the dead man without any difficulty. In his gratitude the chief gave the restorer his daughter as a wife. Not long after, another chief expressed his disbelief and again the shaman caused him to become sick. This time the people at once appealed to Ełpulu for help; this was refused, but when the man died he restored him, as he had done on the previous occasion. As before, he received a wife as a mark of gratitude. The reputation of Ełpulu was now established; many dead persons were brought to him to be restored and through the presents given to him he was able to give potlatches. Nor did he forget his elder brother, but obtained wives for him too. Meanwhile the latter was having great success in hunting and brought in so much meat that he was able to give a potlatch at which his younger brother danced and was given a name.

One evening,* not long after this time, a little girl about six years old kept crying and crying; nothing would pacify her. The parents tried to soothe her but at last the mother said:

"Let's go away and leave her, the dead will take her."

So all in the household withdrew to the bedrooms, leaving the girl weeping beside the central fire. Presently her cries grew fainter, and the mother ranked out, but her daughter had vanished. The sobs were coming from beneath the ground, and they realized that it was indeed the dead who had taken the mother at her word and had seized the child. It sounded as if the girl were just beneath the surface of the ground, so the

*Cf. a similar story (I, p. 93).

G.Mc.Gerrolds. B-9 (950-/904)948
WBA Bellinzona. WBA

531
T54
1975

people threw ransoms sticks on the fire and followed to the graveyard, where the corse had been. They took sticks and dug furiously, but could not catch up to her, for the sticks grew heavy and heavy as the child was carried below.

In their despair the parents called Ejinko.

"All right," he replied, "I will try to bring her back. Please have me alone in my house and I will revive the dead in a hour."

He collected all the rounds with wine in them from the village and gave one to each of a number of assistants whom he stationed around the walls of his house hidden beneath the roof. Then he revived the dead, who succeeded with the exception of the woman who was taking care of the little girl. After repeated invitations she too came, and took her place on the chief's seat behind the fire, with the weeping child in her arms. Ejinko gave the signal and his assistants emptied the rounds. As soon the dead people became impotent and sank as heaps of bones to the floor, leaving the little girl apparently unharmed. The parents picked her up eagerly and the bones were swept out to the graveyard.

The child kept crying out for salmon berries, which were unpurchasable, as it was winter. So the parents appealed again to Ejinko, who understood that what she wanted were snowberries, which are as salmon berries to the dead, in whose land she must have eaten them. She would not nothing else and, as they are not nourishing, she were dead, nor could she again be restored to life.

A similar version omits any mention of a step-mother as the reason for the boys leaving home, and simply begins with their following the dog into a shift of the mountains. The dead, after receiving the younger boy as in the preceding tale, try to make him eat "snowberries," which are to resemble the eyes of corpses. Meanwhile, the elder youth encounters the widow, but in this case is given instructions about entering their house, whereby he escapes being eaten and is granted cordially and granted a home before leaving. This is the ability to gain a desire by merely wishing for it. It is by exercising this power that he saves his long-lost brother. In this account the younger boy's name received from the dead is Kihakdawn, and Death, Sedna, gives him a stick with which to lift him from his position on the lid of a coffin. In the end Sedna, his patron, recalls the young shaman to himself. This version, which is the more abbreviated of the two, makes no allusion to the attempted rescue of a child from the land of ghosts.

787 *

usual commercial activity and was, therefore, in a good position to receive premonitions of this kind. The next day, as they were paddling down the river, they came upon some treacherous ice. Forewarned, they hastily abandoned their canoe, one side of which was soon broken in the way Tsális had described; if they had continued their journey they would certainly have been drowned.

The dreams thus far recorded have all been capable of simple explanation; in fact, their meaning is obvious, either visually or audibly. In addition, there are a number of types considered to be symbolic by the Bella Coola. There are no professional interpreters, but it is believed that in ancient times shamans learnt the significance of certain images and this knowledge has since been transmitted from generation to generation. [791] [956]

One type indicates a coming birth. If a woman dreams that she travels to some distant spot, under the ocean or into the mountains, and there takes something in her hand, it signifies that she will soon bear a male child; on the other hand, if she picks up some small object when gathering berries, a daughter will be born. A Kimsquit informant stated that before his birth, his mother dreamt that she had gone far under the mouth of the Dean River to the vicinity of Lemaqua's house, where she had taken up a child. From this she knew she was pregnant and he was born in due course. If the scene of the dream is in the mountains, it means that the child will be a good hunter; if under water, that he will be a successful fisherman, as it proved in this case. There is a vague belief that death takes place either near the spot where the mother received indication of conception, or that the life and spirit of the deceased visit the place before setting out on their journey back from generation to generation. The old man from whom this information was obtained expects to meet death by drowning, though he is himself uncertain whether his premonition is due to his mother's dream or to the fact that there has been a tendency for this to occur in his family.

787 * 843

787 * [761] [775]

* 787 843 If a woman dreams that she has caught two salmon, two small birds, or is holding two infants, the birth of twins is foretold. This type of explanation is obvious; in fact, these examples lie on the border-line between direct and symbolic interpretations.

* 787 843 775 Another indication of approaching pregnancy is for a woman to dream of a dead relative; this means that the latter will soon be re-born. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned that some fifty years earlier his mother dreamt that her dead mother came to her, saying that she was lonesome and wished to return. Soon afterwards she conceived, and the daughter born was considered to be the reincarnation of her own grand-[553] mother whose names she was promptly given. At the present time, this informant addresses his sister as sister, though he states that as a child he was taught to call her grandmother. As already mentioned, if a new-born infant is a reincarnation, the fact can often be recognized by holes or dimples in the ears, relics of previous borings for rings. Unless such a birth has been foretold in a dream, it is impossible to learn whom the child re-embodies.

* 787 [761] A dream of frequent occurrence in Bella Coola is the return of the sleeper to the scenes and activities of his childhood. This always signifies a long life. Strangely enough, to dream of being nailed in one's coffin and carried to the grave is translated conversely, and likewise indicates a long life. It is re-[731] membered that there were many dreams of fire before the outbreak of the smallpox epidemic, so it has since been assumed that such presage an outbreak of this disease.

* 787 224 [785] The only dreams of which the interpretations are wholly symbolic are those experienced by hunters. The Bella Coola explain this by saying that hunters always observe ceremonial chastity and their spirits are, therefore, in a receptive condition to supernatural impressions. When a man has set his traps, he is able to tell from his dreams whether or not any animals have been caught:

To dream that a canoe has been upset in the river and that Lebendwerk E-5 (1922-1924) 1968

NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 534 * 756 * 787 cues, remembering what the latter had told him the previous evening. He feared to follow his friend's track, and, as night came on, climed the tree and went to sleep, with the dog beside him. When it was quite dark he was wakened by the sound of footsteps and the tapping of a stick, and concluded that his partner was returning. The tree-flap was opened, as if by a person entering, but Mytelaic could see nothing, so he kicked the dog to waken it and the animal began to bark furiously. At length he heard the steps withdraw and grow fainter as they climbed the mountain. Then Mytelaic realized that his friend was dead, and that it was his life, [776] flashing round to visit his companions, which had come to him. Troubled, he lay awake all night with a blazing fire, and find the next morning.

Mytelaic chanced to meet several canoes soon after he had quitted his camp, and when he had told his story, their occupants turned back to hunt for Nuxacowmakl. About eighteen men searched all that day unsuccessfully, but a few days later another party found the corpse of the missing hunter. Presumably he had fired at the goat, though whether he struck it or not was not known, and the animal had charged. A wound in Nuxacowmakl's groin showed where one of the horns had pierced him, and the two had rolled together to death over a precipice, the bodies becoming slightly separated in the fall.

Even if Nuxacowmakl had struck the goat it would not have availed him, since he was doomed to death. Not only had he taken great risks in hunting within one year of his previous experience, but his wife had been careless during his absence. He had long practised continence, and [785] thereby was in a clean condition such as is approved by animals, and [961] other supernatural beings, but this very condition rendered him peculiarly susceptible to any breaking of taboos by his wife. She had so far forgotten herself as to indulge in swinging when he was on the mountain, so that his death was inevitable. Nuxacowmakl's relatives were very angry and prophesied that she would soon die. They were right, though whether her death was caused by a sorcerer, or by the accumulative power of their thoughts, is a matter no one can determine.

THE Tlāqmā·k

In the beginning of time, when Alquntim sent down Kālāds to this earth, he used his own initiative and travelled to the east for abalone-shell and to the west for copper. On returning to his settlement, he determined to try to lure to it a supernatural being, of whose existence he was aware from his previous life in the land above. Accordingly, he fashioned some of the copper into jingling bangles, which he fastened to the ropes of his infant's cradle. Before the introduction of white men's [177] [854] cradles, the Bella Coola were accustomed to tie a child in a cloth and 789 equal to two figurines prepared to cause love has been described.

755 In addition to these non-specialized medicines, the Bella Coola are acquainted with remedies for several specific ailments caused by supernatural beings. One of these, to cure a person in whose head a toad was formed, has already been described.

To Prevent Blindness

[759] Loss of sight is caused by a bat flying into a man's face, or [625] by a raven's dropping falling upon him as he looks upward. After either accident, rub a feather from any bird in a raven's liver and draw it across the eyes. The person practising this [715] cure must remain continent for one year or blindness will result.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Leg

If a man puts his foot in a hole so that he stumbles and falls, he will lose the use of that leg unless he counteracts the danger by placing a small stick upright in the cavity. In the summer of 1911 the writer noticed an old Bella Coola, with whom he was walking in the woods, break off a branch about two feet in length and place it in a hole where he had stumbled. He could give no explanation for his act, except that failure would cause him to lose the use of that leg.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Foot

If a person should happen to set his bare feet upon a dead wolf, he will lose the use of his lower limbs. The antidote to this has been forgotten within recent years, and patients are merely treated by shamans.

755 To Prevent the Revenge of a Ghost

775 The ghost of a murdered person usually tries to avenge himself on his killer, who can protect himself by obtaining a small piece from the body or clothing of his victim, a tuft of hair, a shred of cloth, or even a piece of earth from above his grave. When, presently, he feels sick and believes that the ghost has caused the malady, he throws the object he has obtained on a fire and allows the smoke to drift over his body. It is not known how this destroys the power of the dead victim. 755 775

L.M. Dawson B.A. (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

At present (1922), in case of unexpected death in which murder is suspected, the relatives keep the body under lock and key and watch carefully to see whether anyone tries to gain access to it. To endeavour to do so would be considered proof of guilt. For the same reason, they may place boards over the grave and watch it for several weeks. As already described, a middle-aged woman died unexpectedly in 1922. Her father, believing that she had been murdered, expressed the opinion that a certain man was the criminal and that he would die within a year. He outlived this period by three weeks and it was generally agreed that the power of thought had been sufficient to cause the death. Apparently, the father shared this view and expected the ghost of the alleged murderer to be hostile, for he made two efforts to cover the shed where the body was lying, but the relatives of the deceased foiled him by locking all doors and windows. When he himself died a few weeks later, it was taken for granted that the ghost had exacted vengeance. [145]

To Cure a Malady Caused by a Sorcerer

The most complicated medicine about which information was obtained was one employed by an elderly Bella Coola who had incurred the enmity of a sorcerer. The latter had succeeded in breaking a triangular bone in the man's chest which would have caused his death if his mother had not consulted an old woman who knew the proper remedy for such an ailment. This knowledge had been handed down in her family for generations and she was rewarded lavishly for her services. It will be convenient to refer to the patient as X and the old woman who treated him as Y. 755 [124]

X's mother requested the services of Y who agreed to assist and called upon her husband to help her. They secured the

[The Breaker Dance]

[775] [776] [777] [778] [779] [780] [781] [782] [783] [784] [785] [786] [787] [788] [789] [790] [791] [792] [793] [794] [795] [796] [797] [798] [799] [800] [801] [802] [803] [804] [805] [806] [807] [808] [809] [810] [811] [812] [813] [814]

* 575 number of puppets is always made. Certain kukwist, known
* 796 as dzayur, have in connection with their dance prerogative, the 582 ability to summon and display supernatural objects in the [424] form of small puppets. These are sometimes patrons, more often not, and include not only beings having human form, but [787] snakes, hummingbirds, and other creatures. By calling his being, an dzayur receives strength which can be transmitted to someone else—so the uninitiated believe—by passing it into the recipient's body. Non-members are told that X suffers [775] death from which he is resurrected by his own powers, rein-[787] forced by those passed into him by other members of the society through the transference of their puppets. The most potent "patron-puppet" is the giant toad. It is difficult for a [781] white man to understand how intelligent people, as are many of the uninitiated, can be deluded into believing that the somewhat rudely carved wooden figures which they see moving before them are supernatural beings. Emphasis must again be laid on the awe, mystery, and power of the ceremonies in the eyes of those who do not understand them, and the very great skill shown by the carpenters in making use of hidden strings, trap-doors, and other devices to increase the dramatic effect. Puppets are guarded very carefully by their owners and are usually hidden in some cleft of the mountains. A well-constructed one is used when necessary for many years.

* 575 Other preparations must be made for the stomach-cutting.
As in all other kukwist dances, deception is practised and X is
* 796 not really disembowelled. Instead, a wooden, or copper, frame is made to shield his stomach; over this is arranged the skin of a deer or a dog, cut to cover him from chest to thighs, with even the navel imitated. This camouflage is held in place by his breech-cloth and by a strap passing around his chest. He wears a blanket which conceals most of the fastenings so that the artifice is not noticeable in the dim light of the house. The chief difficulty is to find a dog with skin the same colour as X's.
[281] Many animals are killed, and the fur removed by immersion in boiling water, but sometimes half the dogs of a village must tume previously described. To the Bella Coola philosopher, apparently no explanation is needed of the manner in which Saulc was allowed to use his experience as the basis of a kusiut dance. The assumption is that he was a kusiut at the time of his experience, although this is not clearly stated. The last to use the name died about 1910, each Saulc having had the prerogative of giving the Thunder dance.

575* 796* 534 424 [777] [551]

THE GHOST DANCE[*]

Among the numerous patrons of kusiut dancers are Ghosts. The term, ksnaskuts, applied to a shaman whose power is derived from a ghost, is also applied to kusiut with one as patron, but the two functionaries must not be confused. It is a fairly common prerogative and there are Ghost dancers in every village, their right depending in every case on some experience of an ancestor with a ghost. The following is an account of the manner in which Sapias of Tsumsil performed his ritual; it may be regarded as typical of all, and the dancer can be referred to as X.

575* 796* [775] [756] [424]

At any time during the ceremonial season X consults with the marshals to decide upon a suitable time for his performance. On the evening preceding, normally the qulum of some other kusiut, the marshals state that his call is imminent; X makes his final arrangements and asks the assistance of a number of his fellows.

When the nalusam rites of the following evening have been completed and the uninitiated have returned to their own houses, they are startled to hear whistling from the forest near at hand. It is not the instrumentally produced sound that accompanies the coming of a call, but tuneless whistling with the mouth; everyone knows that this is the language of ghosts. A visitation from them is by no means unknown, and always dreaded, so at once there is excitement and everyone cowers in the bedrooms. Presently heralds go through the village

575* 796* 787 [775]

[*]No relationship is implied with the dance of the same name among Indians of other culture areas. [171]

Smithsonian R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NAA Bellacoola NAA

[The Ghost Dance]

they sit in silence, awaiting his arrival. Presently word is sent 575* to him, for he is always hiding near, and he comes through the 996* door and sits near the fire. But he does not resemble the man [78] who left the village. His face and body have been stained green with crushed leaves, in imitation of the colour of the [302] dead; in his hand he carries a bone, said to be part of the leg of a dead man, though in reality it is from a deer. After him the ghosts enter one by one. They are a number of kukusiut who have been painted black and green to give them an un- [302] earthly appearance; there is no fixed pattern, each following his own, or the carpenter's ideas of the uncanny, though the body colour on which the other tints are smeared is usually white. Each dead man has a special name and each acts accordingly in an eccentric way. One enters walking backwards, another hops on one leg, and a third walks on his hands—because ghosts always act in the opposite manner to [175] mortals. Each trills in a peculiar way and performs something like a dance, waving his arms to and fro, up and down, constantly pointing with one finger, before lying down close to the central fire. With them enters a woman with painted face, clad in a blanket and carrying a basket on her back; she is [176] Alsuslag, who gathers berries in the land of the dead. She begins to go around picking up any small articles that she sees and depositing them in her basket, from which anyone picks them out at will and returns them to the places whence they had been taken. One of the first actors to appear carries a stick for time beating, and acts as leader of the ghost singers.
Whenever a spark from the fire lights on one of the dead, causing the latter to jump, the leader pounds violently with his stick. When all are present, the leader beats time and they prepare to leave. Ghosts are feckless, however; consequently, [175] instead of going straight to the door, some go in one direction, some in another, but all are at length shepherded outside. X and his visitors, with a large number of kukusiut, go to every house in the village repeating the same procedure, in silence, except for the trill of the dead men. The uninitiated do not

[The Ghost Dance]

595 leave their bedrooms, but peer curiously and fearfully around 796 the edge of the boards. Finally the party returns to X's house, whence the uninitiated hear the sound of sticks being beaten in a frenzied manner, but without the usual rhythmic conclusion. Each dancer beats as he likes, because it is an affair of the dead with whom all things are queer and unnatural.

[775]

595 The ghosts wash and take their places in X's house where 796 the singers are working on a new song. The words, as if spoken
775 by the dancer, describe the land of the dead; how everything 533 is green there; how the river flows from west to east so that the sun travels upstream; how the chiefs wished to make him a chief, and deceived him by not giving proper presents; how he visited the various towns scattered along the river, finding the bone in one of the houses; and finally how the dead told him of any mistakes in ritual that had been committed in the Bella Coola villages, in Kimsquit, or in Tâl·ès. This last is, of course, common knowledge, but the Ghost dance is the only ḱuḱaxiat ceremonial in which such information is used in the text of a song. Details are given, but the wording is so ambiguous that when the uninitiated later hear the song they do not comprehend its meaning. Since the ḱuḱaxiat have concealed the error referred to, the necessity for veiled allusions is apparent. Everything connected with the Ghost dance is carried out in the reverse order; thus, the reference of X to presents which he did not receive is merely an intimation that he will presently bestow gifts on the singers and the other ḱuḱaxiat who have assisted him. The wordless chorus of the tune consists of 'aiye'arwaia, a phrase said to be the same for Ghost dances among all the coastal tribes. The singers practise this song while the audience listens attentively; then it is sung vigour-595 ously by all, while X dances. His style differs from that of all 796 other ḱuḱaxiat; first one arm and then the other is kept ex-535 tended, downwards, at an angle in front of the body with the 424 forefinger pointing to the ground. This method of dancing is the prerogative of all Ghost dancers and provides a variation to the somewhat monotonous performances on different gotlm.

[171]

the one that takes place at a thunder-storm, is said to "make good the path" of the patient. It would formerly have been a very serious offence for a Sun dancer not to perform at an eclipse; his failure would probably have been punished with death by the marshals. One informant vividly recalled his fears when he failed to perform at an eclipse soon after his conversion to Christianity, and mentioned that he had been in deadly peril from the marshals in spite of the white man's law. 575* 796* 821 688 777

THE MOON DANCE

The Sun is not the only heavenly body that acts as patron to kaxiat dancers, the Moon also has many human protégés. Among them is Nahwinde, "The Moon When It Is Unobscured," of Tremid, from whom the following account of the Moon dance was obtained. As usual, he can be spoken of as X. 776 55 424

The Moon dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject, of course, to X's wishes and the consent of the marshals. The coming of the call is heralded in the usual manner and the kaxiat presently assemble to learn the song just composed. It describes the following supernatural beings:

Aiiaidawa: A woman who lives in the moon and who can be seen in certain of its phases, always carrying a bucket of water. 575* 796*

The two Aipuaiant: These two beings are able periodically to blacken the Moon's face, thus causing an eclipse. 821 776

The two Swimde-a: These kindly women clean the Moon's face after it has been blackened. It is these beings who come to earth to assist stricken kaxiat.

The song also describes how no supernatural being dares to pass the Moon's house during an eclipse, a prohibition similar to that obeyed by uninitiated with regard to passing outside a house where a kaxiat ceremony is taking place. 784

*Aiiaidawa is the usual term for ghost; no reason was given for the application of the same designation to the woman living in the moon. 775 192

There is difference of opinion among the Bella Coola as to whether or not there is more than one of these beings.

J: McIlwraith E-S (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[588] (aa) Referring to a spot outside Smith Inlet.
[776] (bb) That is: Tlalaki'lał had just stilled the rough sea. She was another of Qwatsa's first ancestors, the most powerful of a group of four consisting of her brothers, Nais'abwas, Tlawsita'lis, and Tlalaklis, and of herself.
(cc) Qwatsa's house, a reference to an incident in Qwatsa's ancestral myth.
(dd) The house contained whistles and other valuables which they obtained.
[551] (ee) That is: All people, everywhere, know of Nais'abwas and Tlawsita'lis. Each name, though singular, has a plural significance since the other brothers are likewise implied.
(ff) Referring again to the band of first settlers.
(gg) A place on the mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island.

Song Used for Sinupsil(a)

A Yas ła'ksmaisdimpsdas	dasałłdaitmł'łdił	yas łałłkdaimadas
They(b) will presently inform(c)	my dead relatives(d)	when they reach
yas alałłsmuiqałsas	dafuhdjadjimałtsidas	dałałałpsmałłmdas
the outer places(e);	they(f) see(g)	where they first came down.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Kas ambahs itsmains	aiyasmaisałsłał	dłusałłsinasłidas
I clothe myself with(h)	my ancestral myth,	as it was dasałutiye mskidas	gdamasufsmas ałstsidas	aiyałtmtsał'alsadas
in the time	of the Nanafmałł(i)	house.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skamałsubamnnsimk'	dasqwutsmstłnasłsadas	stsmiłfwłtsił
Had just emerged(j)	the place where our relatives get their food(k).
Aiyadsmłtsytsas	łstłhlsikimut skidas	aiyamałksadas
Thither went	when it became dry(l)	Wałks.
Siałkiyałdinłsadas	dano'asqan amhłdał	aiyastman ałdił
That is why	all people, everywhere, know	of my ancestors(m).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 37, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. Both words and tune were composed by him about 1907.
(b) Referring to Wałks and his band, (I, p. 350). Sinupsil was descended from this group of first people.
[192] (c) The significance of this word is stronger than inform. It means that Wałks will relate to the deceased their ancestral myth.
(d) The chief for whom this song was composed had lost several relatives.
(e) Referring to Goose Island, Yał-ałsaix, where Wałks landed.
(f) Referring again to the deceased.
[192] [775] (g) The significance of this word is stronger than see. It means that those recently dead will gaze with rapture on the places which belong to them owing to their ancestral myth.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

Then she sat down to the meal with her husband, the routine being exactly as she had described it to her victim. After they had finished eating, Stuix's wife told him of the day's happenings, how a woman, giving her name, had visited the camp and had asked a great many questions about him, including whether or not he observed ceremonial chastity, and other personal matters. 539*

"What did you tell her?" Stuix asked his wife.

"Oh, I answered her truthfully," she replied.

"You should never have done that!" Stuix burst out in anger. "It was none of her business. Don't you know that you should never discuss a hunter's observance of ceremonial chastity? You have behaved very badly." [715 / 151]

Stuix had reason for his wrath, because no wife should ever discuss this matter, as in so doing she weakens or destroys her husband's power.

A few days afterward the evil woman again visited Stuix's camp, carrying concealed beneath her blanket a wooden club used for killing salmon. Stuix's wife did not see the approach of her hypocritical friend, who struck her on the head with the weapon and killed her. The murderess dragged her victim's body a short distance from the camp; with her copper knife she removed the skin and drew it over her own body, endeavouring in every way to make it fit. But the wife of Stuix had been larger than the bad woman, who tried to remedy the difference in size by tying the excess in wrinkles around her hips. The greatest difficulty was about the eyes, where the skin hung in folds which the impostor sewed neatly to make less noticeable. When all was done the murderess scraped a hole in the soft ground and buried the body of her victim.

While awaiting the return of Stuix the impostor busied herself in carrying out all the small household occupations, just as she had been told about them. Towards dusk Stuix came back. He noticed that his wife looked peculiar and uneasy, but said nothing about it; they sat down together to the meal but the woman kept her eyes lowered, lest the loose skin about them might betray her. Stuix wondered at that and also at her voice, which did not sound normal. At night the masquerader went first to bed, as a wife always does when her husband is observing ceremonial chastity. Stuix followed shortly. In a few minutes an owl hooted:

"Stuix's wife has tied up a fold of skin round her hips."

Neither man nor woman spoke. Even at that distant period it was well known that the voice of a dead person passes into an owl, though only rarely can one communicate with the living. It was, in fact, the slain wife speaking from above the spot where her body lay. The murderess feared that Stuix would put his arm around her waist, but she was saved because his observance of ceremonial chastity prevented him from doing so. [775 / 825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Anuhlo: Village near mouth of the Dean River.
Anulaklem: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anutqwa-yat, "Lobsetted": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Anuwulaic: Name obtained by an Alpalad man in the beginning of time.
Anuqulumut, "Quivering To and Fro": One of Tlitcqilize-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anuximlis: Kuziut name of a Bella Coola man.
Anuximlis-a: 1—Kuziut name of a Bella Coola woman.
2—"Left Hand": Stuax repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
[431] [426] anuqsp': Term applied to the giving of a copper, indicating that 100 per cent interest is expected in return.
Anuxlumdmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[463] anuxwinhm-aic: Kuziut profanism, at Kimsquit only, of throwing masks on the fire.
Anuxwinkmals, "The Moving House": One of the names of the supreme god's dwelling.
anuyas: 1—Owner of a puppet-patron.
2—Synonym for ahamdmamtum, q.v.
Anuyalkailais: Supernatural being who rules kukuiut of their thoughts at the Mystery dance.
Ao-ati: 1—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alpalad in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Bella chief.
aqa: Excreta.
Aqatl-a, "The Privy One": Name taken by a chief for himself in virtue of the remarks made about his habits.
Aqulais: Zuzuk name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] aqum: Herring eggs.
[824] aqwuuqs: Cottonwood.
aqwa: Type of sea-going canoe.
[825] aqwu: Harlequin duck.
Aqulaiyatemamum, "The Greatest Eater": Term used by hunters to Eagle.
Asaw-ta-i, "Concave Town": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
as-awuuqs: Canoes lashed together.
As-ac: Locality on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head, including the area beneath the surface of the water.
[601] as-ilas-ti: 1—Second oldest sibling.
2—Second part of song.
[775] asiustmum: 1—"They Who Have Become Supernatural": Title preferred by ghosts.
2—Woman living in the moon.
As-iumuqs: Inhabitants of the village of Ava".
[424] as-umumaiac: Person with good memory commissioned to remember family prerogatives.
Ava", "At the Head": Village southwest of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
ashaisit: Totem-pole, literally, "Outside Post."
[752] ashaskas: Shaman with power derived from ghosts.
ashlamm: Ceremonial bathing at dawn.
[515] Ashlaculiais: Kuziut name of a Bella Coola woman.
Ashmlik: Kuziut name of a Bella Coola man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 1924

Ináiazu: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Ináwal: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Ilmo story of the beginning of time.

Ináhkémdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Ínalili in the beginning of time.

Ináhmúx-a: Smoun's son in the beginning of time.

Ináx-i: Small portable canoe.

Ináxum: Desertion of a spouse. [586]

Ináxmai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.

Ináxmakywas: Imitation potlatch carried out by nuxnakamp.

Ináwu: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.

Ináiwuimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Smoun for his son in the beginning of time.

Ináu: To lace.

Ináiléikiks: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.

Ináwúmut: Person of placid disposition.

Ináiu: Bull-roarer.

Ináh: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, Ána, is supposedly derived from this. [556]

Ána: Potlatch.

Ánkmit: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.

Ánuéin: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821]

Ánulli di Nuxnakamp, "The Potlatch of the nuxnakamp": Second moon after winter solstice. [805]

Ánuxtáis, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nakúi in the beginning of time.

Ináwuxéjat: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756]

Ináwúkuts: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.

Ináxúnum: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556]

Ináxúnúnin: The turning over of a mountain.

Ináyu: Professional name of a female berry-picker.

Ináwúkuts: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Kwiyai in the beginning of time. [765]

Ináu: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [302]

'Ínamdimut: Cannibal kwiut name used by the first settlers at Ináiu in the beginning of time.

Ináiyum: Kwiut name of a Bella Coola male Scratcher.

Ináiai: Aversion.

Ináwuis: 1—Kwiut name of a Tsimsit man.
2—Shamanistic power.

Ináhúmut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787]

Ináyum-i: Kwiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.

Ináhúmúnum, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Tsimsháwa, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

mimimpalp: Leaf of salalberry.
mis-mulpa: 1—Omen of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence, [824]
2—Smallpox. [787]
mitha: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mmo, mmim, mmu: Child. [601]
Mmokulo: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mmt': Excreta.
mnmum, mmim, mmmmtsin-i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to children when used by an old person. [614]
mnkhmmsin: The commemoration of a chief's potlatches and other major ceremonies by means of plain posts erected near his grave. [211]
Mnskin-ram, Tide-Measurer: A supernatural being. [764]
Mtmlu: Man mentioned in a song.
Mtlelkin: Supernatural being who gives potency to mmsi rites.
mtlstin: Grandiloquent expression used by the kukuiat with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives. [776] mtlkhmin: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living. [775]
2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
mul': Pounded, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
mulmuk: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by kuciut initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mulu: Lice.
mupsin: Adolescent youth. [825]
mumuch': Blue grouse.
mumuhlkhlmlu: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion. [301] mu: Hand net for catching eulachon. [227] mulchmlulu: Yellow cedar stave decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
mumman: Wrestling.
Mutsu-a: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nala'ulmu: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Na'mu: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Namu.
nim: Grizzly bear.
Nimmulu: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time. [825] Nimmlt: Kuciut name of a Nuxalkt man.
Nimtlchai: One of the first men to settle at Snuc in the beginning of time.
Nmlklkmlt: One of the names of Mount Nuxalkt as chief.
nin-imut: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling. [827]
Nmu: Indeterminate locality in the distant east. [152]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nemn, nematin, nemanim: Member of same sex and same maternal family as speaker. [601]

Nemkilum: Supernatural being who comes with Nuktpum to bring a call to the latter's protégé. [614]

Nemulkanut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

nemil: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract. [826]
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.

nemnemskin: Toilet-hole.

nemlstmam: Recompense, virtually pay, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a mourning ceremony. [465] nemsalimtmam: Exchange marriage. [583] nempishlhum: Passage.

Ne-mit: Place near Nulkua.

Nemtemkinis: Kwiat name created by xnyayat at Kitsaquit in the beginning of time.

nemmi di mtum: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker. [601] nemmi ni atmm: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.

Nemnes'ax, "The Inkapitable One": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Nemkimmul: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemdjipum: Supernatural being who created repositories in the beginning of time.

Nemlkmk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemdptum: House occupied by the first settlers at Nutqmak in the beginning of time.

nem'l'atmut: The use of potent medicines after seeing a giant toad.

nemlmmitmm or nemlmmitmut: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dyed cedar-bark to Nimqalitse-a. [782]
2—The making of offerings to ghosts by the casting of food on a fire. [775]

Nemmu-ak: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemmisiklilmut: Male supernatural being who travels with Nuktpum, takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes dances happily.

Nemnetlu: Mother Nature.

nemyp: Fisherman with inherited right to use of a salmon-weir or of a place for catching sturgeon. [424] nemqumnmmly, "A Calling Back", or "A Seizing": Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural ermines having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation. [221] [761]

Nemqlmnik, "Where Water Entered": House of one of the first groups of settlers at Kitsaquit in the beginning of time.

Nemqmkinis: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

Nemqmkhlmyes-a: Professional name of a female dancer.

Nemqmlstmm: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Carpenters.

Nemshmat: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

Nemtmmuk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nemzwmulk: Kitsaquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Nemtlhmmm, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers": Supernatural name of sockeye salmon. [825]

6:Boas E-3 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [823] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected againt the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or olachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the bones of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

lished some remarks on the religious life of the Bella Coola in 1886,[1] which, however, contain so many misconceptions that they cannot be used to advantage. At the same time I published a brief description of the tribe, based on information received from a small group of members of the tribe who were travelling in Germany. In this description also there are a number of misconceptions. The Indians were shown a collection of masks from Vancouver Island with which they were not familiar. They gave, however, explanations of these masks, judging by the similarity to masks of their own tribe; consequently the explanations given there are not correct.[2] In 1890 I fell in with a number of Bella Coola who were fishing for salmon in Fraser River. The information obtained from them was published in the reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1891.[3] A. Jacobsen published a description of their ceremonies in 1891.[4] Fillip Jacobsen described some of their traditions and customs in 1894 and 1895.[5] I published a collection of traditions in 1894 and 1895.[6] 114

III.

All the collections which have been made heretofore do not bring out clearly the principal characteristic of the mythology of the Bella Coola. The tribes of the North Pacific coast consider the Sun as the most important deity, but at the same time they believe in a great many beings of supernatural power. For this reason their whole mythology is very unsystematic. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, have developed a peculiar mythology, in which a number of supernatural beings have been co-ordinated. A system has been evolved which justifies our terming the supernatural beings "deities." The general features of this system are as follows:— 114 773 776

The Bella Coola believe that there are five worlds, one above another. The middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are spanned two heavens, while below it there are two underworlds. In the upper heaven resides the supreme deity, a woman who interferes comparatively little with the fates of mankind. In the centre of the lower heaven, that is in the zenith, stands the house of the gods, in which reside the Sun and all the other deities. Our own earth is an island swimming in the ocean. The underworld is inhabited by the ghosts, who are at liberty to return to heaven, whence they may be sent down again to our earth. The ghosts 772 [776] [775]

[1] Original-Mittheilungen aus dem ethnologischen Museum für Völkerkunde, Berlin, 1886, pp. 123-130.
[2] Ibid., pp. 177-182.
[3] Seventh Report of the Committee on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, pp. 2-18; Report of the 61st Meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, held at Cardiff, 1891, pp. 493-499.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, pp. 383-391.
[5] Ymer, Tjoldrtt utgifven af Svenska Sällskapet for Antropologi och Geografi, 1894, pp. 177-208; 1895, pp. 1-23.
[6] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, pp. 201-206; 1895, pp. 189-195. [113]

772 who die a second death sink to the lowest world, from which there is no [775] return.

The upper heaven is called Atsâ'xxl., or Snutx·lek·'a'la ti Sônx· t'aix·, or [774] Sônxxul· Omq'ô'mkilik·a. The deity ruling there is a woman who is called Qamâ'its, or Tsi sisnâxxl. ("our woman"), or Ek·!yuk·imôola'l. ("afraid of nothing").

772 This heaven is described as a prairie without any trees. It is said that 776 in order to reach it one must go up the river from the house of the gods in the lower heaven. In another tradition it is said that in travelling from the lower heaven to the upper heaven one has to pass the rent in the sky which is called Tsl.na'lôtas ti Sônx· t'aix·. The house of the supreme deity stands in the far east, and a gale is continually blowing over the open country, driving every thing towards the entrance of her house. Near the house, however, it is calm. In front of the house stands a post in the shape of a large winged monster, and its mouth is the entrance to the house. In front of the house-door there is gravel of three colors,—blue, black, and white. Behind the house is a salt-water pond in which the goddess bathes. In this pond lives the st'siul. or xtsaltsaló'xem. This being sometimes descends to our world. Wherever it moves, the rocks burst, and slide down the sides of the mountains. It is described as a snake or a fish (see pp. 44, 66).

773 In the beginning of the world the mountains were of great height.
823 They were human beings who made the world uninhabitable. Qamâ'its made war upon the mountains. She vanquished them, and made them smaller than they used to be. During this fight she broke off the nose of the mountain Yôlyulx'mi., which is situated near Nul.!x'l. Its face may be recognized even now; and the Indians say that when its name is called, it answers. There are two mountains near the head-waters of Bella Coola River. The one is called Slex·lékoal'l.; the other one, Na'xxl. The former had a fire, called Snutsi'k·ntmsta, burning in his house. This fire warned him of the approach of enemies. When Qamâ'its made war upon the mountains, the fire warned its master. Qamâ'its was coming down the river in her canoe, which is named "T!kun." When she approached, he broke her canoe, and she returned to heaven. The canoe has been transformed into stone, and may be seen to this day at the foot of the mountain Slex·lékoal'l. It is said that Qamâ'its visits the earth every now and then. Her visits cause sickness and death. She is described as a great warrior.

772 In the centre of the lower heaven, which is called Sônx·, stands the 776 house of the gods. This house is named Nuama'ts (the House of Myths), or Nusk!oalinal'x·ats ("where man was created"), or Nusk·lalna'mats ("the house from which people come down"), or Nusqilxoal'x·ats ("the house to which people go"). In front of the house stands a post called Nulsnl'k·ts. It is painted with representations of all kinds of birds. A have to put the firewood. This opening is called K'awa'mnts, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Mamamalt'nix spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following ka'nist song refers to these deities:— 776 821 [539]

> Ai'mots ti mamal' tlemts ti ai'ts'ugi t'ais
> Aiits ti mamal' ts. ti S'ameltsem ti Sisa' t'ais.
> Sis'a yelwas ti ai'tsus ti mamal'.
> Sis ensiqs ey tsimd'a ti K'awa'mnts ti Sisa' t'ais ti mamal.
>
> ("My child perished like the sky when it broke.
> Go to S'ameltsem of the sky, my child!
> Gladden my heart, my child!
> Sit down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'ntki'ut, or Qaak'ut, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Aiep'alaxtnaix'. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Snenik'petak'intsela," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [131] [753]

In the ocean lives a being called Sclaxis, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the ka'nist ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kolk'lolk'mx). It is called Asistk'axm. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787] their kā'sint. It is just below the burial-place of each village. The dancing-house is very large and long. It has four fires. The women stay on the floor of the house, while the men sit on an elevated platform. The houses have doors, but the ghosts who first reach the lower world enter the house through the smoke-hole. A rope ladder placed in the smoke-hole facilitates their entrance. Two men stand at the foot of the ladder. They are called Anset.'axsatal'x. For a person who has once entered the dancing-house there is no return to our earth. The souls are at liberty to return to the lower heaven, which they reach by ascending the rope ladder. Those who return to the lower heaven are sent back to our earth by the deities, to be born as children in the same family to which they belonged. Those who enjoy life in the country of the ghosts, and who do not return to heaven, die a second death, and then sink to the second lower world, from which there is no return.

7:Boas E-5 (1884-ca.1890)1900 NEb Bellacoola NEb

772
775

I received another description from an old man. He stated that he reached the country in his canoe. He saw two trails,—one the trail of the living, one that of the dead. He followed the trail of the dead, and reached a village in which there was a dancing-house. The language of the ghosts differed from that of the living (see p. 41).

773
825
[824]

The Bella Coola believe that in the far west is situated the land of the salmon, which is called Mta'ltsn. The salmon leave this country early in the spring every year, and ascend the rivers. They are believed to return to their own country in the fall. The following tradition is of importance, explaining the manner in which the salmon were first brought from their country to the rivers of our world:—

Once upon a time a man named Wiswī'ns lived at Qō'mqōtō. One day he was sitting in front of his house, looking at the river. He thought, "I wish fish would ascend this river." At that time not a single salmon visited Bella Coola River. Wiswī'ns entered his house and lay down, thinking about the salmon. One night while he was asleep he dreamt that with the help of all the animals he had made war upon the salmon, that he had vanquished them, and that since that time the salmon had ascended Bella Coola River. When he awoke he invited all the animals to his house, and told them about his dream. They all came, and when they had entered he shut the door. Then he spoke: "My brothers, I have invited you to my house that you may hear what I wish to do. You shall help me to obtain what I desire." The Mink asked him in what they were to assist him; and he replied, "I want to go to Mta'ltsn. There is not a single fish in our river, and I dreamt that with your help I vanquished the fish. Let us make war upon them. I shall certainly take some slaves, and we will place them in this river." Mink retorted, "I am glad that you are speaking,

7;Boas E-5 (1884-ca. 1890)900 ‡E6 Bellacoola NE6

Some of these he gives to the shaman. . . . A third spirit is the Skaia [Sxai'cxmx], which is believed to live in rivers and to have the shape of a salmon. When a shaman who is inspired by his spirit makes an incantation in a house, singing and dancing, as all the shamans do, whoever approaches the house and hears the song turns back. They believe that whoever passes the house during the incantation will be punished with death by the spirit Skaia." 776 756

I believe this spirit is identical with LAGA it., who, as stated before, has the second name Sxai'cxmx. According to Jacobsen, some shamans are initiated by the ghosts. He says that the ghosts are believed to have bald heads and blue faces. I am under the impression, however, that the people initiated by them are not shamans, but kisiut dancers (see Chap. VI). [779] [575]

Another being who initiates shamans is described in the following tradition: — 539

Once upon a time there was a man and a woman who had four sons. The three elder ones died. Then the father and mother and the youngest brother were very unhappy, and the old people cried for grief until they died. The young man was now left all alone. He left his village, intending to go away and never to return. He pulled his blanket over his head and walked on. Sometimes he would stop to pray. He lived on the meat of mountain-goats which he shot. He built a small hut high up on the mountains, and dried the meat. He was crying and praying all the time. He prayed to the Sun to give him a gift which would restore his happiness. One day early in the morning he ascended the mountain. He addressed the rising Sun, saying, "Look at me how unhappy I am." After he had gone a short distance he came to a ravine. The bed of the ravine was filled with pretty pebbles. There he met a beautiful man who was no other than the Sun, who had descended from the sky. He had caused the water of the creek that runs through the ravine to disappear. When the young man saw the stranger from a distance, he thought, "He seems to be looking for me." He went nearer; and when they met, the Sun said, "I am the one to whom you are praying all the time, and I came to help you. Now be happy. When you open your mouth and speak to me, I know your thoughts at once. I help those who address themselves to me. Take this." With these words he handed the young man a switch carved in the shape of a man. The Sun was carrying it under his arm, the point of the switch directed downward. "Fold your arms and hold this switch to your chest, and then return to the village. When you approach any one, hide the switch under your arm. You will find a person who wears a nose-ornament of beautiful green color. Then you must try to hit the ornament with this switch, and throw it to your right side." 756 776

1: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

●776

/For information on supernatural beings see category 116, pp. 30-85./

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

824 their houses. Dishes, benches, cooking-boxes, cradles, totem-[322] poles, canoes, all were carved from this wood. The bark was [285] woven into baskets, and when dyed formed the most common [531] ceremonial decoration.

Even within the forty miles of the river valley formerly 132 occupied by the Bella Coola there are considerable variations in climate. At the mouth of the river the typical Pacific coast type is found, without great extremes of temperature and with much rain, especially in winter time. During winter, the moisture is precipitated as snow a few hundred feet above the valley, and the limit of the snow can be watched on the mountain slopes, rising or falling a few feet from day to day. Farther up the valley, the winters are colder and in many cases snow lies for weeks on the ground, and in the upper part of the Bella Coola area the winters are severe, although much more moderate than on the upper regions immediately to the east.

173 What has been the history of the inhabitants of this land?
[776] They believe that long, long ago, Alquntăm, the supreme god, caused their first ancestors to be created in his house, Nusmăt·a, in the land above, and sent them down to populate the Bella Coola valley. These first people came in groups of two or three, brothers and sisters, or occasionally man and wife, each group descending, in many cases in animal form, to a certain mountain and then making their home at its foot. They brought with them animals and fish, tools and houses, also the knowledge of ceremonial dances. In fact, they differed from the Bella Coola of the recent past only in having greater supernatural power. These first people increased with extraordinary rapidity, until each group grew into a village, bound together by a knowledge of their first ancestor. In 173 course of time the occupants of certain villages combined, as 361 some increased more rapidly than others, but on the whole each settlement maintained its character of being the descendants of one group of the first settlers of this world.

[175] This mythological belief is a fair picture of Bella Coola life as it was when the first white man visited the valley. Mac-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER II

RELIGION

The Universe—Supernatural Beings—Supernatural Elements in Human Beings—Means of Propitiation

The Universe

ONE of the subjects about which Bella Coola philosophers pondered in former times, and about which definite information has come down to the present generation, is the universe. The young people, who have absorbed a certain amount of education from the white man, are scornful of the beliefs of their fathers, but it was possible to obtain the following information from a few of the older men and women. 772 [177]

They say that the earth is circular and flat, like an island. What it rests upon is problematical, though the assumption is that it is water. The world is kept from capsizing by the supernatural being, Sninia, who lives amid the ice in the far north; he grasps a rope to which the earth is fastened, and he keeps it steady by maintaining a tension on the rope to hold the world against his feet. Long, long ago Sninia was seen by human beings, but in later years no one has penetrated to his distant home and the Bella Coola have little regard for him. It was in the distant past, also, that human beings discovered the earth to be round, after certain semi-supernatural men had made a circuit of it. The four corners of space have not the same importance to the Bella Coola as they have, for example, to the Indians of the Plains. It is only through questioning that the investigator learns that the East is regarded as the top of the world, the South is the sun at its zenith, the West is the bottom, and the North is nothing, merely the opposite to the south. These beliefs play little part in the lives of the people. [776] [823]

Above our earth stretches an inverted dome, its edges resting on those of the world. This dome, the sky, is called

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 sonx̣ʷ. If the Bella Coola were strictly logical, one should expect them to conceive the upper surface of sonx̣ʷ as being convex. Instead, it is considered a flat surface, very similar to the earth, and no explanation is given of what fills in the spaces between the dome, concave as viewed from this world, and the upper plane which could rest only on the peak of the dome. But logical accuracy is not a Bella Coola character-
[811] istic. This flat land is called dāsonx̣ʷdā or wasonx̣ʷ wawik-ḥoqosil. It is illumined by a second sun, shining on it as the sun does on the earth. Far in the east of this upper region are extensive tide-flats. This land above is the home of many supernatural beings, who will be described in due course. The [821] relative position of the sun to this upper world is ill-defined. According to some accounts, it travels by clearly marked trails on the surface, and a transparent dome is postulated to explain how its light reaches this earth. Others state that it moves like a bird or flying canoe through the space between the world and the dome-sky above. On many of these points there is a
[538] striking difference of opinion, which the Bella Coola explain [424] by saying that their information is derived from ancient stories, which are personal possessions, and that no one knows the beliefs of his fellows. A co-ordinated theology, as Boas points out, has not evolved among the Bella Coola.

772 The sky, as it may be called if the reader will bear in mind
773 that it is the underside of a flat land, was not always in its present condition. The Bella Coola say that long ago the [776] supreme god instructed his Carpenters (I, p. 39) to make a sky. They started from the eastern extremity of the earth, but after a considerable part of the dome had been erected, it fell with a thunderous crash, because no supporting posts had been set up. The part that escaped this calamity is called Salwalosam. Undiscouraged, the Carpenters continued their work with the assistance of posts and so built the sky as it is seen today. Then the supports were taken away.

772 As already stated, a sun shines on the land above. As that 821 seen by mortals is attached to the land above, so is this upper k:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 beneath the Bella Coola valley, and the land of the living 775 forms a dome over it corresponding to that of the sky over this world. But everything is reversed. A river flows in the land of ghosts, but it rises in the west instead of the east; when it is warm on this earth it is cold in the land below; when it is sunrise here, it is sunset there. Shamans are be-[756] lieved to have penetrated frequently to this land, and on information from them the Bella Coola base their beliefs.

772 There is another land beneath the ocean. In this live the fish and sea mammals in human form, as well as other beings to be described in the next section of this chapter. Like all [821] other worlds it has a sun above it,[1] and conditions are said to be similar to those existing on this earth. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether this undersea world is at the same level as the land of ghosts, and whether or not it extends beneath the rivers.

821 Although Bella Coola concepts regarding the sun and other heavenly bodies will require further consideration, it will be convenient at this point to describe them in outline. The sun is regarded as a heat-radiating ball of such intensity that a human being cannot approach it. Its path, as it crosses the land above, varies from day to day until it reaches its limits at the solstices. As it travels, it is accompanied by the droning [776] of two Aiislāxa, supernatural feminine beings who remain continually, one in the east and one in the west. According to most informants, the ends of the sun's course, though fixed and invariable from year to year, are not marked by any vis-[776] ible means. Others state that at each limit there is the mouth of a smmq, a mythological animal of enormous size.

The moon is thought likewise to travel[2] each day but is said to be very cold. Few stories are current concerning it, although the Bella Coola say that long ago a man tried to reach it, only to be driven back by the intense cold. A shaman
[756] who died not many years ago claimed to have received power

[776] [1]One informant stated that our sun served that purpose.
[2]The Aiislāxa drone as it travels, as they do for the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

instructed people about the significance of death omens; it was Raven who showed them the use of slings; and it was Raven who constructed secluded caves and ledges to serve as meeting-places for chiefs. 773 [622] [823]

In brief, the Bella Coola regard Raven as an explorer, teacher, and inventor, whose power, obtained from Alquntăm, enabled him to construct and outwit his maker, but not to create. Much of his work was for the good of mankind, but much was evil and malicious, an aspect which belongs to mythology. Essentially human, Raven could have been included among anthropomorphic, as well as among zoomorphic beings. He differs from most of the supernatural ones in belonging entirely to the past, as his descendants have none of the first Raven's power. It is doubtful whether he still exists, but in any case he has long since ceased to take any interest in the affairs of the Bella Coola, who consider him only as a figure of mythology and ancient history. 773 776 [825]

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS OF THE VEGETABLE AND MINERAL KINGDOMS

Bella Coola beliefs concerning anthropomorphic and zoomorphic beings are relatively clear and exact; their appearance is known, their powers and functions recognized. The supernatural attributes of trees and plants are less definite. Alquntăm created the former in the beginning of time, and they were consequently able to talk and act like human beings at that distant period. Owing to the degeneration of man, mortals are no longer able to converse with trees, although the latter can still understand our remarks. In a vague way, the Bella Coola continue to think of trees as having human personalities, but so little is known of their powers, and they enter so seldom into contact or conflict with mortals, that they are practically ignored. 776 824

In an equally vague manner, Nature is regarded as a Mother, giving birth to the trees and plants. One of the kusiut dances portrays this birth of the flowers every spring (II, p. 96). [535] [575]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 824 (II, p. 196). In this way the belief is kept before the eyes of the Bella Coola, but it is not a matter of prime importance in their lives. Rather contradictory is the concept that though each plant lack individual life, there is a supernatural mother of each species, corresponding in general terms to the Mother of Snakes described in the last section. As one informant expressed it:

"If there is no mother, how can a plant grow?"

These mothers are assumed to live beneath the ground. Occasionally, one of them has been discovered. Not many years ago, a number of women were collecting bracken roots when one which had been gathered began to turn into a snake. The women were alarmed and puzzled at this strange phenomenon. As they stood watching, the ground in front of them fell away as if there had been an earthquake, and they realized that the snake-root had been the mother of the plant. Without further fear they cooked and ate it.

776 823 Stones, too, and mountains were made by Alqantlm; consequently they have supernatural abilities and can understand the words and actions of mortals. When a wise man passes close beneath a precipitous mountain he always says to it:

"Please make yourself firm."

Most mountains, when requested politely, refrain from sliding and killing those passing beneath.

539 776 823 In former days mountains in many cases rose to meet hunters, and sometimes turned completely over. The Bella Coola are not sure whether this was caused by the mountain itself, or by a snung within. Wise hunters carry ropes with them when they penetrate into deep valleys, and when they feel the first tipping of a mountain they leap for a convenient tree, grasp it with their legs, heads downwards, and tie themselves in that position. Slowly the mountain rises and turns over, but, if the ropes do not break, the hunters suffer no ill effects. After a varying interval the mountain returns to its [789] normal position. This reversal can be hastened if a man bites

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

his left cheek until the blood flows, takes also a mouthful of his own urine, and spits out the mixture.

The following instance of this belief was recorded.

A Bella Coola chief and a number of followers were once at Kwatna where they had been gambling for stakes of mountain goat grease. Two of the men had lost their supply, so they went into the mountains between Kwatna and Restoration Bay to replenish it. They saw two goats, killed them, and at once two more appeared in the same place; these they also slew. When a fifth and sixth goat appeared and were likewise dispatched, one of the hunters tried to restrain his comrade, saying that such phenomenal success must be due to supernatural power which they should not abuse. They stopped firing, cut the grease from their quarry, and started on the return journey. Presently the mountain began to till upwards before their feet. They had no ropes, and almost in despair concealed themselves in a small rock shelter. Their dogs too felt the movement and barked in terror. Fortunately, the mountain did not rise more than a few feet and soon subsided, so that the men escaped.

The attitude of the Bella Coola to supernatural powers of all kinds may be termed a doctrine of Opportunism. Supernatural beings abound and constantly play a part in the affairs of mortals. An alert and bold man can take advantage of these opportunities and obtain assistance, but he who hesitates is indeed lost. Certain types of assistance are most commonly granted to orphans and other unfortunates; accounts of these belong to the realm of mythology and will be described in a later chapter. On the whole the supernatural ones do not show discrimination in conferring boons, and the man who is quick to take advantage of them is the one to whom success comes.

Supernatural Elements in Human Beings

The Bella Coola believe that in the human body itself there are certain supernatural elements. Neither sticks nor stones can move, because they lack these attributes possessed by men and animals. Considering the firm belief of the Bella Coola in the omnipresence of the supernatural, it is not surprising that they should ascribe the phenomena of health and sickness,

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 Shamans achieve much of their success through their ability
777 to put their wash-basins, both tangible (I, p. 560) and imma-
823 terial, in tune with Alquntăm's in the land above. One method
756 of treating a patient is by washing, with the idea that the water [755] and vessel used have potency through association with those in the upper world. It is believed that in the distant past, shamans were even able to carry their patients to the land above and wash them in Alquntăm's own basin. Such feats [551] are perpetuated in certain shamans' names, such as Alpălyeleslaix.

773 It may be said in conclusion that although the Bella Coola
777 have indefinite ideas concerning the exact form and functions of this last element, there is a firm belief that an individual's fortune in life depends upon the activity of spirit, tally post, and wash-basin. With regard to supernatural elements as a whole, it is clear that in spite of somewhat conflicting beliefs concerning the precise functions of each, they play an important part in the life of every Bella Coola.

Means of Propitiation

782 Some of the methods employed by the Bella Coola to gain the favour of the supernatural have already been mentioned, but the subject is sufficiently important to warrant a separate section. In view of the omnipresence of supernatural beings and powers, and their influence on the lives of mortals, it is not surprising that the propitiation of them is a vital factor in human life. The chief means are prayer, sacrifice, and the observance of ceremonial chastity.

Prayer

[776] Prayers are regularly addressed to Alquntăm who, in this connection, is known as Mnakais or Tăll, both meaning, "Father." A wise man or woman desiring success in hunting, in love affairs, in the acquisition of wealth, or in any activity whatsoever, is accustomed to ask Mnakais to grant his desire. No ritual is required. The petitioner merely seeks a lonely

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each mem-224 ber of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also 726 to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere [785] with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Minakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

782 Although Alquntäm, under the name of Minakais, is the 776 one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than men to intercede with Minakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, 782 people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the 776 rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven
825 as Nowakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qmax. In cold 821 winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Nowakila."

782 Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on [291] many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, new."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

782 The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any 424 time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole 821 community. In addition, information was obtained about two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of a single family. Either is considered an almost certain means of stopping rain, but no one, even though aware of the method, can practise it with success unless he is a member of the family to which the method belongs. 782 424 821

One of these prayers, the property of a Kimsquit family, is addressed to Xemxemälotla. If the petitioner wishes to stop heavy rain, he goes to a quiet place in the woods and calls in a loud voice:

Aiya Xemxemälotlaš,[a]	nuqwikdit	llok	di sonqʷnudx
Hail, Xemxemälotla,	open	the loftiest	of your heaven
skäyusamdu	dji sileuwnignu		tcim nänudjix.
so that may look down	the cherished one		your child.

That is, "Expose the upper heaven so that your cherished child may look down."

It will be remembered that Xemxemälotla is the being who takes care of Tläqmä·ks in the upper skyland. It is said that this prayer was learnt by the ancestors of an informant in the beginning of time and that a repetition of the exact words is enough to drive away the rain clouds between earth and the upper heaven. For many generations care was taken to teach some intelligent member of the family the correct formula, and the person so entrusted was expected to use his knowledge for the benefit of any of his relatives desiring fine weather. [776]

Another prayer prerogative of similar type was recorded from an old man who related what he had seen his grandfather do many years before. The two were once hunting when heavy rain threatened their success and drove them to the shelter of a projecting ledge. The grandfather, not having any cedar-bark with him, cut and dried some evergreen boughs which he gave to his grandson, telling him to light them and wave them over his, the grandfather's, head. When this had been done, the old man rushed out into the rain and in a loud voice asked some supernatural being, whose name was forgotten, to throw his eyes upon the rain clouds in order to dispel them. That night the petitioner neither drank water nor urinated, and the [824] [785]

[a] The vocative form.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the point between Labouchere Channel and Bentinck Arm, there is danger from treacherous currents, so, when a shaman passes either of these places, he lays some food on the water and puffs eagle down into the air as he asks for help. If no shaman is in the canoe, this is done by the captain. 782 [133] [502] [756]

The being to whom offerings are most commonly made is Ṫlitcāplilān·a, the supernatural woman who cures the sick and gives power to shamans. Whenever a hunter kills an edible animal in the forest, he cuts off four pieces of flesh and throws them into his fire to gain her goodwill. Long, long ago, Ṫlitcāplilān·a appeared to a hunter, seized some of his quarry, and told him of her wishes with regard to presents; these have since been obeyed by wise people. Similarly, the relatives of a man absent in the mountains or at sea throw scraps of food on the fire and ask the protection of Ṫlitcāplilān·a for the one in danger. In this case, it is clear that objects thrown into flames are received and appreciated by Ṫlitcāplilān·a. [776] [224] [773]

Mīnakais, although usually propitiated by prayer, is also given presents. Frequently, when a man is praying, he accompanies his words by blowing up into the air small particles of eagle down. Prayers in connection with the departure of war or hunting expeditions have already been mentioned, but before starting on any journey by canoe, the captain is careful to pray and to throw upon the water four pieces of red, and four of yellow cedar-bark. The blowing upwards of eagle down is a common accompaniment to all kinds of prayers, but, if none is available, cedar-bark can be used equally satisfactorily. If possible, this is cast on the surface of water, otherwise into a fire, as a request is being made. The Bella Coola do not believe that such presents are actually used and considered valuable by Ālquntām, but they emphasize and accompany the vocal prayer, and demonstrate the petitioner's sincerity. [776] [484] [824] [825]

Ghosts, on the other hand, depend almost entirely on presents given them by mortals, since food is not abundant in the land below. The relatives of a dead person always throw 775 782

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

322
532
776

PLATE 10

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mask of Qomoqua showing his huge hat. Notice the adze marks on the planks in the background.

[4 186 (B)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

with a number of the large cone-shaped whistles used for sisaok ceremonial. Towards dawn, sounds come from these, and sometimes a dull thump is heard on the roof, as if a heavy being had landed there. At once there is great excitement within the house. The voices of supernatural people prove them to be at hand. No one is allowed to leave except a sisaok siki[9] who is skilled in dealing with Mulakila,[10] also called Sixsixqwtnam, the supernatural being closely connected with the sisaok ritual. Those within can hear the voice of the siki raised as if he were speaking to someone at a distance.

"Chief, you have come too early," he says. "The house is not yet ready. Please return later."

He is answered by loud whistling, which grows fainter, as if the being who made it were moving away. In reality the young men are merely blowing less forcibly into the whistles.

[9]The accounts of all informants agree that much of the sisaok ritual was newly imported into Bella Coola from Bella Bella. According to some statements, Putlas, a Bella Coola chief who died between 1870 and 1880, married a Bella Bella wife, also one from Rivers Inlet, and it was these two women who brought with them as dower certain sisaok prerogatives. It is said that previous to that time the Bella Coola did not understand the use of the large cone-shaped whistles, nor were they able to summon the supernatural beings to the youths secluded in the back-room, nor to dispel the beings at the conclusion of the rites. On the other hand, some Bella Coola claim that their first ancestors brought the whistles with them from the land above. It is probable that the calling in of the supernatural beings is a recent addition to the potlatch, which accounts for the contradictory accounts, but whether or not the whistles are a new feature is more doubtful. It appears certain that the prerogative of siki has recently been obtained from the Bella Bella. Siki means "the one who cures," and the name is given to the man whose prerogative it is to tend the kusiut initiates in whom supernatural powers are located. In Bella Bella there is a similar functionary for sisaok matters, known as a hai-alakila. Through intermarriage several Bella Coola have recently obtained this prerogative; in each case it is frankly stated that it has been derived from the Bella Bella. The Bella Coola apply to these, so favoured, the term siki, as they do for the kusiut "curer," though the Bella Bella name, hai-alakila, is used with equal frequency. The present siki have endeavoured to claim for themselves certain ceremonial functions formerly carried out by any sisaok. In this account of a potlatch it is assumed that a siki is functioning on all occasions, but in many cases any senior sisaok is considered sufficiently close to the supernatural beings to act satisfactorily. Until about 1870 it is clear that any sisaok was regarded as capable of doing so.

[10]Knowledge of this being is said to have been acquired by the marriage of a certain Smaoan of Kimsquit to a Bella Bella woman in the beginning of time.

533 This is presently heard. Y may be in his own house, but at
* 556 once any number of susaok rush in and conduct him, concealed in their midst, to the back-room of X's dwelling. All the susaok 575 of the village begin to gather there; those who are not members of the society are also free to enter the main part of the house, though they cannot take any part in the proceedings.
[781] They lurk near the door, watching with interest mixed with fear, and ready to flee if the danger from supernatural beings seems too acute.

After some delay, a whistle is heard at intervals, gradually becoming louder as if the supernatural being, of which it is the voice, were coming nearer. Presently it sounds immediately outside the door, and a siki rushes forth. He returns in a moment, followed, amid the breathless excitement of the uninitiated, by a figure masked as a bird or animal. The design [532] represents Y's crest, or some creature with which one of his ancestors came in contact, and which is therefore regarded as having the same sociological importance. A member of the society has carved the mask, another wears it, but this the uninitiated do not know.

[776] "It is a tutwinam,"[12] they gasp.

The figure crosses the house and bends down beside the singers to whom it appears to be whispering. Presently they begin, softly, to tap out a song in rapid time as if the supernatural visitor had just taught it to them. It is divided into two or three parts and the theme is taken from Y's ancestral myth.[13] After two or three rehearsals, the singers beat out the time more loudly and accompany it with their voices, while [535] the masked figure dances. A number of older susaok accompany the performer as he whirls around the house; it is pretended that this is necessary to shield the spectators, though the real function is to guide the dancer whose sight is handi-

[12]Meaning, "What is displayed," or, "A materialization."

[13]If the neophyte is a son or other near relative of the chief who is giving the potlatch, the theme may consist of boasting references to the goods about to be distributed. This is customary for X himself if he performs as a susaok at the actual ceremony.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 556 *
575
[535]

capped by the mask. If the tutwinam represents Wasp[14] or Grizzly Bear, he does not make a circuit and a fluent sisaok explains that to do so would be unsafe owing to the ferocity of these animals. When the song is ended, the figure passes into the back-room. After a short interval it reappears, recrosses the house, and leaves by the front door, to the accompaniment of increased whistling.

A few myths embody two tutwinam. In this case, a second figure presently enters and the same ritual is repeated for a second song. This usually differs, musically, from the first, being in three parts and with even more rapid time. More often, the second song is merely beaten out by the singers without the appearance of a tutwinam to supply an obvious source.

556 *
575

This is the normal, but not the only practice with regard to a tutwinam. In some cases the figure does not appear until after the singing of the first song, and the uninitiated are told that it has been attracted by the music. In this case it passes into the back-room, later to reappear and leave by the front door. An announcement is made that it has brought a strange power, that Y has become peculiar, and that his name is now, for example, Qwaqwasila. A herald bears this news through the village. A second song is then sung in due course.

[776]

The tutwinam is difficult to classify among Bella Coola supernatural beings. It appears in the form of an ancestral crest, but the sisaok do not seem to have taught the uninitiated to regard it as Y's actual forefather. It remains as a supernatural embodiment of his crest, a materialization of an element of family history, and a motive for the use by Y of a mask representing the apparition. The uninitiated do not seek further; they have seen a wonderful sight and are content.

[177
776
773
825]

Several of the older sisaok stated that the tutwinam concept was not indigenous to Bella Coola; it had been recently [14] None of the first people came to earth as Wasps, but several received so much help from these insects that they are regarded as crests by the descendants of those whom they assisted.

adopted, probably as a prerogative obtained through marriage, from the Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people. The diversity in ritual supports this view. There was not sufficient time for the procedure to become stabilized between the introduction of the concept and the dislocation of Bella Coola social life through the influence of the white man. It is also possible that the tutwinam was added to sisaok rites from the older a'alk society (I, p. 273).

Whatever may have been the history of the tutwinam, it provides Y with a mask, or with two, if two figures have appeared. He guards them jealously, though secretly, throughout his life and uses them only on rare ceremonial occasions. It is one of these masks which will be brought out if one of his family gives a dramatic representation of his return after death. A mask of this type is sometimes willed, but the legatee alters the design before using it.

A short pause follows the singing of the second, or third, song, during which some chief or chiefs may make a laudatory speech concerning Y's family history. Then the singers again sing the first song, and sisaok members of the audience join in. Similarly, the second song is practised. These two are sung, time after time, until the sisaok have thoroughly mastered them. When the singers consider that this has been accomplished, they tell X, who communicates with the sisaok man outside who has the whistle, and again its eerie notes are heard. Some of the uninitiated, believing that the supernatural being who gives potency to the ritual is at hand, hurriedly leave in fear. At the same time some of the sisaok conduct to the back-room the second initiate whose songs are to be sung that night. The procedure in his case is identical with that described for Y. Usually it is considered sufficient to seclude two on one night, though three may be attempted. When the songs of the last have been sung, food is distributed and the people disperse.

A few nights later the same ritual is repeated for two more initiates, who join their predecessors in the back-room. Here they spend their time in idleness, the only essential being the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

426 hence repayment or non-repayment does not affect the standing of the debtor in the community. The giver expects no *556 return, but should he come to financial straits he would have [558] no hesitation in asking aid from the Bella Bella chief. He expects, moreover, that the latter will contribute to the expenses of his funeral. This would be optional, as repayment of a non-ceremonial present concerns the donor and recipient alone, without effect on the status of either in the community.
In this instance, if the old man had died soon after his son, his debts would not have been paid, since there were surviving no immediate relatives. Sons or other near kinsmen always settle the debts of dead parents out of family pride, but it is con-[558] sidered most improper for the creditors to think about repayment. By giving they have shown their power, the question of return is the concern of the family of the deceased recipient.

Very rarely does the donor of a potlatch fail to return his investment presents except through oversight. In spite of every precaution, errors occur, and these are said to be caused either by a supernatural being, itself invisible, rising between [776] the donor and his guest, hiding the latter, or by Snuqwalnu- kaista stealing away his thoughts. Unless the donor wishes [578] to insult a guest, he will give him presents later on, and that ends the matter. But if he does not do so, the slighted man 426 may return the insult, and thus feuds are often generated that *556 may lead to war between tribes. About 1860 it is said 648 that a conflict between the people of Bella Bella and Rivers Inlet was caused in that way. In the autumn of 1921, a Bella Coola chief insisted on dancing at a Bella Bella potlatch, although it was commonly known he did not have the necessary goods for distribution to validate his dance. The hosts waxed sarcastic, taunts were answered by taunts, and only the presence of some white men prevented bloodshed. Relations between the two tribes are still strained as a result of this [828] incident. The Bella Coola chief was subject to spells of insanity, and danced during one of these. According to the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 773 flesh cut from the body is fastened to the point of the spear, making it so potent that when next the chief lunges at a salmon he transfixes it and brings it ashore. He warms the fish at a fire and then pounds it on a stone until it becomes a copper.

No Bella Coola has visited this distant river for many generations and the belief concerning the manufacture of taitaimx appears to have been handed down from dim antiquity. Coppers of this kind are said to have been considered much more valuable than the usual łälia, but were always uncommon. In addition to their ordinary uses, they had a certain curative value. If the owner of one was ill, he used to clean it [755] with a rough stone and water; then he would drink four cupfuls of the liquid which contained minute fragments of metal. In almost every case a speedy recovery followed. In all other respects łälia or taitaimx could be used indiscriminately.

Łälia are likewise said to have a supernatural origin. When found in the forest, they are due to the supernatural salmon-[776] like being, sisiutl, having changed itself into one. None has been found in recent years because the sisiutl have moved away owing to their dislike of the smell of human footsteps and the taint of smoke.

These stories serve to emphasize the complete ignorance of [325] the Bella Coola concerning the methods of manufacturing coppers. It is possible that long ago they were able to make their own by pounding the native metal, but if so it is surprising that some traditions to this effect were not preserved. On the other hand, there is little reason to doubt their use of [177] coppers, obtained from the northern tribes, antedating the coming of the whites. All informants agreed on this point, and the frequent references to coppers in mythology likewise point to considerable age. In many of the ancestral myths there are accounts of the obtaining of coppers by some of the [551] first people, and many ancestral names, both of men and women, are derived from them.

[237] The Bella Coola attribute the value of coppers to the fact

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556
575
[178]
556
575
535

society and decline of the a'alk, concealment has become limited to initiates of the former organization.

No more a'alk dances take place during the potlatch preliminaries, but with the coming of the first group of foreign guests, the host displays as many types of dance as he is entitled to, including a'alk if he has the necessary prerogative. On this occasion other a'alk, especially relatives of the donor, give their dances, the only time that such are used at potlatches except by novices receiving names. This is repeated on the arrival of every party of guests.

Meanwhile the novice, or novices, has been practising the proper steps for his appearance, which always occurs immediately before the entry of the masked figure representing the donor's dead relative. As already mentioned, there are four kinds of a'alk dances, known as nusqwal,[8] łłaiyäkam, qi'aqa, and am'lel·a. A similar song is used for a dancer of any one of these four; the text describes some small incident of the ancestral myth in which the name occurs, such as the bringing down of the prerogative by the first incumbent in the beginning of time. At the proper moment, the singers beat this out and the audience joins them in singing it. Then the singers begin to strike rapidly on the floor with double beats, assisted by the guests who clap their hands in rapid couplets. Out comes the dancer, resplendent in his head-dress decorated with weasel skins, and women with the required prerogative begin to drone. If his prerogative is as a łłaiyäkam or qi'aqa, he proceeds to a place beside the fire and begins to run around it, sunwise, in short mincing steps, revolving at the same time on himself. He clasps his hands behind his back and bends down, then stands upright with palms extended upwards, never ceasing to move his feet in rapid steps. This type of dance is far more violent than a susaok one, and the amount of energy expended by a dancer in his rapid circuits of the fire is tremendous. Never, even for a moment, are his feet quiet, while his body twists and bends in an amazing fashion. After two

[533]
[533]

[8]Among the supernatural beings, the nusqwal is a yearling mountain goat. [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

551 dropped. Kwai'hila'yokwɔ is held by a Fort Rupert chief. Several kusiut names, with dances, were obtained from Tcäkwälotl where the travellers saw them being performed; among them were Änudakänuts and Duduspux, which are now used by two Bella Coola women. Ailsamka is now a Cannibal (II, p. 71) name. At Täl·io Äl·imdsaix gave a kusiut dance, and with his own power made there a repository as if he had brought it with him from Tcäkwalotl. This was only possible because of his supernatural power as one of the first people, strengthened by his becoming a shaman through seeing Tcäkwalotl.

SECOND ORIGIN MYTH OF Täl·io[34]

*539 In the beginning, there came down to the Skeena River,[35] Nusqäps, Nusxemda, Wiaqaii, and their younger sister Nulixwemankta; they brought from Älquntäm some of the large cone-shaped whistles used for sisaok ceremonials.[36] The three travelled all over the coast seeking a place in which to settle, and always the whistles kept calling out of their own accord, giving advice. Finally they decided to locate at Täl·io, the head of South Bentinck Arm.

When they had lived there for some time, the neighbours objected to the din of the whistles, which drove away olachen and herring, so Nusxemda built a high, narrow mound of refuse, on the tip of which he constructed his house. The building was peculiar; its door opened horizontally and used to close with a crash when anyone entered. On either side of the hill there lived a sminq, whose keen ears could hear the wailing of an infant at any distance. In those ancient days, these beasts were like dogs and did not annoy mortals; they were servants to Nusxemda. [776] One day he learnt that a raiding-party was approaching, but instead of being afraid he instructed the sminq to use their power when it drew near. When the hostile canoes came in sight the two creatures reversed their eyeballs, causing a blinding flash which stunned the occupants of the canoes. After a little they recovered consciousness and again came on, but again the sminq reversed their eyeballs with a like result. When this had happened several times the raiders withdrew discouraged.

---

[34]Related by Mrs. Willie Mack.

[35]It is not uncommon for the Skeena to figure as the place where some of the first people came to earth; but few descended nearer to Bella Coola than that region.

[36]This prerogative is less common among the Bella Coola than the Bella Bella.

[424]
[171]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

leaving Nusmät·a, Hamcıt had asked Älquntäm what they should do for a place to live and the deity had promised to provide them with one. The first night the brothers slept in the open, but the next morning they found a house completed for them on the shore of the fiord; it was of the semi-subterranean type with a central pit for the fire, surrounded by stagings. Älquntäm had made it peculiar in several respects. When the tide rose, water was forced up through passages in the rock so that it burst within the dwelling in miniature waterspouts. The upright posts were carved in representations of Thunder, and the paintings on the back-wall were of Snınıq. Echo was there, invisible as usual, but repeating everyone's speech, while around the floor ran countless mice. The name of the house was Nunuḑsmäls, "Where Water Enters." 539* [776]

After a time, when the people had increased on the earth, Hamcıt invited the chiefs, there were none other then, for a potlatch. The guests saw the wonders of the house and marvelled.

Three times Hamcıt did this, but when he, or a descendant, attempted to do so for the fourth time, the supernatural power which had been present at the first potlatch had vanished; so carpenters were called upon to reproduce the original features. The painting of Snınıq and the carving of Thunder presented no difficulties, though the latter was transferred from the house to the totem-pole without. Masks were made to represent the spouting water and manufactured mice ran on the floor by means of hidden strings. Whenever one of Hamcıt's descendants gives a potlatch the carpenters are called upon to make realistic replicas, a form of dramatization responsible for features of potlatches not only among the Bella Coola but also, it is said, of the Bella Bella, Kitlobe, and the Tsimshian peoples. [532] [171]

ORIGIN MYTH OF AN UNIDENTIFIED TOWN[57]

In the beginning of time the supreme god sent down two brothers, Wıdkıs and Kwatlnuslıa, to Mount Wa·put, some thirty miles up the Bella Coola River not far from Stuıx. They looked around, not knowing which way to go or what to do. Glancing down they saw smoke arising; it was from Älkwi's fire, but this they did not know, because there were few people in the land, and no one knew anything about his neighbours. Kwatlnuslıa travelled a short distance upstream until he heard the sound of beating, which puzzled him, so he advanced slowly until he saw a house, to the roof of which he cautiously climbed and looked down inside. Many people had assembled there; they were land-otters giving a dance, [57]Related by Judas, an old man suffering from senile decay. It is unquestionably a fragment of a longer myth.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VII

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

It was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bella Coola women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white man seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bella Coola are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bella Coola, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the condition to the four Mesmesälänux acting on the behest of Ałquntäm. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. Most individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Ałquntäm has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the feet of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled assistants can usually rotate a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and 844 suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed that Sxaiaxwax, though invisible, is present on every occasion; [776] the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, [177] but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary.
The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay, [845] hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to [826] cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1922, the sum of [465] $2.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother 853 would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and 854 carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house it sprawls contentedly on the floor, unhampered by clothing.
When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. [846] Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of [165] love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive the perils of infancy.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

763 to earth close by. In the winter of 1921-2 three Bella Coola
[824] were almost crushed in this manner; within a year the deaths took place of the wife of one, the mother of the second, and the daughter of the third. This was considered definite confirmation of their belief.

763 When a chief dies, a supernatural woman, Skwanät·än·ā, "The Weeper," comes to earth to lament the loss. Crying
● 776 piteously, she walks to and fro in the woods near the village where the death has taken place, but can be heard or seen only by a person in whose family there will soon be a fatality. This [789] can be counteracted by going boldly to her and collecting some of the clotted mucus that drips from her nose as she weeps. If this is wrapped in the finder's clothing and stored for a year, it brings him good fortune and probably deflects the impending death, but to see "The Weeper" without knowledge of the proper procedure is to court disaster. A prominent Bella Coola woman died in June, 1922, and her son believed that he heard the lamentation of the supernatural visitor about six the next morning in the woods behind the missionary's house. He rushed forth to find her, but was unsuccessful. Within a few days, one of his nieces died, as was to be expected.

763 A comparatively common bird in Bella Coola is the 825 kwakwas, which is about the size of a robin and dark, greenish brown.[1] Its whistle is frequently heard and no significance is attached to it, but it is an omen of death if a kwakwas comes close to a house and chirps out, "lsi·t." On the night of February 20, 1924, one called beneath the window of a man who was about to start on a journey in his motor-boat. Next morning, although the bird lay dead beside his house, he insisted on starting. He camped at Restoration Bay where he was awakened by a voice calling his name, but could see no one. This was probably an owl, a bird which often foretells disaster by calling the name of the person to whom it will occur. Even this did not deter him and within twenty-four hours his

[1]The bird could not be identified, although it belongs to fact, not mythology.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CAUSES OF DEATH

761 The Bella Coola know that sickness, accident, wilful murder, old age, and a host of other factors may at any time terminate a man's life, but they consider that any one of these direct causes is possible only in conjunction with an indirect reason of a religious or supernatural nature; in the last analysis they attribute death to supernatural, not to natural causes. [773] As described in a previous chapter, an ancient myth attributes the origin of death to the stupidity of Raven, but this belief, even if its historical accuracy is accepted, belongs to the realm of philosophy and ancient history rather than to everyday life. 761 When a canoe is capsized on the ocean and its occupants are drowned,—the Bella Coola do not consider a drowning a mere 776 accident—it is because Q̓omoqwa was hungry and desired human flesh. This indirect reason is quite as important as the direct one. So, too, the death of a man beneath a falling tree or a land-slide is no accident; Sä·lma caused the tree to crash to earth or the slide to roll downwards. Most individuals believe that this supernatural being is responsible when an animal kills a hunter. He delights in death and always sits on [756] a coffin before it is taken to the grave, although none but shamans can see him. Any supernatural being can cause death, but it must not be imagined that the Bella Coola go through life in a state of constant fear; death may vanquish them in the forests, but the probabilities are against it. Nor does 753 sickness appear to them as a natural phenomenon. Its cause is either the intrusion of some foreign object into the body, or the weakness of one of the patient's supernatural elements. The only remedy in the latter case is an appeal to the super- [755] natural, sometimes through the medium of a shaman, whereas a foreign object in the body can often be extracted by a skilled [754] practitioner. A disease of this type is often brought on by the machinations of a sorcerer, and if death results it is attributed 761 to the potency of his charms, not to a natural ailment. Even [775] ghosts are able to cause death. In war, one man may be able [726]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

766 575 but even if unaware of the fact, they realize that some supernatural, invisible visitor has arrived. [776]

Heralds go from house to house, and sometimes to adjacent villages as well,[1] inviting the people to pay a farewell visit to the dead man who will soon leave them; in this invitation the susook name of the deceased is used. The guests assemble at once, irrespective of their rank or membership in the susook society. To mark their grief, female relatives pull out tufts of their hair, and both men and women of the immediate family cut their hair short. The body, either in its coffin or covered with blankets, is placed between the central fire and the back-room, immediately behind the place where the singers take their stations. When all are present, a son or other near relative who is also a fluent speaker, stands up and expounds how the Chief, meaning Mulakila, has come to visit the dead man, and how all should try to understand the song he has brought.[2] A hidden susook has been blowing a whistle intermittently, and the singers pretend to be able to understand words of a song in its notes. In reality they have prepared in advance the new one which they now beat out, accompanied by their voices. The theme either describes the coming of the supernatural visitor, or recounts the number of potlatches given by the deceased, and the manner in which these will make smooth the path whither he is going in the same way that distributed goods validate a chief's seat in this world. This song is practised and improved upon amid the booming of the whistle as if the singers were constantly gaining new ideas and embellishments from the words of the supernatural visitor. Sometimes a few incidents are added from the susook myth. After several repetitions, a relative of the dead man asks the singers to beat out the latter's susook songs, as many of them as are remembered from the time he was first initiated into the so-

[203] [628] [302] [537] 533 575 766

[1]The Bella Bella are said to invite foreign guests to this ceremony.

[2]Sometimes the people are present when the coming of Mulakila, heralded by whistling and a thump on the roof, takes place. There are variations in this, as in all other susook rites. [184]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

this rite is neglected no more salmon will come to the river. No precautions are necessary after the food has been digested. 764 [825]

Many men prepare their coffins before death. If this has not been done, a large, wooden box is provided by a kinsman of the deceased. The body is dressed in good clothing and bound into a squatting position, head between knees, hands clasped around shins, and the haunches just above the level of the soles of the feet. In this posture it is thrust into the coffin. Particularly if the corpse has been brought from some distance and rigor mortis has set in, it may be necessary to break the back-bone and even to crush the skull before the box can be closed. A stone is placed on the back of the neck, within the coffin, to prevent the ghost from returning to haunt the survivors. A little choice food is placed beside the body of a dearly loved child for nourishment during the journey to the next world. [763] [602] [775]

From this point onwards, the funeral rites differ according to the rank of the deceased. On the death of an influential ɬɩɩɑɑk, the senior members of that society meet as soon as possible to arrange the dramatization of the coming of Mɩlakila. A ɬɩɩɑɑk son, brother, or other near relative is always present even if he has little importance in the affairs of the society. If the death has taken place during the night, the conference is held the following morning and the rites begin at noon. There may be delay until all have gathered, but about the middle of the first possible day two ɬɩɩɑɑk are sent up one of the mountains behind the village. They carry large, cone-shaped whistles which they blow twice. The sound is plainly audible in the village and all, whether or not members of the ɬɩɩɑɑk society, recognize that a supernatural being is drawing near. After a short interval, another whistle is blown by a ɬɩɩɑɑk concealed on the roof of the house in which the corpse is lying, and after another pause the same sound comes from within, beside the body itself. Most of the uninitiated know that this is the voice of Mɩlakila (also called Sixsiɬɩwɩm), 575 766 [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and recompense to funeral assistants is usually deferred until 764 that time. Such was often true even in former years, although 431 poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the 556 express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any con- [575] venient ceremony, such as a non-sacred nsaok dance. As [796] repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature. It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual; at present it never occurs. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret [766] after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the crest, the goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery. Those who carried them were the ones who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge.

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is 764
the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives 783
of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If spring salmon or olachen are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or twenty according to some infor- [825] mants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly, friendless slave being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The taint on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but automatically lapses after ten days.

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that Sā-lma [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 comes and sits on the coffin during every funeral, seeking further victims. Death has so contaminated a widow or widower 783 that she or he will fall an easy prey unless ceremonially purified. No special acts are carried out between interment and [776] the burning of goods four days later, but the following four days must be spent in a small shelter of branches behind the village, hidden from sight in the forest. Within this the man or woman lies on the ground with legs close together and bent
[841] at the knees, in the same position as a girl during the four days after her first menstruation. A male friend accompanies a widower; a female, a widow. This companion keeps a fire burning and administers to the comfort of the patient, for such a bereaved person is considered to be. Every evening the two return home and leave again the following morning. On one of these days, the companion scours the woods east of the village to find four spruce saplings growing within sight of each other in an east to west direction. To this place he leads the survivor on the morning after the fourth day of concealment[a] in the shelter. He bends down the top of the western sapling and ties it into a loop with a rope composed of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. The widower, or widow, crawls through this opening to the east and then makes a circle, sunwise, around the sapling. Passing to the next one, the same procedure is repeated, and so in succession for the third and fourth, each being left tied into a loop. There are at least two variations in this rite: Instead of passing through four saplings, some individuals choose to crawl four times through a single one, with a sunwise circuit intervening in every case. If the survivor be a member of a family in which it is customary to use four saplings, and if the friend cannot find four in proper alignment, he cuts a number of spruce branches and sets them upright, butts in the ground, leaving a small hole between them. Four sets of these are arranged, as substitutes for four saplings, and the crawling through takes [a] There is variation in the exact time for this rite. Some individuals practise it on the fifth day after death and omit the waiting in the shelter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 accustomed to do when alive; but the workmanship is shadowy and unsubstantial, sometimes even transparent. Ghosts do not act like human beings, but usually walk backwards, sometimes even on their heads, and spend much of their time playing a game resembling football with large, globular objects made of some light substance. They communicate with one another both by whistling and in a language which resembles the attempts at speech made by a tongueless person. Some 775 individuals believe that there is a supreme chief in the land of ghosts, Allät-laist, sent down like Pluto to preside over the 776 shades. He figures in certain stories describing descents to the lower world; but many Bella Coola know nothing of his existence below, although it furnishes a plausible explanation for his coming by night to molest human beings. Like Sasiemar [761] he causes blood to rush forth from the mouth and genitalia of anyone whom he seizes; death follows, and a new victim has been acquired for his kingdom. The more common belief is 775 that the villages of ghosts have chiefs like those of human beings. It is thought, indefinitely, that after a long period of time the ghosts die, and some of them may then return to [845] this world as infants. A child born with dimples in its ears, which are regarded as indications of previous borings for rings, is welcomed as the reincarnation of some unknown ancestor.

At death, the ghost does not immediately appear in the land below, but remains for four days within the back-room of a house corresponding in style to an ordinary Bella Coola [772] dwelling. It is believed that one of these large houses is beneath every village* and that the dead pass straight down through the earth into it. Meanwhile the goods, burnt at the grave during the funeral, as well as those deposited beside it, have fallen through the ground and notified the ghosts that a newcomer has arrived. The wraiths assemble from all directions and fight over the articles, none of which are obtained [768] by the one who owned them during life. On the fourth

*There may be one large house, extending beneath the world like Nusmis's above; it was impossible to obtain definite information on this point.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dred yards away, rapidly drew near the hunter along the trail. He raised his musket and stepped aside, but though the sound went past him down the path, he could see nothing. Terrified, he realized that he had been near two ghosts, and rushed back to the village. A shaman was called who informed him that he had met his dead father's sister and another relative, both of whom were hungry. The hunter, too weak from fright to help himself, watched the shaman light a fire and throw on it a considerable amount of food and goods. Finally, he ripped the hunter's shirt from his back and threw it into the flames. Consequently, no harm resulted from this experience.

Ghosts, like all other supernatural beings, can, of course, control their powers so that their appearance does not injure a beholder. A few years before 1922 a certain Qaxlûn-i, whose ancestral name was Lo-qua-i, was encamped at Sazkwanat on the Labouchere Channel side of King Island. At dusk a woman came to his fire and proceeded to warm her cape. He recognized from her green face that she must be a ghost and boldly asked her what she wanted.

"I have been searching for mussels," she replied, "but without success."

In an instant she vanished and Qaxlûn-i experienced neither good nor evil from this apparition. The Bella Coola say that this being may not have been a ghost as he had thought, but was perhaps one of the under-sea dwellers who have somewhat the same appearance.

Since ghosts, like other supernatural beings, are believed to possess both wisdom and power, it might be thought that they would be invoked frequently. Instead, death has altered their character to such an extent that they are avoided and kept at a distance. The only time that an appeal is made to a ghost is when a young person dies without apparent reason and the survivors wish to learn the cause. The body is buried with a long cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark projecting from its mouth and stretching to the surface. The relative desiring information summons to his house several shamans whose powers have been obtained

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER IX

RELATIONS WITH THE SUPERNATURAL

Introductory—Sterile Apparitions—Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate—Supernatural Good Luck—Shamanism—Direct Revelations from the Supreme God—Power Localized in Certain Spots—Dreams

INTRODUCTORY

THE aspects of Bella Coola life thus far described have been principally of a nature which might be experienced by any member of the community. On the other hand, contact with supernatural beings is a privilege granted to individuals without respect to rank; even arduous appeal cannot assure it. The few to whom signal favours are granted acquire a position of importance totally different from that of chiefs. The Bella Coola are firmly convinced that supernatural beings abound in the mountains and forests of British Columbia, and that every activity of human life is governed by them. Not only do these creatures include monsters of the imagination, but birds, animals, and fish; even the activities of the human mind are considered to be beyond the scope of normal life. Ancient stories describing the actions of strange creatures and conversations between man and animals are accepted as truthful accounts, so that it seems obvious to the Bella Coola that his ancestors were more powerful than he is today. Never considering the possibility of errors in his stories, he accepts the alternative hypothesis that mankind has sadly degenerated from the golden age. Nevertheless, he assumes that the beings have not altered, and consequently hopes to encounter them on every occasion. Moreover, this firm background of belief makes it easy for him to recognize supernatural influence in events which a white man would consider to be natural. It is impossible to over-emphasize this concept.

787 * [554] 787 * 776 ● [828] [538] 981

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 787 sick, and gives the person securing it ability to treat the same disease in others.

[756] (7) Dreams, especially those in which supernatural apparitions visit the sleeper.

Sterile Apparitions [1]

539 The most common sterile apparitions are those of a stone
* 787 giving birth to a smaller stone, a tree falling almost to earth, then righting itself, or the sight of some enormous monster. Such an experience may come to anyone, and no one can tell what it may portend. The following examples will illustrate this kind of phenomenon. In accordance with Bella Coola usage, these are recorded as if actual facts.

Between 1890 and 1900 a number of men were paddling home to Bella Coola one fine October day when, as they were passing beneath some precipitous rocks to the west of Kwatna Inlet, they saw a giant, as big as a medium-sized tree, come leaping down into the sea. They could not see his face, which was turned in the opposite direction, but as he sprang they noticed that his hands were shaking like a dancer's. He struck the water with a tremendous splash, hurling the spray a distance of a hundred yards, and nearly swamping the canoe. They realized that the being must be a snaux, since it is well
• [776] known that these creatures migrate to the mountain lakes for the summer and return to the ocean in the autumn.

Since there is a tendency for supernatural apparitions to appear in close succession, the paddlers were little surprised next day, as they passed near some flat rocks where seals were wont to sun themselves, to see a number of these animals come hurtling down from among the trees on the slope of a near-by mountain. The last to appear was as big as a grizzly bear. Undoubtedly the creatures were supernatural beasts that had assumed the form of seals. It had been a fine, clear day, but as soon as they had taken to the water such a severe storm arose that the canoe was almost engulfed.

[1 [i.e. - appearances of supernatural beings from which neither good nor bad results follow. - See cat. N6, p 517- ANALYST]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 787 thus manifested itself. A white man's explanation would be that the "apparition" consisted of two water-spouts.

539 On another occasion several Bella Coola were encamped on the shore of one of the bays of King Island opening from Labouchere Channel. As they lay dozing by the fire they became aware that a woman dressed in black was sitting near them, but closer to the flames than a mortal could have sat. She explained that she had been gathering mussels and was warming herself; then, rising, she walked into the sea and disappeared. She was one of the ocean dwellers of whom little is now known though formerly they were more often visible. Another time one of the same folk was plainly seen sitting on a rock, but as her observers blinked their eyes she vanished.

[776] Dwellers in the underwater world are to be found beneath the lakes of the interior as well as under the ocean. Not many years ago, when some men were carrying goat meat down from their hunting ground, they stopped beside the small lake which lies at the head of the creek Snuqā·x̣', which enters the Bella Coola River about eight miles from the sea.

"I wonder what lives in that lake," one man said idly to a companion.

"Nothing," the other replied, but the first responded:

"You are wrong. Something evil lives there."

He had barely finished speaking when there rose from the lake a man with long hair, who stood, swaying back and forth, with the water around his thighs.

"There you are," said the first speaker to his doubting comrade, "I knew something lived yonder."

After a few minutes the man sank back under the water. Forthwith a strong wind began to blow, and snow not only fell from the heavens but rose from the lake. The hunters, who were not clothed for wintry weather, had great difficulty in getting back to the valley.

Occasionally the works of underwater people have been seen. The father of a man born about 1860 was paddling to Kwatna Inlet one night when he, as well as the other

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

wrapped up in a specific object it follows that the luck is transmissible; in fact, one of the chief advantages to the man who owns some valuable object is the wealth which he derives from selling a small portion of it. 777 787 * [432]

The Bella Coola term for supernatural good luck is siye, meaning, "What is Good." This can come from any being though it is most frequently obtained either from a mätsqus or a sisiutl. The former resembles a toad of enormous size, with a blazing fire-like glow in its throat; the latter is a double-headed salmon or snake that can travel on land. The person who succeeds in killing one of these creatures can use the carcass as a lure to wealth, if he knows the proper means. The portion must be wrapped in an article that has been in close contact with the slayer, such as a piece of his soiled clothing. This must be kept carefully hidden for one year in a cranny to which no rain can penetrate, and after that it can be used as bait. There is equal potency in a stick or other object which has come in contact with the beast. Great danger is attached to the sight of a mätsqus or a sisiutl, since death usually follows any incorrect attempt to gain wealth from either. The person who sees one of these creatures feels no ill effects until he draws near a fire, when his stomach bursts. All the Bella Coola agree that if a man has been close to one he can be saved by the use of certain medicines, but the following stories show that there is no clear-cut opinion as to which are the best. In fact, most families have knowledge of a specific cure which they regard as the most efficacious. [776] [776] [761] [757]

The opportunity to obtain supernatural good luck does not come solely to unfortunate individuals; indeed the Bella Coola state that it is fortuitous. It appears, however, that usually the person who is thus favoured is one who has practised ceremonial chastity, or is, through some other means, in a state of cleanliness pleasing to the supernatural. At any rate the danger of seeing such creatures is less to a man who is in a pure condition than to any other. Further, in most cases they are apt to appear to a person whose ancestors have seen one. [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 A visitation is not regarded as an inheritable right, but as a
* 787 tendency; for generations no member of a family may see one of these beasts, but the tradition is preserved, and when one [424] is seen it is recalled that such have been observed by ancestors of the fortunate one. Instances have occurred in which a person has obtained good luck without the tradition of this being in his family, but they are rare. On the other hand, a man may lose the advantage of his possession, even if he own [785] a portion of a mätsqus or a sisiutl, through failure to observe ceremonial chastity.

776 Some of the Bella Coola believe that the mätsqus and the sisiutl are the same animal, which can assume these two forms;
others that the two are distinct supernatural creatures. In any case the powers and characteristics ascribed to them are the same. Most families have a tradition regarding the appear-[173] ance of the one or the other to their ancestors, and the infor-[184] mation to be derived from them is always about that particular creature. Hence the details here described are probably not all known to any one individual.

* 787 The different types of appearances, and the different types 811 of taboos called forth, should be noted. These are due to 182 failure on the part of the Bella Coola to rationalize the sum total of their concepts. Each man recounts what he believes to have happened to one of his ancestors or friends, irrespective of whether or not the methods used may be in direct contradiction to those employed by someone else on another occasion. A man who has heard of the mätsqus, for example, from his father and mother, may describe contradictory means of dealing with the creature, and in each case may affirm that disaster would have followed if the method described had not been carried out. Such lack of co-ordination is typical of the Bella Coola.

777 According to an elderly Kimsquit man, the mätsqus was brought down in the beginning of time by one of his own
* 787 ancestors, Omqomkilka. It is to this fact that he attributes [773] his own near approach to one on two occasions. As it is fre-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 elapsed, he fetched his musket from its hiding-place and again
224 began to use it. Thenceforth he never missed his aim; every shot brought down an animal.

Before the days of muskets good fortune could likewise be obtained by the discoverer of the nest of a mätsqus. Each contains small particles of the skin of all animals, including human beings, plucked from them in their sleep by humming birds and toads. The finder must touch the nest with his stick, such as is always carried by hunters, then break it and throw it away, saying as he does so:

"May I see you at . . . tomorrow." This means next year.

He names his favourite hunting-ground. The finder must [785] not say anything to anyone about his discovery, and for one year he must observe continence. If he then goes to the locality mentioned, he will there find his stick, the one which he broke when he touched the nest, though it will be invisible to anyone else. Adhering to its end will be four hairs of the mätsqus. These he must hide for a year, wrapped in some of his own clothing, taking care that it is an article which he has long [785] worn and which is accordingly saturated with his essence. During this period, too, he must observe continence. Two years after finding the nest, he will be able to hunt with phen-
[424] omenal success. The knowledge of this proper procedure has been handed down in an ancestral family for many generations.

On the occasion when the two men had seen the nest they 777 continued their journey, each chiding the other for his failure
* 787 to take advantage of the opportunity put in his path. Before
● [776] long they saw a footprint where no man had been and knew that it must be that of Twalälkit, the supernatural hunter of mountain goats. In spite of remonstrances, the comrade scraped up a little dirt from the track into his handkerchief. In this he did wrong, especially as he had failed to take advantage of the opportunity presented to him by the nest of the monster toad. That night as the two were encamped a slide came thundering down beside them, and they barely escaped [761] with their lives. Not long afterwards the erring man died,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

insane, a calamity unquestionably due to his recklessness in handling the earth where a supernatural one had trod. 777 787*

This point illustrates the danger of near approach to a mätsqus, a theme well exemplified in the stories in the next chapter. Such perils must be counteracted in diverse ways according to the traditions of different ancestral families. One common method is to seek a lonely spot in the woods and there hollow out a shelter beneath an overhanging rock or fallen tree-trunk where the person who has been exposed to danger must remain for four days, eating nothing and at intervals scrubbing his body with branches of devil's club, spruce, and other rough plants. These protect him from the evil effects of the monster. [761] 783 [824]

Similar in function to the mätsqus, and equally dangerous to the unwary, is the sisiutl. The latter is supposed to have been created on this earth, at Bella Bella, in the beginning of time by Yulätimut. It was at first the canoe made by this carpenter, and then turned loose by him to range the mountains and fiords, as it has ever since, equally at home on land and in water, and in various forms. The following is a typical description of the manner in which a sisiutl appeared in the past. 777 787* [773] [776] 539 777 787*

Long ago a man was hunting in the mountains when he saw a salmon, which changed in an instant to a fish-like monstrosity with two heads but no tail. He lunged at it with his stick, and in so doing started a slide which carried the salmon down the mountain. As this was taking place, the hunter said:

"Go down the mountain, salmon; I will get you at the bottom."

When he reached the foot of the new slide he saw the fish lying clear on the stones. He cut it up and slung it on a cedar-bark rope. Now this salmon was a sisiutl, the first that had ever been seen, and the hunter obtained supernatural good luck from his experience. He also took the name of Sisiutl, a designation which has been handed down until recently.

After this adventure many people hunted for the sisiutl, and with fair success in early days, but now it cannot be found, 777 787*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 owing to the failure of hunters to observe ceremonial chastity.
* 787 When obtained, a sisiutl was cut into small pieces, one of which [789] worn upon the person would make the flesh so hard that an arrow could not penetrate.

Sometimes the sisiutl assumes the form of either a spring
● [776] or a cohoe salmon. Not long ago a Bella Bella man, travelling in a canoe, ate one of these. Once devoured, it reformed itself, made its way out by consuming the man's lower jaw, then jumped overboard and was lost.

The mere appearance of a sisiutl does not necessarily bring misfortune to the beholder, even if he has not the necessary knowledge, or courage, to take advantage of it. The following is an instance.

On one occasion the father's father of a middle-aged Bella Coola was going upstream at the time the salmon were jumping, when, unknown to him, one leaped into the canoe behind him. His first knowledge of anything untoward came to him when the bow rose out of the water, and, looking around, he saw that this was caused by the weight of a grease-covered stone lying in the bottom of his canoe; the salmon had vanished. The man threw overboard his floor-board with the stone on it. When he told his friends afterwards of his experience, they informed him that he had missed an opportunity for obtaining supernatural good fortune, as the "salmon" must have been a sisiutl.

789 The sisiutl can also be used as a charm. If a man, while in [776] a pure condition through the observance of ceremonial chastity, eats a small portion of the flesh, it renders him proof against bullet or arrow. An intelligent Bella Coola stated that his father's brother had done so on one occasion, with the result that a bullet, fired by his wife's mother's father, fell harmless at his feet after striking him.

278 Medicine can also be obtained indirectly from a sisiutl.
776 When one of these fish-like creatures swims through a pond,
824 wriggling as it goes, it frequently sheds some of its scales.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lälkänełp or wałilikwätsälätsäläts, "The most potent of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting eastward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a catamenial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a mätsqus or a sisiutl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the qokän·i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wikwanutl, who was also called O'miätl, was snaring mountain goats on Mount Teopinätl when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized, from descriptions given him by the old people, as the note of a qokän·i.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224
539
777
* 787
[776]

This is a supernatural bird about the size of a crow, with a broad hooked beak and blue-black iridescent plumage. Its note resembles that of a swan. The peculiarity of the bird is that its flesh and bones are of mountain goat grease; even its droppings are of this valuable substance, and it is these which are specially prized. Long ago ǫokān·i were comparatively common, but all have now fled beyond the range of the white man's rifle.

Wikwanutl knew what to do, so he crept stealthily up the mountain armed only with his hunting stick. Presently he saw a ǫokān·i feeding on a mountain goat which had been caught in one of his snares. It answered to the descriptions Wikwanutl had heard, and he could see that its droppings were like solidified mountain goat grease. The hunter crawled near, and took advantage of the instant when the bird was within the goat's stomach to leap forward and club it as it looked up. Wikwanutl twisted the neck until the head separated from the body and flung the former behind him, to the right, without noting where it went. This enables the bird to return since, like all other living creatures, when it seems to die it does no more than shed its cloak of flesh. Then the hunter cut the body into halves, threw the right portion in the same direction as the head, and carefully tied the left half in his cape of cedar-bark. Next he collected the droppings and wrapped them in evergreen boughs. Carefully carrying his treasures, he went down the mountain, and hid them in a niche cut in the trunk of a cedar tree, before he went home.

Next day, Wikwanutl did not hunt but returned to the place, drew out the piece of the bird's body, and dried it over a fire, as if he were toasting salmon for winter use. At night he went home, still refraining from telling anyone what he had done. For four days he cured the meat, then carefully closed the niche and went away.

For one year Wikwanutl did not hunt. Then he reopened the recess and saw that the meat was fresh and juicy, as if newly prepared. He left it in place, but drew forth the droppings and carried them off in a small bag. Fortune followed him. By using a small piece of the solidified grease on his traps he had wonderful success. At length Wikwanutl told his fellow-villagers what he had obtained and they were envious of his good luck. He continued to prosper, and at last sold the droppings for a large amount of goods, though he carefully preserved the section of the body itself. When an old man, he showed his son where it was concealed and the latter likewise prospered throughout his life, owing to this possession. When he became old, he in turn told his son about it, so that the young man had the same good fortune as his father and grandfather. But the great-grandson was too lazy to take the trouble of going with his father to the place where the section of the bird was hidden, so the treasure was lost. 777 787 *

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A fourth giver of supernatural good fortune is one of the mythical creatures termed snusx̣. This variety lives in the ocean, or rarely in rivers, and can occasionally be seen resting on the surface with its long, golden tresses floating on the water. The hair appears always to be flecked with eagle down, but in reality it is a mass of barnacles, the equivalent of this substance to this under-sea dweller. If the observer is brave, he will paddle cautiously near until he can twist a lock of the hair around his paddle and break it off. He must not touch it with his hands, but must dangle it outside the canoe, still wrapped about his paddle, until he reaches the shore, when he must conceal it in some lonely place for one year. After that period he can use a single hair, or piece of one, as bait; it will be enough to attract animals to his traps or salmon to his weir, exactly as with the mountain goat grease excrement of a qokän·i or a stick that has come in contact with a giant toad. If the person who has jerked off the hair with his paddle should be foolish or ignorant enough to bring his spoil into his canoe, he, and all with him, are rendered incapable of movement and the craft with its occupants sinks beneath the sea. [539] [224] [776] [224] [226]

The father's cousin of an informant once saw one of these animals when paddling in company with several companions to Kimsquit. The sea was smooth as glass when their attention was attracted by a number of small ripples, spreading in a half-moon shape from what they realized was the head of a snusx̣. The hair crossed the ripples, but did not rise or fall with them. The back of the animal's head was nearest the canoe so the opportunity seemed favourable for obtaining some of its hair. Cautiously the men paddled nearer, but at the last moment the steersman feared to drive the canoe in among the golden tresses, so veered off and the craft passed along one side of the mass of hair. The animal had shown no sign of being aware of their presence, but it now began to turn away,

1! McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 so that its floating locks remained between them and its head.
* 787 As it turned, the hair moved with it, so that, although the impression remained of a floating mat, there must have been some motive power to cause it to remain streaming out straight behind. Each strand moved through the ripples without being affected. Though the paddlers strained to the utmost to see the animal's face it thwarted their efforts by this continuous slow turning, until at last they went on their way, disappointed.

539 Yet another creature from which supernatural good fortune
777 has been obtained is the Mother of Snakes, a creature described in the following story.

* 787 A family living at Nulleax was reduced to the point of starvation 226 through the failure of their salmon-weir. It seemed as if the fish avoided it. One day a son of one of the owners, who had been in trouble with a [776] woman in the lower valley, went off into the woods not far from his village, where he saw what he thought was a black bear. When it came nearer he realized that its chest was tipped with silver and that its tongue kept shooting far beyond its jaws; hence that it must be the Mother of Snakes. This creature combines the qualities of bear and snake; it is about the size of the former, and it appears to have a serpent wrapped around its chest. It always pursues mortals and slays them, unless they [784] know the proper means of escape. Luckily, the youth's father had long ago warned him what to do if chased by one, so he at once dashed off. First he ran downhill, but the animal gained on him; then he ran uphill, but still the monster drew nearer. The only way the fugitive could increase his lead was by ascending or descending in zigzags, since the brute's heavy legs then kept slipping. All day the pursuit continued, until towards dusk, when the youth was almost exhausted, he saw at last what he was looking for, a stump with splinters, projecting upwards. Pushing these apart with his hands, he leapt through the opening thus made, then circled the tree once sunwise, and pulled away one of the jagged spikes. Now the Mother of Snakes must always follow directly in the tracks of its quarry, and as it jumped through the passage the youth struck it across the back with the splinter which he had pulled out. Down fell the monster dead.

With his knife the lad cut off some of the animal's meat which he carried home, saying nothing to his father. Early the next morning the old man went to look at his salmon-weir, but as usual it was empty. As soon, however, as his son drew near, the river became packed with salmon, all heading towards the trap which was soon filled.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"It seems as if you attracted the salmon like a magnet," said the father to his son. 777

The latter did not answer immediately, but later he said: 787 *

"You were right," and he told him what had happened. [539]

"You have obtained supernatural good luck," the old man replied simply. [226]

Following his son's instructions the father prepared canoes and boxes to bring back the flesh of the Mother of Snakes. They collected every scrap of it, which they preserved very carefully, and used small portions as bait to attract salmon to their weir with such success that they became wealthy.

Another supernatural being from whom supernatural good fortune may be obtained is Skwanät·än·a, "The Female Mourner." When a chief dies she comes to wail, wandering through the woods near the village, where sometimes she can be seen in the form of a weeping woman. As she cries, she ejects mucus from her nose, which solidifies into a glass-like substance about a foot in length. Anyone who sees her should take the transformed mucus, and wrap it in some article of his own clothing; it will bring him good fortune. About midnight of June 21, 1922, the infant daughter of a Bella Coola died, and about seven o'clock on the following morning the wailing was heard[1] in the woods behind the missionary's house. The brother of the dead child's father rushed off to try to find the weeping one. Luckily he did not succeed, because he did not know about collecting the mucus, and trouble would have come to him had he seen the supernatural being without knowing how to deal with it; in fact, even to hear Skwanät·än·a is considered an omen of death. [776] [776] [763]

It will be seen from the foregoing specific instances that supernatural good luck is usually obtained by the slaying of some powerful creature. But, since every living creature is endowed with superhuman power, it follows that any object obtained from a bird or an animal that has acted in a peculiar way may be the cause of supernatural good fortune if it be kept for one year in the manner previously described. Some- [825] [224]

[1] Since the Bella Coola believe that it was heard, the incident is recorded as a fact.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

MODERN SHAMANISM

Although the powers ascribed to modern shamans are less than those attributed to their fellows of old, yet a shaman is a person endowed with mysterious ability and wonderful knowledge, due to personal contact with supernatural beings. Hence, he is regarded as somewhat uncanny and, though respected, is likewise feared. The power is not inheritable. There is a tendency for the descendants of a shaman to have like favours granted to them, but this is nothing more than a tendency on the part of the supernatural beings to confer their boons in this manner; it is not a right. Thus anyone, man or woman, rich or poor, young or old, slave or member of an ancient family, may become a shaman.

756 * 787 * [428]

The Obtaining of Shamanistic Power

A shaman obtains his power from a supernatural visitant, usually the mythical woman Ṫłitcäplilän·a (also called Łulukwalntnm) bringing him a name, four songs, and sometimes the ability to cure a specific disease. No methods are sure to attract her, but by means of magical rites a man may so purify himself that she will be likely to visit him. A second, and the most usual manner of becoming a shaman, is to receive a visit from Ṫłitcäplilän·a when grievously ill. In either case a shaman is often termed a kusiut, "A Learned One." [776]

In the first case, the wooing of shamanistic powers by magical means, it is often a matter of years before a man becomes a shaman. Sometimes the parents of a mere boy will notice that he is fond of lying around the house with a far-away look in his eyes, and appears unwilling to take part in the games of the other lads. Especially if the father is a shaman, or if one of his ancestors has had the ability, the parents watch carefully to see whether or not this is merely a passing mood. If it continues, they realize that their son may become a shaman. Although there are dangers attached to the profession, they will usually assist their child in every possible way. They may know how one of their ancestors obtained

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*756 783 *787 (3) Choosing a place where two small hemlocks are growing on each side of a small stream, the seeker after power bends down the four saplings so that their branches reach the water, and with these scours his body, the spines frequently rasping his skin. When finished, he releases the saplings, which fly back to their original position.

(4) Another method is to devour four small sections, each [278] rather larger than a match, of false hellebore root. These are drunk with cold water and cause vomiting. The use of this plant is not limited to dawn, nor is it necessary to repeat it every fourth day. Apparently, the usual prayer is not said with it.

[785] Any, or all, of these methods, especially if combined with the observance of ceremonial chastity, may purify the performer so that he will be able to see what is not vouchsafed to most persons. Ťłitcāplilān·a, or one of the other supernatural beings, may grant him a revelation with shaman's power. This does not always happen, as the above means of purification are not omnipotent, but in many myths where the hero obtained supernatural power it was due to his having tried one of the above, or a similar ritual.

*756 *787 The most common method of becoming a shaman is through the appearance of Ťłitcāplilān·a when a person is ill. [776] This woman, who always wears a blanket-like cape decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark, is able to travel anywhere at phenomenal speed. She, or some other supernatural being, may appear to a sick person irrespective of sex, whether or not ceremonial chastity has been observed. It seems as if she took pity on the sufferer and came to bring relief. The following are typical examples:

A woman had long been crippled with rheumatism. She was so helpless and weak that she spent most of her time curled in a heap on the floor, heedless of the ashes and dirt with which she was covered. Her friends barely attended to her wants. [776] One day she heard a thump on the roof, though no one else could hear it, nor could they hear the whistle with which

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ṭlitcāplilān-a always announces her approach. The supernatural woman appeared, clad in her usual costume, and struck the old woman over the heart with her stick. The other occupants of the house realized that something strange had happened to the sick person. She crawled four times around the fire, sunwise, shaking her hands as well as her infirmity would permit, and endeavoured to dance in time to the songs that she could hear Ṭlitcāplilān-a singing. Her friends did not interfere with her, seeing that something peculiar had come over her, and that in one so ill, any change must be for the better. The patient later described how Ṭlitcāplilān-a seized and shook her as one shakes a dusty blanket, and how she heard the sound of small particles falling from her—it was the sickness. With that Ṭlitcāplilān-a vanished and the rheumatic patient stood up, cured.

756 * 787 * [776] ●

Another old woman had been so ill for four years with rheumatism, that she could barely move from her sleeping place, when a supernatural being came to her. She heard a voice saying:

"Get up! Mortal."

An invisible hand grasped her hair and led her four times around in a circle, sunwise. As usual, a tune and songs were vouchsafed to this woman, though these have now been forgotten.

One informant, a woman now past middle age, was once returning to Bella Coola from Rivers Inlet when she was taken violently ill with a stomach-ache. That night as she slept uneasily on the shore she heard a voice singing. Listening attentively, she learnt the words and tunes of two songs, and heard the voice say:

"Your name is Ālpālqulslaix."

Unquestionably the visitor was Ṭlitcāplilān-a, and if she had appeared, the woman would have become a shaman. Unfortunately for her, this boon was not granted; she received nothing more than the name, "Power to Use."

What is the explanation of the songs which shamans believe

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"I am Anolxumdimut," she said. "Everyone calls on me to visit the sick, and henceforth they will likewise seek you and your basin." 756 P 787 P

Something entered his stomach, causing it to heave violently, and he felt that the sickness had left him. He sent for the singers and repeated to them the words that Tlitcăplilăn-a had chanted; these formed the text of the shaman's song which he used on future occasions. While giving them to the singers, he endeavoured to dance, but was too feeble to do more than weakly shake his hands. From that time on, Anolxumdimut was able to cure the sick.

This last account is typical. Tlitcăplilăn-a appears, inserts something into the body of the patient to cure him, sings one or more songs, gives the sufferer a name, and then vanishes. [553] The curing power thus bestowed remains within the person benefited; it is this that enables him to heal others if Tlitcăplilăn-a has so decided. In such cases, there is mention of a "basin" in the song, and the one who has just recovered will be able to treat others, especially those suffering from the same malady as himself. [755] The reference to a basin is because such utensils are used during treatments. To the Bella Coola a shaman is one who has had such an experience and has publicly claimed it, whether or not he can cure the sick.

Tlitcăplilăn-a is known by many names, in accordance with her ability to treat many diseases, and the designation she bestows depends upon the malady cured. [796] [553] The following are some of the names received from her by shamans.

Sxxunqwalqulaxlaix, "The Strengthener of the Breath." [551] This name was given to a person who was cured when he found breathing very difficult. The text of his song was:

"Tlitcăplilăn-a gave me (the name) Sxxunqwalqulaxlaix with a small object to aid the breathing of the very sick." [553]

Tămămalo-pata. This has the same significance as the last.

Nuxăn-mălaxaix, "The Dancer Near the Fire." [551]

Anolxumdimut, "The Dancer Who Makes Noise Only with

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

His Body." A shaman with this name does not use a rattle when curing.

Anupinmat, "Quivering To and Fro." This refers to the movements of a shaman when he dances for curative purposes.

Łpānpānliktnumlaix, "The Revolver." This is derived from łpānliktnum, to revolve sunwise, and as this is done for curative purposes, the name really signifies, "The One Who Restores to Strength."

It is believed that Thitāplilān-a often uses her own discretion about visiting the sick, but that sometimes a number of the supernatural beings confer as to whether an ailing person should be helped, and if so request her to visit him. Sometimes the patient is so sick that an enormous amount of power must be inserted to help him, and he dies from its receipt. In such cases he is revived by Anunitsiktnum, a male being whose sole function is to restore those whom Thitāplilān-a has slain. This return to life has frequently occurred when relatives have been mourning the death of the patient, who is presently able to recount all that he has seen. Sometimes Thitāplilān-a, instead of herself bestowing power upon a sick person, carries him[1] away to a locality in which a supernatural being was petrified in the beginning of time.

Although it is Thitāplilān-a who most frequently cures a sick person, there are many instances of other supernatural beings having done so. Little seems to be known of these, except that they have been recorded as appearing to give a patient their name and to cure him of his malady. So far as could be ascertained, they are thought of only in connection with apparitions to the sick and, since in function they exactly resemble Thitāplilān-a, and as it is she who is most commonly spoken of, it is possible, or even probable, that these are actually the same being under other names. The following beings are of this type.

[1] The Bella Coola do not theorize as to the part of the person thus transported; if questioned, they conclude that it must be the spirit.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ninitsamlaix, "The Restorer." He is able to cure the sick even when at the point of death. 756*

Ănuskieknum, "The Saviour." He can rescue persons who have been injured by other supernatural beings. 776 787*

Nunutsnumkmem, "The One Who is Thought Of." Having powerful curing abilities, people think of him when ill.

Ănotăbăkmots, "The Open-Mouthed One." His mouth is always open to suck forth sickness.

Nuslkăkstămidjut, "He Whose Basin Is in His Own Body." A person who receives the ability to cure from this being does not use the customary basin.

Susiutl. It is said that many Rivers Inlet shamans have received their powers from this creature, which is accordingly well known to the Bella Coola in this connection, although few of their own people are said to have been benefited by it. 756* 787*

Since all animals are supernatural, it follows that any of them can cure the sick. Instances are remembered of this, in which the patient received a name differing slightly from that of his animal benefactor. Salmon, especially cohoes and early spring salmon, are extremely potent curers and many sick people have received aid from them. It is recognized that the former are uncanny since they have the ability to hide themselves in insignificant streams. One man was cured by a tree which gave him a yodel-like shaman's song, imitating the creaking and waving of its branches. More often, however, a supernatural animal merely speaks to a man without making him a shaman. [825] [533]

Two courses are open to the patient who has been cured by such a visitation. He may at once proclaim his powers, or he may say nothing about them in the hope of obtaining further revelations and further names. From a single experience he has received a certain amount of power, but the more he has, the greater this will be. If he decides not to wait, he at once calls the singers and repeats to them the words and tunes of the songs he has received. When later on he gives presents to validate his shamanistic name, it becomes publicly recognized [553] [554]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

he got up and was working at the fire when his nose began to bleed. The people tried the usual remedies, but they were without effect, and the nose continued to bleed for several days. Shaman after shaman was called in, but none could do anything for him; and the bleeding continued until his face became so swollen that he could not see without lifting the puffy flesh, while his body wasted away and he became weaker and weaker, at last sinking into unconsciousness. His friends assembled in the house thinking he was on the point of death; in fact, one burnt his nose to ascertain whether or not he was still alive; the scar is still visible. Then he recovered slightly, his eyes roved around, and he saw the people as in a dream, and wondered why they had gathered. Next he heard his mother weeping, realized what was the cause, and asked her to stop. The watchers, noting his eyes and returning consciousness when he had been at the point of death, understood that a supernatural being had come to him in his hour of need and that he would become a shaman. He told those who were working over him to cease their efforts to cure him, as they were powerless.

That night as he lay feeble in his house, he began to vomit, and succeeded in ridding his stomach of a large mass of coagulated blood. He and his mother examined it, and both thought he would die from its loss. In this they erred, for if he had not succeeded in getting rid of it he would have died. The night that he slept in the forest, he had lain in the path of Tsaiarmar who can travel only on fixed tracks and that malicious being had inserted the blood in him, the last of which he had just vomited.

The sufferer gradually grew stronger, but suffered whenever sunlight fell on him; accordingly his parents blocked all chinks in the walls so that he lay in darkness. A few days later he had a relapse, and was again at the point of death, when he heard, inside his head, a buzzing sound like that made by a bee; it was the tune, and also the words of a shaman's song which Thisdpilite-a was bringing to him. He could see her faintly

Li McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 752 789 sealed cord succeeded in drawing feathers, previously placed on the surface, around in the direction in which she was dancing. It was impossible to learn the details of the method employed in this trick. The subterfuge was long ago practised by a shaman.

A simple but effective trick was the substitution of a baton made of light maple wood for one of the heavy type used by the singers. The real stick had been passed around the audience and apparently returned to one of the singers, though in reality the false one had been given to him. As he beat time the hollow sound that emanated was a source of surprise to the uninitiated spectators, nor was their wonder lessened when a real baton was again handed around, as if it were the one that had been in use.

[778] According to an informant, the last time that a supernatural being helped the person on whom it had conferred shamanistic power to perform a rite of this kind was about 1870. A man who had fallen from his canoe into the ocean was rescued, but for a long time was ill as a result of exposure. [776] [787] River Measurer, the supernatural being who governs the height of tides in the river, appeared and made him a shaman with the ability to cure through the use of a wash-basin. As this shaman danced, he had a large box filled with water. Presently he called on one of the uninitiated to examine the height of the water and point out to his fellows how high it was. A little later he called a second man who likewise indicated on the outside of the box the height of the liquid within. It had fallen, though its disappearance seemed inexplicable.

781 789 The above furnishes a good example of the attitude of the uninitiated. The informant, a very intelligent Bella Coola, gave a number of instances of the conjuring methods employed, some of which he had helped to carry out. Unquestionably, this was of the same nature, yet, because he was deceived at the time of its performance, he readily believed that the rite was supernatural; since then he had never thought of doubting understand. She was also able to gaze downwards at the edge of the central fire nearest to the door. 756* 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Anstähätmots, an old shaman from the dead who died not long ago, obtained his power by chancing to visit their land. The themes of his songs were of the land of the dead where, he said, there were many people; where those who had been rich on earth were rich, but where those who had been poor were still poor; where those who had been blind could see, and those who had been maimed were whole. He told of Pälsäil, a legless creature who lives in the land below, but can travel with amazing speed. In fact this shaman stated that it was he who was sent when the ghosts wished to communicate with the living, a statement contradicted by others. He told further of Kawäkudjäu-a, a supernatural woman resident there, who is able to pick berries with phenomenal rapidity. But this talent avails her little, since her basket is full of the teeth of dead men who devour the fruit as fast as she picks them. It was Anstähätmots who described how in the land below there were only two enormous trees of the kind known to the Bella Coola as läp, under the shade of which the ghosts played a game resembling football with huge, light balls. [787] [539] [776] [776]

A dead person usually chooses one of his own relatives as the proper person on whom to bestow the power of a shaman, but their actions in this respect can neither be coerced nor cajoled. Ceremonial chastity is of assistance, and power can usually be obtained by anyone who lies four days and four nights, face downwards, on a new grave. Nor does every sight of a deceased person bring with it this faculty; in fact, ghosts are greatly dreaded since they usually cause harm to the beholder. On one occasion the mother of an elderly Bella Coola woman left the house one evening, to return shortly with her face screwed up into a ghastly smile, green in colour, and with saliva dribbling from her mouth. She was quite mad. A shaman from the dead succeeded in curing her, or it may have been in restoring her to life, and she was able to tell how she had seen what she took to be a man with face averted. She 756* 775 787

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

956 a boy who was dearly loved by his father. The latter, thinking that 787 Kaziyat was responsible for his son's death, killed her and was slain in 539 revenge. Because of the doubts thrown by the Bella Coola on Kaziyat's power and revelation her fame did not spread widely.

Power Localized in Certain Spots

778 To the Bella Coola every supernatural being is, or should [776] be, able to move, in fact many of them can travel with phe-
[778] nomenal rapidity. But, in the beginning of time, when Sîqunîdm was populating the earth, he sent down certain creatures which were later turned to stone, thereby localizing their power. The term for a place where this happened is smâ-ti, which can be translated with accuracy as, "A Locality Where Power has Become Petrified." It follows that anyone desirous of coming in contact with supernatural power of this type can do so by visiting the spot where it is situated. There [773] are not many of these places, nor do they figure prominently in Bella Coola mythology, and, as usual, there are many contradictions in the accounts. Apparently there is a tendency to ascribe the occurrence of peculiar experiences to localities where power is petrified. The following are the more important spots of this type, with a short account of the specific attributes of each.

773 (1) Smaiw-a, also called Skaskwaily: At the head of the 778 Clearwater, one of the sources of the Bella Coola River, and 539 the place from which comes the warm east wind.

Concerning the origin of the power in this spot the following tale, which is regarded as very ancient, was obtained.

Long, long ago, the ocean spread far to the east, covering the whole Bella Coola valley.[14] The shoreline of the ocean was at the village Skaskwaily, so called from a chief of that name living there. Mount Xîtwals, which is now several miles inland, was then a point around which surged dangerous [14] It is mentioned that the world was unpeopled at that time, though mention is made of people who were living there. This does not strike the Bella Coola as a contradiction; the accuracy of an ancient story is never questioned; hence it is taken for granted that "people" in the modern sense, were not there in existence.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The place is still allegedly characterized by these reptiles; a recent visitor found the branches of the trees like snakes, and the very roots were in the form of them. The rocks in the vicinity are full of grooves like those made by snakes crawling through soft clay, and the whole neighbourhood reeks with their odour. 778 539

(2) Pe·ɬɬ, Mesatche Nose: The point between North Bentinck Arm and Labouchere Channel. 778

Here is found a snusɣ, one of the most powerful localized beings, a creature comprising only a head and an arm with a mouth in the palm. The head can be seen in rock on the point not far above the waterline, but the giant arm rests far beneath the surface. At times the snusɣ bends its elbow so that the fist can support the head, as if the creature were pondering. On such occasions the upper part of the arm remains concealed below the water, while there is a gap about twenty-five yards in width between the upraised lower part and the rocky shore beneath the animal's head. A canoe can pass in safety through this, narrow though the channel is; but if it should take a course on the outer side of the arm the latter will crash down on the helpless craft, crushing it to splinters and driving these far beneath the surface. There has never been a survivor from such a catastrophe. The last time the arm was raised was about seventy years ago when a war party was returning to the north after raiding Tāl·io. They knew the necessity of taking the inner channel, so escaped unharmed, though they actually handled the mighty upraised limb. The Bella Coola firmly believe that the snusɣ will some day lift its arm again, and will crush the steamer that carries mail and passengers up the coast. 776

It was only a few hundred years ago that a certain Bella Bella learnt of the respect with which the other supernatural beings regard the snusɣ of Mesatche Nose. The canoe in which this man was travelling was sucked down beneath the ocean, but Qomaqus admitted him as a guest to his house. The chief had invited all the underwater supernatural beings to a pot- 778 539

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

obtained two wives, the name of one being Ṭlisla. He returned to Bella Coola with them. 778 530

Nänalskwitl knew that presently he was fated to become immobile, a seat of petrified power. Since he was able to select where this was to be, he chose the site of Mount Nusqalst, midway in the Bella Coola valley, as a convenient place to overlook the doings of men. Before he transformed himself into this mountain, he determined that he would have people visit him; accordingly he changed his axe, Nuskumidjusta, which he carried concealed beneath his blanket, into sqalst, a stone much used for axes and adzes. Until the introduction of white man's tools his wish was gratified; people came from far and near to obtain the necessary material. 823 103 [316]

The human origin of the mountain is still remembered, since it is often spoken of by its chiefly names, Nänalskwitl and Ṭlisla, relics of its existence as a man. This story is regarded as an origin myth, and as such might have been included in vol. I, chap. VI.

This mountain is regarded with awe by the Bella Coola on account of its great height, but it seems to lack most of the characteristics ascribed to other places where power has been petrified.

(10) On one of the mountains above Cascade Inlet there used to be a stone eagle with outstretched wings which came to this earth with the first people, but was petrified one day when drying its wings after fishing. About 1860 part of its beak fell away. A change in the condition of any of these places had long been regarded as an omen of misfortune, so the epidemic of smallpox that soon after ravaged the coast was not unexpected. 778 [164] [787] *

(11) Ällssmos: An unidentified spot where a sminq of the mountain was petrified. At this place there is a small pool which is the repository (II, p. 8) of a certain kusiut dancer.

(12) ułxekam, "The Walker," the name both of a supernatural being and the spot where it is localized. This is not far from the glacier that lies near the junction of the trails from Snuhli and Täl·io; it is the largest one in the vicinity of Bella Coola and is said to move its position. The being is in some way connected with it, hence the name. [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dance again in eight years. Four years later, one of his fellow- 778 villagers offered him five skins for the one which he had used, 539 and, when this was declined, the number was raised to ten, then to fifteen, and finally to twenty new bear-skins. As there was no particular value in the mantle itself, the owner became suspicious and asked advice from his mother who admonished him not to sell, in view of the time when he would want it. Accordingly, he did not accept the offer, but when it was increased to twenty-five skins he did so. He did not know that [754] the purchaser's desire for it was to enable him to injure the seller by magic through the acquisition of this personal possession.

The sale took place in April, and the following December 778 the former owner became crippled with a disease which so 755 weakened his back that he could hardly raise himself from the ground. When the sickness had lasted for one year, his 539 friends carried him away to the Hot Springs on Labouchere 787 * Channel.

It was known that if a patient were left night and day in the spring, scrubbing himself with hemlock boughs, he often was given such power by a supernatural being that, like a shaman of old, he could kill or cure by means of a stick. Many of this man's relatives had been killed by rivals envious of their success in giving potlatches, so it was feared that he might wish to retaliate if he gained too much power. To prevent this, he was removed from the spring at night. On the first day as he lay on a mat in the warm water, there appeared on a flat stone a diminutive man, about two feet tall, resembling a Bella Coola except for a short tail. It was probably a tlāqmā·ks, [776] such as his first ancestor had obtained (I, p. 688). The little creature ran around the stone; when it returned to the starting point it stopped and was joined by a second one of the same kind. The two circled the stone three times, on each occasion stopping at the starting point; they then vanished. The next day while the patient lay in the stream he heard from within the mountain four beats of a drum and a sound as if a large number of people were talking and calling together, though he

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 could not distinguish any actual words. This ceased, to be 755 followed by the hissing sound of escaping steam; the water became so unbearably hot that, crippled though he was, he 539 managed to crawl out. His courage soon revived, so, wrapping
* 787 his head in his blanket, he returned to the spring. The water was still unpleasantly hot on his body and legs, but the covering protected his head. The same phenomenon occurred on the two following days. Four days later he was well enough to walk and was brought home. During his treatment he saw supernatural beings, and is still hoping for a further revelation that will make him a shaman. He believes that this would have been granted to him if his friends had allowed him to remain in the spring overnight.

755 During the four days of his immersion he ate nothing, and his only nourishment was a little mountain goat grease which he did not swallow but kept in the right side of his mouth. After each bath he scrubbed himself with hemlock boughs. As in all
[785] such cases, for one year he observed continence and refrained
[761] from eating unsmoked salmon. Failure to observe these taboos would have caused his death.[15]

755 According to another account the creature that visits a patient lying in the Hot Springs is a bäbink'. As already de-
● 776 scribed, it is a hairless animal, about as large as a small moose, with legs so short that its belly almost scrapes the ground, no tail, and a large head with glass-like eyes. The whole appearance suggests an enormous walking snake. This animal approaches the sick person, as he lies on a flat stone[16] in the spring, and takes a bite from wherever the sickness is situated. No wound can afterwards be seen, but the ailment is carried away with the biting. If the patient should lack courage and endeavour to escape he would soon die.

776 Others of these animals of the same or similar variety have been observed about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.

[15]See vol. I, p. 609 for further results of this treatment.
[16]There are two of these, one used by men and one by women.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Between 1890 and 1900 two more were seen near Double Mountain. The last Bella Coola to see these animals left Stuix one morning armed with a light shot-gun. He followed the trail to the interior and was crossing the bare mountain, Kotsnk', about forty-eight miles from the sea, when he decided to turn aside to shoot some of the ducks which breed in great quantities on the small lakes near the top of the mountain. As he stalked through the grass he heard a rustling, and crawled so that he could get a better view of the place whence it came. He saw two ksksnk' which were catching ducks with their long tongues by shooting them out from their mouths. After watching them for some time the man returned to the camp without disturbing them. This man has only recently died. In former times they were more common, but one was seen not many years ago by a Carrier Indian. 776 787 * 539

According to other informants, no one knows what supernatural visitor comes to the spring, since it always appears at night, and any one who is rash enough to look at it dies immediately. A bold patient lies still, with eyes closed, while he is massaged back to health. 778 [755]

Another man, while fishing for one of the canneries, had been in the habit of landing at the Hot Springs to get hot water for his tea. He drew it from a small trickle which emerged from a rock near at hand. On one occasion the flow stopped when he put his pot beneath, but recommenced on his withdrawing it. Thinking this a mere accident, he reinserted the vessel only to have the water cease again. When this had happened four times, he realized that the cessation had been intended by some supernatural power. 778 539

"Hail! Powerful One," he called out. "I understand you now."

He knew that it must be some creature within the rock that had stopped the flow, not wishing it to be so used, and since then he has obtained his water elsewhere.

Leaving these tales of the past, which stress the supernatural, and passing from the experiences of men of sensitive, imaginative disposition, it is possible to describe the methods commonly employed by the Bella Coola when wishing to take advantage of the curative properties of these localities. In cases of serious illness it is common for a sufferer to make the rounds of all five places located on the ocean. This was done, for example, by the father of an informant who had seen what he took to be a spring salmon in an inland stream where no ocean salmon should have been. He was foolish enough to leap in to catch the fish, which was really a ssiutl, and as it 778 755 787 * [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

suspend the bundle by ropes from a stick which projected horizontally from the wall. It was to these ropes that Käliäkıs tied the bangles, so that they jingled with every movement of the child. 539* 756* 787*

Äłqumäm heard this peculiar noise from his house in the land above and sent a łłäqmä·ks, a diminutive supernatural being of human form, which lives on air, to investigate. The creature perched on the cradle rope where Käliäkıs saw it. Owing to his former life in the land above he knew what it was, and how to deal with it, so he quickly threw over it a blanket which he had frequently used.[11] This brought him supernatural good fortune. He concealed the łłäqmä·ks for safety in an old chequer-work root sack, and left it lying on the floor. [177] [854] [776] [777]

Wealth flowed in upon him so that he was able to give a potlatch every year. At one of them he gave his infant daughter, the occupant of the cradle, the name Ťłäqmä·ks, which has been handed down from generation to generation, and has recently been given to a Bella Bella child. Käliäkıs's prosperity roused the jealousy of his fellows so that they murdered him, but his children still had the łłäqmä·ks and they continued to prosper. At last their enemies slew them too, sparing only one small boy. [551]

This orphan led a precarious existence. He was refused admission to what had been his father's house and was forced to live in the space between the floor and the ground below, while his food was taken from the refuse heaps. In time he grew to young manhood, frequently brooding on the fate of his relatives and hoping for revenge. One day he crossed the river, ascended a mountain, and found there a large cave, where he lay down to sleep, wrapped in a bear-skin. A supernatural being came to him.

"I have watched your woes," said the stranger, "and I will help you if you are brave. You must accompany me to my land. The road is dangerous, and if you should lose me it would be disastrous to you, so keep close."

They took a difficult path down through the earth to the land of the dead below.

"I will keep you here for a night and teach you," said the supernatural one as he gave the boy a stick in which was power.

"You must take this," he said, "and go at night to your father's house. Throw the stick at one of those who killed your father. It will rebound to you, after leaving your enemy dead without a mark on his body. Do this every night, killing only one man at a time, until you have slain all the murderers, but be careful not to harm anyone else."

Although he had not at first revealed himself, the being from whom [11] A new one would have been useless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 throw it in through the smoke-vent. He cuts the roots into thin slices which are boiled in water for four days. The patient drinks several cupfuls of the decoction which never fail to benefit him.

[776] The basis of this medicine is the belief, already described, [773] that when a sisiutl swims through a pond it frequently sheds some of its scales which become water-lilies. They are, therefore, potent in themselves and are of greatest benefit to one who has practised ceremonial chastity. The patient must observe several taboos for forty days after treatment: He must hold no sexual intercourse; must eat neither salmon nor meat that has not been smoked; must eat nothing cooked either by a menstruating woman or by one who has lost her husband within a year; and must not approach a girl during the year following puberty. The breaking of one of these taboos causes [761] his death, and the man who has administered the medicine watches the conduct of his patient with great care.

755 For Debility (two means)

(1) Drink strong, stale urine, mixed with red rock-paint ground fine.

Knowledge of this medicine has been handed down for [424] generations in certain familes. It is said to be most unpleasant to take.

(2) The following medicine, said to be the most potent known to the Bella Coola, is used for a person who has long been feeble, especially if he has been spitting blood. It is the property of several ancestral families, and must be admin- [424] istered by an elderly male member of one of them.

The owner of the remedy obtains a dry, clean skull, places within it a little water which he brings to a boil with hot pebbles and adds a small quantity of mountain goat marrow. The patient is given a dry stick, about three feet in length, from which the pith has been extracted to make a tube. With this he sucks four times, swallowing a little of the decoction, while the practitioner says to the skull:

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6
103, 192, 551, 773, 776

/For a Bella Coola-English vocabulary which includes place names, personal names, and names of spirits, gods, mythological characters and places, see category 116, pp. 573-630./

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER I

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

000

General Observations on the Kusiut Society — Powers and Functions of the Society — Initiation — The Ritual of Specific Dances — Various Origin Myths — Kusiut Prerogatives Other than Dances — The Death of a Kusiut — The Final Rite — Concluding Observations and History.

General Observations on the Kusiut Society

IN view of the importance of the kusiut society in the lives 575* of the Bella Coola, it would seem logical to have described it in an earlier part of this monograph. Though an integral part of the complicated structure of social organization, it is a secret, semi-religious grouping which can best be treated separately. The word kusiut is connected etymologically, according 575* to native belief, with siut, the term for a supernatural being. 192 Thus the meaning of the society's designation is "The Super- [776] natural," or "The Learned," for siut has both these significations. A member of the society is likewise called a kusiut, plural, kukusiut.

The investigator soon learns of the existence of the society. 551
If he asks a man his name, and then inquires further what type 575* of designation it is, the answer is always that it is his kusiut [124] name, that is, the one by which he is known as a member of the society. Ancestral names are used only at potlatches or other ceremonial occasions, whereas an individual's kusiut appellation is the one which he uses commonly. Moreover, for 535 about three months of every year the Bella Coola live in an 575* atmosphere of kusiut dances with a performance, or its pre- 796 liminaries, taking place almost every night. Preparations for this ceremonial season, for so it may be termed, begin four days after the September moon is full, while the actual dances commence early in November and are continued until March. During this period the kukusiut are believed to be in intimate [787]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukusiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kusiut which he inserts into the loser's neck. 575* 774 755 [784]

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect for the kukusiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims. 575* 774 626

Another source of strength claimed by the kukusiut is ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural beings held in Nusmät·a prior to the entry of Älquntäm. As already described, it is believed that a supernatural element from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging to kukusiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nusmät·a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Älquntäm enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kusiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened. 575* 787 776 796 777 761

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 787 776 796 Älquntäm enters and confers on kusiut matters with Sexsexkälaix, his assistant in affairs connected with his functions as leader of the supernatural kukusiut.[1] This being acts as announcer and intermediary with Älquntäm, but himself lacks the power of initiating matters. The two discuss whether or not it is advisable to allow mortal kukusiut to perform certain dances of the type known as kusiotem (II, p.128), and if so, they transmit the necessary power to the earthly dancer who has the proper prerogative, thus enabling him to give a graphic representation of what is done in the upper land.

*575 796 787 776 535 This is the essence of the kusiut dances. Each portrays a performance given by one of the supernatural beings in the house above, or some other aspect of his activities. Each earthly dancer has as patron a supernatural being, usually the one who carries out the dance of which his own is a model, and between patron and protégé there exists a relationship by means of which the latter receives the power necessary to perform. To do so, the uninitiated believe that he must receive a yeux, which can be translated as "call," from his associate above. Moreover, not only is each patron a supernatural being, but each is guided by Älquntäm in the performance of the kusiut rites in the land above, which indirectly increases the prestige of the protégé.

---

*575 787 776 796 184 [1]The differences of belief of individual Bella Coola, dependent upon family traditions, is nowhere shown with greater clearness than in this meeting of the leaders of the supernatural dancers. It is clear that the Bella Coola have no uniformity of belief, even in what might be regarded as fundamental concepts. One informant, well versed in kusiut matters, asserted that there are five supernatural leaders, Älquntäm and his assistants, Smaisikila, Sexsexkälaix, Snunlkäls, and Sunälotla. Others were equally emphatic that Älquntäm is the kusiut name of the supreme deity, and that Sunälotla, Smaisikila, and Snunlkäls, are merely other designations for the same deity with regard to different functions. This belief has been followed during the monograph, by designating the supreme deity as Älquntäm, the name by which he is termed with respect to his kusiut powers. These two opinions are not as basically different as appears at first sight. A man [828] is considered as having two, or more, personalities with respect to different rites at which he is called by different names. Since the supreme deity is regarded as a superman, who functions in diverse manners, it is not difficult to understand how these are sometimes ascribed to different individuals, and sometimes to the one under different names.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed
781 and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the [787] dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sympathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member
[761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut
778 to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the per-787 formance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is 424 equally well known that his specific power has been brought to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuskāsiutsta (also called nusxi'ipsta), by the supernatural woman Ano'likwolsalx. Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Ano'likwolsaix; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

functions are to guard the names, and to keep in touch with the patrons. Every uninitiated person believes that if he could only have the good fortune to find a repository, he would obtain the kusiut prerogative there localized. Ăna'likwolsaix travels only during the ceremonial season when she is present at every kusiut dance in the form of a woman with a long, thin face and pointed chin (see Plate 13),[1] who "explains" the significance of the figures to the uninitiated in a peculiar high-pitched voice. She is well able to do so since as guardian of repositories she knows the prerogative of each member of the society. Frequently she mocks the uninitiated: 575* 789 424 [778] [776]

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" she jeers. "You [naming some ambitious youth], you who think yourself so smart, you nearly fell over me that time you walked up in the woods behind the village looking for grouse. If I had been a bear I could have felled you with a blow of my paw. How can you ever hope to become a kusiut like your father and grandfather if you are so blind."

His fellows are inclined to join in the laughter at the one singled out for Ăna'likwolsaix's scorn, but she flays them all in turn. "She" is, of course, a kusiut chosen for fluency and ability to make biting remarks. Parents tell their children that in the autumn, pleased at the sight of falling leaves, Ăna'likwolsaix bares the roof of her house and sits shaking her fingers like a dancer. [776]

"Go to the woods and look for her," they say. "If she sees you she will say 'tcu' and beckon to you. Then you will become a kusiut."

To further this deception, kukusiut are accustomed to disguise themselves as Ăna'lkwolsaix and move around in the autumn forest, taking care that no uninitiated comes too near for safety. An individual may have several kusiut prerogatives, and if he wishes to tranafer one of these to an associate, the report is circulated that the recipient has stumbled upon the repository of the donor. The latter then acts as if he were crazy, and the uninitiated are told that he is a nuhaxm, an 575* 778 425

[1] [See category 116, p. 84 (A) - ANALYST]
(Apparently Plate 1 is meant)

untranslatable word with the significance of "One who has suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository].[1] Some of these vaults are said to be dangerous to the uninitiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

According to Kimsquit belief, Ana'lîkwulaie has a husband, Almosphaikûla, who dwells with her in every repository. If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls dead before the power emanating from Ana'lîkwulaie. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the kuxiut society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

Turning now to the manner in which the kukuxiut regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many kukuxiut have, for example, Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a fact, that long ago the ascendancy of the kukuxiut was often challenged by the a'alk and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

[i.e. a repository of supernatural power - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Not knowing where to go nor what to do, he hid himself on a small island within sight of the village whence he could see and hear the people seeking him. At times some of his hahuxiat friends came close, calling his name; but not till he was driven to do so by hunger did he reveal his hiding-place. Then he answered the shouts of two men who at first pretended they were merely seeking him because of the worry his prolonged disappearance was causing his parents. Once the lad was within their group they carried him swiftly to the house of one of the chiefs, where he found himself seated among the most influential men of his village with the door barred behind him. The fear which any youth would feel in like circumstances was increased greatly by the awe with which he, as an uninitiated person, regarded the hahuxiat, especially on this occasion when he knew that he had wounded their wages. 575* [781]

"What did you hear?" asked one of the marshals. The lad was too terrified to lie, so he blurted out all the gossip he had overheard, including the news of the death of the Rivers Inlet Cannibal.

"You have heard too much, you must join us," continued his questioner.

The same man then asked one of his relatives whether he would "buy" the lad from them, that is, whether they would provide the necessary goods to have him initiated. It was understood that through his improper knowledge he had come under the jurisdiction of the hahuxiat and that, unless made one of them, they would kill him. The lad was the protégé of his uncle who at the time was initiating him into the naxnox ceremonial, and who accordingly was most unwilling to have his nephew made a hahuxiat. [688]

"Let him be a spy," said the uncle.

After much discussion this proposition was agreed to; the decision was facilitated by the fact that one of the lad's ancestors had been a spy. All night he was kept sitting in the centre of a group of elders who revealed to him the mysteries of the organization and showed him the whistles and other regalia. For twenty years this man remained a spy, dutifully informing upon any over-inquisitive, uninitiated person.

The informant was more than sixty years of age when he related this incident, but the passage of time had not caused him to forget the utter terror and feeling of inferiority experienced when he was taken into the presence of the senior hahuxiat. [781]

Although every hahuxiat assists in preserving the dignity and awe of the society, this duty is especially the function of those members who are regarded as the earthly representatives of 575* 424 776

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 [424] [776] Ano'likwolsaix. They may be termed marshals of the society. Each must have an ancestral prerogative for this, duly validated by presents to the kukusiut, in addition to a kusiut prerogative of some kind. In each village there are four or five of these men. Whenever food is being served at a kusiut dance, the marshals receive theirs first and then one or other of them addresses the audience in slow and impressive style, beating on the floor with a stick to add emphasis to his words. He admonishes his fellows to safeguard the ancient rites of the society, to be bold, to be secretive, and he pays honour to the member who has given the dance. It is they who take the leading part if a youth is dragged away to the meeting-place for initiation, and it is they who arrange matters when a spy reports that a non-member is over-inquisitive. *575 688 If any member of the society should break one of its laws at a time when no uninitiated are present, the marshal is expected to seize a burning stick from the fire and strike the offender with it. If death should result, revenge is unthinkable, since the criminal had broken the law. The same fate is unhesitatingly meted out to any kusiut who should dare to betray any of the mysteries to the uninitiated. Moreover, it is the marshals who decide whether any improper act lowers the dignity of a dance, and punish accordingly. Not many years ago a kusiut woman gave birth to a child while a dance was taking place and the infant was slain by one of the marshals. [761] The usual explanation made to the uninitiated for a death within the dance-house is that a supernatural being caused the roof to fall and kill the victim.

*575 551 [424] Each marshal has, in connection with his prerogative of this vocation, a professional name, used only within the house where a kusiut dance is taking place and carefully concealed from the uninitiated. Some designations were obtained from Ano'likwolsaix by an ancestor of the possessor, others were created on this earth with reference to some specific event, and [553] duly made valid by presents to the kukusiut alone. Some of these names are:

Xwolxkmis, "The Destroyer," so given on account of an

2:36:Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

though the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kaciat name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kaciat prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the dancer.

575* 424 425 553 556 578 424

(2) A Patron, omiats. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kaciat have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform.

575* 424 776 533 535 578

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Ana'kimulnis. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each.

575* 424 778

Although the kaciat are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time

773 781

2:56:Dorsey:Hopi E-: (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

uninitiated are expelled, with the exception of the ciwut to whom, as guests, a meal is served. Then they too leave and the kakaciwi eat together. Finally, the singers strike up one of the dancer's songs, and he dances to it to end the evening's rites.

The fourth day is nakacum, "That Which Is Opened." During the day the carpenters work to complete the masks, and towards dusk the house is again put in order. The kakaciwi are summoned again to practise the songs, if necessary, and always to arrange who shall wear the masks, a matter left to the marshals and the carpenters. Then the uninitiated are called in to see the masked figures and watch any dramatic representation. After their exclusion, the masks are burnt. Then the kakaciwi gather outside the dancer's house where his song is sung once more to send his call back above. Frequently another kaciwi now receives a call, so that the nakacum of one dancer is likewise the kuutimow for another. The kakaciwi assemble in the latter's house, but the uninitiated are not allowed to return to that from which they have been ejected until the platform-enclosure has been destroyed at the end of the season.

A word might be said about kaciwi paraphernalia, although much of this will have to be described in detail for special dances. Ross gives illustrations of a large number of kaciwi masks and gives such an admirable description of them that little need be added. They are carved from the solid wood, the larger of bassh, the smaller of alder, and each carpenter endeavours to make a striking effigy of the being portrayed. Aw'ilwakwin is present at every dance and has become so well standardized that she can always be recognized. This is true, also, for Thunder, Echo, the kachin, the Laughter, the Hermaphrodite, and a few other supernatural beings, but so much variation occurs in others that even a kaciwi of much experience cannot always tell what being is represented. The masks are painted, and sometimes the designs indicate the being, even though the carving fails to do so; variamilitude is

2: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 567 struggling in fear, to the secret meeting-place. Here the marshals discuss what shall be done with him; some suggest that he be killed, others a lesser fate, and finally someone advises his initiation. After apparently due deliberation, this is decided upon; the slave is told the mysteries of the society and is warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells the uninitiated of his knowledge. The actual ceremonial rites of *575 996 admission do not vary according to the preliminaries used.

Initiation can take place at any time during the kusiut season. After consulting with the marshals in order to choose an evening when no other dance is to take place, the relatives of the neophyte, whom it will be convenient to term X, invite the kusiut to their house. Sometimes songs are sung by way of rehearsal, at other times food is distributed at once. As the people are eating, one of the marshals stands up to address them, saying that X's relatives propose to take him to the repository of the name ———, so that he may become a kusiut. X, to whom this may be the first intimation, is called from his house and taken from the village by several of his kinsmen, with one or more of the marshals. The kusiut disperse and tell the uninitiated in the other houses that X has gone to meet Ts'ilkwalaxis. His companions hear the news with mingled envy and thankfulness that they are not to have this dangerous privilege.

[178] In ancient times X and his guides may actually have proceeded to his repository, but for several generations at least it has been customary for the party merely to go to some lonely spot in the woods for the night. Those accompanying X tell him as much of the ritual of the society as they think fit, not forgetting to emphasize the trust put upon him, and the fate which will befall him if he should communicate his knowledge. [177] [64] He is expected to report that he went to the repository where, lying face downwards on the ground, he saw Ts'ilkwalaxis; in Kimsquit he is supposed also to see her husband.*

* According to one old Bella Coola a slave of Ts'ilkwalaxis also resides in every repository.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

and the patron shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society.

It is said that, in former times, the hakaiat sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead hakaiat, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch.

The Ritual of Specific Dances

General Observations about the Dances

A detailed description of various hakaiat dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of using the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nuxalkmaxte. Several hakaiat have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every hakaiat season.

The Dance of Nuklymx[*]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Nuklymx, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly [*] G. Boas, p. 60.

J. McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

973 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaiem-a, whence its captain leaps to Nusqulxmaista to await the coming of Alquntăm. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nekusam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noăkynum lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [715 times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[131 eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [167 that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [624 this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776 patron was Noăkynum, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noăkynum [575 is patron for several kukusiut, who are believed by the unini-[796 tiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river [184 the kusiut dances begin.

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [424 slight variations, if any. In Tsmoil the kusiut who has the [551 prerogative of seeing Noăkynum is a certain Qaxalăn-i,[16] in Kimsquit, Ahskinmasam,[17] and in Sisksiul, Xemtnum. Although,

[115 [16]Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qaxalăn-i, who intimated
[424 that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman
[578 informed us the lending of this designation by her father and said that the present
[578 owner had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[17]Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his patron, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kusiut names have significances of this type.

[The Dance of Nōakxnim]

*575 snatches from old songs. The Bella Bella are said to use the *796 same compositions from year to year, and recently some of [533] these, both tunes and foreign words, have been adopted by [177] the Bella Coola. Long ago the marshals would have prohibited this custom even if the user had legitimately obtained the foreign prerogative by marriage.

As the time draws near for Noākynim to start his voyage, [805] X anxiously consults any of the elder kukusiut who may be calendrical experts as to the exact date. The system of reckoning time is not sufficiently exact to avoid errors, but the day ultimately arrives on which, after much discussion, it is agreed that Noākynim is leaving. Word is passed around to the singers, who sleep that night in X's house, ready for their duties on the morrow.

Early in the morning X stands up, gazes fixedly towards the west, and calls out:

[987] "Once more I see what I saw last year," or some other more or less specific claim to a vision.

It is believed that Noākynim must round four points before [773] reaching Bella Coola; in fact, his journey beneath the sea is similar to that of a canoe pushing up one of the long fiords.

Some of the marshals are always in readiness and one of *[203] them tells a herald to go to every house, repeating what X has said. This serves both to impress the uninitiated, and to *575 notify the kukusiut of what is about to take place. The mes-
*796 senger does so, and when all have gathered, the singers, seated 533 behind the fire, begin to beat out one of the songs composed during the summer months. The theme is of X's phenomenal eye-sight, due to his patron having sent to him the super-[776] natural being, Nuālsumtnam, at the moment of his departure. This being does not seem to possess corporeal form, but is rather a sight-producing medium. In the song he is often likened to a swift-flying bird; when the uninitiated hear of this they are suitably impressed with the remarkable ability of X at having such a creature sent to him. X, who has donned a [292] head-dress consisting of the white tails of two eagles, dances

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

every abode. The song on this occasion, the third for X, describes what Noākxnim is doing on his journey, as if X were relating what he saw. The kukusiut return to X's house for another meal and the admonishments of a marshal. 575* 796* 787 533

For four days more X retires from sight. On the morning of the fifth day he once more calls:

Yupālx.

Exactly the same procedure is carried out, the theme of this fourth song being of how Noākxnim can be seen rounding a third promontory.

X remains in concealment for four days more, then cries out again. This time the song describes how Noākxnim has rounded the fourth and last promontory and how the supernatural beings above have sighted him. This is the fifth song used for X. As on the previous occasions, he conceals himself on the platform after making a tour of the village.

On the morning of the fifth day later, X cries out that Noākxnim is at the mouth of the river where he has tied his craft to the stakes of a salmon-trap. The belief of the Bella Coola is that he approaches up an underwater fiord, into which flows an underwater river provided with a salmon-trap; X alone can see these phenomena. The herald goes from house to house repeating the announcement. The kukusiut, too, visit each, singing the song while X dances. He and the singers always decide beforehand on his actual statement, so that the words of the song will be in agreement, as if the singers had composed it on the spot. Once again X retires from sight. [203]*

Five days later he arouses the household with his loud shouting:

"Noākxnim is in the river itself. He has reached the home of the Resident; Imimāitnaix is mooring his craft. Dakdakānmem and Ālālmktnum are greeting him." [776]

The herald repeats this news throughout the village. The uninitiated know in general terms who these supernatural beings are. The Resident lives under the water at the mouth of the river; his function is to see that the stream and the 575* 796* 776 [203]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 salmon are properly looked after, in fact, he is practically the
* 796 supernatural archetype of the River Guardian. Imimätlnaix, "The Moorer," is a supernatural child who stays with the • 776 Resident, and whose sole function appears to be the mooring of Noäkynm's craft. Dakdakänmem is sent by Smaien-a, who in this connection appears to have human intelligence, to greet Noäkynm, and with him come Smaien-a's son, Älälhmktmm,[*] to assist Noäkynm in poling his craft up the river. All these beings are patrons for different kukusiut. The Resident is also known as Ämtäklis.

* 575 The kukusiut assemble in X's house as on the previous occasions; according to some informants two songs are used * 796 on this day, others say only one. The people proceed in the 787 usual manner to the lowest house, and make their way up-[533] stream. When about half through the village, however, X shrieks out that Numätlam has brought a call to him. The woman and the heralds cry out loudly, X hastily returns to his own house, from which the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the kusiut whistles sound from within. Numätlam is one of the supernatural beings who has travelled with Noäkynm for the sole purpose of bringing a call to X. If the calendrical [805] experts have been successful in their reckonings, the November [821] moon will first be visible on the night of this day. Several of the older men admitted that errors were common, and that sometimes four days more had to elapse, in which it was said that Noäkynm was poling up the river. As he passes, his dancers in the different villages receive their calls on successive nights. It is assumed that he can go by several adjacent [184] settlements on the same night, but the kusiut season is two or three days shorter in Stuax and the upper villages than in Kymqo-ts. Exact information on this point was unavailable.
* 575 As already described, Noäkynm travels to Smaien-a, whence
* 796 he leaps to Nuxqulxwaists and places his pole within the house.
All the supernatural beings crowd in after him to wait for 773 Alqantäm, but as soon as the latter enters, Noäkynm seizes his

[*] Some informants state that there are four of these beings.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

has been in contact. Their attitude of uncertainty as to whether they are gazing upon real supernatural beings or on representations of them has already been described, but the uninitiated do not theorize on the point—they are seeing strange sights about which X and the kukusiat know, that is enough for them. 575* 796*

Behind the fire they see a canoe-shaped erection, a model of Noükynum's craft, with six or eight masked heads, his passengers, appearing over the sides. Near this are four more disguised figures, three standing and one sitting. Ano'likwolsaix ranges in the vicinity, while X himself stands behind, at intervals sweeping one arm over the heads of the strange beings and uttering a droning cry. Ano'likwolsaix explains to the uninitiated that the figures have come from afar, that they are powerful, but not to be afraid, since X's drone gives protection to them from the supernatural ones. She points to one of the figures whose mask is painted with the design of a salmon.[1] 575* 796* 532 776

"See!" she says, "There is Noükynum; unless he brings the salmon they cannot come to our river."

Another of the standing figures is described as Dakdakänmem, and the other as Alälkmätnum. In each case she states briefly the functions of the being. The seated figure, who wears a large hat and rests on a mat, is the Resident. Great is the mystification of the uninitiated at seeing these supernatural beings[2] normally visible only to X. How they envy him! Another frequent display is of a group of masked figures playing sleli (II, p. 382). If this has been done, Ano'likwolsaix explains that this game is of interest to the salmon and that it is therefore played in Noükynum's canoe. [781]

[1] There is no doubt that in former times the Bella Coola attached greater importance to the designs painted on masks than they do at present. Except for a few vague notes it was impossible to obtain information on this subject; in fact, in 1922 there was only one Bella Coola alive who understood the symbols used. This man was drunk so often that he proved an impossible informant. It is fortunate that Professor Boas recorded a considerable number of designs (op. cit.), to which the reader is referred. [177]

[2] As already described, the uninitiated undoubtedly believe that they are actually gazing upon supernatural beings.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

attend every kusiut dance. Usually all kukusiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every qotlim he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

575* 796* [302] [292] [774] [834] [688]

Alquntäm enters Nusqulxwaista at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kukusiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Noäkynum seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaien·a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Noäkynum empties a large number of olachen into the river.* X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukusiut.

575* 796* 787 773 825

It sometimes happens that no kusiut of whom Noäkynum is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Noäkynum when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kusiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed Imäläuqulxwäs, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

575* 796* 787

*Nusqulxwaista is accordingly often called Nusläuxwm.

[776]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE DANCE OF Wł·a

*575 *796 556 Although potlatches and kusiut dances cannot take place simultaneously in the same house, and although the former are supposedly completed before the beginning of the ceremonial season, they often overlap the lengthy preliminaries of the Noäkẓnum dance. In such cases, when visiting the houses of the village, the kukusiut are careful to pass by the one in which the potlatch is going on. It often happens that foreign guests are still present when Noäkẓnum ascends the river and their host wishes to provide entertainment for them in the shape of a spectacular kusiut display. This is possible if a kusiut with a wł·a prerogative is willing to have a call come to him. It [424] is probable that in every village there is at least one kusiut with this prerogative; in Tcumotl the owner is a certain Łukwala,[30] in Kimsquit a woman named Nunuxemlaix. An ancestor of the former received his designation at the direct wish of Älquntäm as leader of the supernatural kukusiut. It is unnecessary to describe the ritual in detail in both places, although certain differences must be mentioned. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X. He has ten patrons, the nine brothers [776] Xemxemälotla, Xemcua, Omqomkilka, Äimälotla, Äiamkilka, Qomcua, Qwlaxwoa, Kwlilias Nuskämpta, *Älmäk*ᵐ, and their sister Łłitcäplilän·a.[31] These supernatural beings remain in Nusmät·a except when summoned below by X, or when Łłitcäplilän·a appears for her own purposes as already described.

If X accedes to the request of the donor of the potlatch and is willing to summon his patrons from above, one or other of them interviews the marshals, and if these acquiesce, the rite can proceed. In Bella Coola X asks the help of four kukusiut *575 who are termed his "Path Clearers"; no special prerogative is *796 required to perform this service. For four days X lies on the floor of his house, near the door to the back-room, while his [30] The rite has not been carried out in Bella Coola since the death of the former owner about 1912; the name has passed to his brother's son's son.

[31] Boas (p. 33) gives the same list of beings although in slightly different order.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wi'a]

*575 *796 782 The last to seat himself is Kwlilias Nuskämpta, an obstreperous individual, who always wants more presents than anyone else. When X announces that the beings above have taken their places, a carpenter brings forward the object covered with cedar-bark and painted with a design of Xemxemälotla,[28] holds it above X's head, and then gives it to a herald who casts it into the fire. At the same time X throws on the flames some dyed cedar-bark, some undyed cedar-bark, a little eagle down, and some olachen grease, saying:

"Please Xemxemälotla,[28] accept this offering and be present," and throws his hands up in the air as if casting some object upwards.

Still dancing, X calls out hoip several times.

The painted representation and the cedar-bark are objects which Xemxemälotla likes to receive; the olachen grease supplies the flame on which they ascend to him. The same procedure is repeated for the eight other brothers, with slight variations in the words addressed to each. To Omqomkihka, for example, X says:

[539] Asiqual-atwllulma Woodpecker-coloured[27] lomqomkihkaals Omqomkihka.[29] | dinnnuslxwumäxtanas is the place where he sits, | axqustemsuals the recipient,[28]

When the time comes to invite the hungry Thitäplilän-a, an offering of food instead of bark is cast upon the flames. X continues to dance after the final gift, and presently a thud *575 *796 is heard on the roof while some kusiut, chosen beforehand for the purpose, compresses a hidden bladder-whistle which the 787 uninitiated know is the voice of the call. Whether they be-

[184] [776]

[126]

[28] In Kimsquit the offerings are made by a kusiut who has this prerogative in connection with the game Skulkwan-a.

[28] His other name is Orqsem, "The Recipient of Many Gifts."

[27] Squal also is one of the larger woodpeckers, the species could not be identified.

[29] This designation, properly applied only to Xemxemälotla, is often used for his brothers as well.

[29] These words are virtually sung, each vertical line marking the end of each subdivision. A record was made of the music for the National Museum of Canada; record VII D 6a; singer, Jim Pollard.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wil·a]

*575 *796 I..., and ao...,[1] revolving sunwise at the same time. Ano°likwolsaix does not fail to point out to the uninitiated: "That is the way he sings up above. Look at him! That is what he does in his own home."

*575 *796 556 If foreigners, guests for the potlatch, are in attendance, Ano°likwolsaix adds that the supernatural beings are disappointed at having been called too late for it. Then the uninitiated are expelled, the masks burnt, and the kukusiut disperse.

A few further notes are necessary on this dance. If a potlatch is to be given after the kusiut season, the calling of these supernatural beings is sometimes reserved as the last kusiut dance, and any foreigners present, as uninitiated guests, are told that the beings have come for the ceremony. There is [776] thus a superficial appearance of confusion between these kusiut patrons and nusak deities. It is nothing more than a resemblance, since the nine brothers do not appear at the potlatch, and nothing is said to explain their absence; it is merely a subterfuge to increase the interest of the rite. Nor is any [787] connection necessary; in fact, X usually obtains his call like any other kusiut, without the spectacular throwing of presents on the fire. In this case X and the marshals consult and select the proper day for the beginning of the ceremony. On the *575 night preceding that chosen, the kukusiut are called to X's *796 house and one of the marshals announces that he can hear X's 787 call wanting to come to him. He answers simply:

"I am afraid."

The uninitiated are not expelled from X's house, so that they learn what is to take place. No ritual occurs on that evening, but one of X's friends remains constantly with him, as if to assist in any emergency. Kukusiut are often sent up the slopes of the neighbouring mountains with whistles which the uninitiated hear, and which lead them to believe that supernatural beings are in the vicinity.

[126] [1] A phonographic record was made of this; National Museum of Canada, record VII D 6b; singer, Jim Pollard.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wil·a]

About dusk on the following day X, who is in his own house, suddenly stands up and cries out: 575* 796*

"Yes. It has come. I am afraid. Yes! I will do as you bid me." 787

The kukusiut women begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Heralds announce that a kusiut has been pressed to earth, and presently they go to every house inviting the kukusiut to gather in X's. From this point on, the rite of Iuxtämem continues in the manner already described.

The ability of X to summon these nine brothers from above is a special prerogative; other kukusiut have one or other of them as patron, but lack the power to call the whole number to earth. One kusiut has exclusive knowledge of the mat which is spread for Omqomkilka when the other supernatural beings summon him to a ceremony; another of the place where the brethren obtain their eagle down. Detailed information was not obtained about these ceremonies. [424]

THE CANNIBAL DANCE

Of all kusiut dances, the one of which the uninitiated are most afraid, and which is, therefore, the strongest, is the Cannibal dance. It is believed that the performer is exposed to greater dangers than in any other rite, and observers have the most spectacular ocular demonstrations of his powers. The patrons of most Cannibals are Alqunäm, Sxexqäleiy, or Kämai·ts, who implant in their protégés a wolf, bear, or eagle, causing them to devour strange foods. The Bella Coola consider that a man is equally a Cannibal whether he has the prerogative of eating corpses, biting the living, eating dogs or raw salmon, or biting himself. The most common of these is the right to bite the living, and few of the older people are not scarred thereby. Fear of Cannibals is one of the strongest causes for the respect with which the uninitiated regard the kusiut society, but though the holders of prerogatives of this type are regarded with awe on account of their powers, they are not considered as chiefs, as the Bella Coola say is the case

575* 796* 424 [981] [776] [787] [781] [171] [622]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

among the Bella Bella, Fort Rupert, and Rivers Inlet people. Indeed, in Bella Coola a poor man may be the most dreaded Cannibal of all, if he has been able duly to validate and perform his right in this respect. Nor is the dance carried out with the same rigour in Bella Coola as among the tribes of the outer coast.

The ritual of different prerogatives varies to such an extent that several accounts must be given, in spite of the repetitions that this form of presentation entails. On account of the length of time necessary, a Cannibal dance usually begins early in the season. The following describes the manner in which Kāmātslak of Kimsquit, who can bite the living, carried out his rite; it was obtained from his brother, who is thoroughly conversant with the details. It will be convenient to refer to Kāmātslak as X, and to use the present tense throughout.

A meeting is held at which the marshals and others choose, in agreement with X and his relatives, a day suitable for him to commence his performance. Under normal circumstances it is on some qulhw that a marshal announces that he can hear X's call, and on the following evening, when the ritual has been completed, the uninitiated are startled to hear continuous whistling from the slopes of the mountains near the village. The instruments used are of the usual bladder type, but the long-drawn-out sound, termed Ālālāxa, is said to be the voice of the kindly supernatural woman, Ēsimāla.*

*The sole function of this being seems to be the restoring to life of those who appear to have been killed in the performance of hamat'sa. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether or not she is identical with Tlaxpālāla. The noise which heralds her coming is produced by the whistles of four hahamat'sa who throughout the night range the forests and mountains within earshot of the village. By bending their heads up and down, they are able to increase the volume and apparent distinctness of the sound. The four travel in single file, the leader blows, and when his breath is nearly exhausted he passes the hand of the second man, who starts whistling forthwith, while the original leader drops to the rear. As the second becomes weary, he signals in the same way to the third, and so on; in this way the whistling is continuous, and the uninitiated are convinced that it cannot be caused by mortals, even if such an idea should occur to them. If a non-member should meet the four, they would at once kill him or make him a prisoner, keeping him out of sight until he could be initiated into the society.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

telling them of his adventures, and presently they begin to sing the song, as if they had just learnt the theme from X. Frequently the deception is increased by X first learning the song and repeating it to the singers in a voice sufficiently loud for the uninitiated to hear. The theme of this, and every other song used for Cannibals, is of the land above and the dangers which X has survived. The singers add new facts and information to vary the monotony, but the subjects usually described are:

The flat land above with its many trails and the river that flows through it.

The gale constantly raging there which has blown the hair from X's head and the dirt from his body.

The trail across a yawning chasm over which his supernatural strength enabled him to leap. If a Cannibal dies when in concealment, the kukusiut bury the corpse secretly and tell the uninitiated that his power failed him on the other side of the abyss so that he was unable to return.

Ālquntām under his various names.

How his patron helped him to escape the Ālskam, "They of the Huge Jaws," evil beings who tried to kill X by sucking him into their gaping mouths.

The tide-flats which are found at the edge of the flat land above.

The kindly being Sinunukālāhm, who gave him the necessary power to recross the chasm. The uninitiated believe that unless a Cannibal meets this being he will be unable to return.

No one song for any Cannibal contains references to all these beings and events, but it is on these that the singers draw for their themes, always altering and adding to produce a fine effect.

On this occasion X does not dance,[16] and the uninitiated are soon expelled. As the kukusiut are eating, one marshal after another praises X for what he has done, and gives the most solemn warnings to all as to the necessity of completing [16] There is difference of opinion on this point.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575
532
776

PLATE 1

Photograph by H. I. Smith,
National Museum of Canada

Mask representing Kwa'kiwulpaix

[p. 84 (A)]

2: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

[The Cannibal Dance]

*575 to the woods he is always accompanied by a number of kukuxiut
*796 to drive the uninitiated from his path. If it were necessary 556 to perform the full rite just described, it would, in effect, limit this dance to wealthy individuals. One reason why it is possible for a poor Bella Coola to become a Cannibal is that on his second, or subsequent, ceremonial, he can give an abbreviated rite, known as ilistem. The essence of this is
*575 that a kindly supernatural being has visited X on earth, saving
*796 him from the perils of going aloft. In this case the ritual 787 closely follows that of a normal kuxiut dance and is concluded in four days.

After the nakaxam rites of some other kuxiut have been concluded, the call comes to X, who responds by growling and biting a few people. The uninitiated are at once expelled from his house. Thanks to the friendly intervention of the supernatural being, usually Alpuxiów, X's mental powers are unimpaired so that he does not become infuriated and bites only a few individuals. As with ordinary kuxiut rites, the singers [533] beat out a song composed for the occasion, describing the beneficent being who came down to X, and the kukuxiut practise and learn it. No other songs are rehearsed on this night, owing to the extreme solemnity of the occasion; it is a Cannibal rite and nothing can take place at the same time.

The next day is nacistélap; a second song is composed and a number of the kukuxiut are sent to collect wood for [532] masks. Six of these must be constructed representing the fol-[776] lowing supernatural beings:

Alpuxiów, who has benignly interfered to save X from risking the dangers of a trip aloft.

Alpuxiów, a supernatural man-eater from whom the call has come impelling X to eat flesh.

Three Alkpaiów, "Holders," who restrain Alpuxiów. In the land above their function corresponds to that of the kukuxiut who guard a Cannibal.

Ax'Ilmuhuix.

In the evening, after the work has been allotted, X's two

2:34:Howitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Cannibal Dance]

each house in succession, borrowing filled chamber vessels. 575*
Five or six men are waiting for X with these, and as he enters 796* his house, they pour urine over him. Thus restored to partial sanity, he cries out in a different tone of voice, and at once visits every house. The kakaciut are still with him, but need not guard him as closely since he is now less liable to frenzy. The uninitiated are greatly relieved at this removal of peril from among them. Later in the day kakaciut go to the different houses, asking for choice salmon-grease with which the Cannibal will later be fed. The giving of the first food to X, the latter sending aloft of his call, and the restrictions which he observes for the rest of the winter do not differ from those described for other Cannibals.

Snung's patron is a snung of the Mountain which became [796] petrified in the beginning of time. At his repository there is a [798] spring beneath a large boulder. Uninitiated persons passing the spot are often terrified by hearing the growling of a Cannibal from beneath the stone. It is in this place that persons [157] suffering from virulent skin disease are washed by X, as described in a previous chapter.

Few particulars could be learnt of the rite as carried out by Sqilaukmy, though it is said to resemble the one just described in every respect. The prerogative was obtained in a vision of [424] one of the Cannibal's early ancestors, who located the repos- [787] itory of the name beneath a large, flat stone, directly in the [798] old trail up the valley. When anyone treads on it, reverberation is heard. The winter was a spectator when the present 575* Sqilaukmy gave his dance in January, 1914, but the rite was 796* performed in such a perfunctory manner that little could be 798 learnt from it. The Cannibal wore two bands of dyed cedar-bark on his left forearm, under one of which was a container of red paint. Uttering his cry of ewe, ewe, ewe, and looking around with a wild air, he frequently buried his face in his arm, between the bands. The red paint made a realistic representation of blood, especially as it dropped with red smudges on the floor. On this occasion, the dancer appeared

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Several Bella Coola were questioned concerning the Cannibal spirit which Boas has described for the Kwakiutl. Some had never heard of such a creature, others had vague knowledge concerning it, and two men were able to give it a name. The one called it Bàxbàqwanàlcìwa, the other Bàxbàqwaìwa. All informants agreed that this creature was not a part of the Cannibal rites of Bella Coola and one man suggested that the cannibalistic incubus rendered it unnecessary. The Bella Coola believe that this Cannibal spirit is used in Bella Bella. During 1923 there came to Bella Coola an old Kimsquit Indian who had left his home many years ago and had since been living at Smith Inlet(?). With him came his son, a grown man, who had inherited from his mother a Kwakiutl Cannibal prerogative which he displayed in the winter of 1923-4. After the dancer had, theoretically, returned from the regions above, a large masked figure representing Bàxbàqwaìwa entered through the front-door. As the singers beat time, it hopped to and fro, up and down, with snapping beak. The Bella Coola were intensely interested, and one had only to listen to their remarks when wondering what it might be, to be convinced that the Cannibal spirit is a strange concept to them. The most frequent hypothesis was that it was a Aaskàs, since the masked figure did resemble this supernatural bird. The Bella Coola greatly admired the dance, and were by no means ashamed to confess their inferiority as dancers to the Kwakiutl. After the disappearance of the masked figure, the singers sang the Cannibal's song and he danced in normal fashion, which was commented upon as another difference in custom.

575* 796* 776● [171] [171] [428] [424] [186] [171]

THE SCRATCH DANCE

Only less awe-inspiring than the Cannibal dance is the Scratch dance. Those kukuiat who have this prerogative are able to scratch the bodies of their fellows, so that long, bloody weals result. The privileges and restrictions of Scratchers are closely akin to those of Cannibals, as the following points show:

575* 424 [996]*

[The Scratch Dance]

*575 They do not blacken their faces on receipt of a call as do 424 most kukusiut.

[302] The theme of their songs is of the land above, instead solely [787] of their patrons.

[533] On visiting a house where a qatlim or nuluxam is taking place they sit with the Cannibals in one of the back corners; this group is given food before any of the other guests.

They do not exercise their prerogative on fellow-Scratchers, Cannibals, or Breakers.

[787] They are liable to frenzy both when the call is upon them and after its departure. In such cases they run forth, apparently guarded and restrained by other kukusiut, and rush into every house to frighten the uninitiated.

They must recompense those whom they have scratched.

[578] They act as peace-makers among the kukusiut, since the necessity of accompanying a Scratcher who pretends to be frenzied overrules all petty causes of strife.

[554] Though any definite concept of graded rank in the kusiut society is quite foreign to the Bella Coola, it is generally felt that Scratchers and Breakers are only slightly less important than Cannibals. The patron of every Scratcher is Sus'elsulx [776] Alquntām, one of the sons of Alquntām; this supernatural being scratches the supernatural ones in the land above, and his father alone can restrain him. The prerogative is fairly common, and it is probable that in early days there was at least one Scratcher in every village.

*575 The following account of the ritual was obtained from one
*796 of the Bella Coola marshals and describes the manner in which [424] the dance should have been performed by the Scratcher, Alusknaix, his daughter's daughter's son, who had recently obtained the prerogative formerly possessed by his deceased mother's father. It will be convenient to refer to Alusknaix as X and use the present tense in recording the proper ritual, though it was largely omitted on the last occasion the dance was given.

X arranges a suitable day with the marshals for receiving

1 [i.e. - the Scratchers - ANALYST]

[The Breaker Dance]

above; of sitting in one of the back corners and receiving the first food at ritual meals; of paying those on whom they exercise their prerogative, and of liability to frenzy on arrival of strangers. This last prerogative, if it may be so termed, lasts for the ceremonial season, and in the case of a novice, for the following summer as well. Moreover, Breakers do not destroy the goods of fellow-Breakers, Sorcerers, or Cannibals.

In view of the similarity of this rite to those already described, no effort was made to collect full details. Different Breakers have minor variations in ritual, similar to those already illustrated. The following is an account of the manner in which the Breaker, Ispû of Swalû, performed the rite a number of years ago. As on previous occasions, it will be convenient to use the present tense, and to refer to the dancer as X. Ispû gave the following account of the origin of his prerogative.

Long, long ago, soon after the first people had come to this earth, a marriage was about to take place in the village of Swalû'ai. At that distant period the people were so powerful that they could dismember visitors Sacrificial fashion, and the bridegroom determined to do so in honour of the event. He chose to imitate the actions of Smoïlqumûkûlû Alqaoïsm, one of Alqaoïsm's sons, whom he remembered having seen throwing stones in his father's house before he, the bridegroom, was sent down to this world.* When goods were piled up ready for distribution as marriage presents, the man began to hurl stones around; one of them disembarked from a bow, struck his bride and killed her. This unfortunate accident solved the question of his name, as by universal consent it was decided that he should be called, Ispû, "He of the Fowling Arm."

Since that time a law has been enforced that no Breaker may throw a rock except ceremonially during his dance, and the marshals punish one who disobeys this injunction. If a Breaker is in the forest with a number of Sakaiai, it does not matter if he fails to uphold this tradition; the essential is that the uninitiated do not see him cast a stone, even at a pulping dog, the usual reason for doing so in Bella Coola.

When X wishes to dance he must first obtain the consent of the marshals in the usual manner. He also arranges with Sakaiai to have beam and other wooden objects placed within

*This being is also called Nuskumamûkûlû, "The Cherished One."

[The Breaker Dance]

the house to serve as targets, and stones as ammunition. As 575* soon as the call comes, X cries out, begins to throw stones at 746* these objects, and the uninitiated are at once expelled. X is usually tied, closely guarded, so every house where he cuts [181] more rocks, and may break a number of utensils. Since it is well known that, under normal circumstances, he must never throw a stone, the uninitiated are convinced that he must indeed be animated by a strange power. This being bandmen, the bakwlar gather in X's house during the evening to learn 575* and practise one, or sometimes two, songs for him. If X is a 746*
wawa, the theme is of his ancestor and the accident which 533 originated the dance; on later occasions it is of his person and the land above. All Breakers do not have Sisiutlenuxlala Alpawiku as patron; some have Sisakhadi, a supernatural being who causes wealth to rail up and come to him. The chorus is the same as for Screechers, the meaningless words, 'ai, 'ai. It is said that this same refrain is used by the Breakers of all central tribes, so that their songs can be distinguished from those of Screechers only by the words. With the food, 575* presents are given to recompense those on whom X has dis- 746* played his prerogative, that is, those whose utensils have been broken. Sometimes canoes and other valuable objects are [431] destroyed by Breakers, depending entirely on their desire to [434] exhibit their right.

Next morning, naturally, X again becomes frenzied and rushes from house to house, destroying property. Of course this is later paid for, but the uninitiated have no idea that arrangements had been made for the houses and other objects to be placed in suitable spots. During the day a number of 575* bakwlar are sent to collect wood for nine masks. When mem- 746*
bers of the society gather in the evening the songs are prac- 532 tised, and the making of the masks allowed. One of these is 434 of Sisiutlenuxlala Alpawiku, four are of Breakers in the land 776 above,* four of supernatural beings who sing there for the supernatural Breakers, and one of the inevitable Ax'ilkwa. [1440]

*The relation of these Breakers to the person is not clear.

Sukwtaka myths dealing with the origin of the Sukwtaka dances. They believe that they are performed by the supernatural beings in the land above, and that long, long ago Alyoniche and his associates held a meeting at which it was decided to send them down to mortals. They chose as recipient a certain Ochwadiwa of Kinagwin, and the prerogative of giving Sukwtaka dances has since been possessed by the owner of that name.* The following account are of the dances performed by a certain Ochwadiwa whom it will be convenient to call X. He has six repertories, one for each section of his dance.

As with all other Sukwtaka prerogatives, the impulse to dance can come only on receipt of a call from a supernatural person, the being Katchhimodjin in the case of all Sukwtaka dances. The uninitiated are told that a call "falls" on the recipient, and moreover that for Sukwtaka dances it can take place only when the supernatural beings are coming out of the house above on the entry of the sun at the winter solstice. Thus Sukwtaka dances should take place after the winter solstice, although this requirement has not been enforced in recent years.

The Dance-Giving Dance

In the early summer X decides to exercise his prerogative the following winter. He informs one of the marshals of his wish, and the latter summons his associates to the secret meeting-place where the matter is debated at length. Danger of exposure of details to the uninitiated is so great that the marshals refuse permission for the performance unless the would-be dancer is a man of proved reliability. Once this consent has been obtained, X quietly proceeds with his preparations, laying in supplies of food and asking his Sukwtaka friends for their assistance. When the dances begin, X attends as do all other Sukwtaka, though his secret mental excitement increases as the time draws near for him to perform. The exact time of starting is discussed with the marshals, and a preliminary

*There are other Sukwtaka dances in Sahu Gwin.

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

very announcement made to the Sekaiar on the night of some gathering in the following manner:

As the Sekaiar are eating, one of the marshals rises, saying:

"I hear a supernatural one close at hand; some powerful being is drawing near."

The other marshals agree that they too hear its approach and the Sekaiar, always eager for dances, impatiently await further information. After further suspense, one of the marshals announces that it is coming for X. No mention is made of which dance is to be performed, and the information is wrapped in that veil of secrecy so essential to the Sekaiar society that they practice it even among themselves until it becomes habitual. During the night four young Sekaiar are sent out to the mountains near the village carrying small whistles. The uninitiated, hearing their weird sound, realize that a supernatural being is in the vicinity. This whistling is repeated twice during the night.

Sometimes the actual call comes to X on the following afternoon, but more often after the subsequent in the evening. When the display, whatever it may be, has taken place, whistling is heard from the mountain slopes. The uninitiated are so once expelled, ignorant, of course, of the fact that the noise is made by Sekaiar dispatched for the purpose. As they hurry out they are told that the noise is the drawing cry of a supernatural being, equivalent to the drawing dance by Sekaiar women whenever they are present at a manifestation of the supernatural. X, who appears to be listening, calls out:

"Please say what you want, I will do it."

Then he utters a low hum-like whistle and sits down, while the women dance. When several minutes have elapsed, X moves, unseen, to another part of the house and repeats his answer to the whistling which is still continuing. This is done a second and third time, but on the fourth, the call is supposed to have entered X, who covers as if something had struck him, while the women dance more loudly than before. Then sticks are beaten vaguely four times and a herald goes to every house

Smith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

After a short interval, she is answered by the singer in the 575* lower, western rear corner of the house as follows: 796*

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible] 533
Can there come to earth	the voice of Sxiimde-a	to revive 539
[illegible]

the one who to so injured himself.

The general meaning of this song is obvious, although there are several obscure expressions which serve to increase the wonder and fear of the uninitiated. Silence follows the singing, 575* then whistling is heard and a herald announces that one of the 796* puppet-patrons inserted into X has left him and gone to the 797 region above. Similar whistling announces the departure of others at intervals. When several have done so, it is time for the first to return. A thud, made by a hidden accomplice, is heard on the roof and whistling breaks out afresh. Sometimes the puppet-patron returns to X, but more often to its invalid, and his transference previously enacted is repeated over the body of the dancer who continues to lie as if lifeless. Now and then the uninitiated are invited forward to look at him and they notice that the gaping wound is slowly closing, as may occur to arrange in the dim light of the house. At intervals the puppet-patrons go and return from the land above, and its proceedings are sometimes delivered by the owners talking herald, who in turn informs the audience, what the puppet-patron saw on its journey aloft. Usually each goes and returns for times in the course of the night. Each of the [533] women selected to sing the mourning songs performs once, standing in corner of the house and waving a wand wound with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. So the 575* long night goes. Towards dawn continuous whistling is 796* heard. This, made by several men with a whistle apiece, each begins to blow as soon as the breath of his partner is [996] nearly exhausted. It is known to be the voice of Sxiimde-a. In Kitamaat, but not in Bella Coola, this is the signal for the [184] entry of the last road. Carpenters have made a wooden [532] figure of the ophibian and by means of concealed strings it is

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to discuss the event and lay plans for the future, but as it is now daylight they too soon retire to sleep. 575* 796*

The kwiatem ceremony resembles a double kwiat rite since it comprises two sets of four days and nights. The one on which X's stomach was cut is considered to be kwiatem. Accordingly, the heralds call the kukwiat to X's house early on the afternoon following and the regular ritual of nuxiatilap takes place. Some of the younger men are at once sent to the forest for wood to be made into more masks but, with the love of drama typical of the kukwiat, it is assumed that X himself is too feeble to accompany them. Accordingly his power is transferred to a substitute by means of the frenzied beating of sticks and repeated cries of kuip. On the return of the wood collectors, who carry their burdens as usual on tump-lines and set them down carefully, this power is restored to X in the same manner. The work of making the masks is now allowed. For kwiatem, and several other kwiat rites hereafter to be described, the dancer is entitled to show as many of the beings in the Bella Coola pantheon as he desires. Consequently if X is wealthy and wishes to have a spectacular nukwam, he orders many masks. Then the kukwiat practise a number of songs composed by the singers. One, or sometimes two, prepared for X is coached as if he himself were telling what he had seen in the upper regions. They describe Alquntám, his messenger Opalkic Alquntám, and, especially Kulelkátmidjat, the supernatural being whose stomach is periodically cut in the land above. It is he who has entered X and impelled him to suffer the same mutilation from the effects of which Snúwala has restored him. X himself usually remains concealed behind the matting in the rear part of the house, but sometimes, if he wishes to practise what he will perform the next night, he comes forward for a rehearsal. He still pretends to be very ill, and instead of dancing in the usual violent manner, totters around the fire, supported by several assistants, while he feebly shakes his hands. The women drone, and the uninitiated in the other houses realize that more exciting events are impending. [482] [424] [556] [792] [787]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

supposed to have taught them, he appears, supported by two kukwiut, and attempts to dance, but is too feeble to do more than be assisted around the fire, feebly shaking his hands. He retires, but comes forth once more as the singers beat out the song of regular kwiut type composed for him and which his fellows have practised. If two have been composed, he appears a third time. After X has finally withdrawn, the ritual proceeds in the usual manner, by the dancing of every kwiut who has had a call in time to his two songs. It is late before all have danced; then the uninitiated are given a little food and sent away. The kukwiut eat more leisurely, and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. On account of the solemnity of the occasion, their words of wisdom are even more grandiloquent than usual. The following may be regarded as a typical address: 575* 796* [574] 575* 796* 537

"You have done well, ye kukwiut, in thus carrying out the ceremony so admirably. I thank you. You have done well X, you have done as our fathers did. None of you must ever forget the precepts and example of our fathers who have handed down this rite from dim antiquity. Perhaps when we marshals are dead some of you will become careless and want to alter the ceremonial. Do not dream of anything so foolish. The proper method is that which you have just seen. Try no other."

When the marshals have finished, X dances once again, and the weary kukwiut at length disperse.

The next day, or rather later in the same day, for it is long after midnight before the ceremony is completed, is unknown. Many of the kukwiut assemble in X's house about four o'clock in the afternoon to try on the masks and attend to the innumerable details. A representation of Ana'kimalaxa is always prepared, as well as those of Alpaxoim, Sacwalaxa, and Swanalik. The last-named is the "Wise One," "He of Whom Questions are Asked," the supernatural being who decides points of ritual in the dances in the land above. No paint is used on his mask, but a coloured effect is obtained by means 575* 796* 532 [576] of the darker hue of the inner part of the wood. His nose and forehead are wrinkled as if in deep thought. Masks of many other supernatural beings and animals have been made, including two which are reserved for hamatsa dances alone. The first of these is X's patron, Kaldkâwidjat, who is capable of having his stomach cut. A face mask is made for him of the usual human type, and in addition a wooden stomach with a slit which can be moved by strings to display entrails painted on a frame beneath. The second distinctive mask is that of Opalitz Alpanzim, the herald of Alpanzim. Above his mask is fastened a bird, made of wood, the wings of which can be made to flap by pulling on a cord which runs down under the wearer's blanket. He carries a staff, decorated with alternate spiral bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with another wooden bird likewise provided with flapping wings. By the time the masks have been adjusted it is quite dark.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NES

The uninitiated, listening from their houses, hear first the frenzic, but measured, beating of sticks that always accompanies a curing ceremony. Then Opalitz leaves X's house, followed by all the hamatsa who have danced the same year and accordingly wear dyed cedar-bark collars, and many others as well. The party goes to the bottom house of the village where Opalitz pounds on the floor with his staff and cries out:

Xwa ....

The hamatsa chosen to wear this mask is one who has powerful lungs. The heralds, always in attendance, echo his words and explain to the wondering uninitiated who their supernatural visitor is, and that this is the way he summons the supernatural beings to the dances in the land above. Opalitz causes the wings of his birds to flap, the party moves to the next house, and thence in succession to every one in the village before returning to X's. After a short delay the uninitiated hear another crash of the frenzied beating of sticks, and again Opalitz parades to every house in the village. On this, his second round, his announcement is:

"I act as herald; prepare to come."

2:Mc:Uwealth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

A third frenzied bearing is followed by a third round of the village with the announcement: 595* 796*

"The fire is ready."

For the fourth time the tokaxiw in X's house leap time furiously, and again Qaalitc collies forth.

"Everything is almost ready," he says in each house.

By this time any lagging tokaxiw have taken their places in X's house, and when everything is in order one of the heralds calls out to the uninitiated that they may come. In they rush, and sit quietly in the corners near the front-door. Qaalitc, his work accomplished, stands at one side of the space behind the fire, while the invisible Ax'Ilwulaic moves to and fro, keeping up a constant flow of conversation. Sometimes Kulakkwaqlac stands behind the fire; on other occasions he has been known to walk through the house, accompanied by two assistants blowing eagle down over him. He moves his face as if in pain, and then lies down behind the fire, where the uninitiated can see his stomach contracting and expanding as if it had been ripped to expose the entrails. At the distance from which they view the spectacle it is easy to carry out the deception. Qaalitc sits down behind the fire and another supernatural being comes from one of the enclosures. As far as could be learned, the order of their appearance on the occasion when X performed was as follows, though there is no ceremonial significance attached thereto: 595* 796* 796*

Qaalitc.

Alqawim. He always wears a huge mask and the actor must have a powerful voice for at intervals he bellows out:

"Marvels! See me, I am Alqawim," while the heralds and Ax'Ilwulaic echo and confirm his remarks. He walks from one of the enclosures to the central position behind the fire, where he remains standing.

Sacaqlili appears and stands near Alqawim, his nose and forehead wrinkled in deep thought.

Sacaqlilaic join the group. These three supernatural ones remain standing for some little time, then they pass into

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1923) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 the enclosure in the opposite corner to that from which they had emerged.

786 Awunnuxtum. Three or four masked figures appear together to portray these beings. Their function is to remind Alpanism of those whom he should invite to his ceremonials above.

Snung. As this dreaded monster appears, the uninitiated cower convulsively and the kukuist women drone. Several masked figures accompany the Snung around the fire, blowing eagle down over the creature, ed Ano'likwulsaix explains to the uninitiated that this is to protect them from the monster. The heralds as usual echo his remarks. After one circuit of the fire, the Snung disappears into one of the enclosures behind the fire.

Hawkan. This supernatural mythological denizen of the mountains, is in the form of an enormous bird with long beak and bony wings. The mask worn with the disguise is usually about three feet in length, in the shape of a bird's head with long beak. A stick passes from its butt down the wearer's back and is held in place by his lip, thus balancing the heavy, projecting bill (see Plate 6) ¶ It is hinged so that the performer can make the mandibles snap together by pulling a cord concealed under his blanket. A good actor, and such is always chosen to represent this creature, bends forward and downwards so that the swaying beak almost brushes the floor; then he rises and pauses like a bird when listening and half startled. Now he runs a few steps, in a mincing manner, thus slowly circling the fire, and ultimately passes from sight into the enclosure other than that from which he has emerged. Several kukuist accompany the actor, blowing eagle down over him, the women drone on. Ano'likwulsaix keeps up a string of comments. After a short pause a second hawkan appears and circles the fire with its attendant kukuist. The same procedure is repeated for a third and fourth.

Alwuntlum. This is the supernatural herald for Thunder, the leading hawkan among supernatural beings. He wears

¶ [see category 116, p 164 (B) - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

a mask representing a man and carries a stick with which he 575* beats on the floor as he cries out: 796*

"Come, ye supernatural ones. The most famous kuxiut of 776 all [Thunder] is about to dance." 532

Thunder. The mask representing this creature is large and of fearsome appearance with hooked beak and overhanging forehead; it is always carried by a man of powerful physique (see Plate 9).[1] A box has been placed beside the enclosure so 575* that, when Thunder first appears, standing upon it, his ap- 796* parent size is increased. He bends to and fro, and up and 776 down, in an amazing fashion, blowing through his clenched teeth, while Ana'kiwulaix informs the uninitiated who he is, 535 and expatiates on his powers. After twisting and turning for several minutes, Thunder leaps to the floor of the house, and as he does so there sounds a peal of thunder. The uninitiated do not know that this is caused by a number of kukuxiut rolling stones to and fro in large wooden boxes within the enclosures at the back. Then he starts to dance sunwise around the fire, bending down and up, shaking himself and stamping violently, his amazing gyrations being constantly accompanied by the reverberation of rolling stones. Escorted by several kukuxiut he circles the fire, and after a final stamping and twisting, disappears into the enclosure. In a few minutes he appears again, and repeats his dance. Since no one man is strong enough to carry out this athletic performance twice in succession, the mask has been transferred to another kuxiut within the enclosure, but of course the uninitiated are unaware of this. Thunder always comes out four times in all, on each occasion dancing once around the fire. Sometimes four different men perform; sometimes the one who danced first has recovered sufficiently to be able to repeat on the fourth round. The usual explanations by Ana'kiwulaix add zest to the rite. On this occasion the customary dance of Thunder with a fire rattle was omitted.

Spagwudez. Twelve of these beings appear together, dis- 575* guised behind masks representing young girls. They are the 796*
[1] [see category 116, p 164 (c) - AMETYST] 776
[532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

*575 pre-adolescent children of various supernatural beings in the *796 land above who play together outside Nuxmit-a and refuse to •776 allow any man to approach them. As they circle the fire they sing a song of which the theme is their refusal to have anything to do with a man.

[532] The Hermaphrodite. This being wears a mask representing a cast of countenance midway between a "man and a woman," and speaks in a nasal tone difficult to describe. He circles the fire immediately behind the twelve Sqwaxaxa.

As the young girls are about to disappear into their enclosure, the figure of Sxaiaxwaa bursts forth from the other and at once the Sqwaxaxa hurry from sight, shepherded by the Hermaphrodite. Sxaiaxwaa wears a mask representing an [532] ugly and licentious man and carries beneath his bear-skin robe a partly concealed stick. He rushes around the fire as if in pursuit of his quarry, then likewise disappears.

*575 As before stated, the number of supernatural beings shown
*796 depends on the wishes of X. On the occasion now being described, the informants agreed that more had been used, but which they were had been forgotten. Sometimes the number is so great that all cannot appear on one night, so the uninitiated are expelled when the marshals think fit and the rite continued on the following evening, making two sakaam. In either case, after the withdrawal of non-members, the Sakaiat bare the masks in the manner already described.

For the rest of the ceremonial season X behaves as if he were recovering from a severe illness. He attends the potlas of every Sacial but, like Cannibals, Scratchers, and Breakers, does not blacken his face, sits with them in the rear corners where they are served with food before the other dancers. X is called upon to perform rather late on potlas nights and does so in a feeble manner. Towards the end of the ceremonial season, however, he has regained sufficient strength to move around freely, though he still maintains the mien of one who has suffered a terrifying experience. During the following summer he must likewise remain in comparative concealment,

* 575
* 996 592
976

PLATE 6

Photograph by the author

Masked figure representing a dancer

[p. 164 (B)]

2:McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE 9

575*
746*
776 ●
532
292

Photograph by G. I. Smith, Forestry Branch of Canada

Thunder dance. Notice the cedar-bark collar with pendant tassels and the framework of twigs decorated with eagle down.

[p. 164 (c)]

PLATE 11

575*
776*
776● 532

Photograph by McIlwraith

Thunder carving die Bellacoola

[p. 164 (E)]

[The Fungus Dance]

*575 from a distance. When one of the participants has speared
*796 the object, it is drawn to shore and carried into the house.
[424] The uninitiated are then called in and enter, often covering their heads with blankets to prevent their spirits being drawn from them. None of the Bella Coola appears to know what governed, in the old days, the choice between these two performances.

*575 The Fungus dance differs considerably from typical Iwaiar
*796 rituals already described. In part this is certainly due to 178 decay of custom. When the writer witnessed the dance in the winter of 1923-4 it was carried out very crudely by Snundd'ku, who, unwilling to admit this, was secretive about the proper ritual. Consequently, the performance of the dance was more of a hindrance than a help to the investigator. But even when full weight is given to this circumstance, it is clear that the Fungus dance is peculiar, particularly in the omission of masked figures on nukwum.

*575 The ritual on that occasion was further complicated by the *796 fact that Snundd'ku has also the prerogative of dancing at 821 an eclipse of either the sun or the moon, and insisted on this fact being brought out in connection with her songs. Four of [424] these were composed instead of the usual two, and the super-[583] natural beings described in them were:

Alpanidm: under the name of Snundd'ku.

[774] The Moon.

Smaiar-a: This was introduced on account of being the [582] place from which the Salmon-Bringer leaps to the sun. A mask representing this place of petrified power is always painted with salmon designs and the blanket of the wearer is decorated in the same way.

The Snumq muscles that act as posts at the ends of the sun's course.

Sillim: A supernatural being dwelling under the river who is able to use a fungus in a dance held there. Detailed information about this creature could not be obtained.

[583] At any eclipse, no matter what the season of the year or

Z:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

time of day, X must sing. The heralds call everyone to his house where the singers at once compose a new song, describing sun or moon as the case may be. They then sing it while X dances. Other kukuxiut have the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of the sun, and still others at an eclipse of the moon, but X claims to be the only one entitled to dance at both.

575 * 796 * 821 [333] [424]

THE MYSTERY DANCE

Mystery is the key-note of all kuxiut dances, but in the one termed Ałwatcłmł that element is brought home so forcibly to the uninitiated that it may aptly be called the Dance of Mystery. The Bella Coola explain that the word Ałwatcłmł means ałqum, "What Is Hidden." The essence of the rite, as explained to non-members, is that the supernatural power which has come to the dancer is embodied in three supernatural beings or in manifestations of them. Unless someone guesses its locations, the performer will die. The Mystery dance is one of the most lengthy Bella Coola rituals and necessitates such a lavish expenditure of food that only a rich man can undertake it.

575 * 796 * [556]

Accounts were obtained of the ritual as carried out by Sqoałin i of Tsimsił and Saiqnłc of Kimsquit, both of whom have the necessary prerogative. The details differ so slightly in the two localities that only one description need be given, and the dancer can be spoken of as X. The patron of most Mystery dancers is Sinałłqomałłc Ałqumłm, but that of Saiqnłc is Kukułcum, a supernatural being remarkable for his wild and erratic behaviour.

[424] [179]

When X has stored up as much food as he thinks necessary, he calls the marshals together to tell them of his desire to dance. In case of consent, they admonish him not to hurry matters but to perform the rite slowly and properly. Preliminary arrangements include the choosing of four kukuxiut gifted with good memories to store up in their minds the gestures made by the uninitiated. If many kukuxiut are anxious to dance, X usually asks permission on the night of a

J. McDougall E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NER Bellacoola NER

[The Mystery Dance]

what are to be the correct answers? The marshals decide on these, but their judgment really depends on the four remembrancers who are able to tell whether any of the replies they suggest have already been given. When Sniqnde performed, the answers chosen were: 575* 796*

Simalus, "The Coming of Foul Weather." This word is said to be in the language of the supernatural man. The implication is that this phenomenon of nature is a manifestation of the will of the supreme deity. [221] [796]

Nuxpaxte Sneiaikile, "The Eagle Down Sneiaikile." This has the significance of "The Peace Giving Sneiaikile" since eagle down is a symbol of peace. [225]

Kilmaximum, "The Yawning Chasm." This is the mysterious crevasse which opens before a foolish man when he tries to gain success. In cases where a white man would attribute misfortune to lack of ability or to sheer bad luck, the Bella Coola say that this supernatural chasm has opened before him. It is especially applied to failure in the giving of potlatches. [177]

Scarcely less important than the choice of answers is the second consideration, who is to give them. The uninitiated have been taught that X cannot live unless his riddles are answered, and also that whoever succeeds in solving them can do so only through supernatural assistance. As in the case of a person who finds a repository, so must the one who solves the problem be made a Sneiai. This is an opportunity for an influential man with a son of suitable age and character to have him initiated into the society, and an eager parent can always be found. He is told the proper answers, and instructed to whisper them to his son the following evening. It is impressed upon the father that this must be done only at the last minute, and that every precaution must be taken to prevent the young man from telling his friends that he has been prompted.

Other matters are arranged at the same time. A shaman must be in readiness to assist in binding the future member of the society to secrecy, and every detail is worked out with care. [756]

2:16:Twenth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellecrosia NEA

who has had a call during the season. Nothing further need be said concerning the ritual of gotlow which follows the pattern already described. 575 * 796 *

During the following day a screen of yellow cedar mats is raised in one of the corners behind the fire; it must be large enough to conceal those who are to wear the numerous masks and give them space to fit them on in comfort. The kokaciut begin to gather late in the afternoon and the usual long discussion takes place as the carpenters decide who shall wear which mask, while the marshals move to and fro. There is no stage-manager to settle disputes, but ultimately order evolves from chaos, and when dusk has fallen the heralds are dispatched to invite any kokaciut who have not appeared. When all is in readiness, a shout is raised for the eager uninitiated, who come crowding in to sit near the door. Ana'kkwalaic moves to and fro, in and out of the enclosure, talking all the time, and telling the uninitiated that presently they will see very powerful supernatural beings. The following account is of the masked figures used when Spanlin i last performed the dance; it must again be emphasized that their actual choice depends on the wishes of the dancer and his family, and that the order in which they appear is immaterial. His performance was probably the typical nakaum of a Mystery dancer. 575 * 796 * 532 776

The first to appear are Swackwai and the three hiding-places of X's power. Since they are always uncommon, it follows that no fixed designs are possible, and the carpenters rely upon their own inventive abilities to paint and carve human-like beings. Ana'kkwalaic gives eloquent explanations as the Jawi walk around the fire and disappear from sight. It would have been equally proper if they had appeared singly.

Next comes Ainalkwalaly Alpanlin, wearing a small mask, barely covering his face; above it, in his hair, is dyed cedar-bark puffed out to resemble a wig. He carries a stick with a band of the same material around the middle, and a tuft at either end concealing a nail with sharp, projecting point. Around the fire he dances frantically, leaping into the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

* 575
* 796 532
776

air, throwing his arms around as if demented, and at times hurling his rod to the floor where the nail prevents it from falling, much to the amazement of the uninitiated. He stoops to pick it up, reverses it, again throws it to the ground, and again lifts it up, all the time gyrating on himself. Finally, with a rush and a leap, he disappears behind the screen whence he came. One of the senior ɬuɬuziut, selected for the purpose on account of his knowledge and intelligence, is stationed near the enclosure, and as soon as the supernatural being disappears he explains to non-members who was the visitor. The ever-talkative ɬwa'ɬkuulsis confirms and supplements his remarks.

The next to appear is a mätqas, a wooden figure about two and a half feet in length with proportions equal to those of a toad. It emerges from the matting at one side of the house, and by means of concealed ropes is made to hop across the floor and return. Behind it there appears a masked male figure carrying a huge wooden hammer; the ɬuɬuziut shriek, "Kill! Kill!" and the man strikes at the toad-like creature. It has been made in two sections which can be pulled apart by a skilful manipulation of the ropes; this is done as the hammer descends so that it strikes a bladder filled with red dye in the interior. The colouring spatters in all directions like blood, but after a short interval the animal is pulled together and hops off to the enclosure. The ɬuziut announcer tells the uninitiated:

"That is a toad from the land above, a mätqas, which came to visit X. It will soon return to its own home."

After a short pause to let the effect of the last apparition sink in upon non-members, the ɬuɬuziut raise the cry:

"Look up there."

A porcupine emerges from a small hole in the matting and crawls down a plank, then turns and goes back, pulled by ropes invisible in the semi-gloom. The figure consists of a real skin carefully stripped off and stretched over a wooden framework. The announcer declares:

"It is a porcupine from above, come to visit X."

[522] Two clowns now appear together. Each wears a mask,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 575*
796*
522
[532]

representing a man whose mouth is open and whose face is wrinkled in a grin spreading from ear to ear. They go around the fire laughing and playing, rolling on the floor and indulging in all kinds of antics, with constant fits of laughter, so deep that it seems to come from their stomachs. Only one or two men in the community can make the hoarse sound required, and they are always asked to appear as comedians. They are entitled to make witticisms, often of an obscene nature, at the expense of any of the spectators, and the kukusiut always join in laughter at the victim. Sometimes the singers beat out a short tune and the performers dance clumsily, to the amusement of all. When they have withdrawn, the announcer explains that these two spend their time in the land above playing and jesting. If the preliminaries are long delayed, the clowns may be sent out to keep the audience amused while waiting for the more important beings.

575*
796*
532
776

The Hermaphrodite next emerges. As previously described, he dances around the fire, singing in a peculiar nasal twang, intermediate between the voice of a man and a woman. Few men can do this satisfactorily. When the Hermaphrodite has disappeared, the announcer explains that he always remains outside the house in the land above where he plays with a number of women who stay there, and over whom he is lord. His face is that of a woman, his voice that of a woman, but he has masculine characteristics as well.

Then comes Sxaiaxwax, clad in a blanket of evergreen boughs and wearing as ugly a mask as the maker can devise. The pattern varies according to the skill and originality of the carpenter; a common design is that of a snout-like mouth, somewhat resembling a pig with eyes askew. Sxaiaxwax cannot speak, but he dances around the fire spitting, blowing, and making inarticulate sounds in his throat. When he has gone, the announcer explains that Sxaiaxwax is a very evil being who spends all his time trying to seduce girls, especially those who play with the Hermaphrodite outside Nuqulkwaista. With them he never succeeds, but sometimes he comes to this earth

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Mystery Dance]

575 796 with fatal results to his victims. The uninitiated listen and are impressed as Ano'kiwudzaic confirms and supplements what has just been told them.

582 796 After a short pause, the announcer cries, O——, which serves as an invocation and precedes the appearance of every supernatural being. Snang emerges, a man clad in a bear-skin blanket covered with evergreen cedar, and wearing a mask of which the eyes can be made to swing open or shut by the pulling of concealed cords. The monster does not speak; merely circles the fire, terrifying the beholders by his ferocious expression. When the figure has withdrawn, the announcer explains the significance.

The next to appear is a Deer, Sno'ulodz Alpuxtaw, "The Foolish Son of Alpuxtaw." The skin and antlers of a real deer are worn by two men with sticks thrust down the legs to make the representation appear life-like. Two more performers with human masks follow, trying to catch the creature which frisks around the fire and avoids them by escaping back into the enclosure. The announcer informs the audience that this is no ordinary animal, it is a deer from the land above, the son of Alpuxtaw. This mischievous creature is said frequently to [578] destroy the back-room in his father's house, hence it is a mild term of reproach to call a person Sno'ulodz Alpuxtaw.

After the usual delay comes the Varied Thrush, an actor with mask representing a bird. This is considered to be the [825] finest bird songster; the Bella Coola say that all animals, including even mountain goats and halibut, gather to listen to its melody. The performer sings, then withdraws, and the announcer and Ano'kiwudzaic explain who has just disappeared.

Next is Wolf, a man wearing a tail and the stuffed head of one of these animals. He circles the fire, howling like a wolf, the performer having been chosen for his ability to imitate that sound. The announcer tells the uninitiated that they have just seen a wolf from Nuxpalwuxtin, and have listened to it howling for Alpuxtaw; as usual, Ano'kiwudzaic confirms his ceremonies. Non-members recognize that Dog, Varied Thrush, and Wolf are really persons, but they have no idea who or what they are, while their whole training, combined with the atmosphere with which the whole ceremony is surrounded, makes it easy for them to believe that they are seeing supernaturally endowed animals. If an uninitiated person should voice his doubts, he would be reported at once to the marshals by a spy and forthwith made a heyoei. 575* 746* 592 776 [181]

[The Mystery Dance]

The next to come forth is a figure wearing a mask representing a man, and carrying a long stick to the end of which is tied a bundle of burning rags. The actor must be able to run rapidly, and, as he dashes at full speed around the fire, the strips of cloth are drawn out into a flaming stream behind him, producing a spectacular effect in the semi-gloom. Ant'lilendaie explains that this is Shooting Star, a supernatural being who behaves peculiarly and who has, therefore, passed rapidly and without the drawing instruction that accompanies the passage of the other visitors. When Spoolee i gave this dance, the rags were dipped in coal-oil to make them burn brightly, and one informant thought that this particular supernatural one was, perhaps, not shown in the old days. It must be remembered that details of the ceremony are constantly changing according to the skill and inventive ability of the carpenters. [178]

To the accompaniment of O····· from the announcer and the drawing of the women, there next emerge four masked figures representing the four Carpenters. In whatever ceremonial they appear, their masks are the same because they, as master-artisans, are supposed to have fashioned them for themselves. They dance around the fire without singing and disappear behind the enclosure. Ant'lilendaie explains that these are Mamaeldinu, the Carpenters of Nespelemim.

Now Opelikie Alpanim comes forth. He is the herald of Alpanim who summons the supernatural ones to Nespelemim for the winter ceremonial. He wears a man's mask, surmounted by a wooden bird which can be made to flap its wings by means of a hidden cord, and he carries a staff on top of which is a similar bird that disappears within the veil by the pulling of a cord. This being is power of other Sakaciut, but this does not deter X from displaying him as his commonest Qaqlaxc Ayaxsiut goes around the fire, moving his head in a jerky fashion over his shoulder as if motioning towards something, and Sa'Ulmakaix explains that he was issuing an invitation on behalf of Ayaxsiut.

Then the meeting is drawn aside to expose the figures of Xmaxmakilala, Xmaxus, Gwgwakilala, Kwakilala, Kwakilala, Sgwaxus, Sgwaxus, Ya'ailas, Ahadit [illegible], and Tlcagalilas [illegible], each wearing a mask with his distinctive painting on it. Xmaxmakilala stands in the centre as chief of the party; he calls out impressively, but without using words, then, as he changes his tune, all the figures turn around sunwise, dancing as they do so. After this has been repeated four times, the meeting is restored to place. During this, Ya'ailas and Ahadit [illegible] do not remain stationary like the others. The former, wearing good blankets and a mask painted with red to give the appearance of an angry man, moves constantly to and fro among the other beings as if trying to obtain protection from them, while Ahadit [illegible], the Kingfisher, hops around in imitation of the jerky motions of that bird, continually poking his head forward and pulling it back. When they have vanished, Sa'Ulmakaix tells the uninitiated who were the figures they have just seen, and how fortunate they are to be visited by such powerful beings.

After the usual pause, there appears Thunder's herald, Kwakiutaxus, wearing a mask in human form and carrying a staff in his hand. He leaps violently on the floor with his veil and cries out:

"Come all ye supernatural ones to the dance of Thunder."

At once Thunder either rushes forth or sticks his head over the meeting and bellows forth:

"Hu! Hu! Dzu's come."

After Kwakiutaxus has circled the fire and retired to the enclosure he can still be heard violently pounding on the floor and inviting the people to Thunder's dance.

Pagaz follows, wearing a huge mask, and goes around the fire, incessantly saying to all:

"No. No. Don't come."

When he has withdrawn from sight he continues to convey the Shield's protection. Bel'Ilmalkain explains that Alwaddaman is hailed to the mighty Thunder, while Pagaz is a jealous-minded individual who does his best to ruin all ceremonials. He adds that he will not succeed on this occasion, and that Thunder will presently appear.

As evidence of Thunder's near approach there now emerges Ralwaqan, a masked figure who dances closely around the fire, raising and lowering his outstretched arms. Bel'Ilmalkain hurriedly gives the name of the visitor, then the ceremonie cries out as loudly as possible: "Thunder the mighty, the leading factor of all the supernatural ones is coming; he will condescend to speak to the ceremonial."

The women drum and the Salaria beat violently with sticks on the floor, then the meeting is drawn back to disclose Thunder himself, crouching on a raised box. He wears a huge mask, with hooked nose and bulbous forehead, which is so heavy that the wearer must have pads of soft cloth to ease the weight against his skin. The upper part of his body is entirely covered with dried and unfolded cedar-bark, his wrists and ankles are similarly adorned, around his stomach is a dance-apron, and in either hand he carries a stick embellished with more bark. Sometimes for a considerable period he does not move from his stand, but remains alone, throwing his arms back and forth towards the corners of the house where a number of men are carrying heavy stones in boxes to imitate the reverberations of thunder; this extension of the arms serves to concentrate in himself his power which is manifest in the sound. When he has sufficiently impressed the audience, he turns around and leaps down; the drums beat, the sticks rattle, the men working the boxes with stones shake them violently, and Thunder shrieks out, all of which, added to the crash with which he has landed upon the floor, makes a colossal din. He dances around the fire, while the women dance out an accompaniment. The mask bears one opening for eyes and nose, blinding the performer, so that he has to be guided by X, and two other Indaxiat, though the necessity for their services is not apparent to the uninitiated. The faces of these conductors are blackened and they wear collars of dyed cedar-bark, but no masks; one of them carries some eagle down which he keeps blowing over Thunder's head. To the ignorant spectators it appears as if these guides were really Indaxiat attendants.[illegible] When the mighty supernatural one has almost completed a circuit of the fire he caps, holds out his shaking arms over it and absorbs power into the smoke; then ensconces the box behind the curtainpoles which he first jumped. One of the Indaxiat shakes in his hand a perforated rattle containing smoldering cedar-bark. Carrying this (see Plate 11) Thunder again leaps down and dances around the fire, guarded as before by X and the assistants, but this time shaking out burning sparks from the rattle. Now, instead of the drumming of the women alone, there is a prodigious racket as he goes around; the drums are beaten, the sticks are rattled, a man concealed on the roof crashes sal clamers on the boards, another pounds on loose planks with a heavy stone, while Thunder himself keeps calling at in a booming voice. Again he pauses to absorb power into the fire before retiring behind the curtains, which is then seen. The announcer cries out:

Wraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

"Thder Indaxiat of the supernatural ones has been with us; his fire was wonderful for us."

[illegible] Sometimes and there appears a masked figure of Sipalaxalis. This bag dances around the fire, without speaking, but at intervals drenching the audience with water from a dish which he carries. When he has completed his circuit and withdrawn, Sisi'Hulaxis discourses upon Thunder, informing the uninitiated that his fire-rattle is the bird of the lightning, a mysterious creature about which little is known. She adds that [illegible] Such guide-attendants often accompany other supernatural beings.

[See category 116, p 164(E) "Analysis"]

Z:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellecourte NEA

Sipakonów is the rain that accompanies a thunder-storm, hence the water with which the audience was soaked. 575*

There next comes forth an actor wearing a man's mask and carrying in his hands a sounding-board and beating-sticks, as if he were a singer, ready to perform at a ceremony. He arranges these in place, constantly glancing back over his shoulder towards the enclosure, then calls, and out jumps Ninjo, wearing a mask which makes his face appear long and very narrow. He shuffles his feet, moves his head from side to side, sways his body to and fro as if he were starting a spectacular dance, finally gyrates wildly for a very short period, without accompaniment from the man who preceded him, and then goes back to the enclosure instead of circling the fire. The apparent singer picks up his equipment and follows his principal out of sight. Ave'likmakwis explains that Ninjo is a most spectacular supernatural dancer, who was unwilling to give an exhibition of his full skill on this occasion. 946* 776* 776 [532]

Meanwhile preparations have been made for the second appearance of Thunder. The large mask is so heavy and covers the breath to such an extent that very few men are strong enough to bear it for more than two dances around the fire. The first wearer has now transformed his disguise to a second man of about the same build, and when the meeting is again drawn aside, it is to disclose Thunder standing on his raised box as before. Often a few variations are introduced; instead of extending his arms to attract his power, he may simply revolve with waving arms and turning head. When ready, he signals to those with drums and beating-sticks, then jumps down with a crash which is echoed by all the noise-making contrivances in the house. Thunder dances around the fire much as upon his first appearance, and inhales strength from the smoke of the central fire before returning to the raised box. He receives the cattle containing sanctifying herb, and runs more circles the house; after that he withdraws and the meeting is pulled into place. Sipakonów comes forth and drenches the audience with water, but Ave'likmakwis does not [532]

2: McDowell R-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

speak on this occasion as the explanation has already been given.

After a short pause the announcer calls impressively:

"Take care! The hamats are coming."

From within the enclosure there is heard the clacking of beaks, and presently a hamats backs out. The mask, about three feet in length, is that of a long-beaked bird, of which the lower mandible can be made to strike against the upper to cause the snapping noise. The wearer has little clothing but much dyed cedar-bark which conceals the stick that runs from the mask down his back to counterbalance the weight of the projecting beak. Another hamats likewise comes out backwards, then a third and a fourth. The four dance around the fire, snapping their beaks and uttering their cry, Hau, hau, hau, in unison to the stamp of their feet on the floor. X, with three assistants, accompanies them, apparently out of respect to the supernatural visitors and to guard the uninitiated from them in case they should become frenzied, but in reality to direct the steps of the actors whose cumbersome masks prevent them from seeing where they are going. A touch from one of the guides, or even the sound of his voice, is enough to tell the gyrating performer in which direction to move. When the hamats have disappeared, Ax'ilwulmain explains who the visitors were.

Next appears a Seal. The mask used is human in form, and the painting may or may not indicate the being represented. The wearer proceeds very slowly around the fire, turning neither to right nor to left, and withdraws. Ax'ilwulmain explains that this is a Seal from Nuquelmain which has come to visit X.

Another man-like figure now comes forth, his mask painted to represent a fish. Like the Seal he circles the fire without any special type of dance and withdraws. This is the Red Rock Cod, a fact which Ax'ilwulmain makes clear to the uninitiated.

Finally, the time comes when the last supernatural visitor has retired from sight. Ani'Ilmaiaiais gives her customary dance, her head bent as if she constantly wished to rest it on someone's shoulder, and her opposite arm waving violently. After one circuit of the fire she withdrews from sight behind the curtain. Then the mandals call the uninitiated to withdraw, and the growling Cumiltsais hurry down forth. The evening's ceremonials conclude in the usual way, except that the masks are not burnt.

The length of time required for the figures to appear and perform is so great that sahaawa can seldom be completed on a single night. When the mandals decide that it is too late for further dances, they can call a postponement at any time; the uninitiated are told to withdraw and the kakaxtas disperse shortly afterwards. The following evening they are recalled and the ritual is carried on from the point where the break was made. In this manner it has been assumed that it is possible to complete the display without postponement.

Four nights have everyone is called back once again. The kakaxtas first take their places, and then the uninitiated are summoned. The ritual on this occasion is identical with that just described for sahaawa with the same pronouncements of supernatural beings and the same explanations by Ani'Ilmaiaiais. After the uninitiated depart the masks are burnt, one at a time, in the manner previously described, this being the last event in the Mystery Dance.

THE DANCE OF W'ooxina

Nadagwan is not, according to Bella Coola mythology, the only bringer of salmon to the river, nor is he the only one whose action has been dramatized in a kaxtas dance. A similar purveyor of fish is W'ooxina[1] who comes every year to Bella Coola. Boas (p. 38) has recorded the origin myth connected with the rite, and states that the movements of this being influence the duration of the kaxtas season; this observation was not confirmed. W'ooxina is supposed to return from the land of the salmon early in January, and it is owing to his successful raid that there is a plentiful supply of fish the following year. The fact that the Bella Coola attribute the same function to Nadlqnem provides no difficulties to native philosophers.

[1] Also called Kwakwaqlanu, "Place Bringer-for-Food."

"Different individuals have different stories," they say, and the fact that the two are contradictory is a matter of no consequence.

The incidents described in the following myth are always spoken of as having taken place long ago, and yet the coming of Wiseius is an annual event, a contagion discovering to the investigator though not to the Bella Coola themselves.

Wiseius[1] was led a raiding party against the salmon, whose home is far in the west, and against the herring who live in a far and more remote beyond even the land of salmon. His own companions were all birds who are spoken of in the myth by unusual designations, and to be either their supernatural or their human names. The salmonoes spoke of these beings as individuals, and only added that they were birds as we also thought, while another emphasized their avian rather than their human characteristics. This is not surprising considering that the myth belongs to the distant past when birds and human beings were not as clearly differentiated as they now are. Wiseius's own companions were:

The Bald Eagle, Tsilmaqk;
The Hawk (?) species, Sculqulqulq;
The Raven, Tsemqulaxm, "He Who Talks in Dawn and Makes Dawn";
The Water Ouzel, Nilmamalqlm, "The Walking Owl";
The Great Blue Heron, Mesmilkm, "Long Neck";
The Hummingbird, Sklqmx;
The Cormorant, Tsemlmlk'a, who joined the expedition as Bella Bella as a passenger;
Four less supernatural beings, Tsemlkk.

The expedition was under the special protection of Kulsem, a female supernatural shaman, who guided the canoe to which the raiders travelled by the force of her medicine as if it had been a compass. After a lengthy journey, the party reached the land of the salmon where the chiefs delegate defied her to the heavens so that the fish could see their

[1] As seen etymologically connected with wise, the Bella Coola term for rain.

G-98 Dewalt B-9 (1922-1924)948
IEA Bellacoola NEB

[The Dance of Winning]

fish. Each of the crew represent a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 993

The Bald Eagle represent the spring salmon, Ohoddimas, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk represent the sockeye salmon, Nanakkamum, "The One that Preserves in the Head of the River." 539

The Raven represent the hump-back salmon, Anadjumain, "The One that Fills the River."

The Water Owl represent the dog salmon, Ipsalmas, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the rainy weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron represent the coho salmon, Kwaqumamalain, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant represent a variety of log salmon, Gaipas, for the Bella Bella.

The Hummingbird—the successful—filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of berry caterpillars.

As soon as the eagles had achieved this purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their boys, whereby since there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and caused the dog salmon there; due to why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola Indians have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reason given for the use of Winning as person likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Alquanim gave the name Nanakamum to a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Ba, near Dean. He had two reasons for a doing: he did not wish to be defiled by passersby breathing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the crew to be the first to see the return of Winning. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have pacified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nanakamum has had the dance prerogative of seeing Winning. 424 993 998 [996]

[The Dance of Winaxina]

424 Another kwaiat derived the prerogative of having Wiwaxina as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 43). After Raven had seen Nuskymx and obtained him for Alilawaikaix, he flew down the food once more, observed Wiwaxina, and made him patron for Ompaikilda.

575 The ritual of the dance of Wiwaxina does not vary, irrespective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

[778] This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository is actually in the ocean a few yards from shore.

[424] Wiwaxina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the January moon is full,[*] accordingly X consults the marshals and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a raised enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most kwaiat dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the kwaiat happen to be present on the evening of this day, X moves to the enclosure and sits there, looking westward for the return of Wiwaxina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail feathers, but his face is not blackened.

[995] For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the west, and meanwhile no uninitiated dare even to pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the kwaiat who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning, [805] [*] Saying as lunar calendrical observations the exact date is seldom found.

They dispute in this manner concerning the capture of every kind of salmon and even about the herring. Kwélitsa-lisis keeps up a running stream of comments to the uninitiated.

"Listen to the stupid Kwaiáitl. That is what they did when they went with Wiwaiáa. They spent most of their time sleeping, and the rest of it arguing. Don't you be such silly fools as they are. Watch what you are doing, and you may be fortunate enough to see me in the woods and become a Sacred."

As soon as the uninitiated have watched these beings for a time, they are expelled and the ritual ends in the usual manner.

In conclusion, a word may be said regarding the attitude of the Bella Coola to Wiwaiáa and his canoe. Like all other supernatural manifestations it is capable of bringing good or evil to the beholder. An encounter of every Wiwaiáa dancer must have seen it and obtained it as patron, but it is a dangerous visitor onto the land. Sometimes, at night, a hunter encamped on one of the lands hears a growing sound accompanied by short paddle strokes; if he calls out "yaa!" loudly, no harm will come to him, but if he omits to do so he will soon die. One informant affirmed that within his lifetime a party of Kimsquit hunters were waiting for high tide when they heard the growing. They failed to hail the craft and presently a sound reached them as if a number of paddles had been placed in the water to check the course of a canoe; in fact, the ripples splashed on the shore at their feet. In a few years they were all dead.

THE DANCE OF MOTHER-NATURE

One of the most interesting of the Bella Coola dances is that portraying Nanaxóla, who is virtually Mother-Nature, giving birth to the flowers and trees in the spring. The following account is of the manner in which Kalitc-i, a Kimsquit man, performed the rite. The ritual appears to be identical in Bella Coola, so only one account need be given, and the performer may be spoken of as X.

This dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial sound of the whole performance. The ritual is of the regular type with the composition and practising of a song. 575* 996*

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

During the evening of the next day, morrow, the usual carpentry tasks are allowed. Only three masks are required, one of Bu'lkwalaxa and two of supernatural beings named Mulaxa, as if they had the power to lengthen or curtail the lives of human beings. The ritual on yellow warrants no special description. Late in the afternoon of tahwaw the Sahaxa assemble in X's house and the uninitiated are presently invited to see them all rush forth with these masked figures in their midst. Assuming, of course, that these are supernatural visions, the frightened non-members retreat to their houses where they peer forth at the figures as they parade up and down the show beside the river. They can easily recognize Bu'lkwalaxa, but not her two companions whose faces are painted black and white, and who have projecting, snout-like mouths. After this pantomime and a certain amount of dancing, the party return to X's house whither the uninitiated are presently summoned. The two Mulaxa dance around the fire while Bu'lkwalaxa explains their power over the lives of mortals. The Sahaxa now ask the uninitiated to withdraw and the ceremony ends in the customary manner. [532] [532]

X must perform this full ritual at least once after obtaining his Sacial name with respect to it, but on later occasions he can, if he so desires, limit himself to the second part of the ceremony with the appearance on earth of the Mulaxa. [424]

THE DANCE OF THUNDER

According to Bella Coola belief, the supernatural ones in the upper land resemble human beings in performing Sacial dances. Like mortals, some of these above are more powerful and more famed than others, but the senior Sacial among them is Thunder. Corresponding to the prowess of his person, the dance of his human prestige is one of the most important Sacial rituals. The essential feature of it is that Thunder calls all supernatural beings to witness his dance, and in consequence 575* 996* 424 996*

*575 his followers on earth can do the same. The ritual of subdues
*776 of a Thunder dance is accordingly identical with that of a 424 Mystery dance. In the field an effort was made to obtain [77] accounts of what had actually occurred at dances rather than of what should have happened; at the dance of Mystery, previously described, several of the usual features were omitted, and these were accordingly left out of the account. They will now be mentioned in connection with the dance of Thunder, but the fact must be emphasized that they belong equally to all Sacrar rites in which the dancer has the prerogative of showing all supernatural beings, including Thunder.

[55] In Kimsquit the name of the Sacrar having the prerogative of singing of Thunder signifies, "The Raven," with reference to his person. The native term could not be known. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X.

*575 The Thunder dance is of the normal Sacrar type in every *776 respect, so no account need be given of the ceremonial of the 776 first three days. Many masks are ordered on the night of sacrificing and these are really only in rehearsal. During these days the supernatural uninitiated are excited to see the masked figure of Bal'lilwaulaus emerge from X's house, accompanied by a throng of Sakarsir who chase all but members of the society back to their homes. Following them comes Thunder's herald, Alwaulaus, calling on all to prepare to come to the dance of Thunder, the leading Sacrar of the supernatural beings. This messenger circles four[4] to summon the supernatural ones to Thunder's dance, the reason that all can be shown at X's ceremonial. Immediately behind Alwaulaus comes Tlapit, the Dancer, proclaiming that Thunder's dance is not worth attending since he, and he alone, is the senior Sacrar of the supernatural ones. Bal'lilwaulaus adds his usual comments to the remarks of the two masked figures. This series of invitations and counter-invitations is repeated four times during the day, to the wonder of the uninitiated who pass out through chinks in the houses and around corners of the buildings. Sometimes Alwaulaus and Tlapit pass from

[The Dance of Thunder]

575*
796*
776

rated to physical exponents, and one occasion is remembered when the latter was shoved from a canoe into the river.

In the evening the dancers are first called in, to be followed by the uninitiated in due course. Thunder dances in the manner already described, though, if possible, with one more vigour and abandon than when he was only one of the performers in the Mystery dance. As recorded in that dance he performs twice, on the second occasion carrying a vessel containing burning shreds of cedar-bark. After each circuit of the central fire, Rainmaker appears and drenches the assembly, as rain accompanies a thunder-storm. The dancer's skill displayed is always impressive, and a touch of comedy is added by the interested remarks of Finger who does his utmost to bedevil Thunder. [522]

The time-keeper for the super-dancer, Night, appears after Rainmaker. When the ceremonial is carried out with care, he wears a skull mask to show that he is a ghost who has come from the land below to assume in the call of Mountainous. He has been seen to sings a wordless song of the dark. The skill of Night as a dancer is due to the fact that he is a practised mountain goat among supernatural beings. The uninitiated look forward with eagerness to witnessing a remarkable dance but after a few violent convulsions the performer withdraws followed by the musicians. [532] [533]

It would be needless repetition to enumerate all the supernatural beings who follow, so mention will be made only of those who are considered especially appropriate to the Thunder dance and who are accordingly shown on almost all occasions. Water Worm is a masked figure which begins about to an upward manner similar to that of the bird on the earth, and Bullfrog likewise imitates the movements of an earthly rabbit. Bullfrog endeavoring explains to the uninitiated that Thunder would like to [532] [825] wear the flesh of animals but that he is too big and too hot to approach them, so sends Mosquito as his messenger. The masked figure representing that insect carries a stick about six feet in length beneath his blanket, and runs around the house

[The Dance of Thunder]

575 796 776 [123] [981] with short, mincing steps. At intervals he pulls forth his stinger and rushes at one of the spectators, poking the weapon at him and humming fiercely. The writer took the part of a supernatural mosquito at one of the dances held in the winter of 1922-3 and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the Indaxiai were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers. Another being who often appears at a dance of Thunder is Rainwater-Dripping-from-the-Roof. The masked figure walks slowly around the fire and Ant'kwalaxis explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the planking. The Clowns [522] are never omitted, and always cause amusement amid the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the sage remarks of Ant'kwalaxis. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a masked figure slowly toddles forth. It is Snail, who started at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrived too late to be present at the dance of Thunder. Snail circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

575 796 [424] [821] Dances whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patron occurs. If Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"It [he does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too hastily up aloft. Xwa ...."

[789] The call of xwa — is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any Indaxiai women present at once dance, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lowest house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and

[The Ghost Dance]

they sit in silence, awaiting his arrival. Presently word is sent 575* to him, for he is always hiding near, and he comes through the 946* door and sits near the fire. But he does not resemble the man who left the village. His face and body have been painted [787] green with crushed leaves, in imitation of the colour of the dead; in his hand he carries a horn, said to be part of the leg [302] of a dead man, though in reality it is from a deer. After him the ghosts enter one by one. They are a number of kukwiat who have been painted black and green to give them an un- [302] earthly appearance; there is no fixed pattern, each following his own, or the carpenter's ideas of the unearthly, though the body colour on which the other tints are smeared is usually white. Each dead man has a special name and each acts accordingly in an eccentric way. One enters walking backwards, another hops on one leg, and a third walks on his hands—because ghosts always act in the opposite manner to [775] mortals. Each trills in a peculiar way and performs something like a dance, waving his arms to and fro, up and down, constantly pointing with one finger, before lying down close to the central fire. With them enters a woman with painted face, clad in a blanket and carrying a basket on her back; she is [776] Alpaulac, who gathers berries in the land of the dead. She begins to go around picking up any small articles that she sees and depositing them in her basket, from which anyone picks them out at will and returns them to the places whence they had been taken. One of the first actors to appear carries a stick for time beating, and acts as leader of the ghost singers.
Whenever a spark from the fire lights on one of the dead, causing the latter to jump, the leader pounds violently with his stick. When all are present, the leader beats time and they prepare to leave. Ghosts are fickles, however; consequently, [775] instead of going straight to the door, some go in one direction, some in another, but all are at length shepherded outside. X and his visitors, with a large number of kukwiat, go to every house in the village repeating the same procedure, in silence, except for the trill of the dead man. The uninitiated do not

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 X's, where he is soothed by the four times repeated frenzied
*996 beating of sticks and his call returned whence it came.
[777]

During the rest of the ceremonial season X becomes mad at intervals and displays his insanity by rushing to every house and throwing dirt and sand. His hakaiat escort is always with him, and the procedure is identical with that already [424] recorded. X makes no recompense for the damage inflicted, so it is probable that his fellows do not regard his dance as an unmitigated pleasure, but nothing can be done to deter him from exercising his prerogative.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CHARMER

*575 Although the Bella Coola are probably as moral as members
*996 of any other tribe, they enjoy humour of an obscene nature, ●996 and a dance which never fails to provide amusement is that of [522] the Supernatural Charmer. The patron of this is Sainsainmdi, [881] a beautiful, unmarried, feminine being who is also named Alipuin i and Nuxkwalkaic. She is thought to disregard the efforts of her supernatural relatives to restrain her, and comes to this earth where she bestows her favours not only on human beings, but on animals. Her prestige at Kimsquit is a young [587] man, Kilaiuic, at Bella Coola, a young woman, Kwalkmu; [562] like all other hakiat names these can be used either by men or [424] women. It is said that Kilaiuic's prerogative is derived from the experience of an ancestor in past ages, whereas that of Kwalkmu was initiated three generations ago by a very powerful chief. The ritual in each case is identical, so the dancer
[536] can be referred to as X. Each has the prerogative of singing [532] not only of Sainsainmdi, but also of the being known as Wiwinimmd. Many masks are required at the rehearsal of either of these beings, so it is customary for X to perform with respect to Sainsainmdi one year, and to Wiwinimmd at the next or a subsequent ceremonial season, though the actual songs always refer to both persons.

*996 When X wishes to dance he consults the marshals, obtains *575 their consent, and then makes final arrangements as, normally, the gulon of another dancer. Next night the call comes to him in the ordinary manner, and the heralds go through the village announcing what has taken place. The uninitiated are expelled at once from X's house and the kokoiar presently assemble to listen to the song being composed by the singers. The theme is of Iximcimdi; how she came down from above and travelled all over the world shamelessly luring men and animals; how various supernatural beings tried to restrain her without success; how she went to the house of Spil and was trying to induce several young men living there when Wiwaiwawat appeared and endeavoured to make her behave herself, but without avail. The song then describes Wiwaiwawat who seems to be a warm wind, engaged in a never-ending duel with the cold winds.* No detailed description is required for the ritual of wacimiliay, where a second song with the same theme is composed, or of gulon, since these follow the typical kociar pattern.

575 *
796 *
[588]
[796]

During the afternoon of wakawa, the kokoiar gather in X's house to try on the completed masks and make the final arrangements. Whistles sound so continuously that the uninitiated remain either within their own homes or near them, ready to hide in the bedrooms if necessary. Within X's house the carpenters are supervising the choice of masks; a fluent man able to speak like a woman is, as usual, chosen to represent Ko'likmdwir; another with similar qualifications is selected for Iximcimdi, while the other masks can be worn by almost anyone. Presently a strange procession leaves X's home and enters the lowest house of the village where the uninitiated hasten into the inner rooms, but watch proceedings through cracks between the boards. First comes X himself, his face blackened and wearing the usual collar. He remains standing near the door and watches as Iximcimdi enters and slowly proceeds around the central fire; she wears a mask representing a young and beautiful woman. Behind her come her lovers,

[592]

*Definite information concerning the identification of Wiwaiwawat could not be obtained.

2:16:Howaith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Supernatural Lover]

her house while the singers compose a new song. The theme is of her patron, the young male being, Kwat ixal-a, "The Big One." It describes how he came from above and went far and near over the earth in lustful pursuit of women, how each victim fell in love with her seducer so that she followed him in all his wanderings, how Loon befriended him, and how he exchanged his blanket for a covering of abalone-shells. 575* 796* [533] [796]

On nacintálap when the kukusiut as usual go to the forest, they bring back not only wood for masks but also the trunk of a large cedar tree, at which the carpenters work during the two succeeding days. On nakusaw a parade occurs of the supernatural beings similar to that in the dance of the Supernatural Charmer, but the masked figures represent women, not men, of the different coastal tribes. Kwat ixal-a leads the procession and pays no more attention to his mistresses than did Sximsximdt to her would-be lovers. There is the same licence for lewd remarks, of which Kwat ixal-a takes full advantage when he calls the attention of the young men to his following, and asks them how many mistresses each has had. [532] [831] [522]

In the evening the uninitiated are called to X's house where the first object they see is the tree-trunk, converted by the carpenters into an enormous bird. Wooden wings and a loon's head have been provided and the whole is painted in imitation of a loon's plumage. Kwat ixal-a is in evidence, wearing a bird disguise. Presently a matting enclosure in one of the rear corners of the house is thrown open, and the uninitiated see the throng of his mistresses who rush forth, almost coming to blows in their eagerness to reach their seducer. Awhkwalsaix stands on one side and explains the significance. After the mock combat has lasted for a few minutes, a Cannibal begins to growl and the uninitiated hurry out. The ceremonial then concludes in the usual manner. [532]

This dance differs from all other kusiut rites in one respect, since the call can come to X several times during a single ceremonial season. Of course there is no compulsion; she uses her own discretion as to whether she dance more than once, [424]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 but a proud and energetic dancer sometimes repeats a ceremony three or four times. [424]

THE SUN DANCE[54]

[776] [821] One of the forms in which Ałquntäm appears is that of the Sun, and in that case he is referred to as Sinxälotla. Considering the importance of this deity, it is rather surprising that the kusiut dance of which he is patron is not more impressive. Efforts were made to obtain full details of the ceremonial from several informants, but only a number of incidents and a bare [124] outline could be obtained. In part this was due to the fact that none of the informants[55] were themselves protégés of Ałquntäm, but this is not in itself sufficient to explain the comparative unimportance of the dance, since full accounts were obtained of other rituals from those who did not own them.

Nothing was learnt of the origin of any of the Sun dance [424] prerogatives, except that ancestors of the owners obtained them from Ałquntäm. It is a common right, and kukusiut having [551] Ałquntäm as patron are found in every village, among them being Qpxolän·i of Tcmotl, and Nexnexliwalaix of Nusqalst. As far as could be ascertained, the ritual of various Sun dance performances is identical, so one account will suffice and the dancer can be termed X.

Like other kusiut dancers, X can perform at any time during the ceremonial season, subject to the approval of the marshals. The call comes to him in the normal manner, the uninitiated are expelled, and the kukusiut gather in his house to practise the songs which the singers have just composed. The theme [533] is of Ałquntäm, describing his manifold functions, and particu- [776] larly that of guiding the Sun. The following day a second song with similar theme is composed, and in the evening the tasks are allotted for the manufacture of masks. Four are re- [532] quired; a large one representing Ałquntäm himself, one of [171]

[54] Needless to say, no connection or similarity is implied with the dance of the same name in other areas.

[55] Except one man who had forgotten all details since his conversion to Christianity many years before.

2: McIlwraith E-6 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NES

[The Sun Dance]

*575 dance of Nuákmum is omitted owing to the large expenditure
*796 required, X must sing, without a call, in conjunction with the Wi.a dancer. In this case also the details are lacking.

[824] Likewise at the winter solstice, when the tarrying Alquacow
[821] at last enters Nuspulwaiste to greet the waiting supernatural kukusiut, it is incumbent on his protégé to perform in his honour below. The singers are always ready with a new song for the occasion, and in the evening his fellows assemble in his house to learn it. X wears the usual ceremonial collar, but he lacks the awe-inspiring qualities of a kusiut who has had a call. When the song has been sufficiently practised, the uninitiated are brought in to listen to it and to watch the dancing of X. At the conclusion of the performance they are given a little food, provided by X, which they carry away while the kukusiut remain to eat at their ease and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. It is probable that the ritual carried out at the beginning of the ceremonial season is identical with the above.
[821] One old man stated that long ago it was customary to dance in the same manner at the summer solstice; this might be expected, but confirmation was unobtainable.

*575 Like the protégé of Thunder, X is sometimes called upon 796 to perform during the non-ceremonial season. But whereas a 821 Thunder dancer acts when his patron is apparent by peals of sound, X must do so when his patron is invisible through an eclipse.[] The ritual is almost identical with that already described for a Thunder dancer so nothing but additional details need be inserted. X visits every house shaking a rattle, which is not the case with Thunder dancers. After his circuit of the village, the kukusiut gather in his house where the singers are [533] composing a new song describing the phenomenon. The words explain that Eclipse, the supernatural being Nuqtsly[*], has blocked or destroyed the path of the Sun, and add how disastrous it would be if the Sun could not recover its way. Later on, the uninitiated are called in to watch X's dance which, like

[776] [192] [*] The Bella Coola term both for "eclipse" and the being responsible is Nuqtsly[*] which also means "A Fire That Has Died Out."

McDougall E-9 (1922-1924) 1965
NEA Bellacoola NEA

the one that takes place at a thunder-storm, is said to "make good the path" of the person. It would formerly have been a very serious offence for a Sun dancer not to perform at an eclipse; his failure would probably have been punished with death by the marshals. One informant vividly recalled his fears when he failed to perform at an eclipse soon after his conversion to Christianity, and reiterated that he had been in deadly peril from the marshals in spite of the white man's law.

575* 796* 821 688 177

THE MOON DANCE

The Sun is not the only heavenly body that acts as patron to kusiut dancers, the Moon also has many human protégés. Among them is Nakuimāx, "The Moon When It Is Unobscured," of Tsmoil, from whom the following account of the Moon dance was obtained. As usual, he can be spoken of as X.

776 55 424

The Moon dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject, of course, to X's wishes and the consent of the marshals. The coming of the call is heralded in the usual manner and the kukusiut presently assemble to learn the song just composed. It describes the following supernatural beings:

Aiuiānum:[11] A woman who lives in the moon and who can be seen in certain of its phases, always carrying a bucket of water.

575* 796*

The two Aipuainst: These two beings are able periodically to blacken the Moon's face, thus causing an eclipse.

821 776

The two Switmāwa:[12] These kindly women clean the Moon's face after it has been blackened. It is these beings who come to earth to assist stricken kukusiut.

The song also describes how no supernatural being dares to pass the Moon's house during an eclipse, a prohibition similar to that obeyed by uninitiated with regard to passing outside a house where a kusiut ceremony is taking place.

784

[11] Aiuiānum is the usual term for ghost; no reason was given for the application of the same designation to the woman living in the moon.

[12] There is difference of opinion among the Bella Coola as to whether or not there is more than one of these beings.

775 192

[K. Octopus Dance]

*575 Cawalhal begins to growl and soon the kukuxiut are left alone
*796 in the house. The singers have not a new song for X and the ritual continues like that of any other kuniuxw. No description is needed for the ceremonial that occurs on nacoxalisp and qulen.

On the evening of sakcum the uninitiated are summoned in due course. The exact number of masked figures shown would not be known, but among them is always an octopus.
[532] The rite concludes in the usual manner.

The presents given in connection with the Octopus dance
[431] are more valuable than those bestowed at most kuniut rituals, accordingly none but wealthy people are able to carry it out.
[532] The heralds especially are always beneficiaries.

THE DANCE OF THE DARK-SHADE

*575 One of the most peculiar and irregular of kuniut dances is *796 that performed by a certain Kalqum, whom it will be convenient to call X. His patron is the supernatural woman Sinqumlentwi, Dark-Shade, whose home is beneath the thick ever-424
•[770] greens of the river valleys, thus explaining the darkness and shadows found in such places. X's repository is beneath some [778] large cedars near the northern side of the Bella Coola valley, a few hundred yards above the end of the ford; it is probable that other dancers with the same patron have repositories in other dark and gloomy spots.

When X wishes to dance he must as usual obtain consent from the marshals who insist that he delay his performance until after the solstice at earliest. The reason is because his [776] patron, Dark-Shade, alone of all supernatural beings, has the power to open every repository; X brings her to the village and [787] in consequence calls come to many kuniut,[100] which would be undesirable during the first few weeks of the season. On *575 the evening of the day selected for the beginning of the dance,
*796 X steals away from the village with three or four kuniut, [100] The implication in this case is that calls come from repositories, not from the land above, the customary source.

source of awe to the uninitiated, who marvel that a man can still appear like an ordinary mortal when he has just brought a supernatural visitor home. According to one informant who, however, is not well versed on Sacrist matters, there is neither qulam nor sulaxam, and Dark-Shade is merely seen every other four days. This may be the case, but the dance has not been carried out for many years, and the man frankly admitted that he did not know the details. It seems more likely that there is some kind of ceremony, since a song would not be composed unless for a definite purpose.

The coming of Dark-Shade complicates the Sacrist ceremonial since a number of dancers receive their calls simultaneously. In this case the ritual is carried out in unison which requires, for example, the composition of one song for each performer on Sacrisnow. Calls never come in this way to dancers with important or complicated prerogatives, but it is a useful means of dealing with those whose right is merely to sing of their patrons. On sulaxam the patrons of all are displayed, a method which has the advantage of producing a dramatic effect which would be lacking if only one were in evidence. The coming of a call by means of Dark-Shade is called xulendiwat, "Emerging from Below to Plain Sight." Another time when several calls may come simultaneously to different Sacrist is at the winter solstice when, on the entry of Hiqamlem, the supernatural beings rush forth and some of them fall, causing calls to come to their human protégés.

THE DANCE OF THE STONE MAN

Yayulmpl, the man who was petrified with his Ocean Lake wife and four children at the beginning of time, is patron for a Kimsquit Sacrist man named Kwaste. His repository is just above high-water mark on the east side of Dean Channel, about five miles from its head, and about one hundred and fifty feet north of the legal fishing boundary. This is almost immediately opposite Yayulmpl's station. The repository is beneath the ground, and its doorway is a beaver which became

© McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

but as kukuiat all understand that later performances by them with the same name are only possible with the assistance of carpenters. This dance has not been carried out for so many years that the details have been forgotten.

THE DANCE OF THE BIRDS

The Bella Coola notice that in autumn many of the birds disappear, to be seen no more until spring. Ignorant of a warmer climate to the south and of the causes of migration, they explain the phenomenon by saying that Alquntim collects the birds in some mysterious place for the winter and releases them in the spring. It is believed that he does the same with supernatural birds in the land above. The setting free of the birds which is in effect a scattering, is known as nuxwukut and is personified; he is the patron of a kusiut named Ğuxta. For the nuhuam of this man's dance a huge circular cage containing wooden birds is constructed. By means of a regular mass of hidden strings they are made to "fly," to the extreme amusement of the uninitiated. This is one of the most complicated kusiut rites. Contrary to the usual practice, no eagle down is used for fear that it might settle on the strings and betray their existence to the spectators.

THE DANCE OF DARKNESS AND SLEEP

The patron of this dance is a being who has the power of bringing nightfall, and later, sleep. In accordance with his double function, a dual personality is attributed to him. In fact, he is almost two beings; as Sinqlominit, "Darkness," he causes night to come once every twenty-four hours, whereupon as Sicitoma, he brings sleep. His kusiut protégé displays on nuhuam figures with black painted masks, representing both phases of his patron.

THE DANCE OF THE WHIRLWIND

Whirlwinds, though of rare occurrence in British Columbia, are known to the Bella Coola who believe that they are caused by the being Snulsiaxwanem. Like all supernatural creatures, Whirlwind usually remains in the land above but sometimes visits this earth. He is patron for a kusiut who displays a mask representing him in characteristic form, the design of which is said never to vary. 575 746 776 [821] [532]

THE DANCE OF THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bella Coola believe that an earthquake is caused by the earth slipping very slightly from the grasp of Sniwin. This being is patron for certain kusiut and whenever a tremor occurs, his protégés call their associates and a dance is held. This may, of course, be at any season, and the ritual during spring or summer is identical with that described for dancers whose patrons are Thunder, the Sun, or the Moon. The theme of the song is of the manner in which Sniwin performs his function of holding the world. A call from Sniwin may also come in the normal manner to one of his protégés during the ceremonial season, but the ritual is of the usual type and merits no special description. In Kimsquit, Sniwin is patron to a kusiut named Ałłhałłałain. [823] [533] [551]

THE DANCE OF TIDE-MEASURER

The height to which the tides shall rise is decided by a male supernatural being, Mułłałałałsum, "Tide-Measurer." He is patron of a kusiut named Tsał, whose repository is near Sałłia. One of Tsał's ancestors brought the rite with him from above in the beginning of time. The songs used at the dance describe how Tide-Measurer uses a stick in deciding how far the waters shall rise. During the day of nakusam the uninitiated are told to go to their houses but, by peering round the corners and through chinks, as they always do, they are able to see a masked figure walk into the ocean, and thrust down to the bottom a stick which he carries. This is repeated four times during the day. [823] [551] [778] [533]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BULL-HEAD

Since any supernatural being can act as patron to kusiut dancers, and since all mammals and birds are, in a sense, super- [825]

*575 natural, any of them can act in this capacity, though it is *796 usually added that the animal in question is the one resident ● 776 in the land above. One person of this type is the ordinary 825 river bull-head. It is said that long ago this fish wanted to [779] follow his friends, the salmon, to the ocean, but was persuaded to remain in the river to act as nurse to their children in his house, the river bottom. Early in the world's history he objected to people exposing his dwelling, that is, pulling up the [821] stones from the river-bed where he was wont to lie, and showed [224] his resentment by sending a very cold wind. Ever since that time boys are not allowed to fish for bull-heads in winter. As far as could be learnt, this dance has no special features.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL HERRING-HEAD

One of the supernatural beings living in the land above who is patron for a certain kusiut is the head of a female herring.
Little is known of this being, even her appearance is subject to [532] doubt. For the sukuam of her protégé, a number of masks representing herring, as well as human-like beings, are prepared. When the uninitiated are present, one of the disguised figures calls to his fellows to bring their nets and capture the fish.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL DOG SALMON

Another fish dwelling in the land above is Dakdakānus, the supernatural dog salmon. He is patron of some kusiut but the ritual of the dance, known as ownāwanais, was not obtained.
The similarity between Dakdakānus and Dakdakānmem, those who await Nadkynm, appears merely to be an accidental re-[192] semblance in terminology, dependent upon a stem meaning "to come," or "coming." The significance of this in connection with the supernatural dog salmon could not be ascertained.

*575
*796 776
184
[755]

THE DANCE OF Almoqlaikila

In Kimsquit it is believed that Ana'likwelsaix has a husband, Almoqlaikila, who is patron for several kusiut dancers.
His function is to restore to life any uninitiated who chance to 575*

796*
776
184
[755]
[534]

mumble upon a repository and are smitten down by his wife. Like a shaman, he does this by blowing violently upon the back of the victim's neck and calling out, hoh. From constant repetition his mouth has become large and round. When displayed on sabaxam, the mask representing Atmaqhaitsila is painted black and has bulging, blown-out cheeks, and a round protruding mouth as if in the act of blowing. Neither the dance nor belief in this figure appear to occur in Bella Coola itself.

THE DANCE OF THE OUTSIDE-OF-THE-HOUSE SAME-BEING

In the land above there lives a supernatural woman who spends all her time in pounding cedar-bark such as is used, either dyed or undyed, for ceremonial objects of different kinds. Her name is Ipsiqhtsum di Xemsitsila and she is patron for various hakuxint. On the sabaxam of her Kimsquit protégée, she appears as a masked figure engaged in her usual occupation and makes a circuit of the house while a salmon is displayed. The relationship between this being and the salmon is problematical, and it is uncertain whether or not the same rite is practised in Bella Coola.

[532]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL AWAKENER

575*
796*
776
[532]

Every morning in Nuxqulmaitsa the woman Ipsiqhsymmâ-a goes around waking up the supernatural beings. She is patron for several hamat dancers. On the sabaxam of her protégé, a masked figure representing the Awakener goes to every house in the village and pounds on the doors, but does not enter, to the relief of the uninitiated who have sought refuge within the bed-rooms.

THE DANCE OF DAWN

[821]

Not only must the supernatural beings be aroused in the morning, but every day the Sun himself must be requested to appear; this is done by the beings known as Xemsemtsum, who are patrons for several hakuxint. On sabaxam they appear and Ana'lkwulsaix explains to the uninitiated who they are and

[The Dance of Dancing]

[575] [746] [776] [333] what they do. With them comes the being Ow'ixtemas, "The Sleeper," wearing a mask to represent a drowsy man who constantly yawns and rubs his eyes. It is explained that this being delights in sleep and does not care if the sun never rises.

THE DANCE OF THE GRIZZLY ONE

Nanulkwaikum, also called Tatwat-ai, is a grizzly cinnamon who spends his time going from one supernatural being to another in the land above, always begging for food. He is patron for several kukwiat and on the nalaxam of one of his protégés a masked figure representing the Grizzly One visits every house in the village asking for food. The uninitiated [532] retreat to the bedrooms, but the kukwiat comply with his request. In consequence the dancer's house is filled with food [481] which is given away to the kukwiat guests.

THE DANCE OF THE REPOSITORY MAKER

[778] Some repositories were constructed in the beginning of time by the supernatural being, Nanodjipum, who is patron for several kukwiat. On the nalaxam of one of his protégés a [532] figure, masked to represent a male being, appears and Awi'ilkwalaxic explains that this is the maker of repositories. It is [184] uncertain whether this being is found in Bella Coola or only in Kimsquit.

THE DANCE OF Alquntám'S SLAVE

In the land above there lives a slave of Alquntám who spends his time providing fuel for the fires in Nuxqulwaxite. He is patron for a Bella Coola kuxiat, though the details of his dance were not obtained.

THE DANCE OF Alquntám'S HERALD

Ojulikts Alquntám is patron for several kukwiat. During the nalaxam of one of his protégés a masked figure representing him visits every house in the village, bidding the kukwiat

D.-GR-Dawson B.-9 (1902-1904) 968
IEA Bellacoola NEA

575 *
796 *
776 unable to witness the dance of Ilpuntsin. This is his function in the land above, as it is natural for him to do the same in this world.

THE DANCE OF Ilpuntsin'S FISHERMAN

Ilpuntsin in the land above has a servant who uses a hand-net, sem, in fishing for his master. He is accordingly known as Ilpuntsin's Tsemsim, "Fisherman," and is patron for a Sacrist.

THE DANCE OF THE TOP

The playful Sawilpumkilt Ilpuntsin has a favourite toy consisting of a stick which can be made to spin between the hands. This top, if it may so be named, is patron for some Sacrist. The writer was unable to learn how it is displayed on ceremony.

THE DANCE OF THE POINTED HAMMER

The patron of one Sacrist is a hammer which in some way was changed to stone in the beginning of time when the Bella Coola River first flowed to the sea.

THE DANCE OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR

A Sacrist named Sulwai has, as patron, a grizzly bear resident in Ilpuntsin's house.

424
575 *
796 *
539
[178]

Various Origin Myths

In most cases Sacrist dances have been preserved until the present day, although the myths on which they depend have long since been forgotten, but the reverse is sometimes the case. The following myths, were recorded with few, or no details of the associated dances. In several cases, one of the same type has already been recorded, so that the significance will be apparent.

A COMPOSITE ORIGIN MYTH[161]

Long ago there lived in Sinse a man and his wife who were powerful, prosperous, and able to give their children many good names. This [161] Related by Mrs. Willie Mack.

[115]

Boas Dowaldk E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

directions. Then the joyful owner was able to draw back her crystal and the sick woman at once recovered. 424 575 *

Another prerogative of the same nature is lodzilla. As the kukusiut are gathering and before the main ceremonial of the evening, the man or woman with this prerogative can display it if he so desires. He stands up, stamps, then bends down and begins to beat with a stick on the floor; the singers, who know what is to take place, quickly join in. This serves to concentrate the performer's power, consisting of the ability to scratch the external genital organs. The sticks continue to sound as the performer moves about the house, acting in accordance with his right, and at the same time rolling his eyes and licking his lips. Choosing either man or woman as he desires, he calls out his name, and the person addressed must come forward to take his hands. The power is thus transmitted and the one so chosen begins to scratch, with the same accompaniment of rolling eyes and licking lips. 796 * 787

"It is sweet," he cries.

The power is then returned to the owner, who later passes it to another victim, until the marshals decide it is time to proceed to the main rites of the evening. The use of this prerogative is a source of never-ending amusement to the kukusiut. The only explanation given of this somewhat peculiar ability is that it is practised by the supernatural beings in the land above. Like every other kusiut rite, it can be performed only by a person who owns a name in which it is embodied. [522] [776]

Sie'mste, the third of these prerogatives, is to imitate the action of holding sexual intercourse. Like the last, its use is limited to the house in which a dance is taking place, and can be carried out only while the audience is waiting for the main ceremony. The performer, man or woman, stands up with a rope pressed close across his stomach, held with hands clenched at the hips. It is said that in this position nothing can pass behind him. The singers and other kukusiut begin to beat time to concentrate the actor's power as he stamps around in a crouching posture, crying hoip and shaking his hips. Pre- 424 575 * 796 * 787 831 522

424 usually he begins to grunt, and calls the name of either a man
*575 or a woman. The person so designated must take the per-
*796 former's hands, thus assimilating his power, and in his turn 787 begins to shake and grunt, amid the laughter of all. Presently 851 the "gift" is returned, and later passed to another recipient.
522 Sometimes a modest woman shakes her head instead of her [776] hips, to the intense amusement of the audience. After some time the owner draws his power to himself and the main ceremony of the evening proceeds. It is said that the supernatural beings above perform sisemia.

The Death of a Kusiut

*575 A detailed description of kusiut dances and ritual has now 766 been given, but certain special features still remain. One of *796 these is the method of disposal of the body of a dead member 787 of the society. In dances which are completed in four days, there is little likelihood of the performer's death, but this is by no means uncommon during the long seclusion of a Cannibal for example. In this case there is no wailing, and the death is concealed from the uninitiated, sometimes even a wife being kept in ignorance of her husband's decease. A mask representing the patron of the dead man is hung in the house behind the fire as a constant reminder of what must be done.
From the ceremonial point of view, the serious aspect lies in the fact that a call has come which has not been sent back, and which cannot be sent back by the receiver. The marshals discuss the matter and agree that it must pass to some kusiut, a near relative of the deceased, who is informed of the decision and does not dare refuse, even if he should wish to do so. After a delay of two or three days, the body is taken secretly to the grave and buried, while the kukusiut sing the dead person's song. This causes the call to shift to the chosen relative who completes the ceremony in due course. In the case of a Cannibal, for example, a considerable amount of time is allowed to elapse, and meanwhile the uninitiated are told that the kukusiut are still waiting and watching for his return.

533*
[115]

(a) Recorded on song VII D 36, National Museum of Canada; singer, Reuben Robinson, leader, Jim Pollard, grandpa; and commentary, recorded by Pat in Charles and Sometimes Pearle.

(b) Meanings: On to shown on display on ancient rights, this song was used at a potlatch.

(c) That is: Eagle is pleased. This supernatural being was used as entertainer.

(d) Eagle is said to display a proud and arrogantly disposition by trying to [776] ● [illegible] the voices of others.

(e) That is: Human beings.

(f) Eagle.

(g) That is: In his guise he is trying to imitate the voice of a goose chief.

Song of Tsawalak of Kitsumkalum

A [illegible]
I am angry,

[illegible]
I shall generously display

[illegible]
the water that was brought down

[illegible]
by him(c) who came down(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (e)

B [illegible]
Were ready for

[illegible]
Ałkamałkamis(f)

[illegible]
his dishes(g).

[illegible]
It was sometimes as large as a pond(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 43a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) A figurative expression for slachan geese.

(c) Referring to one of the dancer's ancestors, a chief who descended to Kitsumqalt in the beginning of time.

(d) This song was used at a potlatch and is accordingly phrased grandiloquently.

(e) The wordless chorus consists of an oft-repeated name which is said to be the name of the pigeon. The singer was unaware of its application.

(f) Ałkamałkamis was a chief who, in the beginning of time, came down midway between Kitsumqalt and Kitsilas.

(g) That is: Dishes, carved in form of his crest, were awaiting Ałkamałkamis on his arrival.

(h) A reference to the great abundance of slachan geese.

Song Used for [illegible] of Kitsumqalt(a)

A Kaidimsimsimqlt[illegible]
They(b) will come to receive Ałqamitsudai

my valuable goods(c)

Dzalqałkałdai which Łqamłk(d)

Ałłkamałsudai brought down.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

(c) As further to the dancer's ceremonial myth, one of his forefathers succeeded in obtaining a vivid ghost. 593*

(d) Many origin myths describe houses, provided by Hiyaxsa for the high spirits, which expanded of their own accord to accommodate guests or patronches. The reference is to one of these, although it was impossible to record the myth itself. [775]

Song Used for Quest of Kwaquilla

A Pitsaqulaxa Know yourselves for is,	ná'ldzamk ye residents!	Ólólqulqulaxa You which is our supernatural beings(a).	ayaxdzqaxdzi

[WOMAN'S SONG]

B Sholtsamlaxdzaxa As the lumens(b)	dzilldzyindza the four corners(b)	dzinxwmaxa sacred bounds!	ma'nalaxdzaxa of our provided food(c).

[WOMAN'S SONG]

C The third part, if it ever existed, has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 6b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. Quest was his mother's brother.
(b) The dancer's ancestors are invited to gather to witness his performance.
(c) Thus is: The mouth.
(d) Referring to one of the dancer's earliest ancestors.
(e) The reference is to the Kwaquin River which teems with salmon; the dancer describes the fish as the fare provided for his ceremonial family by Hiyaxsa.

Song Used for Quest of Kwaquil (a)

A or B(?) Limmamalaxa Go out and see,	ye ná'ldzamk ye residents!	Yaxsimaxlaxdzi It is apparent(c) dzyitsdzai what travels everywhere(d),	dzyaxsdzilaxa what brings our food(c)	dzmdzyaxsdzmdzi from its home(f).

[WOMAN'S SONG]

C Dzyaxqulaxa That is	dzitdzaqulaxa the chief	Lislislilda(g) Lislislilda;	dzyaxqaxdzmdzi he carries a heavy burden(h)	[776 424]
mdzyaxqulaxdzi in his canoe	lamdzyaxsdzmdzi from his land.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 6c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Only two of the three parts are remembered.
(c) The actual meaning of laxsimaxa is: What is Apparent. Its use in this case is, therefore, an untranslatable pun.

[633]
[772]
[424]

(c) A somewhat beautiful reference to the power of the dancer's talisman.
(d) Another arrogant reference to the talisman.
(e) Ts Bella Bella.
(f) This is a Bella Bella being of whom little is known by the Bella Coola. The right to use him as a talisman came from a neighbor community.
(g) Presumably, the dancer's right to perform.

Fragment of a Song Used for Exam, a Kimsquit Ism(a)

A Hiyaumsnis	mathumsimskap	Tahumsimsnis
Present your faces,	you quiet people!	In always shooting arrows

Sachumsqualhum
my wealth.

[musician comment]

B and C have been forgotten.

[musician comment]

Sytsuiim	Sachilhumsmalhill
Don't do that,	they will cover us with valuables(b).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to be an extremely ancient one, used by some of the earliest settlers; the tune is said to be entirely different from any recent nuxalk compositions.

[424]
[825]
[775]

(b) The dancer's crest was the wasp, an insect which is believed to sting by the discharge of invisible, minute arrows. This admonition to the guests to hide their faces was, of course, a boasting reference to the goods which would be distributed at the approaching potlatch. Some of the first settlers were sent down to earth as a wasp, but several, including Nankilla, were guided and assisted by those insects to such an extent that they have been regarded as crests.

[558]
[424]

(c) It is customary, when quoting this song, to add this final remark. It is related that, many years ago, a Kimsquit man used his wasp prerogative, but was shamed at the potlatch by being inundated with goods from a rival. Since that time, none of his descendants has dared to use the right and the admonition against doing so has become almost proverbial.

Fragment of a Song Used for Nuyuikmainis of Kimsquit(a)

A Sparaqlitsum	chalipalmilhal	Dilipalpilhalal	matinupasals
We all go	to see(b).	He(c) informs us	of what he carries.

B and C No more of this song is remembered, though it was used at a potlatch about 1900.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
(b) Meaning: To gaze upon something supernatural.
(c) An unnamed supernatural being.

J. McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEh Bellacoola NEh

Nuxŭkámy Songs

The texts of nuxŭkámy songs are fragmentary and unsatisfactory. The rites in which they were used have long been discontinued and, since they were never ceremonially important, there was nothing to impress either tunes or words on the minds of the singers. In addition, it is probable that the songs were always less carefully constructed than those of other types. 533* [794]

Song Used for Ḳalnal(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

Ḳiscaxwinaiye	ałkwaxałałcinaiye	xiwinawłondai
Be happy,	ye people,	it is about to come,
dzifułnayamdai	dzqałałnaxaiye
that hidden one(c),	Beaver.

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

Ḳalnal'i	Ḳalnal'i	ne nai yai
Beaver(d)!	Beaver!	ne nai yai(e).

(a) This word means "Beaver." It is most unlikely that it was the dancer's own designation, more probably a nickname used in connection with the nuxŭkámy rite. [551]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 9b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.

(c) This signifies a person who is hidden ceremonially, such as a hamat dancer who has gone to the land above. The dancer expected to be a Cannibal and the rite in which this song was used served as a kind of rehearsal. [796] [575]

(d) This refrain replaces a second and third part of the song itself.

(e) A meaningless series of choral ejaculations.

Song Used for a Kimsquit Woman(a)

Axnaqdimqudzk:	ḥapimacudax	tuxwimaschidax	ałwmałtchidax
They heard	of Fawn(b),	when they were playing	long ago(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9d, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) The theme being of a fawn, the dancer wore a deer-skin. [595]

(c) As in many nuxŭkámy songs, the words refer to an ancient story, probably one describing the adventures of deer and wolves; see vol. II, p. 425.

Song Used for Wasaqilaix, a Kimsquit Man(a)

Lilirwmastnimy	waowmnsqstn-ai	waiytiki	sqalanopt
Run in all directions,	ye dogs,	for the first time	it is there nuwaqalmm	atuitkyanam	maoic	maoic
he brings much food(b),	go below the house	ʔ(c)	ʔ(d).

[776] [192]

2: McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*583 (a) Recorded as song VII D 9b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louis Hall.
[776] (b) Presumably a reference to Sisiłyum, the dancer's hactsi garment(?).
[192] (c) The meaning of this word is not known; it is considered to be quite distinct from the identical term in Chinook jargon for "then."
(d) The meaning of the whole song is extremely obscure.

Marriage Songs

*633 As marriage songs, two distinct classes may be considered:
585 A. Those used at weddings;
[582] B. Shaming songs used in connection with divorce rites.
[578] The former are said to have been handed down from the distant past and consist of a few almost meaningless words. The latter are composed whenever required, and consist of foul allusions to the person being ridiculed.

WEDDING SONGS

Stuxx Marriage Song(a)

'Nuxuqwtldimqwuxuit!	yas isłqwlaiyulas	ałuxufuxułuqis
Danced for joy	Łwlaiyu(b)	when they brought al'ałłuxuxuxułux	yas łutqaqsp uxułłux
the girl	from the place of light(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 3b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

[773] (b) Łwlaiyu came down with uyuyayut in the beginning of time, and brought,
[424] as a gift from Alqantem, the prerogative of dancing at weddings. He landed at Kimsquit, and no explanation is given by the Bella Coola for the use of this song [773] by the people of Stuxx.

(c) A reference to a marriage among the first people on earth. One of Łwlaiyu's associates married a woman whose relatives had brought light with them from above.

Kimsquit Marriage Song(a)

Sak'łalalimqwuxułux	yas łuxumtłalaxułs	uastłqulyułxułumłux
They sent down	Xumtsla(b)	with his relative yas isłqwlaiyulaxułs
Łwlaiyu (c)(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 2b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

sisłiyuktminandas	Tłowsiks'łis	Tinłpinmainandas
all, everywhere, know of	Tłowsiks'łis(or).	They(f) crossed repeatedly yas ełułowsitnandas to Tłowsis(gg).

(a) The first four parts of this song were recorded as song VII D 7a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It is said to have been composed about 1870 for a chief whose son had been drowned. It was later used for a nephew of Łewi, and will henceforth be employed only by members of that family. [424]

(b) That is: Why has my son died?

(c) It was impossible to obtain translations of each subdivision.

(d) Referring to the dead son.

(e) That is: The supernatural being, the chief, has taken him. The reference is to the deceased's crest animal, a common rhetorical device in songs.

(f) An ancestor of the deceased and one of the first settlers of the world. He came down to Rivers Inlet.

(g) Tłakwakila is said to have widened, or even to have made, the principal river at Rivers Inlet. [773]

(h) Tłakwakila came in the form of a raven.

(i) Referring to Łwinas.

(j) It was impossible to obtain translations of these two subdivisions. Łwinas, now dead, will be irremovably connected with the scenes of his first ancestor.

(k) Meaning Raven.

(l) The mother of Łwinas who had died several years earlier.

(m) The theme now changes as if Łewi were addressing Łwinas.

(n) Referring to Łwinas.

(o) Refers to the supernatural beings who rouse the sun and moon and thus cause their light to shine on earth. Mention is made of these in Łwinas's origin myth. [776] [821]

(p) The theme changes again from direct address to Łwinas to a description of what he will be doing owing to his ancestral history.

(q) That is: He will be in the form of one of the guardians of light when his life descends, at a memorial potlatch, to Rivers Inlet.

(r) That is: That was what Wałks brought. Wałks, another of Łwinas's first ancestors, could not find a suitable place to settle in the beginning of time. After fruitless wandering, a whale emerged, vomited violently, and was changed to stone. The animal thus became Gosse Island, and its vomit the rugged rocks at one end. Wałks settled on that island. [773] [823]

(s) This song has three third parts.

(t) That is: The first people, with their shaman-like power, had just appeared.

(u) Referring to ts'wanaka, another of Łwinas's first ancestors, who also came to earth at Rivers Inlet.

(v) At that time the routes between different settlements had not been discovered.

(w) More specifically, the crows, long breast feathers.

(x) ts'wanaka used a supernatural canoe which frequently changed to eagle feathers. [773]

(y) Refers to Sea-lion Island where he and his descendants used to hunt.

(z) Refers to the Bella Bella; several of Łwinas's relatives had married members of that tribe.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (aa) Referring to a spot outside Smith Inlet.

[976] (bb) That is: Tlelinki'lak' had just stilled the rough sea. She was another of Qwinso's first ancestors, the most powerful of a group of four consisting of her brothers, Nain'akwas, Tlaowika'lis, and Tlaliatlis, and of herself.

(cc) Qemoqwa's house, a reference to an incident in Qwinso's ancestral myth.

(dd) The house contained whistles and other valuables which they obtained.

[551] (ee) That is: All people, everywhere, know of Nain'akwas and Tlaowika'lis. Each name, though singular, has a plural significance since the other brothers are likewise implied.

(ff) Referring again to the band of first settlers.

(gg) A place on the mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island.

Song Used for Sinapsil(a)

A Yas ká'ásmaiusdimqudax	dinulóldsiásmá'ldil:	yas ká'ldsdudimodaax
They(b) will presently inform(c)	my dead relatives(d)	when they reach
yas ólóttsuwuiqudstax	dufukdjudjimultsidax	dualultpámtthmdax
the outer places(e);	they(f) see(g)	where they first came down.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Kas-ambdum-ásmáinx	aiyanasmaiumálmdi	ólusdáinasdidax
I clothe myself with(h)	my ancestral myth,	as it was dzudutiyo-mskidax	ydanaxufunm-ástskidax	aiyulámtsel'aiudax
in the time	of the Nanufmáli(i)	house.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skámalualumuwimt'	dásqwutamásmaálandax	ástmindjultsiál
Had just emerged(j)	the place where our relatives get their food(k).
Aiyadsemtátystax	ástlhkidimut-skidax	aiyawátki-adax
Thither went	when it became dry(l)	W'atki.
Ástkiyukldinlandax	dáno'asptu-ámhlkál	aiyattmtu-ukdil
That is why	all people, everywhere, know	of my ancestors(m).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 37, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. Both words and tune were composed by him about 1907.

(b) Referring to W'atki and his band, (I, p. 350). Sinapsil was descended from this group of first people.

[192] (c) The significance of this word is stronger than inform. It means that W'atki will relate to the deceased their ancestral myth.

(d) The chief for whom this song was composed had lost several relatives.

(e) Referring to Goose Island, Ya'ástsin, where W'atki landed.

(f) Referring again to the deceased.

[192 775] (g) The significance of this word is stronger than see. It means that those recently dead will gaze with rapture on the places which belong to them owing to their ancestral myth.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533
756

B Nuyumhulimlint They(g) sang | dinuxlhklilinlidai over my wash-basin(h); | dilqtlqum-ishli they all watched over yululxwulumm my shaman's power(i).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Ăuxwithumlint Became open | uxuxlulxwulitsda the place of shaman's power(j); | dmmdqumilsis there I saw Tlinqplitsu-alsis Tlinqplitsu-a.

(a) This man received his name and his ability to cure the sick from Tlinqplitsu-a about 1850. He was very ill, apparently on the point of death, at the time of his visitation.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 45a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) The first part is worded as if supernatural beings were speaking.

(d) The reference is to the healing ability granted to shamans who have themselves been cured when seriously ill.

[753] (e) That is: Human beings. It is believed that a person can be cured only if Tlinqplitsu-a or some other supernatural being implant within the patient's body some of the healing power.

[776] (f) The two choruses of this song have different tunes, an unusual feature.

(g) Referring to supernatural beings; this part of the song is worded as if Nisitamlsis were speaking, and describing the time he was made a shaman.

(h) Reference to the wash-basin shows that Nisitamlsis had the ability to cure the sick.

(i) The theme is worded as if supernatural beings had tended and brooded over the power which they ultimately sent down.

(j) The reference is to Nuxwăt-a which, as the home of supernatural beings, is consequently the place from which comes a shaman's power. When Nisitamlsis was at the point of death, it seemed to him that the sky opened above him so that he was able to gaze upon those resident there. He watched the supernatural ones conferring about his own fate, and gazed with joy at the departure of Tlinqplitsu-a to rescue him.

[551]

Song Used by Sikwulxulks(a), a Bella Coola Woman(b)

[195]

A Wikulxinlkumy It waved up and down | ciyumsis-sy^{w}alx Sony^{w}(c) | dinuxtsuhmalim when they(d) sang | ciyalqmumsilis of salmon(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sinuxpunlimint They(f) placed eagle down | dinuxlhklilinlidai within the wash-basin(g) | ilhmsim-ilhmdai where I was(h); dinuk'ishum-tmqalidai he(i) pulled me forth.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

C Wa'ell-ts'ma'nuxlh | yas ts'ts'ts'ma'nuxlh'ndal | ts'ts'ts'ma'nuxlh'ndal 599
I gazed upon | what gave me power as a shaman(f) | when it stood up 756

xawlx-amaw-a-ts'-ualx in the centre of a place of petrified power(h).

(a) This was the woman's Sacial designation; her shaman's name has been forgotten. [551]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 56, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tal'a Charlie and Steamboat Annie.

(c) That is: The sky moved up and down. Grandiloquent phrases of this kind are frequent in songs used by shamans. [195]

(d) Refers to the supernatural beings.

(e) Sinaxmile is said to be the word for salmon in the language of the supernatural beings; it is used by mortals in the rites following the taking of the first spring salmon. The shaman has received some of her power from a fish. [198] [226]

(f) Refers to the supernatural beings.

(g) Reference to the wash-basin shows that the shaman had power to heal the sick.

(h) The meaning is obscure. Apparently the shaman had been carried away by Thi'xpilite'-a and treated by immersion in a basin in which eagle down was deposited.

(i) This refers to the supernatural being, Ts'ax'nuxlmen, who restores to life mortals killed by the receipt of too much power from Thi'xpilite'-a. It is clear that this fate befell the shaman. [776]

(j) The woman is said to have received power from several sources, salmon, ghosts, and Thi'xpilite'-a herself. It is impossible to state which of her supernatural patrons is referred to in this subdivision.

(k) The woman must have been taken to one of the spots where cures could be effected by the power of a supernatural being petrified there. [755]

[551] [776]

Song Used by Nuxnar'malaxin(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Ts'ts'ts'ma'nuxlh | wax'ts'ts'ts'ma'nuxlh | aiakaxiaat
Look at the teeming supernatural beings above(c), not one is my equal(d), | wine one(e)!

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B *Sna'ts'ts'ts

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 533
754
[551
776]

(a) "The One Who Dances Near the Fire." This is one of Ṫlitcāplilān·a's designations and, therefore, one of the names she gives to those she cures.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 20a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) As is often the case, the theme is worded as if Ṫlitcāplilān·a were speaking.

(d) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions.

(e) Referring to Nuxmīx·mālsaix; such self-praise is a common device in songs used by shamans.

(f) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions. Reference to the mouth is in connection with the way a shaman accompanies his song by furious clashing together of his teeth. Ṫlitcāplilān·a herself does this.

(g) It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each of these subdivisions. Reference to the wash-basin shows that the shaman had power to heal the sick.

Song Used by Xmxmmslaix, a Kimsquit Woman(a)

A Sqapaxal'ālumāl	walukwalāltumānī	nuyālyiklumānuāl:
All(b) have given me	the power of a shaman;	give me mental strength naiyawaiw!

the good supernatural beings.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Nuqwāqlmālāla	aiyadiseyₑnyʷsudai	dimnīnaqwnam·ālīsandal:
They opened	Sonyʷ;	they saw me

naqwālqālam·ālālsudal(c)
as they passed down.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 21a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It was used when the woman first danced as a shaman.

(b) This refers to supernatural beings in general. The song is worded as if the shaman herself were speaking.

(c) When a record was being made of this song, the singer forgot this subdivision and substituted for it the final one of the first part.

(d) It is said that there was no mention of a wash-basin in the third part and that, accordingly, the shaman had no power to heal the sick.

[551]

Song Used by Nunutsmmkmem(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Yaa ālumānālāmī	ālluminulsan	gtān·litsamnuxilī	skusiutalsdja
Hail! Mortals,	I(c) repeat(d);	I give life,	I am a learned one.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533
756

(a) Recorded as song VII D 42b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The supernatural one held me in his carefully cupped hands. The theme is worded as if the shaman were speaking and describing the way he was carried away to some far-off spot for treatment.

Fragment of a Song Used by Ăłkusiyuxtem, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Ănusukłomałtualduks	aiyawaseyo·ny^{w}ałs	dasosqwisinuhim	dikusiudai
Laughed	Song^{w}(b)	when they(c)started	my rite as shaman(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Ḱaistukwlao
See how wretched I am(e).

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 42a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

(b) That is: The sky laughed. Shamans often use grandiloquent expressions such as this.

(c) Refers to supernatural beings in general.

(d) It is not known how this woman received her power except that it was from a salmon.

(e) The singer entered fully into the spirit of this song, and ended his singing by calling out these words and chattering his teeth as shamans are wont to do.

Fragment of a Song Used by Kusiyot, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Sunwăkila	Sunnăkila	dimănsiudai	xuosi
The sun(b),	the sun,	is our father	(c)?

The rest of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[821]
[776]
[788]

(b) This is the sun's name as chief.

(c) The meaning of this word is unknown. When the song was sung, the people used to follow the shaman to the river and throw water over themselves four times, accompanied by the crying out of this word.

(d) It seems highly probable that incoherent songs such as this were commonly used by shamans. Kusiyot herself is supposed to have derived her power from Tłitcăplilăn·a, but no explanation could be learnt for the rite of washing.

The most fragmentary of all shaman songs are those used by snăxom.. Although the last survivor of this type of visionary died many years ago, all the older Bella Coola state

* 2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (i) The exact interpretation of this word may be inaccurate; the reference is to the masked figures which will presently appear.

(j) Plural.

(k) Bàxbàxqwaiya is a Kwakiutl supernatural being. The Bella Coola do not profess to understand this allusion which, they say, is quite contrary to their own usage. The implication is that the hamats actually exist within Bàxbàxqwaiya.

Song Used for Ełsiqwam, a Bella Coola Scratch Dancer(a)

A Wawkkàtwawulitsàls Was like a hurricane	aiyawasyowq^{w}sàls Sonq^{w}(b)	àhàzskàioltomdàx | when his(c) face projected dàwsàkàmmwàlàlàdàx and made me cry out(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sàwàqàmmlàixdàmq'dàx Sàwàqàmmlàix(e)	dàqàwàtàwàsàlàwàpàlàdàx has taught me(f).	Dàzàlààmàlàlààmàlàdàls | My parents are preparing to wàwàwàqàwàtàmàmàls distribute goods(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wàsàlàlàcàmwàlàts I was close to	yàa wàxàsàtàtàs the repository	wàsàpàlàpàmàmàwàtàtàdàm when it opened and taught me

àdàlààlàl-àtàmàlàsàà what I should presently do.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 13a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, composed by Reuben Schooner, was used during the hàxàt season of 1923-4.

(b) That is: Sonq^{w} was like a hurricane.

(c) Referring to the dancer's patron.

(d) That is: Made me cry out in the manner of Scratch dancers. It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these two subdivisions.

[776] (e) A supernatural being who scratches in the land above.

(f) This song was used at the dancer's initiation and is accordingly worded as if he were speaking and describing his experiences.

(g) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

Song Used for Àlàmàlàwàlàix, a Bella Coola Scratch Dancer(a)

A Sàwàsàlàxàmàlàànàdàà It was long ago	wàsàànààlàànàwàtàlààmàdàà that they(b) made ready,	dàààyàànààlàànàpààlàààà that they changed, dàwàsàkàmmàpàààdàà

my scratcher's cry(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

533*

B Sàlexamètnamlimdai | yas nazhàsiutsta | yas ghàlkpamstuladjas
He(d) sat down above | the repository; | that is whence came(e) dàlkpamstàlimazàdjaix my inspiration(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Shàmàlgulàxaiyaiplàdai | aiatimaiyas-adai | dàxyàlàkaiadim
The face had just become angry | of his father(g); | it was too much(h)

yas di-tsàlàstamàdai | alàx-ishàxakaiyas | aldilixanimatàdai
when he scratched; | he went away to a | man of placid temperament(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 14a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Referring to the supernatural beings above.
(c) A reference to the peculiar cry used by all Scratch dancers. The phraseology is intentionally obscure.
(d) The dancer's patron.
(e) That is: It was he who taught.
(f) In the sense of: What enabled me to perform.
(g) That is: His father's face had just become angry on account of the excessive scratching. His father refers to Alquntàm, father of Sno'alnkà Alquntàm, the patron of Scratch dancers. The theme declares that Alquntàm was annoyed at the superabundant zeal of his son. [776]
(h) In the sense of: It was more than he could bear.
(i) The meaning of these two subdivisions is problematical.

Song Used for 'Nàx-ànàx-a(a) a Bella Coola Scratch Dancer(b) [424]

A Nazikmàhtumilnka | omàtatamalimlaix
There is violent talking above where(c) | the patrons are meeting;

dàlpàlaiyaiualimlaix | disisiskàhamlaix
they give too much(d) | to the one that is hidden(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Patr-àchamilnka | danashayamàkitsdai | dàxualipaiualimdai
Is increasing | the crying(f); | return to him dàxmal'kam-itsdai his cedar-bark ornaments(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Dipàrpankaiualàtanà | sualanamàmàtàl
He(h) rushes around too much(i) | those left are troubled(j)

dàx-gàhàkaiualimlaix | àltàxarimàhàmal
when too much | is the talking above(k).

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Fourth Song Used for Snuwhe'hs, a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(a) 533*

A Stamālupsteiqsimuts	yas tsīhastislisi	ahtpsmhsirnulīnsh
Has now recovered	the hasiat woman(b),	after they(c) exposed mnsīhamlsīhsh

the heavy burden(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ximiqs tsīdumīlstu	dimsīnsh smalsundas	dālhsfstsmrmqndai
There is light at the edge(e),	looks down	the much revered

smlsīhsīhlsundai
Moon(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wastīnlsīd aiqsīstais	dīhastistsnsscunsh	dashstsmhsnsw-alīsdai
They(g) become frightened	of that hasiat(h)	whenever he displays disqqolimqsīsīs his blackened face(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 50, National Museum of Canada; trio, Tal'is Charlie, Reuben Schooner, and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Nebuchadnezzar, was used during the hasiat season of 1923-4.

(b) That is: The hasiat woman, the dancer, has now recovered. The implication is that she was grievously stricken when the power first came, before she knew what was required of her.

(c) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(d) Referring to the Fungus.

(e) Referring to the edge of Sony".

(f) That is: The much revered Moon looks down. The Moon is one of the dancer's patrons and the song asserts that he looked down on her when he heard that she was in trouble. "Much revered" refers to the attitude with which she regards her patron. [776]

(g) Referring to all hahsiat, human as well as supernatural.

(h) Referring to Moon.

(i) That is: Whenever he blackens his face. At an eclipse the face of the moon is said to become blackened, and the song implies that this is done deliberately by Moon in order to perform a hasiat dance. [776] [821]

Song Used for Salqnis, a Kimsquit Mystery(a) Dancer(b)

A Sāsāhmstsowit	yasīhmstsīsīsm	ahtsp-frustsup'
Stand firm and be brave,	mortals(c),	when you guess(d)

dīhsīsh'msīdai its place of concealment(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*599

B Ximtiyulwulin | ulqlhuntsnumals
Observe(f) the supernatural being | where my thoughts are centred;

ulkumulwilindai | ximtitlwuinlidai
becomes hidden | my place of power(g).

[WOODLAND CHORUS]

C Wuhulinul ulumuk; | ilkinnuskritidai
No one can contradict the words of | my pattern(h);

ilnuulkwuyululnin | ilnuudjunumdai
it is the unutterable mystery | of ilquuxim(i).

(a) That is: Ilnuutumk.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 41a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(c) The words are addressed to the uninitiated whom the dancer pretends to regard in the same light as supernatural beings regard mortals.
(d) This song was used on one of the occasions when people were called upon to guess the hiding place of the dancer's power.
(e) That is: The place where my power is hidden.
(f) An invitation not to be taken literally.
(g) That is: My place of power becomes hidden. The implication is that the supernatural beings have carefully concealed it among themselves.
(h) The being from whom the dancer has obtained his inspiration.
(i) Nuudjunum is another designation for Ilquuxim.

[776]

Song Used for Ilnuhlnuis, a Kimsquit Mystery(a) Dancer(b)

A Intutuinuhulilip | qlitsuqlunutlwumlidai | yao qlitihlulxumlip
I am grateful to | Ilnuqlunutlum(c); | you(d) have succeeded in guessing(e) ximtitlwuinlidai

the hiding-place of my power.

[WOODLAND CHORUS]

B Sqaqul ulmilulu | yao tsimlumu-unumli | ikaultwunum-alidai
They(f) called upon | Imumu-a | to drone(g)

ulnuhlwultlumli for the shaman-like one(h).

[WOODLAND CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) That is: Ilnuutumk.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 40a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was used about 1910 at Kimsquit.
(c) A supernatural being who gives inspiration.

[776]

(d) This is addressed to the uninitiated, one of whom has guessed correctly. 533*
(e) The assumption is that this has been done with the aid of Anuqwnnikmm.
(f) Referring to the supernatural beings above.
(g) That is: To utter her supernatural droning cry.
(h) The reference is to Sno'olxlts Alquntäm, the dancer's patron. The meaning of the whole passage is obscure but seems to be as follows: Sno'olxlts Alquntäm was perturbed at the coming of the call to his protégé and, to help their fellow, the other supernatural beings called upon Snitsmän·a to drone. This sound has a healing effect and would, therefore, enable human beings to solve the mystery. The phraseology is intentionally obscure. [776]

Song Used for Willie Johnston(a), a Bella Coola Thunder Dancer(b)

A Skämälnutwinmutsals	didaxdakän·äldai	sipäyaotcum·äliandai
I have just heard	it(c) coming down;	it changes its voice

äläolsäläldilsäls
above our heads(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Stirwotsamlimilliks	dikusiutstnaoosuals	yao skäoskimänldisdai
They asked plainly	the kusiut(e)	to lead the frenzied beating of sticks(f)

sawaqulxwailals
at the gathering of the supernatural beings in the land above.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Sealkimaxlamilsiks	wakälälxwoläätimats	däsnustkit'limlsandai
Too many to be seen	are those called(g);	when they increased dinutsgmälsdimutldumdai

the water(h).

(a) The Bella Coola name of the dancer was unfortunately omitted.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 57, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, announcer and prompter, assisted by Tä·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(c) Referring to the call.
(d) It is doubtful whether this statement is more than a rhetorical device to impress the uninitiated.
(e) Referring to Thunder.
(f) Thunder, one of the most powerful of the supernatural kukusiut, has the prerogative of leading the orchestra of stick beaters to "cure" a fellow-dancer. The song states that his fellows requested him to perform this function. [776]
(g) That is: So many are in attendance that they cannot be recognized. The reference is to Thunder's dance in the land above, for which the supernatural kukusiut assemble from all directions. [773]
(h) The allusion is to the rain which follows Thunder's dance. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Used for Ämamtci, a Bella Coola Thunder(a) Dancer(b)

*533 A Istäxkilkämäkalutsduks | yas täsixwin·imut·alsdax | ältasiḵnuwaxamlals ältxwaltumal·itsals

I cannot tell whence comes what(c) I hear, I cannot tell where it is; there is nothing but fog above, I am in trouble(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Äiqualxwekmem·akudai | sä·lanḵämdimutdasdai | dinunuqumlaixdusdai yaiyulätimutsudai

The hands of everyone helped Yulätimut(e) in the wonderful works he was doing for himself; all wanted him to do the same for them(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Sononstkäxk·imälimqudai | diyaiyandimutdasdai | diälḵikmelosdusdai
Is moving again | the fire-holder(g), | it is being shaken by saiutlaikilasudai Thunder (h).

[776] [575] [796] (a) Ämamtci has two patrons, Thunder and Yulätimut. During the winter of 1923-4 he was initiated into the kusiut society as a Thunder dancer; in the following song, reference is made to both his patrons, but he would have to be introduced once more, with a second name, before he could dance with respect to Yulätimut.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 51, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, announcer and prompter, assisted by Tal·io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Tal·io Charlie, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(c) Referring to the call.

(d) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

(e) One of the dancer's patrons.

(f) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

[776] [821] (g) That is: The fire-holder is moving again. The reference is to the article shaken by Thunder which causes lightning. In dances, this is shown as a hollow rattle containing smouldering cedar-bark of which fragments are scattered in all directions.

*[575] *[796] (h) The dancer's second patron.

Fragment of a Song Used for Nuxnäx·mälosaix, a Bella Coola Ghost Dancer(a)

A Qis·kwaistätimotilox | Aiyawastwinutsmim
Why is there no name(b)? | Each(c) speaks proudly of himself(d);

dinulḵwtamilsandai | sticiqualiayasudai
they use as house posts(e) | their shin-bones.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

593*

(a) Recorded as song VII D 11b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This was incorrectly announced on the record as a shaman's song.
(b) The meaning of this is problematical. Ghost dancers habitually deride the dead and this is certainly a veiled allusion of a derogatory nature.
(c) Referring to ghosts.
(d) That is: Each uses the kind of grandiloquent language employed by chiefs. [195]
(e) More specifically, the two uprights nearest the front-door.

Song Used for Qomcua, a Bella Coola Sun Dancer(a)

A Sewāshāmaiutsiaoals | waaiyalilaxastai | stsoolwostl-amalit |
The two | Aiislāxa(b) | drone in unison when yao dinuxliwatemdai

he(c) enters(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ālkāpāksmem-āqodai | diponponllamatemdai | lalitnexliwatemdai |
All(e) watch as he draws near at the time they called him(f); is waiting(g)

dāt-amamlkānildasdai his salmon blanket(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Shāmālamtainulim | yao dilqwalst'liwallxandai(i) | oldiskānikstāsdai
They invite the lofty one to place himself(j) | on his seat;

aianxālotladai
hail, Sinxālotla(k).

(a) This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4. The patron of the dancer, a woman, is Sinxālotla, the name of Ālqunām as Sun. [776]
(b) Referring to the two Aiislāxa who drone daily as sun and moon travel.
(c) Referring to Sinxālotla.
(d) That is: When he enters Nusmāt-a at the winter solstice to join the gathering of the supernatural beings. It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for these two subdivisions.
(e) Referring to the supernatural beings.
(f) A reference to the gathering of the supernatural beings before the winter solstice.
(g) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for these three subdivisions.
(h) That is: His salmon blanket is waiting. The reference is to Ālqunām's blanket with salmon on its lining. [776]
(i) When the song was first used, this subdivision consisted of a repetition of the second subsection of the second part. This was considered poor technique and the phrasing was altered for later occasions.
(j) It was impossible to obtain individual translations of these two subdivisions.
(k) The dancer's patron.

Song Used for Snuyaxlikuax-a(a), a Female Bella Coola Sun(b) Dancer(c)

*533 A Ānuximnulitsduks | ma'alusklāx-itsnīs | sa-nāmhukm-alimdai disilpapsteilaixpas

There was light above me when they(d) opened the very powerful thing for me(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Łakwalsdutnamlimilnks | dispayawa-kqulimdai
Loud voices(f) are discussing his(g) multitudinous works(h);

dasnulpanlanamldumdai | disnuslkakstinilsandai
when he stirred sunwise | the water in the shaman's wash-basin(i).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wa's-umkwalmmqudu | sha'alpalpaluslaixas | dalqualsas-um-itlqnals yalsmayaitilasuals

Smaisikila(j) and his associates are immortal; they guard life. In the beginning of time they created Alpalpaluslaix(k).

[551] [424] (a) This is a Rivers Inlet name, inherited by the present owner as a result of the marriage of one of her ancestors with a Rivers Inlet woman.

(b) According to a strict definition, Snuyaxlikuax-a is not a Sun dancer. Her [776] patron is Alqustm, but she does not refer to him as Sunsalalla, Sun, but as Smaisikila.

(c) This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(d) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(e) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(f) Referring to those of the supernatural beings.

(g) Referring to Smaisikila.

(h) It was impossible to obtain individual translations of these two subdivisions.

(i) The reference is obscure. Allusions to wash-basins are usually found only [424] in songs used by shamans; it is said that the dancer had a prerogative of that nature in Rivers Inlet, and insisted on it being mentioned in her kusiut song. This is contrary to Bella Coola custom.

(j) The dancer's patron.

(k) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions. [776] Alpalpaluslaix is a supernatural being with the ability to revive mortals; little is known of him and he may be a Rivers Inlet being.

Song Used for Aiqualsamlaix, a Bella Coola Moon Dancer(a)

A Yao isstsqemnupālsduks | dislulutsdimutlīsandai | yao ala'amastlaals
I was surprised at what was told to me; it was too much, it described(b) sumastlustuals

the descending supernatural being(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

B Aiakstpstmalsnd'a I was not good enough(d)	ahidát-tnaldai when came to me	dikilmomstutsldai my patron;

533*

sumlmstpsumallsndai
I told him so.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wazpalwulst-tiamalsks No one passed outside his house(e)	amstudr-umalimdai within sight	dipatlpatlimdai when blackened his face

enlatalkilasudai
Moon(f).

(a) This song, composed by Reuben Schooner, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

(c) The reference is to the call. The meaning of this whole first part is highly problematical; the references are intentionally obscure to impress the uninitiated.

(d) That is: I did not have sufficient goods to distribute for a ceremony.

(e) The theme here changes from a description of the dancer's experience to an account of his patron's actions in the land above.

(f) That is: When Moon, the dancer's patron, blackened his face, no one passed even within sight of his house. As uninitiated are forbidden to pass in front of a dwelling in which a kusiut dance is taking place, so supernatural beings avoid the vicinity of Moon's house when he is performing. The blackening of the face refers to an eclipse, but has an added significance since it is an intimation of a dance. [776] [784] [821]

As already described (II, p. 229), the Otter dance differs from most kusiut rites and the songs are likewise peculiar. They do not vary from year to year and the following example, used during the season of 1923-4, contains many points of an unusual nature, not even understood by the participants themselves. It has only two parts, each with a different tune, and the performer carried out her rite by dancing in two distinct ways. In the first part, she raised and lowered her fore-arms as is customary, but followed this with a smoothing motion, as if she were levelling upturned earth. The significance of this seems to have been forgotten entirely.

533* [575]* [796]* [535]

Song Used for Kuxulkw-i, a Female Kimsquit Otter Dancer(a)

A Alaiaxlaqadsx It has always been so,	yas dalqyumyumdsx it(b) has no shame(c);	sawátkpalstmamsdsx all see it

*533 yao daasiutldax when the supernatural one comes down(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (e)

B Waskexäs·ämäqodax | was·iqayawak'mitsdax | däs·taboseinulidsdai
He(f) is pleased at what I have been doing, I have exposed to him the thing of daintqamisqodai | diälukxailailduidai | yao Älquntaiämsudai great worth(g); in like fashion calls his people(h) | Älquntäm(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 27a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(b) Referring to the otter.
(c) That is: It is blameless. The meaning is obscure.
(d) A reference to the catching, by the dancer, of the figure of an otter, a spectacle watched by all.
(e) The wordless chorus is unusually long.
(f) Referring to the otter.
(g) Presumably referring to the rite in which the figure of an otter is used; the whole part is practically unintelligible.
(h) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these five subdivisions.
(i) That is: Älquntäm summons his followers just as I have called you. The unusual lengthening of this part, combined with an apparently illogical mention of Älquntäm, suggests that the last two subdivisions may be relics of a former third part.

Song Used for Anuximälos, a Bella Coola Bark-Beater(a) Dancer(b)

A Iqaätstcqälsundja | yao skänusqänmikldats | däkak·imolätimutlsandai dinuälätcimälsldulsdai
The one(c) who was talking so vociferously to us was so excessively happy that I almost curbed his mirth(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Was·älgyuts·im·älimk^{w} | aiadisiutas | was·nuno·yonlim
They(e) alone heard | the song | they practised

äläqulxwaixdilals
at the gathering of the supernatural beings(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Smnlätaqs·imälim | sawa'omomätuts | tcisßixßixkimmäas | aiasinxälotla
Counts his work(g) | the patron(h), | the Bark-Beater | of Sinxälotla(i) [776] (a) The dancer's patron was the supernatural Bark-Beater.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 11a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been composed about 1900 and has since been used repeatedly. It was employed during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

(c) Refers to a supernatural being.
(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations of these four subdivisions. The meaning of the whole part is obscure.
(e) Refers to the supernatural beings.
(f) The translation is accurate for the part as a whole, though the interpretations of the first and third subdivisions may possibly have been transposed. The significance of the words in relation to the dance is obscure.
(g) That is: Keeps count of how much he has done.
(h) That is: The patron counts his work.
(i) The supernatural Bark-Beater was the dancer's patron.

Song Used for Anuximān·a, a Female Bella Coola Carpenters'(a) Dancer(b)

A Istaiastam·ilsika | wa·anzdjakum·idsudals | wasxwgl·ähm·alisandja
When I was bold and head-strong(c), I nearly killed myself, I went to the place of(d) alapaxtlamaqoals dreaded power.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Sähuzjpmänltominils | ǵdinunuqwiutmmldai | xdisiaslakäles·aiyas
Nunuqwiutmm(e) placed eagle down upon my head; for that reason the carpenters(f) ǵdisnupuxkstimut·aoals made light(g) for me(h).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Samonjkämdimutqududai | yeyulätimutstudai | xidjinqwdxwinäm·ämkidals
Long ago(i) | Yulätimut | made this rite unaided, alatcim·u·änaoals

the child(j).

[776]

(a) Her patrons were the four supernatural carpenters.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 26a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.
(c) This song was used at the dancer's initiation; the text describes her experiences for the benefit of the uninitiated.
(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.
(e) A supernatural being about whom nothing could be learnt.
(f) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.
(g) In the sense of: Provided illumination.
(h) That is: The carpenters showed me the way to power.
(i) In the beginning of time.
(j) A reference to the figure of a child which is made to walk as a puppet at this dance. No further information could be obtained.

[776]

[532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Song Used for Sinuximätl, a Female Bella Coola Kusiut Dancer(a)

*533

A Ixilkxumnulitsdux | sa·uam·intsiystwuli | yao skäitsumaqulm dikäsiutsinulili

My path was both crooked and erratic when I searched for a supernatural being(b), when I finally succeeded(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Änuqaotymaqo | yao nuskäsiutsta | disiuxstqumnulitsdai
I was stationed firmly above | the repository; | at times it was hidden, dikitlmntsiämlitsdai

there was no road(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Skämälkumkmmlnndai | dinunuqwiutsmmldai | ye sqwiqotsainulisdux
Pounded with his stick | Nunuqwiutsmm(e); | he succeeded in opening it(f), disiälqumlsiyaoali and light appeared.

(a) There are so many kusiut dances that it was manifestly impossible to obtain details of them all. This song, composed by Nebuchadnezzar, was used at the initiation of Sinuximätl during the kusiut season of 1923-4. The neophyte, a mere infant, did not dance and no information was obtained concerning the proper conduct of the rite. Her patron was the supernatural being, Nunuqwiutsmm.

●[776] (b) This being an initiation song, those who are not members of the society are regaled with an account of the alleged experiences of the neophyte.

(c) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(d) These assertions are not to be taken literally; they are all for the benefit of the uninitiated.

(e) That is: Nunuqwiutsmm pounded with his stick. He is the dancer's patron.

(f) Referring to the repository.

Song Used for Änudskänuts, a Bella Coola Kusiut(a) Dancer(b)

A Yao uxsäs·tcälqotdji | sikilkäu·ildilali | ma'alaimaqoali yao äänu'likwolsaix

When I was an uninitiated person(c), I used to wonder what Änu'likwolsaix was like, but I was entirely wrong(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Änulkamix^w maqo | yao nuskäsiutsta | sikpäkdimäläoali |
It(e) is hanging beneath the roof of | the repository; | everything is open to nanunukwiutsnamlali me, my limbs have opened it(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

C Wastquitsamtinkya I fear the coming	aldlquatnuxamdai figure(g),	yas dimo'cyulnqas haij Sno'oluls	533*

yas Alquntsitmxudai Alquntsim(h).

(a) [redacted] song was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of a[redacted]t into the society. The full ritual was not performed on that occasion, and it was impossible to learn the proper procedure. The neophyte's patron is Sno'oluls Alquntsim, whose protégés are usually Scratch or Breaker dancers, but Anudakinuts has neither of these prerogatives. [776]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 49, National Museum of Canada; trio, Reuben Schooner, Talio Charlie, and Jim Pollard, the last-named acting as announcer. This song was composed by Reuben Schooner.

(c) The theme is worded as if the neophyte were speaking to the uninitiated whose ranks he has just left.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these four subdivisions.

(e) This refers either to supernatural power or to some object imbued with it.

(f) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions. The meaning of the whole is obscure, although the implication is that the dancer now knows everything having, figuratively, forced open the repository.

(g) More accurately, the memorial figure; the meaning is obscure.

(h) The dancer's patron.

Kusiut MOURNING SONGS

533*
765
575*

Several prominent kukusiut died during the spring and summer of 1923. Memorial rites of the usual nature were held, but in addition several kusiut mourning songs were composed and used in their honour during the next ceremonial season. When a relative was initiated, his song contained numerous references and words of the type normally restricted to mourning songs. Such a combination may occasionally have taken place in former times, but the present comparatively common usage is due to the difficulty of holding regular potlatches. In each case the kusiut rites were abbreviated, and no description of the proper ceremonial was obtained. The following are examples of combined kusiut and mourning songs: [766] [777] 533*

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (a) A female infant whose name was not known by the singers from whom this song was obtained.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 53, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tal-io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Tal-io Charlie, was used during the kuxiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of an infant great-granddaughter of Xemtsalwala.

(c) Referring to the neophyte. This part of the song is worded for the benefit of the uninitiated.

(d) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

[773] (e) This might apply to any mountain where a group of the first settlers landed, but is said to refer to Nuxalit, the home of the dead man's ancestral family. The implication of the theme is that the mountain erupted; Mount Nuxalit is not regarded as a volcano, and it is possible that the composer confused the origin myth of the dead man with that recorded in the preceding four songs in which there are references to the illumination of Mount Swaly at Kimsquit. Such a mistake would not be impossible in view of the decadence of Bella Coola culture.

(f) In the sense of: Has rejoined his ancestral crest.

(g) That is: Xemtsalwala has rejoined his ancestral crest.

(h) That is: At the place where the first to possess his name came to earth.

(i) An unusually long wordless chorus separates the second from the third part.

(j) That is: Xemtsalwala.

(k) That is: Stsaxinuxat welcomed Xemtsalwala. The former was one of the latter's first ancestors.

(l) A reference to the localities where his first forefathers came to earth.

● [776] Song Used for Lilxwamlaix(a), Combined with Mourning for Xemtsalwala(b)

A Ayailxidimathlxudai | xlpaxlxapmlxipdax | xwastlxinulxlxax |
All is ready, proceed | thou "Opener"(c) | who brings what puts

yaa dixwixayatxleipa
an end to all our grief(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Xixlxulxwindx | dxatthmpayakxldax
He(e) is waiting with outstretched hand | for the chief(f);

xkauxlxw dwixdax | yatxlmathayaudai
now he stands upon | Tsalmathi(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

[773] C Stsaxuxalxlxipdax | xwastlwalat dadax | stsaxuxlxlxi mlxqulxudax
Sits down within | the expansible house(h) | Suxulxlxi(i) xwaxlxmdlxwatudai on Xixlxmdlxwat(j).

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) "The Beautifier." This is one of the appellations of the infant's patron, the otter, so-called because people adorn themselves whenever an Otter dance is given. 533*

(b) Recorded as song VII D 16a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of Lilitwumlaix, a female infant distantly related to Ḷomānakwala. [776]

(c) A reference to Otter, the neophyte's patron. The significance is that chiefs have an opportunity to display, "open," their generosity by lavish giving at every Otter dance. [556]

(d) The elaborate ritual of an Otter dance dispels grief. It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions.

(e) Referring to one of the dead man's ancestors. The theme changes, and is henceforth of the usual mourning pattern.

(f) Referring to the dead Ḷomānakwala.

(g) "The Loftiest." This is one of the many designations for Nusḵalst, one of the dead man's crests.

(h) A reference to the expanding house described in the dead man's origin myth. [773]

(i) One of Ḷomānakwala's names.

(j) This is another name for Nusḵalst. The meaning of the whole part is: Ḷomānakwala sits down within the expansible house on Mount Nusḵalst. There is the added implication that he seats himself as does his supernatural namesake in the land above.

Non-Ceremonial Songs

The Bella Coola are not an intensely musical people. Singing in unison is an essential feature of every ceremonial rite, but, when alone, an individual seldom bursts into melody from sheer joie de vivre. They have, however, a certain number of non-ceremonial songs, shorter and more diverse in theme than any of those previously recorded. The people themselves do not attempt to classify them, though they can conveniently be grouped in accordance with their themes. Some deal with love, others are sung jocularly at sight of certain birds or mammals, while a third class can only be described as miscellaneous. Still others accompany stories and games; these are included in vol. II, chap. V, and appendix B. [796]* [825] [1]

Love Songs

Men sometimes compose songs which they sing, unaccompanied, to their lady loves. Occasionally, too, the maker of a popular one will teach it to his friends who will serenade the 533* 832 424

[1] [See cat. 116, pp. 543 to 567 - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*
177

A Song in Mixed Carrier(a)–Bella Coola(b)

uhawaw·i	uhawaw·i	xwátxalʼje	xwawaw·i uhawaw·i(c),	uhawaw·i,	l(d)	l

ahaitlhahe	ahaitlhahe	ahaitlhahe
l	l	l

nafawa	uhawaw·i
the very hairy pudenda	uhawaw·i(e).

(a) It is uncertain whether this song was derived from the Carrier or the Chilkotin.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 10b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pelland.

(c) The anthropomorphized supernatural cold wind, resident in the upper Bella Coola. The old trail from the interior passed through the valley and the word must have been familiar to the Indians of the interior.

[776 821]

(d) The words marked with queries are all in Carrier (or Chilkotin).

(e) This third part of the song is called forth loudly, not sung, and always gives rise to laughter. It means: uhawaw·i has hairy pudenda, a reference to the luxuriant growth of bushes and grass in the valley where she is localized.

A Carrier Song(a)

This song is said to have been used at some ceremonial at Ulkatcho, in the Carrier country. The rite is spoken of as a potlatch, although the Bella Coola state that it differed entirely from one of their own potlatches, and that every guest brought his own song. The words are:

ulli	tsawala
Knife,	none at all.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pelland.

The Bella Coola have no idea of the meaning of this song.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

721 to attack. It is said that the Fort Rupert people once raided
648 it, but their hair became entangled in the thorns growing near the tide-flats and they were easily slain while struggling to free themselves. Two warriors escaped and hid in the branches
[727] of a huge spruce tree. They used to slip down at night and steal food, thus supporting themselves for several weeks, but [628] were at last discovered and enslaved. On such occasions the villages of the lower and central valley usually rallied to the help of Q̓omqo·ts, the most exposed one, although there was no mechanism to enforce such assistance. The inhabitants of [776] this town attributed their protection to Ālquntäm, and used to claim that he had decreed that they should be immune [361] owing to their close association with him. Though Bella Coola itself was comparatively free from molestation, Kimsquit and [162] Täl·io, with smaller populations and less strategic positions, were subject to frequent attacks. At least one of the villages at 712 the head of South Bentinck Arm was defended with a stockade of cedar trunks, set upright in a double row and entered by a water-gate with a drop-door.[1] This water-gate protected the [648] residents on many occasions, and it is remembered that one [726] Fort Rupert raiding-party was annihilated while endeavouring to batter down the door with a huge ram. The defenders, armed with muskets, picked off the attackers as they struggled in the open.

721 All the older men were emphatic in stating that most of their raids were in revenge for such attacks. Although such statements were partisan, they were confirmed in every way
[642] and were probably tolerably correct. Lack of a strong government was a serious handicap to the Bella Coola. After being [623] assailed, the members of the town would discuss retaliation, [622] and if unanimity of opinion was reached, that course was decided upon. Public opinion alone selected the leader, usually [701] a man who had given a number of potlatches, especially one whose position had been made stronger by previous validation

[1] It is said that such stockades surrounded other villages, but definite information on this point was unavailable.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

spit upon his own hands and rubbed them over the patient's head, his arms, his trunk, his legs, and finally his feet, as if massaging him. Xnutli's strength began to return at the first touch of Thunder's hands, and, when the treatment was finished, he felt entirely rejuvenated. Thunder told him to overtake his friends and to massage them in the same way and they would be revived. He explained that they had been travelling in circles of ever-decreasing radius which was the reason that they had neither reached their destination nor recrossed their own tracks. He added that they must think constantly of their first objective, Ulkatcho, Nukätco in the Bella Coola language, and that at night Xnutli must sleep on the side of the five nearest that goal. 727 787

Soon afterwards the four wanderers were surprised to see a stalwart man swinging along the trail behind them, and their amazement was intense when they realized that it was Xnutli whom they had left at the point of death. He bade three of his comrades hide, and massaged the fourth as Thunder had done to him; this restored his strength exactly as in his own case. The one so cured then concealed himself, while Xnutli treated another of his comrades, and finally the third and fourth. This was not the end of the assistance so obtained. Within a few minutes of their recovery, they found the trail they had so long been seeking and reached Ulkatcho before night, though under normal circumstances the same distance would have required four days of travel. There were several Bella Coola at the settlement who were overjoyed at the safety of those for whom all hope had long been abandoned. They rested for four days, then set out for home. Xnutli told his comrades to fix their minds upon their objective, and as a result they were able to make the journey with phenemonal rapidity. 727

Thunder had granted Xnutli the boon of uxlokwaladjut on this occasion, and had promised that he would come to his help whenever called upon. Xnutli was a sorcerer, a profession which had been practised for generations in his family, and he now performed more openly than ever, assured that Thunder would be able to protect him. The malefactor killed more and more people, until he became an object of universal hatred and fear. At last the principal chief of the village, confident in the power which the giving of many potlatches had bestowed upon him, ordered an expert shot to slay Xnutli. The man so deputed had himself lost several relatives and gladly watched an opportunity. This came when the sorcerer was paddling across the Bella Coola near the old Hudson's Bay Company's post; he took careful aim from ambush, fired, and the evil man fell dead. A medicine can be made from the corpse of a murdered person, which, when used by the relatives, causes the killer's death. To prevent this, the executioner called his friends and they took 754 [776] [685]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

the body to his own house, preparatory to burying it. It was April, but as they were waiting, a violent thunderstorm blew up from the east, the only time that such had ever occurred at that season. Thunder had promised to come to Xnutli's aid, but the latter had died too suddenly to make any appeal; the supernatural one had just learnt of his protégé's death and had come rushing to his assistance. Realizing the danger, the executioner and his friends hastily buried the corpse, throwing over it a number of blood-stained cloths, and finally stamping down the earth. There was a furious hurricane; trees were uprooted, houses shook, the earth over the grave seethed as if in a whirlpool and chunks of it were carried up into the air. Only the potency of the blood on the cloths prevented the return to life of Xnutli.[8]

This second unsuccessful attack on the Kitkatla so disheartened the Bella Coola that they made no more raids on their northern foemen who, flushed with victory, became even bolder than before. As usual, the Kimsquit and Tāl·io people suffered more than the inhabitants of the main valley. On one of these forays, about 1855, the Kitkatla killed Ḷoixwelioth, a brother of Potlas, the leading chief of the Bella Coola at the time. This was contrary to all the rules of warfare since he was a member of one of the leading families and the donor of many potlatches, a man whose name was as well known as that of Potlas, Nukāpinkam of Fort Rupert, or Tcibua himself. The fame of such chiefs was enough to protect them except during the actual heat of conflict, and the Bella Coola were justly angry.

A few years later a single canoe came paddling up North Bentinck Arm and was beached about half a mile from the head. Scouts investigated, and returned to Ḷomqo·ts with news that the occupants were Kitkatla, and that Tcibua himself was among them. At once there was heated discussion among the people of the lower valley. Many who had lost relatives in the protracted struggle wished to wipe out the party; others, to see what they wanted. A few daring individuals skulked through the forest and fired on the visitors at long range; they were answered, not with bullets, but by the four times holding aloft of a moose-skin, a sign of friendly intentions. If the strangers had fired on the scouts, a fight would have ensued, but this peaceful reception disarmed suspicion.

[8] This tale is a curious illustration of the manner in which supernatural elements become woven into accounts which have an historical basis. It is to be assumed that the wanderers were in a suggestible state owing to privation, and readily believed that supernatural powers must have assisted them. Xnutli was feared as a sorcerer, and probably boasted of a visitation from Thunder during his wanderings. This was accepted and the incorporation of impossible incidents followed in due course.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

538 certain that his account is the only accurate one, and ridicules his rival, but as no social importance is attached to the tales, an error in narration is a matter of small moment. Probably there have been instances in which an individual possessing [556] much wealth has transformed a story into a family myth, but it was impossible to obtain a concrete illustration of this; it is thought that this may have been done in former years, though of course such would be absolutely contrary to custom.

Stories can be conveniently divided into two types:

[825] I. Those in which the principal character is a mammal or bird endowed with human intelligence.

II. Those in which the principal character is a human being.

[825] Many of the first type describe the adventures and misadventures of Raven. It must be remembered that the Bella [776] Coola regard these stories as accurate statements of fact, and base their characterizations of many supernatural beings on their actions as recorded therein.

Raven Stories

*539

HOW RAVEN BECAME BLACK

When Raven was being prepared for his descent to earth, Ăłquntăm told Mătłăbălitcak to make him the prettiest of all the birds. When finished, he was adorned with many colours and was very handsome. But the vain Raven looked at himself and was not satisfied. First he asked that one arm might be changed, and when this was done as he desired, he asked for an alteration in one of his legs; and so on with nearly every part of his body. Finally, Ăłquntăm became angry, and told some of his assistants to throw ashes all over him. This made Raven a uniform black, in which guise he was sent down to earth.

RAVEN AND WATER OUZEL[3]

As he was able to assume any form, Raven, once upon a time, took that of a herald and went to the home of Water Ouzel, who, having spread a fine cedar-mat for his guest, proceeded to prepare a meal. He brought

[3]For another version of this story see Boas, p. 93.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and cold to destroy the reckless creatures who had dared to oppose him. 539* While he was climbing down, the attackers called out, attracting his 821 attention, so that Halibut was able to wriggle, unobserved, to a place at the bottom of the ladder. As Cold Wind trod upon him, Halibut moved, and his antagonist fell to the ground. He was seized by his enemies before he could rise to release more cold.

"What have you against me?" he asked them. "I visit you only twelve months in the year."

"That is too often," his captors replied, as they stretched him out on the ground to kill him.

"If you spare me I will visit you for nine months only," Cold Wind made offer.

Again he was told that was too much, and he must be killed. Cold Wind, terrified, proposed coming for shorter and shorter periods, six months, four months, two months, and finally for a single month, but each offer was refused, and followed by threats of instant death. At length the captors accepted his agreement to come only in the early morning.

That is why, to this day, the cold wind comes only in the early morning.

Snnuq Stories

538 776

Of the supernatural animals which the Bella Coola believe inhabit the wild glens and mountains of British Columbia, that which figures most prominently in their mythology is the snnuq. There are four slightly different varieties of this monster. The most common is regarded as being about the size of a large grizzly bear, but with long front legs and short hind ones, on which it can run in upright position when it so desires. Its legs terminate in large talons resembling those of an eagle, with the thumb set opposite to the fingers; its pelt, long and fleecy, is of a grayish-blue colour. The monster is able to roll its eye-balls completely over, and, when the reverse side is exposed, there shoot forth dazzling beams of light which strike senseless anyone on whom they fall. It uses its eyes for hunting. The most peculiar feature of the snnuq, however, is that it carries on its back a basket provided with spikes inclined inwards and downwards at such an angle that any living creature thrust within is unable to escape. The basket

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

538 can be removed at will, and the Bella Coola relate how, long 776 ago, the inhabitants of a village captured one of these. Cruelly, they placed it at the top of a lofty tree, then carefully smoothed off the bark to make climbing virtually impossible. The unfortunate snınıq tried repeatedly to scale the tree, amid the mockings of its human tormentors; at last it succeeded in doing so, whereupon it dashed off, happily, with its basket.

Less dangerous than the snınıq is the creature known as po·qwais, differing only from the true snınıq in having a band of white through its eyes. A third variety, snınıqos wa sımdäs, the mountain snınıq, remains perpetually above the line of vegetation. Little is known of it.

The most dangerous is a true snınıq with the genital organs of a woman on its forehead. This creature is able to reverse the course of streams, to cause light snow to fall, and even to raise up mountains when pursued. A hunter meeting one of these monsters is in deadly danger unless he calls it by its name, splıx, female genitalia. So doing will cause the animal to lose its power and grovel and writhe impotently on the ground.

Like all other supernatural animals, the snınıq is believed to have only recently quitted the vicinity of Bella Coola, on account, so it is said, of the noise made by the rifles of the white man. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of the animals, though several state that they have heard them not many years ago. It is assumed that the snınıq has migrated to some less populated area, probably to the region north of Dean Channel and east of Frederick Island.

The following stories, which are among the most popular in Bella Coola, illustrate the characteristics of the snınıq.

*539

THE GRAVE ROBBER[44]

Long, long ago, there was a large Bella Coola town[45] on the White-

[44]For another version of this story see Boas, p. 86.
[45]Other informants stated that the village was Stınıx.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

524 Release index fingers; the index finger loop is now held on the hooks of the middle fingers.

Lift distal thumb loop from thumbs; this loop is now held on hooks of middle fingers.

Pass index fingers into the three loops hooked down on middle fingers from proximal side.

Pass index fingers distal to radial thumb string, and middle fingers proximal to radial thumb string, clutching this string between tips of fingers; bend fingers upwards and away from manipulator, taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

FIG. 22. "The Sniniq."

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

Gently extend.

This shows the sniniq; with thumbs gently depress the two pendant loops in the centre and the eyes become evident (Figure 22).

The manipulator sings:[11]

Nutpilqals·ksamg	xätskaitl	nupaxotla yelsäjnu.
Reverse your eyeballs,[12]	it is too dangerous,	O, dreaded and powerful one!

Pass thumbs from distal side into the loops hooked down on ring and little fingers.

Bend index fingers downwards and away from manipulator, and upwards towards manipulator through the loop hooked down on ring and little fingers, and tip to tip with thumbs, releasing thumbs when complete.

FIG. 23. "Raven's Hammer."

Pass thumbs into distal index finger loops from proximal side and transfer each loop to its respective thumb.

Release index fingers.

This shows the sniniq with eyeballs reversed, appearing as a hammer (Figure 23).[13]

As the figure appears the manipulator sings:

Stsiqumaq	Qmax	alta sma·ntma·als.
The hammer of	Raven	long, long ago.

[11]The song accompanying the whole figure was recorded as song VII D 25b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[12]This refers to the belief that the sniniq projects death-dealing rays from its eyes.

[13]No explanation is offered for the association between a sniniq and Raven's hammer.

[126]
[776]

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The gens Spatsā'tlt have breakers painted on the house-front, and use 532 in dances the mask of a large kind of whale (k·'ɛnts), of the crow, and of the black bear.

342 The gens Tumqoā'akyas use the mask of Ōnɛstaitō'ma (=the sleeper) and the eagle.

The gens Tl'ak·aumō'ot of the Nusk·'ɛ'lstɛmh use the moon (fig. 2).

The gens Ialo'stimōt of the Tālio'mh use the raven, robin (aiit'a'qonē), eagle, whale, the bird t'ēutlala (genus?), and s'atlsā'ots, the flood-tide. They have sun, moon, and stars painted on the house-front, and the usqē'mta suspended from the beams of the roof (see p. 420).

The highest gens of Nūtl'ɛ'l has the name Smō'ɛn (=the north wind). He has the mountain Suwā'kɛh surmounted by a mackerel sky, and with clouds on its sides, painted on his house-front (fig. 3). Another object belonging to his crest represents waves.

614 The children belong to the gens of either father or mother, the deci-851 sion being left to the choice of the parents.

Secret Societies and the Potlatch.

171 The social organisation, festivals, and secret societies of the Bilqula
575 are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the Sisau'kh, and the Kū'siūt. The Sisau'kh corresponds to the Tlōola'qa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the Kū'siūt to the Ts'ētsā'ēk·a. The Bilqula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine 556 brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Qē'mtsiōa, to whose 773 care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful 776 Fig. 4.—Mask representing Qē'mtsiōa.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Qēmqēmalā'otla.

[532 575]

house in the far east, and cries ō! ō! every morning when the sun rises. He has to take care that the sun rises properly. The first six of these deities

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the Kû'siût these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks which I have copied. Qē'mtsloa and Qēmqēmalâ'otla wear the design of the full moon, indicated in the mask Qē'mtsloa (fig. 4) by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Qēmqēmalâ'otla has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin (fig. 5). Aiumkî'likya (fig. 6) and Aiumalâ'otla (fig. 7) wear the design of the crescent drawn

556
773
776
532
575
776

FIG. 6.—Mask representing Aiumkî'likya.

FIG. 7.—Mask representing Aiumalâ'otla.

in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second. The fifth, K·'ömk·'ömkî'likya, and K·'ö'mtsloa have designs representing stars (fig. 8), both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is K·ula'qawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmonberry bush (fig. 9). The next in order, Kulē'lias (=who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue (fig. 10). The ninth, At'amâ'k wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a birdskin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called Tl'ōtsâ'aplētlâna (=the eater), the sister of all the others. Her face is painted with a bladder filled with grease (fig. 11). She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

The Sisan'kH, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of gentes, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the Sisan'kH, and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned he asked the people to clean their houses, and to strew them with clean sand, before he consented to enter. Then he danced the Sisan'kH, and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with

575
773
776
796

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on,
773 returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Sisau'kH.
776 Besides this it is stated that the Raven gave each gens its secrets.
796

FIG. 8.—Mask representing K·'ömk·'ömkt'lika.

FIG. 9.—Mask representing K·ula'qawa.

532
575
776

614 Each gens has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the Sisau'kH 532 only, and are otherwise kept a deep secret, i.e., they are the sacred posses-422

FIG. 10.—Mask representing Kulê'lias.

FIG. 11.—Mask representing Ti'êtsâ'aplêtlâna.

[575]
[776]

[534] sions of each gens. All gentes, however, wear the beautiful carved [292] headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

represent. Every time the sacred objects of a gens are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various gentes, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual. That is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the gens to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, could not become Sisau'kH. A person cannot take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'E-lu'sta, to whom I owe my information regarding the gentes, and who is a member of the gens Ialo'stimôt of the Talio'mH, stated that he had received the raven when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the eagle. He hopes that his mother will give him the whale at his next potlatch, and will at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a Kû'siût name, which remains the same throughout life; and a Qē'mtsloa name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'Elu'sta's (which is his Kû'siût name) present Qē'mtsloa name is Atl'itlEmnE'lus'aiH, but at his next potlatch he intends to take the name of Kaliä'kis. These names are also the property of the various gentes, each gens having its own names. In the list of gentes given above, the names enumerated are the Kû'siût names of the ancestors. In two cases only the Qē'mtsloa names have been ascertained (see p. 409). When a man possesses several Sisau'kH secrets he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their Sisau'kH secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of the gens. When a person gets to be old he gives away all his Sisau'kH secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the Sisau'kH carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular gens.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper-plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so he had to name the price which he was going to pay to the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The Kē'siût is presided over by a female spirit, called Anaûlikûtsai'H. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Anaûlikûtsai'H invited her into her cave and taught

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 her the secrets of the Kû'siût. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair
776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kû'siût. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kû'siût.'

575 Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Kû'siût. When a man has 776 seen Anaûlikûtsai'ʜ sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a Kû'siût. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kû'siût lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kû'siût are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted
614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, 424 as is the case with the Sisau'kʜ dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed
[426] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower
575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kû'siût is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kû'siût name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kû'siût names,
[428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pô'pô until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Tl'akô'otl. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[556] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisau'kʜ, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kû'siût have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] ʟlaqô'tla (the Hä'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ô'lɛq (the Nû'tlmatl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dä'tia (the Nô'ntsistatl of the Hê'iltsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kû'siût novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the ʟlaqô'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 785 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held
787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be
[266] killed, in order to serve as food for the ʟlaqô'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ʟlaqô'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun,
575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ɛlaqō'tla dances clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large headring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red and white cedar-bark. Some ɛlaqō'tla do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon, or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The ɛlaqō'tla has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house. 575 [774] [756] [292] [301]

The Ō'lɛq (= the laugher) and the Dā'tia (= the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'lɛq 'makes fun of everything' and scratches people with his nails. The Dā'tia carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ōlɛq and the Dā'tia must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses. [785]

If a person transgresses the laws of the Kū'siūt, for instance when the ɛlaqō'tla gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the Kū'siūt are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Atlqulā'tɛnum, who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qē'mtsioa and his brothers and his sister (see p. 412), Masmasalā'niq and his fellows, the raven and the Nusqē'mta, and many others. 575 688 575 532 796 [776]

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house and resorts to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by pro- 844

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 what cause this divergence is due. Mythology and religion are so closely [171] connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Snq, the sun-god (compare sūnq, sun).
773 The rays of the sun are his eyelashes. When prayed to he is called Tāat'au. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the fol-
776 lowing formulas: Atlkun itlō'tlsuq, Tāat'au, 'Look on us where we are [782] going, Tāat'au;' and Tāat'au, atlkualtnomdō'tlq, 'Take care of us, Tāat'au.'
[539] Snq is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with the actions and thoughts of men. These are given by Masmasalā'niq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Masmasalā'niq, Yula'timot, Matlapē'eqoek, and Itl'itlu'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been expanded between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Masmasalā'niq, and found there a beautiful prairie country in which all the birds lived. Masmasalā'niq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his arts. The raven was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the nusqē'mta (nu-ta=place of, sqēm=the day is dawning). The nusqē'mta was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously, and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pond from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pond, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the nusqē'mta. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Masmasalā'niq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Matlapē'eqoek and Itl'itlu'lak tried likewise to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Yula'timot carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Masmasalā'niq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that man should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by man.

The Bilqula believe that Masmasalā'niq and his brothers still continue [176] to give new ideas to man. They say that any new design of painting or carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Masmasalā'niq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

774 The soul is believed to dwell in the nape. It is similar in shape to a [826] bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies 761 away its owner must die. Shamans are able to see and to recover souls.
756

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swoons it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy. 774 756 [828] [753] [828]

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Snq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Snq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself. 756 [776]

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awiky'ē'noq wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Mā'tom) who will initiate him. No Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way.' [171]

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ek'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called snak. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms. 753 755 754 [825]

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strown in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die. 682 754 [825]

I add here a few current beliefs:— 827

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry. [777]

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die. 825

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky. 763

777

Wars.

When a war party was organised the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their 726 714

751 Women wear tight anklets 'to prevent the calves of their legs from slipping down.' During their monthly 441 periods women place soft cedar-bark in the vagina. The bark is afterwards
824 burnt in the woods. The smoke of this fire is believed to be poisonous.

It is evident that the culture of the Bilqula is very greatly influenced 177 by that of the Kwakiutl. The secret societies and the potlatch ceremonies 551 are almost a copy of those of the Hëiltsuk'. This influence has been so 556 deep that names of even deities and of the mythical ancestors of certain 575 gentes are purely Kwakiutl words, or have at least Kwakiutl endings. Thus 776 the name Aiumkt'likya (see p. 413) is purely Kwakiutl, meaning 'good all over the world.' K'ömk'omkt'likya is also a Kwakiutl word, meaning 771 'the rich one of the world.' The chief's name, Ma'lakyilatl (see p. 409) belongs to the same class of Kwakiutl names. On the other hand, the religious ideas of the Bilqula are very curiously developed, and apparently but slightly influenced by their neighbours. The whole Masmasala'niq tradition is peculiar to them, but has been partly adopted by the Awiky'- ö'noq, with whom the Bilqula have intermarried.

[pp. 425-449 not processed]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

lished some remarks on the religious life of the Bella Coola in 1886,[1] which, however, contain so many misconceptions that they cannot be used to advantage. At the same time I published a brief description of the tribe, based on information received from a small group of members of the tribe who were travelling in Germany. In this description also there are a number of misconceptions. The Indians were shown a collection of masks from Vancouver Island with which they were not familiar. They gave, however, explanations of these masks, judging by the similarity to masks of their own tribe; consequently the explanations given there are not correct.[2] In 1890 I fell in with a number of Bella Coola who were fishing for salmon in Fraser River. The information obtained from them was published in the reports of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1891.[3] A. Jacobsen published a description of their ceremonies in 1891.[4] Fillip Jacobsen described some of their traditions and customs in 1894 and 1895.[5] I published a collection of traditions in 1894 and 1895.[6] 114

III.

All the collections which have been made heretofore do not bring out clearly the principal characteristic of the mythology of the Bella Coola. The tribes of the North Pacific coast consider the Sun as the most important deity, but at the same time they believe in a great many beings of supernatural power. For this reason their whole mythology is very unsystematic. The Bella Coola, on the other hand, have developed a peculiar mythology, in which a number of supernatural beings have been co-ordinated. A system has been evolved which justifies our terming the supernatural beings "deities." The general features of this system are as follows:— 114 773 776

The Bella Coola believe that there are five worlds, one above another. The middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are spanned two heavens, while below it there are two underworlds. In the upper heaven resides the supreme deity, a woman who interferes comparatively little with the fates of mankind. In the centre of the lower heaven, that is in the zenith, stands the house of the gods, in which reside the Sun and all the other deities. Our own earth is an island swimming in the ocean. The underworld is inhabited by the ghosts, who are at liberty to return to heaven, whence they may be sent down again to our earth. The ghosts 772 [776] [775]

[1] Original-Mittheilungen aus dem königlichen Museum für Völkerkunde, Berlin, 1886, pp. 183-186.
[2] Ibid., pp. 177-182.
[3] Seventh Report of the Committee on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, pp. 2-18; Report of the 61st Meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, held at Cardiff, 1891, pp. 493-494. [113]
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, pp. 383-391.
[5] Ymer, Tidskrift utgifven af Svenska Sällskapet för Antropologi och Geografi, 1894, pp. 157-210; 1895, pp. 1-23.
[6] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, pp. 281-306; 1895, pp. 189-195.

772 who die a second death sink to the lowest world, from which there is no
[775] return.

The upper heaven is called Atsa'axl, or Snutx·lok·'a'ls ti Sônx· t'aix·, or Sônxaul. Omq'o'mkilik·a. The deity ruling there is a woman who is called [776] Qama'its, or Tsi sisnâaxil. ("our woman"), or Ek·lyak·imtola'li. ("afraid of nothing").

772 This heaven is described as a prairie without any trees. It is said that 776 in order to reach it one must go up the river from the house of the gods in the lower heaven. In another tradition it is said that in travelling from the lower heaven to the upper heaven one has to pass the rent in the sky which is called Tsi.na'lôtas ti Sônx· t'aix·. The house of the supreme deity stands in the far east, and a gale is continually blowing over the open country, driving every thing towards the entrance of her house. Near the house, however, it is calm. In front of the house stands a post in the shape of a large winged monster, and its mouth is the entrance to the house. In front of the house-door there is gravel of three colors,—blue, black, and white. Behind the house is a salt-water pond in which the goddess bathes. In this pond lives the st'siul or xtsaltsaló'sem. This being sometimes descends to our world. Wherever it moves, the rocks burst, and slide down the sides of the mountains. It is described as a snake or a fish (see pp. 44, 66).

773 In the beginning of the world the mountains were of great height.
823 They were human beings who made the world uninhabitable. Qamá'its made war upon the mountains. She vanquished them, and made them smaller than they used to be. During this fight she broke off the nose of the mountain Yólyulz'mt, which is situated near Nul.!a'l. Its face may be recognized even now; and the Indians say that when its name is called, it answers. There are two mountains near the head-waters of Bella Coola River. The one is called Slex·lékoai'l; the other one, Na'axl. The former had a fire, called Snutai'k·nimsta, burning in his house. This fire warned him of the approach of enemies. When Qamá'its made war upon the mountains, the fire warned its master. Qamá'its was coming down the river in her canoe, which is named "T!kun." When she approached, he broke her canoe, and she returned to heaven. The canoe has been transformed into stone, and may be seen to this day at the foot of the mountain Slex·lékoai'l. It is said that Qamá'its visits the earth every now and then. Her visits cause sickness and death. She is described as a great warrior.

772 In the centre of the lower heaven, which is called Sônx·, stands the 776 house of the gods. This house is named Nusmz'ts (the House of Myths), or Nusklosltnal'x·sta ("where man was created"), or Nusk·lalnz'msta ("the house from which people come down"), or Nusqilxoal'x·sta ("the house to which people go"). In front of the house stands a post called Nulsnê'k·ts. It is painted with representations of all kinds of birds. A white crane (?), Qā'xōx, is sitting on top of the post. The master of the house is Sanx, the Sun. He is also called Ta'ata ("our father"), or Smai'yakila ("the sacred one"), or Smayalō'ōt.la. It seems that he is the only deity to whom the Bella Coola pray. They do not pray to Qamā'its, the deity of the supreme heaven. I have not found any prayers directed to the other deities of the lower heaven. I recorded a number of such prayers directed to the Sun. They are as follows:— 772 776 776 782 539

Atk'ā'ōōlaxx Tātaa'! ("Look on us where we are going, Father!")

Tātaa'! ak'ūlx'ondō'ła! ("Take care of us, Father!")

Tātaa'! ak'ūlxonō'ła ala mōnāsā'ā'ī! Tātaa' ōōp'ālōōnāōła! ("Father! take care of our road! Take care of us!")

After a long-continued rain, they pray:—

Tupōōx'ōx Tātaa'! ōōk'ū'łxōōnōō'ła, Tātaa'! ("Wipe your face, Father! that it may be fair weather.")

The mountain-goat hunter prays:—

Ōōqa yōōōōōx, Tātaa', ta mōōōx'ōōnō, Smāyalō'ōt.la'! ("Let your children look at me, Smayalō'ōt.la, Father!")

A person pursued by misfortune prays:—

Nōqlamōk'ōōōx Tātaa'! ōōōqomāk'ōōō ū qā'yōōōōōōōōō'ōō'ā'ōx. ("Make me happy, Father! You have given me too much misfortune.")

A sick person prays:—

Nōqlamōk'ōōōx Tātaa'! ōk'a ōōōqōōlōōō'ōōx Tātaa'! ("Let my life be long, Father!")

The successful hunter, or the woman who has found a plentiful supply of berries, prays:—

Nōōōqlamōk'ōōō ū mōōōā'āōx ōk'a nōqlamōk'ōōō ōk'a pōōōō ōōōā'k'ōōō'ōōō ōk'ōōk'ō ū qā'ōōō'āōx. ("Father! You make me happy. You give me what I desire. Then I find what I wished for.")

The Bella Coola also make offerings to the Sun. Hunters throw four small slices of seal-meat, of mountain-goat tallow, etc., into the fire as an offering to the Sun, in order to obtain success in hunting. Sick people burn parts of their clothing, which they decorate with red cedar-bark, as an offering to regain health. 776 782

The second deity, who is called Atk'untā'm, seems to be of equal importance. Sanx and Atk'untā'm stay in the rear of the House of Myths. Near the fire stays Sōōtk'ulx'a'ła. He is an old man who formerly ruled over 776 [775]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE5 Bellacoola NE5

776 the House of Myths, but who has given up his place in favor of Sunx and A'L'k'untz'm. These two might be called the rulers of mankind. In most traditions they are described as trying to destroy man, notwithstanding the fact that they are considered the creators of mankind. This peculiar chara-
773 teristic of these deities is clearly brought out in the traditions recorded on 776 pp. 78 ff. In one legend which I collected in 1890, A'L'k'untz'm's mother, Nanustmik-tequnx'm, is described as a Cannibal, who inserts her long snout in the ears of man, and sucks out his brain. Eventually she was transformed into the mosquito.[1] I did not hear her mentioned as one of the deities residing in the House of Myths. According to the same tradition, the salmon were obtained by a man who gambled with A'L'k'untz'm, the stake being the salmon. A'L'k'untz'm lost, and the man took the salmon down
[228] from heaven. Another legend of the origin of the salmon is recorded on p. 38, where it is told how the birds obtained the salmon. According to still another tradition (p. 94), the Raven obtained the salmon by marrying a salmon girl. In the tradition quoted above, A'L'k'untz'm also gives to man the power to cure
[755] disease by means of the water of life, which the shaman sprinkles on the sick person.

776 A number of inferior deities live in the House of Myths. They might be called the assistants of the principal deities. In order to understand their
[174] functions, it is necessary to state that the deities residing in the House of Myths have particular charge of the religious winter ceremonial of the [196] Bella Coola which is called kt'sint, and which corresponds to the ts'tsut'ega
[319] of the Kwakiutl. I have described this ceremonial, and its importance in the social life of the Kwakiutl, in another paper.[2] The kt'sint is of equal importance to an understanding of the social life and mythology of the Bella Coola. It is sufficient to say at this place that the ceremonials performed during the kt'sint are mostly dramatic representations of myths [532] referring to the various deities, particularly to those of the House of Myths: therefore masks representing these deities are used in the ceremonials. Plates VII to XII[3] show a series of these masks. Figs. 1, 2, and 4 (Plate VII) are Sunx, A'L'k'untz'm, and Sntsk'alx-t'a. The functions of many of the 575 inferior deities seem to refer solely to the kt'sint. These deities and their 776 functions are as follows: Sts-tsk'tlal'x (Plate VII, Fig. 6) ordains the death of man and animals. According to one statement that I received, there are four deities of this name in the House of Myths. It is his particular duty to kill those who transgress the laws of the kt'sint. This deity is mis-
[113] taken by Jacobsen, who calls him Sek-selk Kallal.[4] Nanat'aq'ala (Plate VII, Fig. 7), or the Sanat'aq of the House of Myths, sits by himself in one

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1892, p. 129.
[2] Report of the U. S. National Museum, 1895, pp. 311-338.
[3] Drawings by Mr. Rudolph Weber.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1892, p. 300.

7:Boas E-5 (1894-ca. 1898)1900 NEh Bellacoola NEh corner of the house. He prevents those who are not initiated in the secrets of the ka'ulat from approaching the house. The Sisem'aq is a fabulous monster, the peculiarities of which are described in a number of traditions (see pp. 83 ff.). S'ants.a'mus.a'lt (Plate VII, Figs. 12 and 13) is a boy who performs ka'ulat dances all the time. When the deities resolve to send a new dance down to our world, it is conveyed by S'ants.a'mus.a'lt. It is the office of another deity to sing, accompanying the ka'ulat dances of the gods (Plate VII, Fig. 3). Acaqat'n'tsam is a deity in regard to whose functions I have not been able to obtain detailed information. It is said that he intervenes on behalf of man when Sisa and Ala'ustl'n threaten to punish him. There are two goddesses in the house who also intervene in favor of man when the principal deities threaten him with death and sickness. Their names are Sustema'ns (Plate VII, Fig. 9) and Alas.ila'sas (Plate VII, Figs. 10 and 11). They wake man after sleep. Without their help, nobody could wake from sleep. Alas.ila'sas is at the same time the guardian of the moon. Every month she restores the moon to her full size, and she cleans her face after an eclipse. The moon is called A'ns.'ts.gila (Plate X, Fig. 10). The eclipse is produced by several deities called Aiq'ns'yumsam, which means "painting the face black" (Plate X, Figs. 4-6). It is believed that at this time the moon performs one of the most sacred ceremonies of the ka'ulat, which are thought to be very dangerous to the performer. The black paint with which her face is covered is supposed to be a protection against these dangers. Alas.ila'sas cleans off the paint after the dance has been completed. According to Jacobsen,[1] the Indians say that during an eclipse the moon (Ewkla-ho'-killa) paints her face black. The same deities are believed to paint and to clean the faces of human ka'ulat dancers. Sustema'ns and Alas.ila'sas also resuscitate those who are killed by the dangerous performances of the ka'ulat.

While the functions of the beings enumerated here are mostly concerned with the ka'ulat, others are more immediately concerned with the affairs of the world. Important among these is K'ustsk'ns'm (Plate VII, Fig. 1). Sisa is the creator of man, but his work is supplemented by that of the god K'ustsk'ns'm. When Sisa creates a new-born child, K'ustsk'ns'm gives the child its individual features. Before children are born, the goddess named Nats'qamalas'a or Sisustemg'ilaus Sisaxid'ns.ala places them in a cradle and rocks them. After she ceases rocking them, the children are sent down to our world. She also rocks the young of all animals; and when she stops, Sisa sends them down to our world to be born. At the same time he ordains that their skins and their flesh shall serve for clothing and food for man. Nats'qamalas'a might therefore be called the deity

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1899, p. 102.

575 776 575 776 821 776 842 [113]

?:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NEó Bellacoola NEó

[776] having charge of the birth of all animal beings. While she is rocking the [342] cradle, she sings, —

[639] "[illegible] ts'ēmēts'ī'mēnēts' ēē ēē ēē ēē.
Ayōōōōk'ēē'ēē ēē ēē'ēēē

paint. They taught him the methods of hunting, and, according to some, they made the fish. The Bella Coola say, when carving a design, that Mas-masala'nix gives them the idea which they are working out. 776

Sanx has a daughter named Sp'ix-p'ik-na'm, who invented the art of working cedar-bark. Her figure is also used in the ka'siut ceremonial, in which the invention of the preparation of cedar-bark is represented. This deity has an assistant called Omatosé'k', who supports the stick over the edge of which she is breaking the bark. When first breaking bark, she shouts, "Aléex siiya'ltxau ti Omatosé'k-stix" ("Bring to me Omatosé'k'"). After he has been given to her, she shouts, "Aléex siiya'ltxau ta tqenk'-lis" ("Bring me the board on which to break the bark"). After receiving this, she demands the cedar-bark breaker, saying, "Aléex snukpánt.ai'ts ti sp'é'k-tats." Finally she asks for cedar-bark, saying, "Aléex k'-i.oh.ldamx-laix ti sp'é'k-ennex'." Then she begins to work, singing,— [575] [539] [539]

"E-ias ak'-a-ooo'i de.'ynu.'i-mata la lau'a E-ias sisand'ta tal Sp'ix-p'ik-na'mtas Sisaali'ma.la."

("Behold me, ye who are not initiated!
I am the Cedar-bark Breaker of Sisaali'ma.la.")

It seems that most of the Bella Coola maintain that the Raven also lives in the House of Myths, but this point of their mythology is somewhat obscure and contradictory. According to the tradition of a number of families, the Raven was one of the beings sent down by Sanx to our world to become the ancestor of man, but at the same time it is told that he invented certain arts. It is stated that he made the first salmon-trap (a.i.k'u'l), which is used in connection with the salmon-weir. 776 773

It is also said that Masmasala'nix attempted to make the whistles for the winter ceremonial, that he was unsuccessful, and that the Raven succeeded in making them; also that the Raven came down to give the world its present shape. He instituted the festivals of the Bella Coola, and then returned to the House of Myths.

Besides all these deities, there are nine brothers and their sister particularly concerned with the observations of the ka'siut ceremonial (Plate IX, Figs. 1–9). The names of the brothers are, Xemxemala'ni.la, Xe'mtsiwa, Omq'emk'ilk'a, Q'e'mtsiwa, Almala'ni.nla, Al'emki'lk'a, K'-le'lias, Q'ulaxa'wa, A'i'mak'; and of their sister, i.'ttsa'spite.ana. These deities are painted with certain designs. Xemxemala'ni.la and Xe'mtsiwa are painted with the designs of the full moon (the former carries a staff wound with red and white cedar-bark); Omq'emk'ilk'a and Q'e'mtsiwa, with the design of the half-moon; Almala'ni.nla and Al'emki'lk'a, with the design representing the stars; K'-le'lias, with the design of the rainbow; Q'ulaxa'wa, with the de- 776 776 532

776 sign of the salmon-berry blossom; A'i'mâk' has the shape of a kingfisher; 532 and L'ëtsa'aplëLana is painted with the design of a sea-lion bladder filled with grease. She wears rings of red and white cedar-bark. The carving representing the kingfisher has the wings attached to the sides of the head, while the tail rises over the forehead. Xëmxëmala'oLla is said to carry a small woman in his arms. Her name is Nuspo'xta. When the brothers and their sister threaten to do harm to man, she entreats them to desist. In some traditions these deities are described as the children of ALk'unta'm.[1]

776 In one tradition L'ëtsa'aplëLana' is described as visiting houses and 773 stealing provisions. She is then pursued by the person whom she has wronged, and returns to the House of Myths. The deities are unable to cure her; but the person who wounded her is called in, and withdraws his arrow, whereupon she recovers.[1] Formerly I had the impression that these [114] ten deities were particularly concerned with the sisau'k' ceremonial,[2] but this [575] impression has not been substantiated by the information I received during the past year. The ten deities appear much rather as deities of the ku'siut.

575 In the rear of the House of Myths there is a room named L'lo'sta, in 773 which the son of the deities lives. His name is Ba'EXôLla or Snupaaxola'lt. 776 When SEnx and ALk'unta'm desire to destroy their visitors, they send them past the door of Ba'EXôLla's room. The latter then rushes out of his room [772] and devours the visitors. He also initiates the Cannibal. According to the tradition of the tribe SE'nxLEmx', they acquired membership in the Cannibal Society in the following manner: Ba'EXôLla came down to the mountain SqtsL, where he met with the son of SEnxalo'LEla, the first of the tribe. He conducted him up to the House of Myths. He took him into his room, and gave him the name Q'oalaiu'tstimot. He put a snake into his body, which enabled him to pass through the water. When the youth applied his mouth to the body of a person, the snake tore pieces of flesh from the body, and devoured it. Then Ba'EXôLla took the youth to the upper heaven, past the rent in the sky, and to the house of the supreme deity, Qamaits. The two approached the house, being blown towards it by the strong gale prevailing in the open country of the upper heaven. They found Qamaits sitting in front of her house; and she said to Ba'EXôLla, "Why don't you come in? You wish that your friend should obtain great supernatural power. Bring him to my house, and I will give him what you desire. Stay for a short while where you are, and I will show you what I am doing. Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." After a little while the post closed its eyes. It grew dark at once, and the two visitors fainted, but soon they recovered. When the post opened its eyes again, it grew light. The visitors remained sitting on the ground, and

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 954.
[2] Seventh Report on the Northwestern Tribes of Canada, p. 8.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

suddenly a strong wind began to blow, which rolled them over the prairie until they reached the door of the house. Then suddenly the wind calmed down. They remained sitting on the ground near the doorway; and Qamá'its said, "Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." They were sitting opposite each other, watching the post; and when it closed its eyes, they were transformed into two stones, but they soon regained human shape. Then Qamá'its asked them to enter. Now the woman took the youth's blanket, and gave him another one made of bear-skin set with fringes of red cedar-bark. She told him that this blanket was to keep him warm, and that it would direct his course. Next she fetched some water from the salt-water pond behind her house. She sprinkled it over the faces of her visitors, and told the youth to sing about his experiences in the upper heaven when performing the Cannibal dance. If she had not sprinkled the faces of her visitors with water, they would have died. She said to the youth, "Your country is not far away. Do not be afraid of the dangerous road that you have to pass. Later on there shall be many Cannibals like you. Do not be afraid to touch the food that another Cannibal may offer to you. You are strong because you have seen me." Then Qamá'its sent him back to the lower sky. Here the gods placed him on the back of a bird (Sq'xsxn), which carried him down to the sea. As soon as the bird reached the water, it uttered its cry, and at the same time the young man uttered the cry of the Cannibal. The people heard it, and said to one another, "That must be the boy whom we lost some time ago." They connected many canoes by means of planks, and paddled out to the place where the bird was swimming about. They covered the canoes with red cedar-bark and eagle-down, and tried to capture the youth; but when they approached, the bird swam towards the village. They surrounded it with their canoes; but the bird flew up, and disappeared in the sky, and at the same time the youth flew towards the village. When the people landed, he attacked them, taking hold of their arms; and the snake, which was still in his body, tore pieces of flesh out of their arms. The people sang and beat time in order to appease him. 575 773 776

In a second room in the rear of the House of Myths, next to that of the Cannibal, lives Koko'sLxsm, another son of the deities. His room is called Nus'o'lxsta. He initiates the Olx-dancer (see Chap. VI). 776 575

The path of the Sun is guarded by a number of deities. At sunrise is stationed the Bear of Heaven, Snanó's ti Sônx t'aix (Plate X, Fig. 2). He is described as a fierce warrior, who protects the Sun against the attacks of his enemies, and he is the cause of the warlike spirit of man. His hair is tied up in a knot on top of his head. His mask is used in the sisau'k [772] [821]

776 ceremonial, and sometimes in the kū'siut. The following song belongs to 575 his mask and dance :—

[539] Nanemō'tstxnît ti q'ōyaki'mtat'aix·. Nō'noq'awēxum ts'ɛn t'ayōɬxlat'aix· ayati snanō's ti sōnx· t'aix·, wā, nān, ai!

("Cry now, as though you had left me! I shall tie up my hair, warriors, like the Bear of Heaven.")

776 At sunset stands an enormous post which is called Nutēexoa'axtatas ti
821 Sōnx· t'aix·. It supports the sky, and prevents the Sun from falling down into the lower world. The trail of the Sun is described as a bridge which was built by Masmasala'nix. The bridge is as broad as the distance between the winter solstice and the summer solstice. The Sun walks, his face turned towards the west. In summer he walks on the right-hand side of the bridge, in winter on the left-hand side of the bridge, which explains the varying heights of the sun in the course of the year. The extreme right and extreme left of the bridge are called Sē'ɛmt ("the place where he sits down," that is, the solstices). At each of these points a being is placed who is called Aɬk·x·ē'ɬnɛm (Plate X, Fig. 3). It is their duty to see that the Sun does not tarry too long at the solstice. If in summer or winter he should be inclined to stay too long or to return too soon, they regulate his course. When the Sun tarries too long at the winter solstice, the people say, "ex tsēs pa'nia" ("salmon will be dried late this year"). If he leaves it without tarrying, they say, "ek·!x· tsēs pa'nia" ("soon we shall dry salmon"). Three guardians named Naqumiqa'otsaix (Plate X, Fig. 1) accompany the Sun on his course, dancing around him all the time. The halo is called Itwu'xtsia ti Mānɬ t'nix· ("the cape of our father"). A sun-[731] dog that appears westward from the Sun is called Aɬqōɬ ti Mānɬ t'aix· ("the [753] painted face of our father"). The Bella Coola believe that when it drops down to our earth, it causes epidemics. During an eclipse the Sun is believed to lose his torch. The rays of the Sun are his eyelashes.

There are twenty-four guardians appointed to take care of the sky. They are called Nexolak·ai'x·. According to tradition, the sky must be continually fed with firewood. Once upon a time they put too much firewood into the sky and made it burst. All the pieces except one, called S'aɬ-walō'sɛm, fell down to our earth. The fragments hit the faces of the twenty-four guardians, and distorted them. They tried to mend the sky, but did not know how to do it. They went down the river, and came to Masmasala'nix, whose assistance they asked. Masmasala'nix gathered up the broken pieces, and glued them together. Up to that time the Sun had staid in the east, but now he began to go on his daily course. At that time Masmasala'nix built the bridge over which the Sun travels every day. He placed a wedge in the opening of the sky, into which the Nexolak·ai'x· have to put the firewood. This opening is called K·awa'umsta, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Masmasalá'nix spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following kū'siut song refers to these deities: — 776 821

[539]

Ái'mats tā mnatsai' tūsxts ti sō'nx·tsgi t'aix.
Aiēlx tā mnatsai' ōt. ti S'ałwalō·sgms ti Sōnx· t'aix.
Sk·a ya'lx·tux ti sī'lxnō tā mnatsai'.
Sk·a anōga wa rxemē'x ti K·awa'umstask· ti Sōnx· t'aix· tā mnatsai.

("My child perished like the sky when it broke.
Go to S'ałwalō·sgm of the sky, my child!
Gladden my heart, my child!
Sit down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'nēkō'ōt, or Qenk·i'lst, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Ałēp!alaxtnaix·. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Snēnikᵘpstak·imtōłs," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [731] [753]

In the ocean lives a being called Sēłsāts, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the kū'siut ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kōłkᵘłōłe'mx·). It is called Asiutá'nem. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Smaya'na, that is considered a human being. It is said that his children make the canoe go up Bella Coola River with the rising tide, A'nxumk·ila. The canoe travels the distance from the mouth of the river to the mountain Smaya'na in a single tide. The canoe "No'ak·nem" stays for four months. Then the canoe "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns from the country of the Salmon, while "No'ak·nem" leaves again. It is said that all the gods of the House of Myths come to the villages of the Bella Coola in the canoe "No'ak·nem." 773 [776]

The arrival and the departure of these canoes are strictly regulated according to the calendar of the Bella Coola, which for this reason should be explained in connection with their beliefs. The Bella Coola divide the year into two parts, which are separated by the winter and summer solstices. The solstices are periods of indefinite length, between which five months are counted. Each solstice is reckoned, therefore, as approximately six weeks. The names of the months are as follows:— 773 805 821

Sêr'mt (winter solstice)	Sêr'mt (summer solstice)
Sxôlr·mx·erem	Sî·lxem
A'nxônsumk	Sevexe'mat
Siaq'u·m	Sinulla'lsemtenem
Siqiô'lx·	Tsi·sitak·a'ns tsem Anaûlikuts'ai·x·
Sinô·moak·	Lemulê'm

The canoe "No'ak·nem" arrives, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" leaves, in the month Sinulla'lsemtenem. The canoe "No'ak·nem" leaves, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns, in the month Sxôle'mx·erem.

At the moment when the canoe "No'ak·nem" arrives, a deity called Anaûlikuts'ai'x· (Plate XII, Figs. 1 and 2), who is believed to live in a cave, opens the door of her abode. There is one deity of this name to each village. Her cave is called Nuskêsiô'tsta. It is said that one Anaûlikuts'ai'x· lives on the mountain Sqtsl. Her house is described as a large hollow bowlder suspended from the top of the mountain by means of a rope. Each Anaûlikuts'ai'x· has an older sister who is called Nutsê'xenem. When the canoe "No'ak·nem" appears, and she opens her door, she steps outside and stands in front of her house, dancing, with trembling hands. When a person sees her, he faints. His soul is taken into her house, and is initiated into the secrets of the ka'siut. 773 776 [575]

A particular Nuskêsiô'tsta is believed to be at the foot of the creek Anô'nk·, on the northern side of North Bentinck Arm, near the mouth of Bella Coola River. A woman called Nustsxoaxlô'stxult. lives there. She is described as emaciated, of black skin, and as wearing a black blanket. A certain chief who lived long ago was the first to see her. He was initiated by her, and after his return he performed a dance, and told what he had seen. Then he died.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 There is a special deity who initiates the shamans. His name is LALA-
[756] ia'IL or Sxai'exoax (Plate XI, Fig. 9). He lives in the woods. He carries a wooden wand wound with red cedar-bark, which he swings in his hands, producing a singing noise. Around his neck he wears a large ring made of strips of bear-skin and red cedar-bark. He sometimes plays in ponds which are believed to be in certain mountains. When he jumps into the water, it boils. When a woman meets him, she begins to menstruate: when a man meets him, his nose begins to bleed. When initiating a person, he touches the chest of the latter with his wand, and paints his face with the design of the rainbow. Then he swings his wand, the noise of which causes the person who hears it to faint. He creates sexual desire in man [787] and animals. A shaman who was initiated by this being told me that he very often sees LALAIA'IL, who tells him who will die and who will fall sick. Sometimes he sees that the body of a person is black. Others he sees dancing on their heads. These are signs that they will die at an early date. I obtained from this man the description of the visit to the country of the ghosts, quoted before (p. 38). He told me that when reaching the country of the dead, he saw the ghosts of his deceased relatives sitting in the house. When they saw him, they began to weep, and said, "Don't come here. We don't want to see you so soon." While they were speaking to him, the chief's speaker entered the house, and called all the people to come to the dancing-house of the ghosts. One of the ghosts painted his face black and white, and tied long strips of white and red cedar-bark in his hair. The people were called four times. Then they started to go to the dancing-house. The entrance to the door was over a narrow plank. When he had just stepped on the plank, he suddenly saw LALAIA'IL, with his large neck-ring made of red cedar-bark and strips of black bear-skin, who took hold of him, turned him round, and told him to return to his own country, because, if he should once enter the dancing-house, he would not be able to return. Then he revived; and from that time on, LALAIA'IL was his supernatural helper.

A. Jacobsen describes this spirit as follows:[1] —

776 "The most prominent among the spirits of the shamans is Kle-klati-e'il 756 [LALAIA'IL]. He lives in the woods, where the youth who intends to be initiated tries to find him. When the spirit meets him, the youth faints. When he recovers, he begins to sing a song, the tune and words of which have been given to him by the spirit. Now he has become a shaman, who uses this song in all his incantations; but he does not retain it throughout life, because he meets his guardian spirit almost every year, and then he receives new songs. The Indians believe that Kle-klati-e'il has human shape, but he is clothed in cedar-bark, and wears a great many rings of cedar-bark.

[113] [1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 104.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Some of these he gives to the shaman. . . . A third spirit is the Skaia [Sxai'êxoax], which is believed to live in rivers, and to have the shape of a salmon. When a shaman who is inspired by this spirit makes an incantation in a house, singing and dancing, as all the shamans do, whoever approaches the house and hears the song turns back. They believe that whoever passes the house during the incantation will be punished with death by the spirit Skaia." 776 756

I believe this spirit is identical with LALAIA II., who, as stated before, has the second name Sxai'êxoax. According to Jacobsen, some shamans are initiated by the ghosts. He says that the ghosts are believed to have bald heads and blue faces. I am under the impression, however, that the people initiated by them are not shamans, but ka'siut dancers (see Chap. VI). [775] [575]

Another being who initiates shamans is described in the following tradition: — 539

Once upon a time there was a man and a woman who had four sons. The three elder ones died. Then the father and mother and the youngest brother were very unhappy, and the old people cried for grief until they died. The young man was now left all alone. He left his village, intending to go away and never to return. He pulled his blanket over his head and walked on. Sometimes he would stop to pray. He lived on the meat of mountain-goats which he shot. He built a small hut high up on the mountains, and dried the meat. He was crying and praying all the time. He prayed to the Sun to give him a gift which would restore his happiness. One day early in the morning he ascended the mountain. He addressed the rising Sun, saying, "Look at me, how unhappy I am." After he had gone a short distance he came to a ravine. The bed of the ravine was filled with pretty pebbles. There he met a beautiful man, who was no other than the Sun, who had descended from the sky. He had caused the water of the creek that runs through the ravine to disappear. When the young man saw the stranger from a distance, he thought, "He seems to be looking for me." He went nearer; and when they met, the Sun said, "I am the one to whom you are praying all the time, and I came to help you. Now be happy. When you open your mouth and speak to me, I know your thoughts at once. I help those who address themselves to me. Take this." With these words he handed the young man a switch carved in the shape of a man. The Sun was carrying it under his arm, the point of the switch directed downward. "Fold your arms and hold this switch to your chest, and then return to the village. When you approach any one, hide the switch under your arm. You will find a person who wears a nose-ornament of beautiful green color. Then you must try to hit the ornament with this switch, and throw it to your right side." 756 776

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 He walked on, and after a while he noticed a man sitting at a distance.
756 Then he hid the switch under his arm. When he came near, he saw that 776 the man wore a large green nose-ring. He hit it with his switch, and threw it to the right-hand side. Then the man said, "You have attained me as your supernatural helper. Your name shall be S'a'tema [from 'a'tema,' 'dead']. Many people have seen me, but nobody has done what you did. If you had not struck my nose-ornament, you would have died on seeing me. You shall have the power to heal the sick by the touch of your hands. Whenever a person dies and is put into a box, after the box has been placed in the burial-ground, go there. You will find me sitting on the coffin. If then you knock the nose-ring from out of my nose, I shall leave, and the dead will revive. He will break the box, and will arise."

Then the young man felt very glad. He returned to the village, and by following the instructions of the spirit he resuscitated the dead. He was given many blankets, and the men whom he had resuscitated gave him their daughters in marriage.

756 Other shamans are initiated by L'ètsa'aplèLana. The same man who 776 gave me the record of his supposed visit to the country of the ghosts (see p. 38) told me that at another time he saw L'ètsa'aplèLana flying in the air outside of his house. She wore a ring of red cedar-bark around her neck. She was turning round all the time. Songs were coming from all parts of her body. Although she did not open her mouth, it sounded as though a great many people were singing. She gave him a song, or, as the narrator expressed it, "she threw a song into his body." At that time he was sick, suffering from a wound in his leg inflicted by an axe. He said four days after meeting the spirit he was able to walk, and since that time she has assisted him in curing diseases.

The sl'siuL is another helper of the shaman, and the means of curing disease (see p. 28). It appears that it obtains its supernatural power from the fact that it lives in the water in which the supreme deity washes her face. When a person sees a sl'siuL, he should throw sand on it, by which means he will be able to catch it. Its skin is so hard that it cannot be pierced with a spear or knife. The person who catches it should not try to cut it with his knife, but should stretch his hand backward, and thus he will find the leaf of a holly, which is the only thing that can cut its skin. He should not touch the sl'siuL with his hands, but hold it with hemlock twigs. He should wrap it in white cedar-bark and tie it up in his blanket. If it is not thus tied up, it will disappear. It must not be taken into the [755] house, but should be placed in a small box and hidden under stones, or buried in a hole under the root of a tree. It is a most potent means of curing disease. Sick people will buy small pieces of the s'siuL, for which they pay high prices. The piece is thrown into water, in which it is kept for four days. Then the water is used for washing the body. If a healthy person uses this water, he will live to an old age. Sick persons chew the white cedar-bark in which it is wrapped up, in order to regain health. They must not swallow the cedar-bark, but only the saliva that gathers in their mouths. A person who has chewed the cedar-bark becomes invulnerable. The eye of the st'siuł is described as about a foot in diameter, and as transparent as rock crystal. 756 776 [755]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Toa'łał'it is the spirit who protects the mountain-goat hunter. He himself is invisible; but great hunters sometimes see his hat, his moccasins, or his mountain staff moving about. The following tradition describes some of his characteristics: — 776 539

The Raven and the Lynx lived in one house, each occupying one side. Early in the morning the Raven went out to catch salmon with the harpoon. He was very successful, and carried the fish home. Toa'łał'it watched the Raven, who, when he arrived at the house, roasted his salmon. The children of the Lynx were sitting near by, and looking at the Raven while he was roasting the fish. They wished to participate in the meal, but he did not give them anything. Then the children were very sad. Now the Lynx made up his mind to make arrows and to go hunting mountain-goat. He went out and cut some wood for his arrows; then he told his wife to make a quiver, which he called Ts'ō'łapeła. She did so, and wove a quiver of cedar-bark. The Lynx was quite impatient for the sun to rise, so eager was he to start hunting. Early in the morning he arose and ascended the mountain. When he reached the limit of the trees, he sat down on a flat rock and looked for goats. Then he saw the staff of a man who was coming down the mountain. He did not see the person himself. He thought, "Who is that? Who may be hunting here?" The stick approached him; and when it came near, he saw Toa'łał'it, who wore a large hat. His hat was named Q!pōł (that means a "barren mountain-top"). Toa'łał'it reached the Lynx, and sat down opposite him. Neither spoke a word. After a while Toa'łał'it arose, took the arrows of the Lynx, and said, "How beautiful these arrows are!" He took up one after another until he had looked at all the four arrows of the Lynx. Then he asked, "Who made these arrows?" The Lynx did not reply. Toa'łał'it asked again, "Who made these arrows?" Then Lynx replied, "Toa'łał'it made my arrows." Then Toa'łał'it was very much pleased, and said, "Is he the one who made your arrows?" — "Certainly," replied Lynx. Then Toa'łał'it took his arrows and threw one after another down the mountain, and said to the Lynx, "Now go down the mountain and look at your arrows. If you spoke the truth, every

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 776 one of them will have killed a large mountain-goat." The Lynx descended the mountain, and saw that every one of his arrows had killed a goat. Then he was glad, because now he had food for his children. He jumped and danced for joy. And Toa'lat.'it said, "I am Toa'lat.'it. I am so called because I am the mountain-goat hunter. Now return to your village. From now on, I am your supernatural protector. The next time you go hunting, and you do not find any mountain-goats, sit down and throw your arrows down the mountain. Every one will kill a goat. But do not lose those arrows. If you should lose them, you would never kill another mountain-goat." The mountain-goats were so large, that Lynx took only their fat, which he put into his quiver and climbed down the mountain. He arrived at his house in the afternoon. He left his quiver outside, and the Raven saw him coming in. The Lynx sat down by the side of his wife. He did not say a word. His wife and his children also received him in silence. In the evening, when it was dark, he said to his wife, "Go and fetch my quiver. It is hanging outside on a stick." She went there and tried to lift it, but it was too heavy. She returned to her husband and told him that she was not strong enough to lift it, and asked him to fetch it himself. He said, "It is not heavy." He went out himself and brought it in. He opened it and took out the fat; and he gave some of it to his children, but he did not give any to the Raven's children. Then the Raven was very sad. After a little while, the Raven's children began to cry, because they wanted some of the fat.

Early the next morning the Lynx went to fetch the meat of the mountain-goat. The Raven watched him, and saw where he went. When he saw that the Lynx had killed mountain-goats, he made up his mind to go hunting too. He told his wife to make him a quiver while he went out to cut wood for his arrows. In the evening the quiver and the arrows were done. In the afternoon the Lynx came home, bringing the meat of the mountain-goats. Early the next morning the Raven started, following the tracks of the Lynx. He reached the place where the Lynx had sat down. He sat there, and placed his arrows by his side. He looked around for mountain-goats. After some time he saw a staff moving along in the distance. It approached, and soon he saw a man coming down the mountain. It was Toa'lat.'it. He reached him, and sat down opposite the Raven. They did not speak a word. After a while Toa'lat.'it arose, took up the arrows, and said, "Man, your arrows are beautiful. Who made them?" The Raven did not reply. Then Toa'lat.'it said again, "Tell me who made your arrows." Then the Raven answered, "The name of the man who makes my arrows is Raven." Then Toa'lat.'it took the arrows, threw them down the mountain, and said to the Raven, "You are bad!" And he turned back, and ascended the mountain. The Raven went down the mountain, trying to find his arrows.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They had hit a stone, and their points were broken. He staid there some time, and when it was nearly dark he returned home. Before he reached his house, he cut his own belly and took out some of the fat from his intestines. He cut it in five pieces, and replaced his intestines. He put the fat into his quiver. When he reached his house, he hung the quiver up outside, and entered. He imitated everything the Lynx had done. When it grew dark, he told his wife to fetch his quiver. She brought it, and he told her to open it and to feed his children. She took the fat out, placed it on a stick, and put it near the fire; and as soon as it grew warm, the Raven cried, "Tttt! Don't put it so near the fire. I feel sick when you do so." He jumped up, took hold of the fat, and put it back in his belly. The Lynx said, "Formerly I fed your children, but you were the first not to treat me properly. You did not give any food to my children." Then the Lynx took some fat, and flung one piece to each of the Raven's children. He cut some meat and gave it to them also. Then the Raven said, "I will give you one of my children, that it may grow up in company with yours." 539 776

It is said that the former spirit Toa'laL'it was killed at one time by an Indian who took his place. This tale is recorded in Chap. IV. It belongs to the tribe of the village Nusxe'q!. A similar tradition is told of Astás,[1] by which name the Carriers call the Raven, their principal culture hero. Many traditions referring to Astas are common to the Carriers, the Bella Coola, and the Awt'k'ênôx of Rivers Inlet. 773 776 [171]

The Bella Coola believe that a being called K^{u}tsôs is the father of all mountain-goats. When a hunter meets him, he thinks he sees a kid. Then he should close his eyes and open them again. If the animal is K^{u}tsôs, it will appear in its real shape as a buck of enormous size. The hunter should then ascend the mountain. If he should descend, he would fall and die. 776 825

The thunder-storm is produced by the Thunder-bird, who lives on the mountains, in the company of a number of spirits, who are considered his particular friends. The Thunder-bird himself is represented by a black mask with red nostrils. The nose is strongly curved, the forehead bulges forward, and the chin protrudes almost as far forward as the nose (Plate XI. Fig. 1). His herald is called ALxula'tEnum (Plate XI. Fig. 2). His face is painted with orange and blue stripes, and he carries a speaker's staff, which is painted with spirals of the same color. He watches the door of the Thunder-bird's house. In his house live the Rabbit (Plate XI. Fig. 3); the Owl, who is considered the rival of the Thunder-bird (Plate XI. Fig. 4); the Mountain, LE'qots (Plate XI. Fig. 5); the Raindrop (Plate XI. Fig. 6). 776 [821] [532] [575]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 90.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 575 [534] The Thunder-bird and his companions appear in the kū'siut ceremonial. When they enter the house, a dancer appears who carries an instrument in the shape of a bird-rattle (Plate XI, Fig. 7), which is provided with holes in its lower side, and has a loose back. This implement is filled with cedar-bark and eagle-down, and is shaken by the dancer. The eagle-down is thus made to fly about in the house, symbolizing the wealth and power of the Thunder-bird.

IV.

184 773 In the preceding pages I have summarized the principal features of Bella Coola mythology, which are characteristic of the traditions of the whole tribe. Besides these, there are other groups of traditions which are very conflicting. One reason for the existence of numerous contradictory traditions must be looked for in the peculiar social organization of the Bella Coola. In former times, when the tribe was populous, the Bella Coola inhabited a great many villages. The inhabitants of each village are considered the descendants of a number of mythical ancestors who were sent down by SEMX. Each of these village communities has traditions of its own, which are its property, and which are not well known to the rest of the tribe. Many of these traditions refer to the origin of our world, and for this reason a number of the most important myths differ in various villages. Indications of such conflicting ideas may be found in the traditions recorded in the preceding pages. To make this subject clear, it is necessary to describe somewhat fully the traditions belonging to a number of village communities. Before recording these traditions I shall enumerate the villages of the tribe. 103 361 773 The following list is the result of repeated inquiries. In it the names and locations of the villages are given in consecutive order from the mouth of Bentinck Arm upward along Bella Coola River, and the names of the mythical ancestors of the village communities have been added where these have been ascertained.

Village.	Location.	Ancestors.
1. Q'oa'ła	At the bay of this name.
2. Sr'tia	At the entrance of South Bentinck Arm.	Tōtoxō'nx.
3. Nuxxé'q!	On North Bentinck Arm.	Szmsiutā'k'as, Nuxqoa'xłaxé, Sxinta, and their sister E'nx'alana.
4. Pé'iszla	At the entrance of the valley opening on the north side of the mouth of Bella Coola River.	Stā'homx Yuyo'łk", Mxtsi't, Sisia'ł.
5. Alqla'xł.	The present division at the north side of Bella Coola River, near its mouth.	Isyē'yōt, Xēmxē'mtxnem, Snuxnala'ła, and their sister Loqai'nta.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the middle of the water, the barnacles and worms bit her. She jumped up, and the canoe capsized. The birds swam ashore. After a short time the barnacles and sea-worms came ashore too. They looked very stout, because they had eaten the bear. Then the youth said to the girl, "There are two trails here,—one leading to the left, the other to the right. You follow the one, I will follow the other. If the trails meet, we will marry; if they do not, we here separate forever. They started, and after a while met each other. Then the youth married the girl. (Mask of the Bear, Plate X, Fig. 12.)[1]

VI.

It is necessary to make a few remarks on the relation of the ceremonials of the Bella Coola Indians to their mythology. I have not seen any of their ceremonials, and my descriptions are based on inquiries, and upon the accounts published by Fillip and Adrian Jacobsen.

The Bella Coola have two ceremonials,—the sisau'k· and the kn'siut, which correspond to the LAõ'laxa and the ts'ètsa'eqa of the Kwakiutl. I have described these ceremonials fully in another paper.[2] The sisau'k· ceremonials are mostly dramatic representations illustrating the clan legends, some of which have been recorded in Chap. IV, while the kn'siut ceremonials are dramatic representations of the initiation of members of various clans into certain secret societies. Among these, the Cannibal Society, the Society of the Laughers, and the Society of the Throwers, are the most important. These are called by the Bella Coola the ELaxõ'LELa, Olx, and Da'tia. I described on pp. 34, 35, the spirits presiding over the two first-named societies. The information which I obtained on these points is perfectly clear and consistent. I cannot quite reconcile the explanations given by A. and F. Jacobsen to the accounts which I received. It seems that their accounts do not clearly distinguish between the opinions held by various tribes. In the article above referred to, I described fully the opinions held by the Kwakiutl in regard to the origin of their Cannibal Society. They believe that a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsi'wae initiates the Cannibals. He is represented as having an enormous black head with dilated nostrils and large mouth. I have made frequent inquiries among the Bella Coola, but received the uniform answer that this being does not initiate their Cannibals. It is not impossible that a few families may have adopted this tradition from the Kwakiutl tribes, but I have not been able to find it among the Bella Coola. Jacobsen maintains that Baxbakualanuxsi'wae is the particular spirit of the Cannibal among the Bella Coola, and brings forward the well-known

[1] Additional legends of the Bella Coola have been published in the publications quoted on pp. 26, 27.
[2] Annual Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 311-738.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tradition of the Awī'k·'enôx as an explanation of the ceremonial. The only modification which I note in this tradition is that the Cannibal's wife is described as sucking out through their ears the brains of children,—an incident which I heard related of the mother of At.k'untā'm.[8] He calls him "Beck-Beck-Kvalanit, and in the Bella Coola dialect, Pāh-Pāh Kualanusiva." This word is decidedly of Kwakiutl origin, meaning "the one who eats human flesh at the mouth of the river (or at the north end of the world)." Neither have I been able to find any mask representing this being among the Bella Coola tribe. The masks which they use in connection with the Cannibal ceremony are of quite a different character (Plate XII, Figs. 1-8). I am the more inclined to think that Mr. Jacobsen did not clearly distinguish between the customs and traditions of various tribes, since he introduces "Ganikilla Ko" (Qa'nig·ilak·) in the traditions of the Bella Coola, while it is distinctively a legend of the Kwakiutl tribes of the extreme northwest of Vancouver Island. Jacobsen does not distinguish clearly between the sisau'k· and the kū'siut, stating that the kū'siut dances are performed during the sisau'k· in the same way as, among the Kwakiutl, a LAō'laxa may be celebrated during the ts'ē'ts'aēqa. This may be, but theoretically the two ceremonials must be considered entirely distinct. According to the information which I received, sisau'k· dances may be held in summer, in which case the kū'siut could not possibly form part of the sisau'k· ceremonial. When, on the other hand, the sisau'k· takes place during the kū'siut period, it would naturally be accompanied by kū'siut dances. 114 575 776 796

As stated before, the sisau'k· is a ceremonial in which the legend of the clan is illustrated by means of dramatic performances. At the same time valuable presents are distributed among the guests who are invited to witness the ceremonial. The value of the gifts amounts often to several thousand dollars. At this time the family legend is told in general outlines, but the details of the legend are kept a secret, and are transmitted only to those who are initiated in the sisau'k· of the clan. It seems that we must consider the transmission of the sisau'k· legend in the following manner: At any given time it is the property of the chief of the family, who, at the time of the celebration, transfers his rights to his successor, generally to his son. The full tradition is kept secret by the owner. It seems that there is a close analogy between the conditions prevailing in the northwest and those found among the southwestern Indians, among whom certain priests are guardians of traditions. Among the tribes of the northwest coast the chief of a family is the guardian and owner of the family tradition, while among the southwestern tribes the priest is the guardian of the tradition belonging to a clan or to a fraternity. My impression is, however, that among the northwestern 575 424 [431]

[8] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, p. 316.
[9] Ibid., 1894, p. 298.

[113]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 Indians the tradition is considered much more clearly the property of the 575 person who has it in charge than it is among the southwestern Indians. A description of the sisau'k· ceremonial has been given by Jacobsen in the paper above referred to.[1]

614 A clan legend which is illustrated in the sisau'k· ceremonial is called by the Bella Coola "Semsma" or "Sma'yusta." These traditions are the 424 exclusive property of each clan. The laws according to which they descend from generation to generation differ from the laws prevailing among the other [621] Coast tribes. The inhabitants of each Bella Coola village are not subdivided into clans, gentes, or septs; but each village community forms a unit, and possesses the same tradition. In order to keep the tradition in the tribe, the 614 law requires that no person shall marry outside of his own village community. Thus the clan tradition is kept the exclusive property of the village com-
424 munity by means of endogamy. I have made very careful inquiries in regard 582 to this point, and all the old men make substantially the same statement. Even marriages among near relatives are permitted:[2] and although marriages of people who are distantly related, or not related at all, are preferred, it even happens that cousins marry, or that an uncle marries his niece, in order to keep the clan tradition from being acquired by another village community. It seems, however, that, owing to the influence of the Coast tribes, the endogamic system has begun to give way to an exogamic system. Powerful [622] and wealthy chiefs marry outside of their own village community, in order to secure an additional clan legend through marriage. This new system agrees with the one prevalent among the Kwakiutl tribes.

575 The kū'siut, as stated before, is a religious ceremony in which all the 614 deities of heaven are personified. The members of various clans are initiated according to their clan traditions; but the same societies and the same deities 796 appear in the traditions of all the various clans. From what little I have been able to learn, it seems that there is an elaborate opening of the whole ceremonial, corresponding to the opening of the ceremonial among the Kwakiutl.[3] I received the following description of the opening ceremony:—

575 The person who invites to the kū'siut, that is to say, the man whose 796 son is to be initiated into one of the secret societies according to the tradition of his clan, requests a person who is called E'xêm to invite the nine brothers and their sister, who reside in the House of Myths, and in whose charge the [776] kū'siut is placed. The names of the brothers are Xêmxêmalá'oɪ.la, Xe'mtsiwa, Ômq'ômkī'lik·a, Q'ô'mtsiwa, Aimàlá'oɪ.la, Aī'umkī'lik·a, K·le'lias, Q'ulaxa'wa, Ā'mâk·; and that of their sister, L'ètsa'aplèɪ.ana (see p. 33). In the rear of the house an elevated room is prepared for E'xêm, in which he lies down. He is covered with rings made of red cedar-bark. For four days he stays

[1] Ibid., 1895, pp. 1-23.
[2] I have described this fully in the Annual Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 310 ff.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

mythologies to those of the interior. It is unnecessary to revert to this subject here. The similarity of the Bella Coola legends to those of the other Coast tribes on the one hand, and to the traditions of the Athapascan tribes on the other, is evident. 114 177

It is, however, important to compare their social organization with that of the neighboring tribes, in order to gain a clearer understanding of the origin of their peculiar organization. As stated before, the Bella Coola are divided into village communities, which are organized on an endogamic basis. Each village community has its tradition, which is represented in certain ceremonies. The supernatural beings which play a part in these traditions are personified by certain dancers. Other Coast tribes have a much more complex organization. The Tlingit and Haida are divided into two clans, each of which is subdivided into a great many families, which, as it would seem, were originally village communities. This opinion is based on the fact that the names of many of the families must be translated as "inhabitants of such and such a place." The two clans are present in all the villages of the tribe, each family belonging to either one clan or the other. The Tsimshian have the same system, except that the number of clans is four instead of two. Each tribe is divided into families, which embrace the inhabitants of a certain region; but all the families of the whole tribe are classified according to the four clans. Among the Haida, Tlingit, and Tsimshian, descent is purely maternal; among the northern Kwakiutl tribes, conditions are somewhat different, according to observations made by Dr. Livingston Farrand. Here we have village communities which are subdivided according to four clans in the same way as those of the Tsimshian, but descent is not purely maternal. There is a strong preponderance of the latter form of descent, but parents are at liberty to place their children in either the paternal or maternal clan. The preponderance of maternal descent is, however, so strong, that from my previous occasional inquiries I drew the inference that descent was purely maternal. 621 171 [796] [776]

Among the southern Kwakiutl tribes the families constituting a village community are subdivided into a number of clans, but each clan is confined to one village. We do not find a limited number of clans pervading the whole tribe, as we do among the northern tribes. An analysis of the social organization of this tribe has shown that the present organization has evidently developed from a previous simpler state, in which the tribe was divided into single village communities. The present more complex organization resulted from the amalgamation of various villages. Owing to the influence of the totemism of the northern tribes, each village community adopted a crest, which in course of time became the totem of the clan.[1] The Kwakiutl have a peculiar organization, which may be considered a transitional stage between inhabited by Salish tribes refer to the early separation of the Bella Coola tribe from the related tribes of the Gulf of Georgia, and that in their traditions they have retained the memory of the emigration of part of the tribe from the southern territory. It seems also probable that the allusion to the origin of one family of the tribe on Skeena River refers to a mixture with the tribes inhabiting northern British Columbia.

[1] "Sagas Societies of the Kwakiutl Indians" (Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, p. 310). [113]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The traditions of the tribes also describe the style of house used by the ancestors of certain village communities; and it is interesting to note that some of these houses correspond to the subterranean lodges that were in use among the Chilcotin, while others correspond to the tents that were in use among the Carriers. It is said that the ancestor of the Nuxalk'ix used the subterranean lodge which is called tsi'pa (see p. 87), while the ancestor of the Nusq!a'lst used the skin lodge which is called sk·ma (see p. 64).

Since the Bella Coola retain the fundamental traits of the social organization of their congeners in the south, and since their traditions bear evidence of an emigration from that region, and since, furthermore, the linguistic evidence proves that the Bella Coola and the Coast Salish at one time inhabited contiguous areas on the coast, we are justified in assuming that the general culture of the Bella Coola at the time of their emigration must have resembled that of the Coast Salish. The question then arises, How did the peculiar endogamic system and the remarkable mythology of the Bella Coola originate from the much simpler forms that we find among the Coast Salish?

One of the most remarkable features in the inner life of the tribes of the northern coast of British Columbia is the great importance of the clan legend, which is considered one of the most valuable properties of each clan or family. It is carefully guarded in the same way as material property, and an attempt on the part of a person not a member of the clan to tell the tradition as his own is considered one of the gravest offences against property rights. The possession of a clan tradition is felt by the Indian to be one of his most important prerogatives. When, therefore, the Bella Coola settled on Bella Coola River, and were thrown into contact with the northern Coast tribes, the lack of a well-developed clan tradition must have been felt as a serious drawback. The physical appearance of the Bella Coola proves that at one time they must have intermarried to a great extent with the Bella Bella. Through these marriages the peculiar customs of the Coast tribes were first introduced among them. This is shown by the fact that a great many of the mythological names can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin, of which stock the Bella Bella are a branch. Thus the name for their supreme deity, Smal'yakila, is a Kwakiutl word meaning "the one who must be worshipped." The name Ô'mq'omkillk·a is also of Kwakiutl origin, and may be translated as "the wealthiest one." The great frequency of

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE4 Bellacoola NE4

174 words of Kwakiutl derivation will become clear by a glance at the following 177 list, which contains words that can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin :—

776

[195]

a'Lokoala = shaman.
Alk* = speaker.
E'mak'la (p. 49) (Kwakiutl, Hē'mak'la) = the greatest chief.
Hau'kau (p. 100) = a fabulous bird.
L'E'qoag'ila = the copper maker.
L'E'qumilks = sister of Mamamitt'ala (the ending, ilx, designates "woman" in Kwakiutl).
L'ōqumalt' = mythological name of deer.
Ma'lak'ilas.
Mentul't (p. 48).
Mia'lina = the country of the salmon (p. 38) (Kwakiutl, mē) = salmon.
Na'akila (pp. 49, 66).
O'mentk'ao (p. 70) = the real O'mek.
O'mentmal (p. 70).
Oma'mak'Ma'a (p. 33) (Kwakiutl, Q'ō'ma'ma-kilā a) = the weakest one.
Pa'Lan.
Qamlaala'qa (p. 49).
Q'ōmā'qoa (p. 32) = the wealthy one.
Q'ō'mapilo (p. 49) = rich at opposite side of river.
Q'ō'mainwa (p. 33) = wealthy at mouth of river.
Sanal'yakila (p. 29) = the one who must be worshipped.
s'ōiet = a fabulous fish or snake (pp. 18, 44, 48).
Sancyala'ala (p. 29).
T'ō'pawa (p. 97) = the fawn.
Wawel'ao (p. 38) = war.
Ya'k'ienai (p. 30) = the greatest river.

174 With these names and customs the clan traditions must have found their 177 way to the Bella Coola, but their social organization differed fundamentally 424 from that of the Bella Bella branch of the Kwakiutl. While the latter, 614 owing to intimate contact with the northern tribes, had adopted the four-clan [621] system with prevalent maternal descent, the Bella Coola were still distinctly divided into village communities that were not exogamic. It seems very likely that the jealousy with which the ownership of a clan tradition was guarded by the Coast tribes was very early introduced among the Bella Coola. Two means were available for preventing outsiders from acquiring the traditions. Among the Coast tribes with prevailing maternal institutions, among whom a limited number of clans existed, the ordinary law of inheritance was sufficient to retain the tradition inside of the clan. Not so among the Bella Coola. If their organization at an early time was similar to that of the Coast Salish, 174 it is likely that the child was counted as well a member of the father's as 182 of the mother's family, although the young woman generally moved to the 424 village occupied by her husband. If the child belonged to the families of 614 both parents, it had the right to use the tradition of either family; and consequently in the course of a few generations, the traditions acquired by [591] each family would have spread practically over the whole tribe. There were only two methods possible to avoid this result. The one was to prevent [85] marriages outside the village community; and this method would seem to have been most natural for a tribe organized in village communities, members [621] of which were allowed to intermarry. The other method would have been to regulate the laws of inheritance in such a way that the child had to

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE VII.

Characteristic indicator Mask: vertical hachure, red; horizontal, blue; diagonal, green; dots, orange; white, natural color of mask.

532
#716

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Sasa (front and profile). Natural color, nostrils red, eyebrows black. Height, 19 inches. Cat. No. 1189.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Ala'xsak'ia (front and profile). Natural color, nostrils red, eyebrows black. Height, 30 inches. Cat. No. 1188.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing the Dragon of the Waters of Myths. Blue, red, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. 1185.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Sedek'ala'k'la (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. 1184.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing K'ala'k'ala'ia (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. 1186.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing Sla'ak'lai'a (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 31 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 7.—Double mask representing Nuxal'aaq'ala (opened, closed, and profile of inner mask). Inner face, red, blue, and black; inner side of wings, black and red; outer face, black, red, blue. Height, 14 inches. Cat. No. 1183.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing Sneel'kaxlin Ala'xsak'ia (the deer). Nostrils and mouth, red; forehead and eye region, blue; eyebrows, eyes, nose, black; rest, natural color. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 1180.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing Sulmaa'ua. Natural color, black, spots blue, lines red. Height, 28 inches. Cat. No. 1181.

Fig. 10.—Mask representing Ainsilk'aaa (front and profile). Black, blue, red. Height, 22½ inches. Cat. No. 1182.

Fig. 11.—Mask representing Ainsilk'aaa (front and profile). Red, green, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. 1187.

Fig. 12.—Mask representing S'ooka'waaa'k. Natural color, black, orange. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 1179.

Fig. 13.—Mask representing S'ooka'waaa'k. Blue, black, red, natural color. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. 1179.

[Facing End Plate VII]

[End Plates I-VI not processed]

530
.T16

[Enid Plate VII]

7;Bons E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE VIII.

532
●776

∴ Cross-hatchings indicate black; vertical hatchings, red; horizontal, blue; white, natural color of wood.

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Mas.apa'lenk (profile and front). Black, red, blue. Height, 18 inches. Cat. No. 1117.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Yala'lenk, and details of ornaments attached to head-ring. Black, red, blue. Height, 31 inches. Cat. No. 1117.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing Mas'apa'cenk. Black, red, blue. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. 1117.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Ts'ts.a'lak. Black, red, blue. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. 1117.

[Facing End Plate VIII]

7:Boas E-5 (1884-ca. 1890)1900 NEA Bellacoola NEA

532
776

Masks of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate VIII]

7:Boas E-5 (188b-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE IX.

,, Cross-hatchure indicates black; vertical hachure, red; white, natural color of wood.

532
776

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Xēmxēmalā'oLla (front and profile). Design: full moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 13½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Xē'mtsiwa (front and profile). Design: full moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing Ōmq'ōmkī'lik'a (front and profile). Design: half-moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Q'ō'mtsiwa (front and profile). Design: half-moon. Natural color, black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Aī'umkī'lik a (front and profile). Design: stars. Natural color, black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing K"lē'lias, wearing a ring of red cedar-bark (front and profile). Design: rainbow. Natural color, black, red. Height, 14 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 7.—Mask representing Q'ulaxā'wa (front and profile). Design: salmon-berry blossom. Natural color, black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing Ā't'māk" (the kingfisher). Wings at sides of head, tail over the forehead. Natural color, black. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing L'ētsā'aplēLīna, wearing a ring of red and white cedar-bark (front and profile). Design: grease-bladder. Natural color, black, red. Height, 14½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

[facing End Plate IX]

7;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

532
776

Masks of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate IX]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE X.

 Cross-hachure indicates black; vertical hachure, red; diagonal, green; white, natural color of wood, except in cases where the whole mask is black.

532
776

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Naqumiqa'otsaix. Black, red; ornamented with red cedar-bark. Height, 16 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing the Bear of Heaven. Green, black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{2}$.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing Alk'x'ê'lnem (front and profile). Natural color, red, black, green. Height, 8 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Aiq'oa'yosnem (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Aiq'oa'yosnem (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{6}$.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing Aiq'oa'yosnem (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 7.—Mask representing Nonô'osqa, before the birth of the flowers (front and profile). Greenish with faint reddish spots, black. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing the shaman of Nonô'osqa (front and profile). Black, white streaks under eyes. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing Nonô'osqa, after the birth of the flowers (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{8}$.

Fig. 10.—Mask representing A'nl'ält'ila (the moon). Natural color, black. Height, 16 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 11.—Mask representing attendant of Nonô'osqa (front and profile). Natural color, red, black. Height, 11½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 12.—Mask representing the Black Bear. Natural color, green, red, black. Length, 15 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

[facing End Plate X]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

532
776

Masks of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate X]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE XI.

 Cross-hachure indicates black; vertical hachure, red; horizontal, blue; dots, orange; white, natural color of wood, except in cases where the whole mask is black.

532
796

Fig. 1.—Mask representing the thunder-bird (front and profile). Black, red. Height, 11½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing ALXULÄ'TENUM (front and profile). Ornamented with red cedar-bark. Orange, blue. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing the rabbit. Set with mountain-goat skin. Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{2}$.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing the owl. Black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{3}$.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing LO'qots (the mountain). Natural color, black. Height, 19½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{4}$.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing the raindrop. On top of the mask is a long switch set with feathers, only the lower part of which is shown. Natural color, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{5}$.

[796] Fig. 7.—Bird-shaped implement worn by a companion of the thunder-bird. It is filled with eagle-down. During the dance it is shaken, and the down flies out of the holes in the lower part of the implement and from the back. Length, 18 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{7}$.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing the sea-monster K'l'lx'ta. Red, blue, black. Height, 19 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{8}$.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing the spirit LALAIÄ'IL. Black, orange, set with bear-skin. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{9}$.

Fig. 10.—Mask representing the hermaphrodite (front and profile). Natural color, red, black. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{0}$.

[facing End Plate XI]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

532
776

[796]

Masks and Carving of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate XI]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

EXPLANATION OF PLATE XII.

 Cross-hachure indicates black; vertical hachure, red; horizontal, blue; white, natural color of wood.

532
776

Fig. 1.—Mask representing Anaūlikuts'ai'x· (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing Anaūlikuts'ai'x· (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 3.—Mask worn by the Cannibal dancer (front and profile). Natural color, black, red. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 4.—Mask worn by the assistant of the Cannibal dancer. Blue, red, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 5.—Mask worn by the assistant of the Cannibal dancer (front and profile). Blue, red, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 6.—Carving representing the S'ā'ʟpsta in the shape of an eagle. Red. Length, 11 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 7.—Carving representing the S'ā'ʟpsta in the shape of a wolf. Red, black. Length, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

